

A black and white photograph of a large, multi-story building with a prominent central tower and many windows, likely a government or institutional building. The building is surrounded by trees and other structures, and the image is somewhat grainy and aged.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LUTHERAN, METHODIST AND SOUTH METHODIST CONFERENCE OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. HAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY JANUARY 3, 1884.

First Sabbath in January.

We quote below the second resolution adopted by the Committee on the Centenary of American Methodism. Let the date be remembered, and the day appropriately observed. May a Pentecostal blessing rest upon the first Sabbath of centenary year, and be repeated every day during the twelve months with increasing power and glory:

"Resolved, That the first Sabbath, in January, 1884, be observed throughout the church as a day of devout prayer for the Divine blessing to rest upon the Centenary services of the year; and for a general revival of religion, and that on that day our preachers explain the nature and objects of the Centenary Celebration, and especially urge adherence to those doctrines and usages of early Methodism that have contributed under God to her spiritual power."

E. B. HENDRIX,
Ch'm, Central Centenary Committee.

The Louisiana Conference will meet in annual session on Wednesday next, the ninth instant, in Carondelet Street Church, this city. Bishop Kavanaugh will preside, assisted, we suppose, from time to time, by Bishop Parker, who is at home off duty for awhile. Bishop Keener will be absent, presiding over the Florida Conference, which meets the same day. After another year of varied toil and experience the brethren will come up to confer together and make report concerning the state of the church. No truer, braver band can be found than the preachers who lead the hosts of the Lord in Louisiana. From information received and published in the ADVOCATE at different times, we judge the past to have been a successful year. We expect a report of large gatherings and a good net increase of members, in proportion to numerical strength the Louisiana stands in the front rank of Conferences in connectional liberality and loyalty. We bid the brethren a hearty welcome, and wish for them a pleasant Conference session.

The subject of Methodist Union is now engaging the attention of the various branches of Methodists in England. It is thought that the discussion will lead to a more active sympathy between and confederation of the several sections, though not to a corporate oneness. A symposium on Methodist Union in England, conducted by Rev. William Cooke, D. D. (New Connexion), John Bond (Wesleyan), Richard Chew (United Methodist Free Church), and John Atkinson (Primitive), will soon appear in the Primitive Methodist Review. It may be that the union of Canada Methodism will have the effect of bringing all other bodies nearer together. Methodists have only divided on questions of polity and administration. Her doctrinal integrity has been preserved without modification or emendation.

Under the head of "Uncalled for Complaints" the Western Christian Advocate makes response to the criticisms of the Southern Methodist press on the speeches of certain Bishops and other clergy delivered before the Missionary Committee in New York. The remarks of Bishops Foster, Simpson and Wiley and Dr. Buckley were very severe upon our people, and should have been retracted. The Western has a good tempered editorial on the subject, the substance of which is the speeches were not correctly reported. Of course, if that be true, they should have the benefit of such defense, but the Western ought to remember that the report was made in its own columns. Singularly enough, none of the reported remarks on the Southern white work were published in the New York Advocate. Our Pittsburg confere thinks their private talk should not have been made public. First of all, there should be correctness as to the facts and then carefulness as to judgments and conclusions therefrom. From a lifelong residence in the South, and a somewhat extended acquaintance with its post-bellum history, we must say our brethren have done us gross injustice.

A Hotel or a Church—Which?

At the recent annual meeting of Plymouth Church Henry Ward Beecher delivered an address, which has awakened much comment. Our wide-awake brother of the North-western Christian Advocate makes it the text of a capital and timely leader. We quote Mr. Beecher's words:

I must confess that Plymouth Church has become rather a spiritual hotel than a church. People come here to be filled, and go away again without any thoughts of housekeeping. I recognize with sympathy the allusion that has been made to the removal of old members. My audience has come to be a strange one. There is little church feeling in the congregation, though there is plenty of Christian feeling. I have felt more and more as time is going by that I was losing my power in the church, and that my usefulness was speedily giving out. You see I could not help thinking of what was to become of Plymouth Church if I should die. It would then be spoken of as the church that was. I often pray to God to make it more cohesive before he calls me.

There is an undertone of sadness in those words that must have been painful to his admiring friends. But Mr. Beecher sees and dreads a fact which illustrates a principle. Church life is permanent in proportion to its cohesive power, and its cohesiveness must be inherent in the organization and not in an individual. However phenomenal the gifts and magnetic presence of a man, if he is the bond of brotherhood, when he dies, the church passes away. No wonder "there is little church feeling in the congregation." By formal act, they severed all connection with any church organization and united themselves to Mr. Beecher. And he is quite right in saying that when he dies it will "be spoken of as the church that was." An individual church is like a family burying-ground. It soon passes into other hands and falls into decay. The new purchasers care nothing for the sleeping dust that was so long guarded, and tended with filial pride and devotion. So of these great spiritual hotels, called churches, manned and administered by some rare pulpit genius. It dies with him. What has become of the wealthy and cultured congregation that hung upon the ministry of the celebrated Dr. John Cumming, in London? Even in his old age, when his faculties failed him, the crowds dispersed, and his famous church has been almost forgotten. Independency is ephemeral. It is the enemy of permanency.

We conclude, therefore, that other things being equal, church-life is most permanent, and results more surely conserved and guarded, when the connectional bond is strongest and closest. With all of its errors and corruptions, the Romish Church would have gone to pieces centuries ago but for its connectional tie. It has been strong enough to endure the strain of revolutions and oppositions. Its strange cohesive power has preserved its existence. Now, if we have a true theology, a spiritual ministry and membership, with a connectional polity, we have the guarantee of permanency. Herein is the secret of Methodism's marvelous yet conservative growth. And when we weaken or slacken the connectional bond, we shall be shorn of our power and glory.

And what is true of a great organization may also be said of a local congregation. Its common bond of sympathy must be something more and else than a man. There must be a system of principles that unite and cement them in a single purpose. The pastor simply represents and advocates these, and is a leader of the flock. So when he dies, another is called to his place, to preach the same truths and carry forward the same character of work. Hotels lose their reputation with the death of a proprietor. And so these spiritual boarding houses either change character with a change of proprietors or else pass away into nonentity.

Another thought suggested might be emphasized. As pastors we should strive to join members into Christ's Church rather than to ourselves. Many persons join the pastor and not the church. As conscientious servants of the church we should discourage such a sentiment and indoctrinate the applicant into the true grounds and obligations of the new relation. If this was more carefully done our members would be less a prey to ecclesiastical marauders. With our frequent pastoral changes, unless the attachment is to the church and not an individual, we will suffer loss. When the favorite preacher is gone they become first indifferent and then disgruntled. Those are loyal through all administrations who have settled convictions and fixed principles, and they are the true representatives and conservators of a healthy church life.

Address of the Publishing Committee.

The Publishing Committee from the patronizing Conferences met at the office of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, 112 Camp street, December 20, 1883, to look into the condition and prospects of the paper, and to transact any business necessary to its success. The attendance was full, and all were much gratified to find everything so well managed by the capable, enterprising and successful publishers. The office is well kept, everything in its place, the books and accounts so well posted that no delay was necessary in getting any information needed by the committee.

The paper is neatly printed on good paper and promptly issued, generally reaching its readers in advance of any of our church papers. During the year the old Curry engine has been supplanted by a new and more convenient gas engine. The paper is out of debt, credit first-rate, and is self-sustaining.

The paper was projected more than thirty years ago by wise and good men of three States, Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas, who, studying the interests of Methodism in the rich and rapidly growing valley of the Mississippi, saw New Orleans was and must ever be the great commercial center, where travel and trade converged, and whence the influence of the press should go to enlighten and quicken our Methodism of the valley. More than thirty years' experience affirm their wisdom.

The intellectual and spiritual atmosphere of New Orleans seem to have been important factors in the success of the paper. Three of her editors have attained to episcopal honors. The facilities for publishing and distributing that marked New Orleans as the point for the paper thirty years ago are greatly multiplied by improvements in the navigation of the Mississippi and its tributaries, and the multiplication and extension of railroads.

The paper is in good hands; the publishers are alive to the good work in which they are engaged. They are not mercenary, trying to mint muscle and brain, but are in sympathy with the onward movement of the church; they work to build up the church.

The present writer has been longer associated with the publication of the paper than any one now on it, and is happy to say he has never before seen the publication in such competent hands, nor the prospects of the paper better.

The editorial ability is widely and well known, and gratifying to the committee, who are glad to know the paper can now support its editor, and expects a full measure of his talents. The corresponding editors, members of the patronizing Conferences, greatly enhance the interest and value of the paper. Correspondents from all parts of our widespread circulation give freshness and a sort of ubiquity to the paper. The committee heartily recommend the paper to our people.

What we want is an increased circulation—five thousand new subscribers. Will not our friends get them this Centennial year? This year of the great Exposition in New Orleans? Will not the preachers stir up the people this year, when they want so much information on Centennial and Exposition questions? We urge the circulation of our paper as a means of quickening every interest of our church, as an indispensable aid in pastoral work, as a means of counteracting and supplanting the vicious literature of the age.

W. P. BAILEY,
For Committee.

DECEMBER 24, 1883.

"Love as Brethren."

The following, from the Christian at Work, is so opportune and so well expressed that we gladly give it editorial space:

The church is a family—the household of God. "Unfeigned love of the brethren" is a mark of membership. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Love gives instant to piety, and is the crowning of Christian character, the afterglow after the sun is set. When the heart is saturated with love it shoots through the eyes and sets the whole face aglow. It throws its radiance all around. The flowers before the window are more fresh and fragrant when love waters and watches over them. There is no friction in the machinery of home-life when love oiles the wheels. Domestic jars are the centrifugal force that would drive apart the members of the household; love, with its centripetal power, holds each in his orbit. It is the loadstone which draws all to a common center; keeps them from straying off to other homes. They find all they want to make home happy where they are.

And when is that home of our hearts, the church, more attractive than when all are "kindly affectioned," all "love as brethren"? It puts our piety above suspicion. "By this shall all men know ye are my disciples, if ye have love one toward another."

other." But "he that loveth not his brother, whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?" Not that we are to approve or connive at what is wrong, even in a brother. Do as Christ did. He did not approve the fiery zeal of John, nor the unbefel of Thomas, nor the treachery of Peter, nor the cowardice of all his disciples, when they "forsook him and fled." He upbraided their inconstancy and unbelief; and yet with such a spirit that, while they felt rebuked, they could not but feel that "he loved them notwithstanding all." May we not have a harm feeling without a hateful feeling?

To keep good our capital we must bear and forbear. Difference of views we must expect. All are not cast in the same mould; we do not all look at things from the same standpoint. Yet hearts may agree where heads differ. Paul's exhortation has its place. "Hast thou faith? Have it to thyself before God." Quietly enjoy your opinion, but don't be "out" with your neighbor because he can't see as you do. "Let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind." There must be a readiness to forgive. "To the right you can afford to be magnanimous by a transgression." And a readiness to ask forgiveness. Frankly to acknowledge a mistake is simply saying you are wiser than you were; and frankly to confess having wronged another, and to ask forgiveness, carries with it the obligation to forgive. A little concession on both sides shows the true spirit, and keeps the bond of communion unbroken. "Are you not going to ask my pardon?" "No, sir." "Then I will ask yours." The wrong was quickly righted between these brethren.

Love's eye looks at things in the most favorable light. Your friend pursues a mistaken policy; so you think, not he. "Are you sure yours is the better judgment?" He looks at the matter from a different point of view. His heart bled more than yours. "Above all things put on charity." Sympathy is the twin sister of charity. Nothing so wins and wins around the heart as that fellow-feeling which rejoices in our joy and weeps when we weep. It takes away all feeling of isolation. We are not left like the stricken deer forsaken by the herd. Friendly eyes are upon us, friendly arms around us, and the fast-falling words which come welling up from the loving heart are like sweetest music. Sympathy is Christ-like. He wept with the weeping. His sympathy was not mere sentiment which wastes itself in words, it showed itself in every deed. His messages of mercy brought joy to the sorrowing. He "went about doing good." If the atmosphere in Christ's household were fragrant with this spirit, which makes others' wants and woes our own, all would "love as brethren." The icebergs of selfishness would melt away in the gulf stream of an ever-flowing, warm-hearted charity. The church would put on her "beautiful garments," and shine forth in her primitive splendor. In the thousand ministrations born of brotherly love Christians would reap a harvest of joy to themselves. Bound together in bonds softer than silk, yet stronger than steel, they would sing with a new experience:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

The whole Christian church needs to learn the lesson of love as she has not yet learned it to rise to the high plane of a solemn duty as never before.

A Congressional Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

The discussion in the lower house of Congress, on the twentieth ultimo, as to the advisability of appointing a select committee on the alcoholic liquor traffic, was rather significant. The proposition was stoutly opposed, but finally passed by a vote of 142 yeas to 83 nays. We are pleased to see that of the Mississippi members Messrs. Barksdale, Jeffords, Singleton and Van Eaton voted yeas; the other two members did not vote. The vigorous speech of Mr. Miller, of Texas, against the measure was in the line of all the old threadbare utterances in opposition to sumptuary legislation. Mr. Randall, the distinguished member from Pennsylvania, spoke a few manly words for the amendment, which we heartily commend. But the more extended remarks of Mr. Vance, of North Carolina, were worthy of his good Methodist record. We give place to his words to endorse them:

The gentleman from Texas talks about legislating in favor of eunuchary laws and saying what a man shall eat and drink. In my judgment, sir, the object is to get information on a subject that reaches and touches every human being on this continent. It affects every man, woman and child and every interest in this great country. (Applause on the Republican side.) I think that the sentiment of the temperance people of the United States of America ought to be respected in this house, which creates committees on almost every other subject. We have committees on legislation in regard to the yellow fever and we have committees in regard to the cotton worm. (Laughter.) We have committees on sending expeditions to the North Pole in search of vessels that have been lost, and then why, sir, should not the representatives of the American people inquire in reference to that vessel of intemperance which has wrecked so many households in this land of ours. (Applause.) I hope, sir, the representative of the American people will allow the friends of humanity, the friends of truth, justice and mercy to be heard; that they will extend to the people the opportunity to gather every information on a subject of such tremendous importance as the one now before the house. Will the American representatives here, sir, deny to millions of people the right to be heard on this important question? (Cries of "No.") I hope not.

I hope we will not be denied the simple right of having a committee on the subject. It does not necessarily follow we are to have a prohibitory law because of the raising of such a committee. Not at all, sir. We want information. We want to know what it costs this government because of this evil of intemperance. We state that it costs more than the taxes which would be required to educate every man, woman and child, white and black, in the broad land. I believe it will be better for us to stand up in the interest of humanity, in the interest of schools, in the interest of peace and of right, as well as in the interest of mercy. It is better for us to do so than to stand up here in the interest of the liquor traffic which is carried on at the price of the blood of our people. (Applause.) I hope we shall have this committee, and I do so with all due deference to my friend on my left from Texas.

Alabama Conference.

This Conference convened in Eufaula, Ala., December 12, Bishop Pierce, presiding, R. B. Crawford, secretary. At first roll-call a large per cent. of the clerical members and small per cent. of the lay members answered to their names. In a few days the attendance was quite full. The usual committees were appointed and Conference work performed. Everything moved right ahead under the steady and strong hand of episcopal direction.

Thursday night Dr. D. C. Kelley addressed the Conference in the interest of the centennial enterprise of Methodism. The address was replete with instruction, illustrated by stirring and thrilling facts. The points he made on presiding elders and preachers in charge ought to be remembered and observed. Each class has a special work to do, so as to maintain and carry forward church success and harmony.

Friday morning was missionary day, and the doctor delivered another speech, full to overflowing. Friday night was devoted to the interest of church extension. Addresses were made by Dr. Mangum and Bishop Hargrove. Bro. Mangum rose to the full height of a Bishop, and the Bishop rose to the fullest height of Bro. Mangum in the speech, and went over him in the money. The collection amounted to $225, the Bishop giving $20 of that.

Saturday morning Dr. J. E. Evans appeared before the Conference in behalf of Paine Institute, and received in cash $334, Bishop Hargrove giving $100 of that. Bishop Hargrove is an Alabamian by birth. Saturday night was set apart for the missionary anniversary. Dr. Potter, editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, delivered a powerful and telling speech, reaching his summit in the emphatic declaration that he was ready to vote with both hands for the nation of the men and women of the church in missionary enterprise. The collection was not equal to the speech. The cash amounted to $75. During Conference the several collections amounted to $710.

Sunday was the grand day of the Conference. In the morning Dr. A. H. Mitchell conducted the love-feast. It was truly a feast of love. At eleven A. M. Bishop Pierce preached to a vast audience, with apparent ease to himself, for fifty-nine minutes. The sermon was about the best the writer ever heard the Bishop preach. He heard him first in Auburn, Ala., in 1862, and several times since. At three P. M. Bishop Hargrove preached a sermon of alarming and thrilling force upon the power of covetousness. At night the writer attended the Baptist Church, and heard Bro. E. W. Solomon. He gave us a short, practical discourse. Good and powerful sermons were reported at all the churches during the day.

Monday was crowded full of hustles. Reports of committees and short talks and speeches followed in rapid succession. The Committee on Memoirs read carefully prepared tributes to the worth and memory of our beloved dead, Charles Slidder, Edward Wadsworth, E. P. Birch and Robert P. Baker, and after two or three short talks, the report was adopted, and on we moved. Late in the afternoon the end of the session was reached. All was more or less of hurry to get the appointments and get away. The Bishop's talk was short but pointed. In the course of this talk he said: "Every man's case has been patiently and carefully and tenderly considered and the appointments prayerfully made. After such appointments had been made he felt little concern as to how they might be considered and criticized. While he claimed no infallibility in making these appointments, yet the more he considered the subject, the more he was satisfied these appointments were ordered of the Lord, as every good man's steps are ordered of the Lord," etc. Then came the appointments, many of which gave supreme satisfaction to the happy appointees, some of which were received in the spirit of cheerful obedience, and a few of which were received in much dissatisfaction.

The effective force of the itinerant ranks was strengthened by the admission into the Conference of seven members on trial, two by readmission and one by transfer.

We had the pleasure of visits to our session by Brev. J. B. Cottrell, of the Louisville Conference, C. D. Oliver, G. R. Lynch, Amos Whitehurst, of the North Alabama Conference, E. M. Bounds, of the St. Louis Conference, D. C. Kelley, L. D. Palmer, of the Tennessee Conference, G. G. Smith, J. E. Evans, Sharp, Boland, W. H. Potter, of the North and South Georgia Conferences, and Bishop R. K. Hargrove, of all the Conferences. All these were dear to us, especially our tender, expressive and loving Bro. Cottrell, a former presiding elder.

The statistical reports show increase in every department, with two exceptions. Additions of white members on profession, 3,376; increase over last year, 1,355; net increase, 1,166; adults baptized, 1,696; increase, 564; infants baptized, 1,255; increase, 28; Sunday-school scholars, 15,089; increase, 276; Conference collection, $5,245; increase, $293; Bishops' fund, $1,260; increase, $113; total for foreign and domestic missions, $10,763; increase, $1,330; church extension, $1,600; paid preachers in charge, $62,350; increase, $2,145; presiding elders, $11,031; increase, $214; Woman's Missionary Society paid $1,806; increase, $392; grand total increase in the financial department, $6,087.

Eufaula entertained the Conference and visitors with princely hospitality. The writer had a delightful and enjoyable home with a former parishioner, G. W. Thompson.

Only one objection was heard to the session of the Conference, and that was Bishop Pierce did not give sufficient time to consider matters of grave interest. Brethren are getting tired of these high pressure Conference schedules. The law of the church allows a Conference "a week" for its session. Why not give it when the Conference almost begs for time?

Arriving in the city of Montgomery on our way from Conference we were pained in heart to find our dear brother, B. F. Blow, had been stricken of paralysis on Monday forenoon, at three P. M., December 17. The whole right side, from head to foot, was deadened in the stroke. He had partially recovered when yesterday, December 19, he had another stroke, but not so heavy as at first. He says he is ready for death if it results in that. May the goodness of God attend him and family. Thus another itinerant preacher is disabled. One by one we fall. But we all shall arise at once in the final end.

—ANOUR DOWLING.

RAHER, ALA., Dec. 21, 1883.

In a letter to the Baptist Courier, a Baptist minister writes pleasantly of the South Carolina Conference session. The following short extract is recommended to righteous anti-affiliationists:

As for me, I have entirely surrendered for the present, and quietly hang around the Methodist camp, picking up the crumbs which fall from their table. The impression made upon me only confirms the convictions of other years, that these people are a hard-working, self-sacrificing and godly set of men. I love to move about among them and hold fellowship with them, and I am coming to believe that a Methodist Conference is the next best thing to a Baptist Convention.

Dr. Mark Trafton, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has little appreciation of the modern obol, as witness the following from Zion's Herald:

Give me a base drum or a Chinese gong, rather than our quartette of two youngsters with their hair parted exactly in the middle, and a pair of young girls with their hair gathered over their eyes like a merino sheep or a Scotch poodle, who trot out something which nobody can understand, and call it the "praises of God."

We clip the following from the Texas Baptist Herald:
Southern Methodists in 1882 paid $158,272 to foreign missions. This is over $100,000 more than the Baptists of the South paid during the year ending May, 1883. The fact is not favorable to Baptist piety and their love of the gospel. Here is something it would be well for them to think about.

The Unitarian Church at Clinton, Mass., has voted unanimously to submit water for wine in the communion service. What arrant fanaticism! But what significance has the Lord's Supper to a Unitarian anyhow?

Bishop Keener, preached at Algiers on Sunday morning.

The library of the late Dr. William A. Smith has been given to Central College, Mo.

Bishop Merrill, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has returned in good health from his official visit to the missions in China and Japan.

The Rev. Dr. W. A. Finley has resigned the presidency of the Pacific Methodist College in California. Dr. T. H. B. Anderson will be the nominal president until next May.

Rev. Thomas E. Gilbert, of the South Carolina Conference, located at its recent session, is expecting to join the Connecticut Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, next spring.

The Rev. Dr. R. H. Rivers is to write the biography of Bishop Paine. He has been selected by the family for this work, and will doubtless produce a volume worthy of the distinguished subject.

Southern Methodism has more than doubled itself in Texas within the past thirteen years. The membership has increased from four hundred thousand to nine hundred thousand since 1870.

Rev. Dr. John Hall's article on "Ministerial Support" has been widely published and cordially endorsed. It is in the right direction, and we hope others will follow in the same line until a revolution is wrought.

The Youth's Companion offers three thousand dollars in prizes for the best short stories either for boys or girls. The terms and conditions will be sent on application. Our young friends may now sharpen their pencils and venture to achieve a fortune in literature.

Mrs. Juliana Hays, president of the Woman's Board of Missions, attended the recent session of the White River Conference, and afterwards visited Little Rock. Her labors there are spoken of in terms of high praise by a correspondent of the Arkansas Methodist.

We acknowledge the pleasure of calls at our office on Monday of Rev. J. O. Keener, presiding elder of the Mobile district, Alabama Conference, Rev. S. Halsey Werlein, transferred from the Texas to the Louisiana Conference, and Rev. J. M. Pugh, of the Mississippi Conference, en route to his appointment at Amite City, La.

The Jackson (Tenn.) High School, under the auspices of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, an appeal in behalf of which we recently published, written by Bishop Lane, is prospering. Sixty pupils have been enrolled, with the prospect of increase after the holidays.

We attended a delightful watch-night service at Carondelet, and joined with the large congregation in bidding adieu to the old and hailing with joy the new year. After the stroke of twelve all sang the old covenant hymn, "Our journey pur-sue," and heartily grasped each other's hands, wishing "a Happy New Year." It was an enjoyable and inspiring occasion.

The new chaplain of the United States Senate, Rev. Dr. Huntly, pastor of the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, has gotten his name in the papers on account of sensational praying. He has a special and different case to present each morning. His prayer-ology on Phil Sheridan was especially the subject of varied comment and criticism.

The press dispatches announce the marriage of Bishop H. W. Warren, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Elizabeth S. Hill, in Denver, Col. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Simpson. It must have been quite a grand affair. The lady is well known for her princely fortune and large benefactions. We are glad that the brilliant Bishop is likely to be in comfortable circumstances, but a more modest affair, with the ceremony performed by the local pastor, would have been more becoming.

For participating in the Salvation Army meetings, the Rev. Dr. Wilson, of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, Ontario, has been dismissed from his curacy. In a milder form the same sort of ecclesiastical tyranny is practiced in the South-west. We have known church men and church women to be sharply censured for venturing to attend Methodist preaching. They are exhorted not to encourage heresy by ever being present at a public service. If they have no rector their place on the Sabbath is at home, not in anybody's "meeting house." What a travesty of common sense to say nothing of Christian charity and spiritual discernment!

The Union Signal, the organ of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, issued a special crusade Memorial Number December 20, celebrating the decennial anniversary of the woman's crusade in Ohio. Among other interesting articles it contains an autograph letter from John G. Whittier, approving and commending the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. There is no doubt that the organization has greatly advanced the temperance sentiment of the country. We wish any movement or organization success that will aid in the overthrow of intemperance and the liquor traffic.

The Bishop of Liverpool is one of the most evangelical and catholic-spirited of Anglican divines. He preached some time ago in a Presbyterian Church and raised a buzz around his ecclesiastical ears. He now comes out in an address and says unless Bishops are treated with more fairness and consideration, soon no right-minded and high-souled man, who loves direct spiritual work and hates wasting precious time in strife, will consent to be a Bishop at all. As the author of a popular series of religious tracts Bishop Ryle is best known. Such an evangelical Christian must be annoyed by the Romanizing party of his church. It will be remembered that he wrote President Charles Garrett, of the Wesleyan Conference, a very fraternal letter more than a year ago on the occasion of his election. We honor him for his broad catholicity and Christian courage. A few more such might lighten the whole lump of Anglican-High Churchism.

The particulars of the double tragedy in Yazoo City, Miss., are enough to make every citizen shudder with shame and sorrow. On the night of December 24 three white men were killed and two others wounded in an encounter with a squad of negroes. The difficulty was not the result of race or political prejudice, but, from what we can gather, was the bloody work of mean whisky. The first trouble occurred in a saloon between one of the white men and a negro. He went off, summoned other friends, and returned only to meet his death. The negroes were promptly arrested and lodged in jail. Two public meetings of the citizens were held when it was determined that the prisoners should have a fair trial in the courts. But on Saturday night, the twenty-ninth ultimo, an armed body of men overpowered the jailor and lynched four negroes. Such violence is a stigma upon any community and demands condemnation. There is no apology for this second outrage however dreadful the first. Every law-abiding citizen is vitally concerned to know who were the lynchers. Nothing is so shocking to our civilization as the tyranny of lynch law.

From Vicksburg, Miss.

BURNING OF DR. ANDREWS' HOUSE. MR. EDITOR: The house we resided in was burned this morning about three o'clock. We barely escaped with our lives with only the clothes in which we were sleeping. How the fire originated we do not know, only that it was communicated to our house from the tenement adjoining. But for the providential awakening of Mrs. Kearney, my wife's mother, we would doubtless all have been burned to death. She herself came very near perishing; one moment more and suffocation would have been complete. For a time we feared that she had inhaled the flames, but now find that she has escaped with one hand and her face burned very severely. None of the rest of us, wife, five children and self, were hurt. Devout thanks be unto our God forever and forever.

It is hard to realize that our earthly store has been swept away in one hour, and that we have absolutely nothing of personal property save the following articles, which were rescued, viz: one piano, two center-tables, one writing-desk, the dishes and plates which remained on the table from the evening meal, and a portion of the silver spoons and forks. Fortunately I myself had not much money, as I generally find an urgent demand for it as soon as it comes in hand; but my wife had been saving up little sums for a special purpose until it aggregated quite a little amount, but this, together with jewelry and trinkets of her girlhood, as also three gold watches, one of them an heirloom, was consumed.

Not a book, not a manuscript, not even a memorandum or a note—a singular predicament for a preacher to be placed in! Ah! sir, you can not imagine, may you never realize, the utter destitution of the feeling. It seems sorrowful indeed for wife and children—two grown daughters—to be entirely without wearing apparel, but, thank God, we have to grow only over clothes, which time and Providence may supply, and not over precious life, that could never be restored.

An irreparable loss, one that will bring unfeigned sorrow to every Mississippi Methodist, is the burning of the entire manuscript records of the Mississippi Conference from the first informal session in 1813 to the one just closed, inclusive. As secretary I have been preserving them with fond care for eighteen years, but alas! the ruthless flames had no regard for the precious relics of other years.

It is a great comfort in our calamity to find such universal sympathy expressed for us by the kind, noble people of this city. Numerous doors are thrown open to give us shelter and a home, and our special friends and relatives, Dr. James M. Hunt and wife, insist that it is their right and have generously taken us all into the hearty hospitality of their elegant home. Articles of wearing apparel and money have been freely supplied. The kind ladies are busy playing their machines to supply their needy sisters with something to wear, and one thoughtful and liberal gentleman friend, the only one, by the way, in the city who rises high enough to do such a thing, has fitted me to an entire suit of his own clothes.

Not only members of our own church have been prompt and liberal in supplying our wants, but even those who before were comparative strangers to us have warmed our hearts by their sympathetic and valued attention. We feel profoundly grateful to each and all of our benefactors, and do earnestly invoke God's choicest blessings to rest upon them.

It is with a crippled and half-dazed kind of feeling that we look out upon the future. Oh! if God will only verify his promise that these light afflictions, which are but for a moment, will work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, we will strive, from the depths of our consciousness, to say: "Thy will be done."

C. G. ANDREWS.

WE sympathize with our dear friends in their great calamity, but thank God no lives were lost. They were indeed "plucked from the burning."

Death of Mrs. T. B. Holloman.

MR. EDITOR: It is my painful duty to inform the brethren and friends of the Mississippi Conference of the sad bereavement of our brother, the Rev. T. B. Holloman, of this place. His wife died to-day, thirty-six hours after giving birth to twins. This bereavement leaves Bro. Holloman with seven small children. Sister Holloman was one of the most amiable Christian women I ever knew. A more extended notice may, I presume, be looked for after a while.

R. ARBEE.

YAZOO CITY, MISS., Dec. 27, 1883.

The above, from Bro. Arbee, makes us sad beyond measure. We have known Sister Holloman from childhood, boarded one year at Sharon in the same house with her, performed the ceremony at her happy marriage, and can bear grateful testimony to her beautiful, lovable, noble Christian character. No purer spirit have we ever known. In the freshness and hope of a charming young womanhood she has fallen asleep, leaving a home, oh! so desolate. We earnestly pray for our bereaved brother and the little ones, her pride and care.

Centenary Committee, North Mississippi Conference.

This is to remind you that, by the action of the committee at our last Conference, it is made the duty of the District Committees to make arrangements for carrying out the plan proposed by the Central Committee in their respective districts.

1. They are to determine when and where mass meetings shall be held, and make all necessary arrangements for complete success.

2. It is made their duty to determine in what month collections shall be taken up in every congregation in the district.

3. They are to determine what day shall be devoted to the children, and make all necessary arrangements for the success of that part of the work.

4. They are to see that special centennial services are held on the fourth Sunday in May throughout the district.

I would suggest that these committees meet at an early day and begin the work as soon as practicable. The presiding elders will send names to Dr. Harrison, secretary of Central Committee, to fill vacancies that may have been caused by the change of preachers at our late Conference.

THOS. Y. RAMSEY,
Chair, Centenary Committee.

DECEMBER 29, 1883.

The consciousness of duty performed gives us music at midnight. George Herbert.

Reduced Rates to Conference.

Preachers and delegates coming by the Texas and Pacific railway will pay five cents per mile and return free.

Those coming by Morgan's Louisiana and Texas will pay full fare coming and return for one cent per mile upon certificate of secretary of the Conference. Those traveling on commutation tickets will be allowed no reduction.

The Illinois Central charges full fare coming and returns delegates at one-third fare upon certificate of secretary of the Conference.

CHRISTIAN KEENER.

NOTICE TO THE PREACHERS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE. Those preachers in the bounds of whose works five claimants upon the Conference fund will please report to the Finance Committee in writing the number and circumstances of such claimants.

C. W. CARTER, Chairman.

The Southern Cultivator Free.

All old subscribers by paying up in full to date, and two years' subscription in advance, will receive the Cultivator free for one year, postage prepaid. We will also send the Cultivator free for one year to all new subscribers paying two years' subscription in advance. This offer is good only to December 1. No reduction allowed for postage orders or registered letters. This is a fine opportunity to secure the only first-class agricultural paper published in the South free for one year.

CARTER & JAMESON.

SEND $1 BILLS.—We wish our patrons to bear in mind that in payment for subscriptions we do not desire postage stamps, and that they should be sent only of fractional parts of a dollar. A dollar bill is much more convenient and safe to remit than the same amount in one, two or three cents stamps. The actual risk of remitting money is slight; if properly directed no one misarrange will occur in one thousand. Inclose the bills, and where letters containing money are sealed in presence of the postmaster, we will assume all the risk.

C. G. ANDREWS.

DECEMBER 27, 1883.

WE sympathize with our dear friends in their great calamity, but thank God no lives were lost. They were indeed "plucked from the burning."

Death of Mrs. T. B. Holloman.

MR. EDITOR: It is my painful duty to inform the brethren and friends of the Mississippi Conference of the sad bereavement of our brother, the Rev. T. B. Holloman, of this place. His wife died to-day, thirty-six hours after giving birth to twins. This bereavement leaves Bro. Holloman with seven small children. Sister Holloman was one of the most amiable Christian women I ever knew. A more extended notice may, I presume, be looked for after a while.

R. ARBEE.

YAZOO CITY, MISS., Dec. 27, 1883.

The above, from Bro. Arbee, makes us sad beyond measure. We have known Sister Holloman from childhood, boarded one year at Sharon in the same house with her, performed the ceremony at her happy marriage, and can bear grateful testimony to her beautiful, lovable, noble Christian character. No purer spirit have we ever known. In the freshness and hope of a charming young womanhood she has fallen asleep, leaving a home, oh! so desolate. We earnestly pray for our bereaved brother and the little ones, her pride and care.

Centenary Committee, North Mississippi Conference.

This is to remind you that, by the action of the committee at our last Conference, it is made the duty of the District Committees to make arrangements for carrying out the plan proposed by the Central Committee in their respective districts.

1. They are to determine when and where mass meetings shall be held, and make all necessary arrangements for complete success.

2. It is made their duty to determine in what month collections shall be taken up in every congregation in the district.

3. They are to determine what day shall be devoted to the children, and make all necessary arrangements for the success of that part of the work.

4. They are to see that special centennial services are held on the fourth Sunday in May throughout the district.

I would suggest that these committees meet at an early day and begin the work as soon as practicable. The presiding elders will send names to Dr. Harrison, secretary of Central Committee, to fill vacancies that may have been caused by the change of preachers at our late Conference.

THOS. Y. RAMSEY,
Chair, Centenary Committee.

DECEMBER 29, 1883.

The consciousness of duty performed gives us music at midnight. George Herbert.

Said I to little brother Howard, "There, your toes are out of your stockings again, so you must put them in a hurry." Giving a comical look, he said, "Do you know why stockings wear out first at the toes?" "No," "Because toes stick out, and heels don't."

If you have diseased lungs, take HALL'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. PIKE'S TOOTHACHE DROPS cure in one minute.

A few years since, at the celebration of an anniversary, a poor piddler who was present, being called upon for a toast, offered the following: "Here is health to poverty—it sticks to a man when all his friends forsake him."

Your Lightning Liniment came to hand all O.K. and is moving on its usual, Mr. Forrester's wife cured of rheumatism when she had been suffering for 20 years and had tried every available remedy. It purchased a twenty-five cent bottle of Billington's Lightning Liniment and received immediate relief. I had his testimonial—but it is misplaced. I have sold, as you are aware, near 400 bottles, and every one with the rheumatism that it treated has been restored. I have had but one complaint, and then the bottle was not returned. The man had Rheumatism—one week after he got your Lightning Liniment he had thrown his back away, yet he claimed no relief. I am trying a case of White Swelling. The party tells me he has had 7 nights rest, the first in seventeen years. Toothache, Neuralgia, Pain in the breast, back and shoulders are known to more. There is no need of office money-order for $15.00.

Yours,
W. P. HALL.

CONSCIENCE, TEX., Dec. 4, 1882.

They debate strung questions down East. The test was: What is the difference between the bridge of Sighs and the size of a bridge? The next is to be: The difference between a face smile and a sick family.

W. T. Shepard sells dinner, tea and breakfast sets, $4.00—most fine tea sets $1.50—more choice chamber sets, $1.50.

A Scotch witness somewhat given to prevarication was severely handled by a cross-examining counsel. "How far is it between the two farms?" said the counsel. "By the road it is a mile." "Yes, but on your oath, how far is it as the crow flies?" "Altho' I never was a crow."

For all points in Texas and California take the southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

A minister in one of his parochial calls met a new boy and asked him what clock it was. "About twelve, sir," was the reply. "Well," remarked the minister, "I thought it was more." "It is never any more here," said the boy. "It just begins all again."

If you need anything in the music line apply at the mammoth music house, N. Werlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon streets, New Orleans, where satisfaction is guaranteed. Mr. Werlein will ship you a piano or organ at what you please, in thirty days, and will return it to you, freight paid, with ways at his expense, upon your purchase of the selection. Pianos, from $400 to $800, organs, 200 to 150.

A little girl visiting a neighbor with her mother was gazing curiously at her hostess's new bonnet, when the owner inquired, "Do you like it, Laura?" The innocent replied, "Very much, but it was a pretty sight, but it doesn't seem like Laura's mother didn't say long after that."

M. E. B.—They all say so that have tried them: "Cinnamon Monitor" cooking stove—Most Even Bakers.

A cool young gent, all of the modern ways, entered a menagerie with a cigar in his mouth, when the proprietor politely requested the visitor not to touch the other monkeys but to take the young man proved himself equal to the occasion by producing his cigar-case and saying, "Try it."

To those of our subscribers, not content to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the Advocate or no.

"Speaking of bathing," said Mrs. Partington, from behind the steam that arose from her tea as a yell to her blushing when touching upon so delicate a subject, "come run bathing with me to-day. I have just had a good wash, and my hair is so happy in water as cold as Greenland, and my mouth and body feel so good, but for the part, I prefer to have the water a little tepid."

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

A man going home late the other night was awakened in the moon and immediately predicted a war. His prediction was suddenly verified, for as such he reached home his wife remarked, "Duck again, eh?" and then the war commenced. It was short, sharp and decisive.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kemball's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the Advocate.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer all advantages of fast line, through cars, connections, and accommodation officers.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S GOD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and influenza, consumption, scurvy and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which God Liver Oil can be used, and which more readily secured to the system by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the delicate stomach will not reject it. For all ailments, and all ages, DR. TRUFF, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

A Home Production

GOODWIN'S EUREKA

TRADE MARK

YEAST POWDER

It is, as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article, entirely free from alum, has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure Powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public.

Still manufactured at 179 Grand Street, N. Y., by Goodwin, widow of the late J. M. Goodwin. It is handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether by mail or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 179 Grand Street, New Orleans, La.

FREE

Send to MOORE'S UNIVERSITY, 25th year.

For Illustrated Circular

MOORE'S UNIVERSITY, 25th year.

Send to MOORE'S UNIVERSITY, 25th year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOUISIANA STEAM

Sash.

Blind and Door

FACTORY.

299, 301, 303, 305, 307 Gravier Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

ROBERTS & CO.

Proprietors.

Sash, Blinds, Doors, Mountings, Planing and Celling, Sewels, Balusters, etc., always on hand, or made to order.

Orders promptly attended to.

Plantation Cabins a Specialty.

BRANCH OFFICE:

NO. 32 CARONDELET STREET.

CHURCH FURNITURE!

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Seches,

Raffling, etc.

Send for Illustrated Circular and Estimates.

School Desks and Supplies

OF ALL KINDS.

Send for circular Agency for the largest Factory, in the country. Samples can be seen at 117 Common Street, New Orleans.

G. T. CATHER.

CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE.

One thousand acres cypress

timber lands, situated in townships 10 and 11, south range 10, south-western land District of Louisiana.

For information, apply to

N. O. Christian Advocate,

112 Camp Street,

New Orleans, La.

SCHOOLS TEACHERS!

The Central Educational Bureau teaches TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

ING ALPHABET, PERMANENT, and TEACH-

Weekly Market Review.

For Week Ending December 31, 1883.

COTTON.
Low ordinary	10 1/2
Ordinary	11 1/2
Good ordinary	12 1/2
Low middling	13 1/2
Middling	14 1/2
Good middling	15 1/2
Fair	16 1/2
Gatehouse middling	17 1/2
Mobile middling	18 1/2
St. Louis middling	19 1/2

SUGAR.
Inferior	41
Common	42
Good common	43
Fair	44
Good fair	45
Fully fair	46
Prime	47
Strictly prime	48
Seconds	49
Yellow clarified	50
Gray clarified	51
Choice whites	52
Grandulated	53

MOLASSES.
Syrup	26
Prime	27
Choice	28
Fancy	29

RICE.
Choice	16
Prime	17
Good	18
Fair	19
Ordinary	20
Common	21
No. 2	22

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	6 00
Minnesota patents	7 15
Minnesota extras	6 37 1/2
Extra fancy	7 00
Winter wheat	5 00
Cholera	5 50
Fancy	5 50

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 50
Corn meal	2 75
Grits	3 50
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
Wheat	56
White wheat	57
Yellow	58
Yellow mixed	59
OATS	48
Western	49
Texas rust-proof	50
BARLEY	95
Choice	18 00
Prime	14 00
Strictly prime	17 00

PROVISIONS.
PORK	15 75
Mess	13 00
Prime mess	13 00
Rumps	13 00
BACON	11 1/2
Choice breakfast	11 1/2
Sides, clear	9 1/2
Shoulders	9 1/2
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2
HAMS	14 1/2
Sugar-cured	14 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT	6 1/2
Shoulders	6 1/2
Sides, clear	7 1/2
Sides, clear rib	7 1/2

FISH.
NO. 1, in bbls	14 25
Half bbls	7 75
NO. 2, in bbls	13 75
Half bbls	6 25
NO. 3, in bbls, large	13 25
Half bbls	7 00

GROCERIES.
COFFEE	11
Rio, choice	13
Cordova, choice	14
Java, choice	19
BUTTER	24
Western dairy	24
New York dairy	25
COUNTRY	20
LARD	9 1/2
Choice	9 1/2
TEA	56
Choice	56
Fair	59
COAL	15
Coal, best	12
Coal, second	10
Coal, third	7 1/2

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES	17 00
Western	18 00
COUNTRY	16 00
POTATOES	1 40
New York	1 40
Western	1 40
Seed, New York	1 40
Seed, Western	1 40
KIOT	10 00
hbl	12 00
ONIONS	4 75
hbl	2 00

BALING STUFFS.
BAGGING	10 1/2
1 lb	11 1/2
2 lb	11 1/2
BALD TWINE	1 1/2
1 lb	1 1/2
2 lb	1 1/2

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY	1 00
Chickens, Western	1 00
Young	2 00
Chickens, South	2 75
Young	2 00
Turkeys, Southern	10 00
Eggs	25
Western	25
Southern	25
Wool	29
Lake	29
Mountain	29
Barry	9
Hides	6
Green salted	6
Dry salted	10
STAYS	20 00
OAK, REG	20 00
OAK, BATT	20 00
OAK, CLARK	20 00
OAK, HORN	20 00
HOG POLLS	45 00
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	45 00
Half barrels	45 00
FERTILIZERS	12 00
Cottonseed	25 75
Meal, country	24 00
Meal, city	24 00
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	25 00
Sulphuric acid	25 00
Bone black	25 00

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 25.—Reuben R. Springer, famous for gifts to the public, has bequeathed to the Cincinnati Art Museum his valuable art collection, and also the pictures which he has by his niece, Mrs. Miller. It is also stated he has given $10,000 more to the College of Music for the new buildings.

YAZOO CITY, Dec. 25.—A most terrible tragedy was enacted here last night at 10 o'clock. John T. Posey, of the firm of Williams & Posey, a most estimable young man and highly connected, was insulted by John James a negro butchler. Posey went off and got some of his friends and returned with them to the corner of Main and Jefferson streets, where James had last been seen, and without warning the party was fired upon, and John Posey, Carnot Posey and Jasper Nicholls were riddled with bullets and instantly wounded. The latter, however, slightly wounded. The negroes had organized, and under cover of the intense darkness of the night shot down these gentlemen. John James, one of the leading negroes in the difficulty, was killed—this morning while his arrest was being attempted.

DENVER, Colorado, Dec. 26.—A special from Telluride, of the 24th says: At noon today a snow-slide came down Marshall Basin, carrying off the shaft house of the Mendota mine, containing fourteen men, eight of whom were killed outright, two were wounded, and four dug themselves out. A large body of men have for the scene of the disaster in the morning.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Dec. 27.—The large double brick house of Mrs. S. H. Bodley was destroyed by fire this morning at 3 o'clock. The building was occupied by Rev. Dr. C. G. Andrews, presiding elder of the Methodist Episcopal Church in this district, and his family. Dr. Andrews scarcely had time to arouse his family and escape with them from the house before the building was a mass of flames. Mrs. Mary L. Kearney, mother of Mrs. Andrews, was found by Dr. Andrews in a room upstairs, and was only rescued by him after she had been badly suffocated with smoke. The family lost all their effects, including a valuable library, that can not be replaced. Loss, $1,000; no insurance. The building was insured for $3,800.

New York, Dec. 27.—Gen. Grant, leaving home to-day, slipped upon the ice and fell, receiving a severe shock and seriously injuring his thigh. In this accident the general's position in the saddle was such that he was thrown, and he immediately after the accident, was assisted to bed, where he has remained ever since, lying in one position on his back. The surgeons anticipate nothing serious, but, at the same time, predict it will be several weeks before he will be able to leave his house.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, Dec. 25.—Paul Birt publishes a letter arguing that the fear of an outbreak of disease from the use of American pork is in no way chimera. He quotes the statements of Delmeres, inspector at Chicago, who certified that diseased and dying hogs have passed his house daily, and that they are sold cheap and shipped to Bordeaux and Havre.

MADEIRA, Dec. 25.—The dispatching of reinforcements to Tonquin will be hastened. The government has asked the French steamship companies for transports to send 2,000 troops immediately.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—It is reported the French loss in killed and wounded, at the capture of Sonatay, was thirty officers and nearly 1,000 men. The loss of the Black Flags in the same battle was 6,000. The bulk of the Black Flag army, after the defeat at Sonatay, retreated to Hong Hoa and Namdinh. The French found $2,000,000 in Sonatay. It is reported also that China, acting under the advice of European powers, has withdrawn the troops at Bacinh.

I had severe attacks of gravel and kidney trouble; was unable to get a medicine or doctor to cure me until I used HOP BITTERS, and they cured me in a short time.—A DISTINGUISHED LAWYER OF WAYNE CO., N. Y.

Books and Periodicals.

THE BOYS OF THIRTY-FIVE. By Edward Henry Elwell. Boston: Lee and Shepard. Sold by W. Harry Seymour, No. 9 Carondelet Street, New Orleans. Price $1.25.

This is a story of a sea-port town. The scene is laid in Lanport, which is readily recognized as Portland—the Portland of other years. It is indeed a charming book, full of incidents and revelations, characteristic of the time and place. What a grand time the boys did have! While reading it, we almost wish our lot had fallen among the scenes and sports of those days. One reviewer of the volume has well said: "While seeking to entertain, Mr. Elwell has performed a service which makes every reader to-day his debtor." Mr. W. Harry Seymour, 9 Carondelet street, will fill all orders.

FLOYD GRANTON'S HONOR. By A. M. Douglas. Boston: Lee & Shepard. New Orleans: W. Harry Seymour, No. 9 Carondelet street. Price $1.00.

Miss Douglas is a voluminous and popular author. Her books have been extensively circulated and appreciated. This is the first from her pen we have received, and after a brief examination, have no hesitancy in saying it has no ordinary merit. Of the plot of the story we can not speak, but the style is elegant and beautiful, and the lessons inculcated practical and wholesome. It is a stout volume of over four hundred pages and is bound most admirably. The dedication to Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Lull, is in exquisite taste. Send for Mr. Seymour for a copy.

THE TRIUMPH OF DUTY. THE TRIUMPH OF LOVE. A Story. By W. Harry Seymour. Boston: Lee & Shepard. New Orleans: W. Harry Seymour, No. 9 Carondelet street. Price $1.00.

Harper's New Monthly Magazine, for January, is on our table. The monthly magazine has long held the highest place in American periodical literature. In variety, versatility, freshness and vigor, it yet remains unequalled. We are glad to welcome it back to our exchange list. The portrait and sketch of the quakeress, John A. Williams, will interest all lovers of the exploits of a life that have given world-renown to his name and pen. At Mentone: The Old Packet and Clipper Service; The Birth of a Nation and Judith Shakespeare, are other illustrated articles in this number. New York: Harper & Brothers.

The Popular Science Monthly, for January, is an unusually interesting number. The article of special attraction is by Herbert Spencer on "Religious Retrospect and Prospect." Some other papers are as follows: The Classical Question in Germany; The Morality of Happiness; Female Education from a Medical Point of View; Defective Eye sight and Idiocy; The Editor discusses the study of the classics elaborately and adversely. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Single number, 50 cents.

We have before us two other little volumes of religious poems from the same firm, (Anson D. F. Randolph & Co., 900 Broadway, New York.) Peace and Rest. They are selections from the best writers, are nicely bound and are very suitable for holiday gifts. 35 cents.

The Sunday Magazine, for January, is a capital Christmas number. This is a good periodical, full of choice, wholesome reading. We can commend it to Christian families. Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

We have received from Graves and Mabbly, 359 Main St., Memphis, Tenn., Mrs. Douglas's latest work, "Maisy and I." This was written for children, but all who read it will find much to interest. Price, 75 cents.

WEAK LUNGS AND SENSITIVE THROATS are severely tried by the sudden changes of temperature during our climate, and in consequence a Rhinitis, Catarrh, Pharyngitis, Tracheitis, and bronchitis, are sure to be more or less prevalent. Coughs and Colds, the forerunners of these often fatal complaints, should be promptly treated in hand on the first symptoms, by resorting at once to Wm. Wood's Respiratory Remedy, which will soothe your cold, and exert a healing and strengthening effect on the Pulmonary and Bronchial organs.

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

Annual Conferences.

CONFERENCE.	PLACE.	DENOM.	DATE.
Denver	Pueblo	Hargrove	July 26
Colorado	Willow Creek	Hargrove	Aug. 12
Idaho	Clintonville	Hargrove	Sept. 12
Missouri	Clintonville	Wilson	Sept. 12
Kentucky	Cyanus	Wilson	Sept. 12
Indiana	Weber Falls	Pierce	Sept. 12
W. Missouri	Fort Blair	McTear	Sept. 12
Illinois	Salen	Keener	Sept. 12
Indiana	Hopkinsville	McTear	Sept. 12
Pacific	W. Virginia	Harter	Oct. 12
W. Virginia	Uniontown	Oranbury	Oct. 12
Holston	Chattanooga	McTear	Oct. 12
Tennessee	Fort Blair	Harter	Oct. 12
Tennessee	Salisbury	Pierce	Oct. 12
Los Angeles	Los Angeles	Hargrove	Nov. 12
W. Texas	Georgetown	Parker	Nov. 12
N. W. Texas	McKinnis	Parker	Nov. 12
Arkansas	Hardy	Granbery	Nov. 12
Virginia	Richmond	Kavanaugh	Nov. 12
N. Alabama	Birmingham	Parker	Nov. 12
Alabama	Prichard	Kavanaugh	Nov. 12
Little Rock	Malver	Granbery	Nov. 12
N. Carolina	Greenville	Parker	Nov. 12
N. Carolina	Greenville	Keener	Nov. 12
N. Mississippi	Oxford	McTear	Nov. 12
Georgia	Grassville	Parker	Nov. 12
S. Carolina	Santee C. H.	Wilson	Nov. 12
Texas	Pittsburg	Parker	Nov. 12
Kentucky	Clintonville	Hargrove	Nov. 12
Alabama	Eastalla	McTear	Nov. 12
Mississippi	Kitcher	Granbery	Nov. 12
W. Virginia	Union City	McTear	Nov. 12
Memphis	Madison	Keener	Nov. 12
Louisiana	Madison	Keener	Nov. 12
Baltimore	Baltimore	Wilson	Nov. 12

Bishop McTear has charge of the mission at Chilna.

Bishop Keener has charge of the mission at Medford.

Bishop Granbery has charge of the mission at Medford.

Christian Advocate.

OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. M. C. DUNN, REV. W. M. C. DUNN.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1884.

The fact was so noticeable as to be telegraphed over the land by the associated press, that the ladies of Cincinnati in receiving on New Year's day offered no wine to their guests. So the reform is growing. If the second amendment did fall in Ohio because of the vote of Cincinnati, the agitation has borne good fruit.

As we write Tuesday, the eighth instant, New Orleans is enjoying a legal holiday. On this day the last armed conflict between the United States and England occurred in this city, resulting in a great victory for the American forces and the crowning of Gen. Jackson as "hero of New Orleans." It is well to keep this glorious event in perpetual and grateful remembrance.

As we go to press, the preachers are arriving to attend the Conference. We will be highly favored with the presence of three of our chief pastors—Bishops Kavanaugh, Parker and Hargrove. The following connections will be present: Dr. D. C. Kelley, missionary treasurer; Dr. Morton, church extension secretary; and Bro. L. D. Palmer, business manager of the Publishing House. We bid them all a cordial welcome.

We are glad to see it stated that our vigilant missionary treasurer, Dr. Kelley, has perfected banking arrangements so as to supply our missionaries with funds in case the Franco-Chinese war should result in a blockade of all Chinese ports. Now let the funds be speedily forthcoming. The missionary collections for Centenary year should be taken up at once and forwarded to the treasurer. We must "clear the decks" or our Centenary movement will be embarrassed.

The three thousandth number of the New York Christian Advocate was issued December 27. Its first number appeared September 9, 1826, and the printer who worked it off, C. J. Cook, still lives at Morristown, N. J. Its first editor was Mr. Badger, and he was succeeded in order by Drs. Nathan Bangs, John P. Darbin, Samuel Luekey, Thomas E. Bond, George Peck, Abel Stevens, Edward Thompson, Daniel Curry, Charles H. Fowler and J. M. Buckley. Its present circulation is nearly sixty thousand copies—the largest of any religious paper on this continent, if not in the world.

We have faith to look for a better solution of the Mormon difficulty by the present Congress. The Edmunds bill, however righteously conceived, has been tried and found wanting. It fails to apprehend polygamous offenders. Not sufficient power is given to secure records and witnesses that would convict the guilty. The President has recommended to Congress the abolition of the Territorial Government and the substitution of a Commission. Though a heroic measure, we approve it. Nothing less will remove that plague-spot from our body-politic. We verily believe it will meet the case and succeed where all other measures have failed.

Postmaster-General Gresham promises no child's play to the brazen iniquity known as the Louisiana Lottery. He is now preparing a bill to be introduced in Congress to exclude newspapers publishing lottery advertisements from the pound rate. That is perfectly fair. But for the newspapers the lottery would die. They keep the people advised as to its drawings and marvellous doings. The lucky holders of prize tickets are applauded, their biographies written, and their winnings exalted as a well-merited reward to honest labor. We would like to see the proposed bill become a law, and then have it rigidly enforced. No doubt there will be the usual outcry against the measure as an attempt to throttle free speech. Indignant hands will be uplifted and imprecations invoked upon the puritanical Postmaster-General. But such a cry is mere cheat and clap-trap. If this iniquity is debauching the morals and manhood of the country, it should be stamped out. Every consideration of conscientious citizenship and public good demands it. A generation of gamblers will overthrow any government, however righteously founded or securely established. Let the bill become a law, though all subsidized newspaperdom should set up a howl.

Religious Retrospect and Prospect.

This is the title of a rather remarkable paper in the current number of the Popular Science Monthly, by the great apostle of evolution, Herbert Spencer. It contains his latest and most mature convictions on religious subjects, and, it is said, will be an important chapter in a forthcoming volume. In keen observation, delicate discrimination of thought, and plausible statement, Herbert Spencer is a master. But with this there is a spiritual blindness and irreverence, that render him incompetent as a teacher and critic of religion. If only an artist can interpret art, so the absence of the religious faculty disqualifies one to dogmatize about religion. Mr. Spencer, as is the wont and weakness of all theorists, studies phenomena, spiritual and material, solely in their relation to his pet idea or hobby. In this case it is his doctrine of evolution. To this master our religion must stand or fall.

The object of the paper referred to is to trace the transitions of the religious idea. He assumes that all ideas concerning the supernatural are evolved out of ideas concerning the natural. Beginning, therefore, with what he claims to be the genesis of man's thoughts about existence beyond the sphere of sense, he pretends to describe their steps and transitions up to the idea of an "alleged" omniscient and omnipotent God. This first idea he finds in the ghost theory of the savage, which, by the gradual processes of evolution, dropping one human attribute and transfiguring another, reached the conception of Deity. And this conception of a Deity has been variously modified by the evolutions of social and intellectual progress. That is his religious retrospect—and a very gloomy one, to be sure. Our God is the development of a ghost—our religion the evolution of a nightmare. He says: "Thus, recognizing the fact that in the primitive human mind there exists neither religious idea nor religious sentiment, we find that in the course of social evolution and the evolution of intelligence accompanying it, there are generated both the ideas and sentiments which we distinguish as religious, and that, through a process of causation, clearly traceable, they traverse those stages which have brought them, among civilized races, to their present forms."

Thus it is seen he discards the very suggestion of a revelation. Our ideas of the supernatural are an evolution of our conceptions of the natural. God is only and merely the creation of the human mind. He is what we fancy him to be—only that and nothing more.

Turning now from the past, Mr. Spencer looks to the future. He studies religion not only in retrospect, but in prospect. He asks: "What may we later will be the evolution of religious ideas and sentiments throughout the future?" This question is answered elaborately and curiously. He has no idea that the religious consciousness will cease to exist or leave an untold gap, but that it will undergo other and important changes. The progress of science, instead of dissipating religious beliefs and sentiments, will increase them. The changes in the prospect of religion, he says, will be the gradual dropping of the "human attributes" of deity so common in our theologies. We again quote his own words: "The cruelty of a Feejeean god, who, represented as devouring the souls of the dead, may be supposed to inflict torture during the process, is small compared with the cruelty of a God who condemns men to tortures which are eternal; and the ascription of this cruelty, though habitual in ecclesiastical formulas, occasionally occurring in sermons, and still sometimes pictorially illustrated, is becoming so intolerable to the better-natured that, while some theologians distinctly deny it, others quietly drop it out of their teachings. Clearly, this change can not cease until the beliefs in hell and damnation disappear. Disappearance of them will be aided by an increasing repugnance to injustice. The visiting on Adam's descendants, through hundreds of generations, dreadful penalties for a small transgression which they did not commit; the damning of all men who do not avail themselves of an alleged mode of obtaining forgiveness, which most men have never heard of; and the eliciting a reconciliation by sacrifice of one who was perfectly innocent—are modes of action which, ascribed to a human ruler, would call forth expressions of abhorrence; and the ascription of them to the ultimate cause of things, even now felt to be full of difficulties, must become impossible. So, too, must die out the belief that a power present in innumerable worlds throughout infinite space, and who during millions of years of the earth's earlier existence, needed no honoring by its inhabitants, should be seized with a craving for praise, and, having created mankind, should be angry with them if they do not perpetually tell him how great he is."

And this is what the great evolutionist sees in the future of religion. He eliminates all idea of a personal God, all sense of responsibility, and therefore all rewards and punishments, all thought of an atonement, and everything else that distinguishes Christianity, leaving only the consciousness of "an infinite and Eternal Energy." Thus the human race is launched out upon a shoreless, tempestuous sea without chart or compass or guiding star. Alas! for such a hollow hope—for such a mocking vision of the future.

After reading Mr. Herbert Spencer we opened Dr. Daniel Dorchester's masterly volume, "The Problem of Religious Progress." There we found the true theory of evolution, and an array of facts that thrilled us with a new life and revealed to the eye of faith the vision of a glorious prospect. It is the history of progress and mighty triumph. There is not mere assumption and ingenious speculation as in the case of the agnostic evolutionist, but a statement of facts and figures that furnish a basis of absolute certainty on which to predicate a prophecy of the future. These entirely overthrow Mr. Spencer's theory. Religion has had no such retrospect as he declares and will have no such prospect as he vainly imagines.

Vertebrate the Judiciary.

However well established our courts of justice and forms of law, and however learned and efficient those entrusted with judicial responsibility, these are powerless and inoperative unless sustained by a loyal, moral, intelligent public sentiment. Legislatures are often in advance of the people in enacting wise and wholesome laws. The statutes are right, but are not enforced, because not approved and sustained by the people. It is strange what an India-rubber conscience some men have when called to serve as jurors or witnesses in certain cases. If the law is disapproved, they will employ any methods to defeat its execution, and then resort to most ingenious casuistry and sophistry as an all-sufficient apology. Thus grand juries are fooled in their efforts to elicit facts on which to base a bill of indictment. Or, if the case goes into court, a trial by jury is equivalent to acquittal. And in every such case, where the spirit and letter of the law are sacrificed to a vicious public sentiment, there is begotten a depreciation of all law and license is given to out-lawry.

What we need in every community is a loyalty of public sentiment that will exalt the forms of law and sustain our courts of justice. Better have a bad law rigidly enforced, even if it works hardship, than that any statute should be set at defiance. If the court is disposed to a sentimental leniency, that allows too many criminals to go unwhipped of justice, he should be exhorted to amend or resign. We would not hold the judiciary guiltless in this matter. The imposition of minimum fines, and the delivery of moral lectures to offenders, accompanied with a threat of more dreadful things if the crime is repeated, will belittle any court and render the laws inoperative. But a right sentiment in a community, led by a fearless lead press or a few conscientious citizens, will compel respect for the law's integrity and the oath of office.

When courts are disregarded and lynch-law reigns, people may well put on sack-cloth and ashes. There is no guarantee of life and property. The same defiant, murderous spirit, that demands the life of one man without the right of trial by jury, will wreak vengeance upon another if there be a supposed provocation. And one such outrage will make of each participant an outlaw, and ever after he will be impatient of the tedious processes of the courts. He thirsts for summary punishment—a speedy and horrible death. The taste of blood unguages a wild beast in the human breast. Lynchers are always law-despisers. One such offense, unless under circumstances that may occur but once in a century, unfits a man for good citizenship. And then the moral effect upon an entire community is most disastrous. It cheapens human life, begets a feeling of suspicion and insecurity, and brings constituted authority into contempt.

We need to vertebrate the judiciary. Every citizen should hold up the hands of all law officers. Let every judge know that he has cordial and unvarying support in his administration. If such support was more generally and generously accorded, there would be fewer appeals to lynch-law.

Our New Orleans Methodism.

We have reached the end of another ecclesiastical year in the Methodist calendar, and the preachers of the Louisiana Conference are arriving by every train and steamer to attend the Conference session this week. It will be of interest to the church at home and abroad to hear something of our cause in this great city. New Orleans Methodism has always maintained some of the finest features which have characterized and signalized the great revival. Possibly in no other Southern city is the class meeting so appreciated and so largely attended by the membership. The past has been a pleasant and profitable year with quite all of our churches. The pastors have been abundant in labors, in and out of season, and have found favor in the eyes of the people. Dr. J. B. Walker, presiding elder of the district, has been punctual and faithful to his duties, in all things magnifying his responsible office.

CARONDELLE STREET CHURCH.

This old cathedral of Southwestern Methodism, under the pastorate of Rev. Felix R. Hill, has enjoyed increasing prosperity. About ninety have been added to its membership, six flourishing class meetings have been held regularly, and the weekly prayer meetings have grown in interest and power. Nearly all the assessments have been fully met, rounding up the gratifying sum of $1,343 for missions; $190 for church extension, $100 for Bishops, $25 for Conference fund, $3,305 for salaries of pastor and presiding elder and other objects, aggregating $7,845 15. That is an excellent exhibit of ecclesiastical liberality and pastoral activity. Carondelle stands in the front rank of Southern Methodist Churches in her missionary offerings.

CELESTY STREET CHURCH.

This well-organized and equipped church, the eloquent Dr. C. W. Carter pastor, is in good spiritual condition, and makes a creditable report of the year's doings. The assessments have been generously met—most of them in full. For foreign missions $445 have been collected, $55 for domestic missions, $87 for the Woman's Board of Missions, $50 for Bishops, $85 for church extension, $60 for education and $260 for the Conference fund. The Sunday-school, under the superintendency of Bro. W. H. Foster, has a commendable reputation.

ST. CHARLES AVENUE CHURCH.

This comparatively new enterprise up in the beautiful Sixth District, the Rev. Beverly Carradine pastor, has already taken rank as one of our strongest churches. They have a handsome church edifice, built almost entirely by the munificence of one liberal and loyal man. During the year thirty members have been received, and the church has been active in almost every department of its service. Contributed for foreign missions, $210; for domestic missions, $50; and for the woman's missionary work, $170. Parker's Chapel, a child of this church, has been completed with the assistance of the other congregations. There are three Sunday-schools connected with this church.

LOUISIANA AVENUE CHURCH.

Rev. A. C. Coaty, the active young shepherd of this flock, reports peace and prosperity. There has been an addition of thirty-two members, and an increased interest in the class and prayer meetings. The collections to be reported to Conference are as follows: Foreign missions, $250; domestic missions, $25; church extension, $40; Conference fund, $15; and the salaries of pastor and presiding elder paid in full. That is a delightful congregation, and is known for its marked spirituality.

MOREAU STREET CHURCH.

We regret not receiving a report from Bro. Billingsley for this issue, but we know of his labors. Though occasionally interrupted by feeble health he has held the fort with diligence and fidelity. That church has a history going back many years, and has been the spiritual home of hundreds now laboring in other fields, or who have been translated to the skies. The Conference collections, we suppose, are well up.

ALGERS.

Across the river we have a nice church and a pleasant little congregation, presided over by Rev. J. L. Wright, one of the veterans of the Louisiana Conference. He has received five members, all from the Sunday-school. The contributions to our connectional causes have been liberal. For foreign missions, $37 60; for domestic missions, $10; for Conference fund and other objects, $32 50, aggregating quite a good sum for that excellent little band.

Altogether, we repeat our cause prospering. The retrospect of the past twelve months brightens the prospect for Centenary year, now upon us. May our zeal increase, our labors multiply, and a perpetual Pentecost abide upon the churches and their pastors.

Dr. Buckley's Response.

The Rev. Dr. Buckley, editor of the New York Christian Advocate, makes response to our Nashville conference article entitled, "Firing Under the White Flag," and other orthodoxy of the Southern Methodist press on his famous speech before the General Missionary Committee. He denies the correctness of the report of his remarks, stating that "in no report was there a single sentence quoted verbatim," and "in every one there were mistakes of facts and omissions essential to the case." We are pleased to hear such an explanation, but we think the doctor is not justified in reading a homily on journalistic fairness to his brethren for making the report a subject of discussion. His rule, he says, where honor or moral character is involved, is to communicate with an author and ascertain if he has been correctly reported before indulging in comment or criticism. A very good rule, but in this case he has no cause for complaint. The reports of the speeches were published in the Western and Northwestern Christian Advocates, two official journals of the church, whose editors were present at the meeting. We had a right, therefore, to assume their correctness, and the doctor's objection is out of order. The following is in such good temper and tone that we gladly give it prominent place:

Not one phrase commented on by the Nashville Christian Advocate was ever uttered by the writer. Fortunately we have at hand a verbatim report, taken by one of the most expert stenographers in this country, in no way under the control of or related to the writer or his office. Not one sentence of that speech was inconsistent with fraternity or, so far as thought is concerned, would be improper to be delivered in Nashville at a joint convention of representatives of both churches. Our Southern brethren would not probably like all of it, but they would approve as much of it as in their best moods and most fraternal feeling of things they could say to please us of the North. Aspirant, we do not think they would condemn.

That they may know precisely what was said, we intend in a few weeks to write upon the subject, and to incorporate in the editorial from the verbatim report what related to the subject on which the Nashville Christian Advocate has commented. We will then respectfully consider what it has to say. If it shall show it to be false we will retract it; if, without proving it untrue, it shall still call it "firing under the white flag," and prove it so, it will be time to consider whether to humbly beg its pardon or to take down that flag. At present we simply say that it has discussed the writer's speech without the means of knowing what it was.

A Methodist Matriarch.

In his admirable address before the Historical Society of the South Carolina Conference, the Rev. H. M. Moody gave a graphic sketch of Mrs. Matilda Wightman, the mother of Bishop Wightman. She was a true mother in our Methodist Israel, and a woman of rare gifts and accomplishments. We have on several occasions, both in private and public, heard from the Bishop beautiful references and tributes to his mother that made us eager to learn more of the sainted matriarch. Her establishment and leadership of a daily sunrise prayer meeting in Charleston for ten years or more indicate her singleness of aim and strength of character. We make the following extract:

My most pleasant and intimate associations were at her prayer meetings. I say her prayer meetings. They were called Mrs. Wightman's prayer meetings, the name spontaneously growing out of the peculiar circumstances of the meetings. They were unique; at least I have never known any of similar features. They were held every day in the week, and every week in the year, in the school-room situated in the back part of Trinity Church yard, fronting Pinkney street; were opened at sunrise summer and winter, Sunday and week day, and were attended both by males and females, white and colored persons. The colored persons, especially one sainted old man, who almost every meeting led in one of the prayers, Mrs. Wightman invariably conducted the meetings, which, in times of religious dearth, dwindled down to very few, but at times of special interest swelled out into considerable proportions. The attendant entered and knelt, remaining in this posture, as did all present, until the services were ended. Singing, praying and exhorting were all conducted by Mrs. Wightman without change of posture. Usually she used no book, but repeated familiar hymns without repeating or lulling them, in which all joined heartily, never singling more than two stanzas at a time. She always raised the tunes.

Her voice was not loud, but soft and sweet, falling as the melody of a seraph's lute upon the ear. Her exhortations were sometimes in few words, at other times of great length, but always pointed and full of life. She usually offered one of the prayers. Her diction was simple and beautiful, the prayer uttered with fluency, short and full of meaning—a model of style and sentiment. To hear her pray was to be convinced at once that no ordinary person was pleading with God; but one who knew his courts and had been often there. The benediction was a short prayer of but a few sentences, uttered by herself.

This prayer meeting was conducted by Mrs. Wightman for ten years, to my knowledge, but how much longer I can not say, for called from the city to attend a boarding-school, I lost sight of it, and I never saw this sainted mother of Israel any more. Her family physician said that this meeting prolonged her life for many years. None knew her but felt, at death, that one of God's saints had been taken home.

Chronology of Remarkable Events in Methodist History.

The following summary of epochal events in Methodism will be interesting reading for centenary year. We transfer it from the columns of the New York Christian Advocate:

- January 1, 1739. First love-feast held at Fetterlane, London, England.
- January 1, 1772. First watch-night service held in America by Mr. Asbury.
- January 2, 1743. John Wesley refused the privilege of the communion.
- January 2, 1785. First ordination of elders (twelve in number) in the Methodist Episcopal Church.
- January 3, 1741. Mr. Wesley records in his journal two happy deaths.
- January 3, 1785. Bishop Asbury's first sermon after his ordination.
- January 4, 1792. Rev. John Wesley preaches to a large company by moonlight.
- January 4, 1818. Rededication of the old John Street Church, New York City.
- January 5, 1739. Conference of seven Methodist ministers at Islington, England.
- January 5, 1785. Dr. Coke gave orders to procure materials for Cokerbury College.
- January 6, 1751. Wesley commenced his notes on the New Testament.
- January 6, 1773. Formation of the second class in Baltimore, first on the fifth.
- January 7, 1754. Death of "Little Jakey," beloved child of Charles Wesley.
- January 7, 1801. John Dickens recommended to the traveling connection.

Report of Centenary Committee, North Mississippi Conference.

The Conference Committee appointed to prepare for the centenary of American Methodism begs leave to report as follows:

1. That the last Sunday in May, or as soon thereafter as practicable, be the time for holding special centennial services in each pastoral charge.
2. That the District Committees appoint the time and place for holding the mass meetings in their respective districts, and also the time for taking up centennial collections.
3. That the North Mississippi Conference attempt to raise the sum of $10,000 as a thank-offering to Almighty God for the signal blessings bestowed upon our church during the first hundred years of its organization.
4. That the money thus raised be equally divided between the objects stated by the Central Committee, except where otherwise ordered by the donors.
5. That Rev. W. T. L. Sullivan, D. D., preach the centenary sermon at the next session of Conference.
6. That Rev. J. D. Cameron, alternate.
7. That Rev. J. D. Cameron, Sec.

Rev. H. Capers, of the Louisiana Conference, writes us a cheering letter from which we extract the following concerning the Woman's Missionary Society. On the principle that we should provoke one another to love and good works, we report the labors of the Woman's Missionary Society, of Greenwood, and Mt. Zion Church. These two societies have enjoyed almost unparalleled success.

Little did we think a few months ago, when at Greenwood, we called together a few ladies and little girls to organize a Woman's Missionary Society and explain the nature of it, that before the end of the ensuing year their efforts would foot up to the handsome sum of $22 65; less still did we think that Mt. Zion Church, with her doubting Thomases and careful Marthas, would ever reach the miraculous sum of one hundred dollars for the Woman's Missionary Society; yet these are facts, and these figures, according to the report of our last Annual Conference, place these ladies ahead of every other element in the State of Louisiana on the missionary question.

Rev. H. C. Morehead, of the North Mississippi Conference, writing from Concordia, says:

We are snugly and comfortably domiciled in the parsonage at this place—thanks to the noble women of the church. The parsonage has been repaired and refurbished from parlor to kitchen. Other improvements are contemplated, and will be made in the near future. We expect this year, through God's grace, to achieve success.

Weekly Market Review.

For Week Ending January 8, 1884.

COTTON.

Low ordinary	8 1/4	7 1/4
Good ordinary	9 1/4	8 1/4
Low middling	10 1/4	9 1/4
Middling	11 1/4	10 1/4
Good middling	12 1/4	11 1/4
Fair	13 1/4	12 1/4
Medium middling	14 1/4	13 1/4
High middling	15 1/4	14 1/4
St. Louis middling	16 1/4	15 1/4

SUGAR.

Superior	24	23
Common	23	22
Good common	22	21
Gold fair	21	20
Fully fair	20	19
Prime	19	18
Choice	18	17
Seconds	17	16
Yellow clarified	16	15
Gray clarified	15	14
Choice whites	14	13
Granulated	13	12

MOLASSES.

Syrup	26	25
Prime	25	24
Choice	24	23
Fancy	23	22

RICE.

Choice	56	54
Prime	55	53
Good	54	52
Fair	53	51
Ordinary	52	50
Common	51	49
No. 2	50	48

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	6 05	6 25
Minnesota patents	7 15	7 50
Extra fancy	6 15	6 35
Winter wheat patents	7 15	7 50
Choice	5 15	5 35
Fancy	5 15	5 35

CORN PRODUCTS.

Cream meal	3 50	3 65
Corn meal	2 50	2 60
Grits	3 50	3 75
Hominy	4 15	4 35

GRAIN, ETC.

White	55	54
Yellow	54	53
Mixed	53	52
OATS	52	51
Western	51	50
Texas rust-proof	50	49

HAY.

Choice	18 00	17 00
Prime	17 50	16 50
Strictly prime	17 50	16 50

PROVISIONS.

PORK:
Mess.	15 25
Prime mess.	13 00
Rumps	13 25

BACON.

Choice breakfast	10 1/2
Shoulders	9 1/2
Sides, clear	9 1/2
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2

HAMS.

Sugar-cured	13 1/2
Dry salt meat	6 1/2
Sides, clear	7 1/2
Sides, clear rib	7 1/2

FISH.

Macrel	11 1/2
No. 1, in bbls.	11 1/2
Half bbls.	7 1/2
No. 2, in bbls.	6 1/2
Half bbls.	4 1/2
No. 3, in bbls.	4 1/2
Half bbls.	3 1/2

GROCERIES.

COFFEE:
No. choice	11	14
Cardova, choice	13	15
Java, choice	19	20

BUTTER.

Western dairy	25
New York dairy	25
Country	20	25

OLDS.

Coal, cases	18
Coal, bbls.	11
Coal, seed	43
Lard	72

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES:
Western	17 00	18 00
Country	15 00

POTATOES.

New York	1 40	1 60
Western	1 40	1 60
Seed, New York	1 40	1 60
Seed, Western	1 40	1 60

KIDNEY.

9 bbls.	10 00
9 bbls.	1 75	2 25

BALING STUFFS.

BAGGING:
12 lb.	104
2 lb.	114

BALING TWINE.

12 lb.	134
2 lb.	134

TIES.

bundle	1 35
--------	------	--

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	4 50
Young	2 00	3 00
Chickens, South N.	2 75	3 25
Young	1 75	2 25
Turkeys, Southern	12 00	13 00

EGGS.

Western	25	27
Southern	28	29

WOOL.

Lake	25
Louisiana	29
Burly	9	15

HIDES.

Green salted	6	64
Dry salted	10	104

SKINS.

Oak, kegs	50 00	55 00
Oak, barrels	—	75 00
Oak, casks	60 00	100 00
Oak, hogsheads	80 00	130 00

HOOF POLES.

Hoghead	40 00
Harle	20 00
Half barrel	12 50

FERTILIZERS.

Cotton seed	11 00
Meal (country)	22 75	24 00
Meal (city)	24 00	24 60
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	24
Bone black	84

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 3.—The Cleveland Women's Christian Temperance Union is about to publish another political movement, planned by Miss Frances Wilford, president of the National Union, who recently left here for Chicago, from which point she will superintend similar work, through State and local Unions throughout the United States. The project is to get 1,000,000 signatures to a memorial to be presented to the next national convention of each party, asking the insertion of a prohibition plank in the platform.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 4.—The weather is intensely cold. The thermometer at noon registered 20° below zero, the lowest at this time of the day for twenty-five years.

At Rainier at 6 o'clock this morning the thermometer was 42° below zero; at 8 o'clock it was 30° below; in this city it is 22° below and going down. Last night it ranged from 20° to 35° below. It is believed to-night that it will go lower.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—The extreme cold weather yesterday and last night tarried all passenger trains. Mails from all corners of the country were delayed in their arrival to-day from three to sixteen hours. Eleven miles southwest of the stock yards, on the Walsh road, stands a stock train of twenty cars, with famishing, freezing live stock. The train was stuck since which time it is believed the animals have been without food and water.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—The Inter-Ocean's Belleville, Ill., special says: St. Joseph's Roman Catholic convent burned to the ground at about midnight. Five nuns jumped from the fifth story window; one is dead and the others are likely to die.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 5.—A Duke Centre (Pa.) dispatch says: About 12 o'clock yesterday the dwelling of J. V. Garver, an employe of the Keystone Oil Company, on the Kiskadee branch near here, caught fire from over-pressure of gas while Mrs. Garver was absent, and in five minutes it was in ashes. Four little children, aged from one to six years, were left in the house, and all perished in the flames.

WELLSVILLE, O., Jan. 5.—The residence of Milton Higdon, of Mechanicsville, a few miles distant, burned early yesterday morning. Two children, aged seven and four years, perished in the flames. An older sister was badly burned in attempting to rescue the children.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—The thermometer at 5 o'clock this morning dropped to a point 27° below zero, which, taken with the cold record of yesterday, makes it the most severe showing in the way of extreme weather known in many years. At 8 o'clock the thermometer was still 25° below zero. The effect in this city has been in a measure to partially paralyze the ordinary course of business.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—Judge J. Tardieu delivered the opinion in the suit of the New Orleans National Bank vs. Washington B. Merchant, postmaster. He concluded as follows:

On the showing of the grave doubts manifested as to whether the bonds of complainant are as clear as his should be who comes in a court of equity to invoke the aid of good conscience and equity.

I have refrained from giving effect to this phase of the case because of the following considerations:

1. The bank, complainant, by the affairs of its president, (herein before referred to) has purged itself of the charge that it was receiving registered letters or money orders for Dauphin, or that it was Dauphin's agent for any purpose whatever, and there is no proof to the contrary.

2. It is not proved, as charged, for suspicion is not proof, that the bank is receiving registered letters and money orders for the use of the Louisiana State Lottery Company, and that it is, in fact, the agent for the same.

3. There is no proof in this case that Dauphin in this case had any connection with the Louisiana State Lottery.

4. It does not satisfactorily appear that Dauphin, in whose difficulties with the Postoffice Department the bank is charged with intermeddling, is inhibited the free and full use of the mails by any valid finding and order of the Postmaster-General, and now in force.

I have now given my views of the law applicable to this case, and of course, judgment must go accordingly; therefore, the motion to remand and the motion to dissolve the injunction are overruled and denied.

Let judgment be entered accordingly.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 7.—Snow fell last night and this morning to the depth of five inches. The storm was general, extending over the entire State. The thermometer is 2° above zero.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 7.—The severest weather of the season not in today, with a fall of rain, hail and snow. Everything is covered with snow. Trains North are reported snow bound. Most of the members of the Legislature have arrived. The Legislature meets to-morrow.

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 7.—Two inches of snow fell last night, and the town has been frolicking with it all day. The weather is still very cold, with the thermometer 10° above zero. Reports from sheep ranches continue gloomy. Thousands will be lost.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 7.—A snow storm has prevailed since 2 o'clock this morning. The snow lies eight inches deep, with no indications of the storm soon ceasing.

FOREIGN.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—One of the most frightful railway accidents which ever occurred in Canada took place here at 5:55 o'clock. About fifteen minutes previously the suburban train, consisting of a dummy engine and two cars, left Union Station, having aboard sixty passengers, chiefly employes of the Belt and Iron Works at Hamber, residing in the city, who were going to their work. On rounding a sharp curve just before reaching the belt works, the engineer saw a freight train coming thundering down the grade toward him. He reversed the engine, blew a warning, and, with the freeman, jumped for life. The engine of the freight train knocked the boiler of the dummy clear through the first car, crushing the unfortunate passengers in every direction and pinning many to the floor. The locomotive was so great that the engine actually "mounted" the truck of the dummy, which kept the rails and remained on its track.

The engineer of the freight train when he saw a collision was inevitable, sprang from the engine, but Thomas, the fireman, was killed instantly. The boiler of the dummy exploded.

A party of thirty or forty men was soon on the scene; and about 10 o'clock a car load of dead and injured were on their way to the city.

At the morgue fifteen bodies were laid side by side in a row. At the hospital, on the arrival of the wounded, the doctors immediately set to work and did all in their power to alleviate the sufferings of the unfortunate men.

Barber, the conductor of the freight train, was immediately placed under arrest. He looked at the time table, but forgot the suburban train on the list of regular trains. Hence the accident.

VIENNA, Jan. 4.—The czar was returning on the afternoon of Dec. 17, to Gatchina Palace from a shooting excursion, accompanied by his suite, in eight sledges, and a number of servants. Although darkness was coming on, the party noticed on the road ahead a dark, shadowy figure. The czar's men, apparently peasants, the czar himself, however, peeped through the blinds of the sledge, and ordered the men to clear the way. The men saluted the officers and appeared to obey the order, but when the czar's sledge came on a level with them they suddenly wheeled around and fired at the czar, hitting him in the head and arm. The czar, however, drawing the imperial sledge became frightened and galloped some hundred paces, when the czar was thrown out of the sledge. A bullet was lodged in the czar's shoulder. The czar's followers, however, peeped through the blinds of the sledge, and ordered the assassins to follow the czar. The assassins, however, escaped in a neighboring wood. Owing to the depth of the snow the pursuit was fruitless. One of the pursuing officers ventured too far and has not returned.

DUBLIN, Jan. 4.—United Ireland publishes an account of the murder of Carey written by a gentleman who received information from O'Donnell with the understanding that it was not to be told as long as a chance remained to save O'Donnell's life. The account shows that O'Donnell deliberately killed Carey; there was no struggle. Carey made no attack upon O'Donnell. That Judge Denham permitted O'Donnell to speak, he would have told the whole story of the killing.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The News-Madrid correspondent says: The commercial arrangement between the United States and Spain has been signed. The protectionists appear to be furious.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 5.—The bodies of DeLong and comrades were borne through the streets of Tomsk Wednesday with the military bands playing. The bodies were in attendance despite a heavy snow storm. Much sympathy was manifested.

QUEREC, Canada, Jan. 5.—The first mails from the country parishes since the great storm, which set in on the last instant, reached the town to-day. The bags were carried in on snow-shoes. Such complete stoppage of communication in the country has not been known for twenty years past.

CAIRO, Jan. 7.—The Egyptian Cabinet was in session at the residence of the Prime Minister. The Khedive was absent. The Ministers resolved to resign. Cherif Pasha, Prime Minister, accompanied his resignation with a letter to the Khedive, explaining the reasons for the action. The Khedive accepted the resignation of the ministers, but requested them to remain in office until their successors were appointed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 7.—It is rumored El-Mahdi has declared that he will willingly recognize Halim Pasha as Khedive of Egypt.

FINE STOCK SALE.

Elsewhere we publish the announcement of Col. W. H. Stuart's annual sale of fine stock.

The sale will take place on to-morrow, the eleventh instant, at twelve o'clock, at the Melrose dairy, in this city. A large number of imported Jersey cattle are now to be seen at the Melrose dairy, including seven or eight of their fine calves, and in the lot the young of the year, who the calves are accustomed to see.

In addition to the imported cattle there are a large number of very fine cattle from Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas and Kentucky. All of this stock is comfortably wintered in the city of New York, which contains one hundred stalls. Such a number of fine animals has never before been offered for sale in the Gulf States, and it will amply repay all who admire high-bred animals to go to see them before they are sold at auction.

We are gratified to learn of the success with which Col. Stuart enters upon this his fourth annual sale. The work that he is doing in advancing the interests of fine live stock in the South can not be valued in dollars and cents. His next sale will take place during Mardi Gras week.

I SUFFERED FOR SEVERAL YEARS FROM ASTHMA, and from some Affection of the Throat resembling Bronchitis. After spending a great deal of money on various medicines, with no material benefit, in March last, on recommendation of a friend, I procured of Dr. J. H. Pater, of Baltimore, Md., a bottle of his "Cure for Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Affections of the Throat." After taking two bottles of this remedy, I found myself so much relieved that I continued taking it until I used seven bottles, and by this time my symptoms had all disappeared, and I feel every reason to believe myself cured. W. H. Pater, Catapung, Austin Co., Texas.

CAIRO, Jan. 6.—It is denied that the British fleet will be sent to the Red Sea. Beyond her previous orders to protect Egyptian interests, England has taken no further measures. It is stated that Evelyn Baring, Lord Cromer, of England's reply to the recent Egyptian note, England insists upon the withdrawal of the troops from Khartoum to the Second Cataract of the Nile. Great Britain does not object to the cessation of Eastern Sudan to Turkey, or to Turkey's request of Sudan. It provided the Porte pays expenses. It is stated the Khedive and ministers refuse to comply with the English note. The Khedive declared that England is seeking to compel him to abdicate, but he will surrender only to force.

What it did for an Old Lady.

COSHOTTEN STATION, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1878.

GENTS:—A number of people had been using your "Bitters" here, and with marked effect. In one case, a lady of over seventy years, had been sick for years, and for the past ten years has not been able to be around half the time. About six months ago she got so feeble she was helpless. Her old remedies, or physicians, being of no avail, she every reason to believe myself cured. W. H. Pater, Catapung, Austin Co., Texas.

It improved her so she was able to dress herself and walk about the house. When she had taken the second bottle she was able to take care of her own room and walk out to her neighbors, and has improved all the time since. My wife and children also have derived great benefit from their use.

W. H. PATER, CATAPUNG, AUSTIN CO., TEXAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Home Production.

GOODWINS TRADE MARK EUREKA

H F

YEAST POWDER.

It is as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from alum. Has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public. Still manufactured by a leading street, by Mrs. A. F. Goodwins, widow of the late Mr. M. Goodwins. It is handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in can or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 1179 Grand street, New Orleans, La.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANSFIELD, INDIANA, PARISH, LOUISIANA.

The twenty-ninth annual Session will begin on the 25th of September, 1884.

Mansfield is situated on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, forty miles south of Shreveport in a beautiful and healthy country, and is easily accessible from almost every portion of Texas and Louisiana. The college is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is managed by the Louisiana Conference. The college has a large number of students, and all of the facilities for instruction are provided. The college last year had nearly a hundred boarders and sixty pupils in Music, French in Art and one hundred and twenty in all. Board and tuition, per term: $60.00. Music and use of instrument $20.00. Usual charges in Art Department and Modern Languages.

MRS. J. H. BELL, FOUNDRY MANUFACTURER, is a celebrated Clock and Bell Maker, and is located at 1179 Grand street, New Orleans, La. Price-list and Circulars sent free.

HENRY H. BARNES & CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

FOR SALE:—A good place in Anne Arundel county, containing 120 acres, with a large house, and a fine view of the Chesapeake Bay. The place is well adapted for a country residence, and is well adapted for a country residence. For further particulars apply to H. H. Barnes, Baltimore, Md.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

GREENSBORO DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Greensboro station, Dec. 29, 1883.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Greensboro circuit, at Greensboro, Jan. 12, 1884.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 3.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1433.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased preachers half price.
All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KREWE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. H. NICOTTE,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BAILEY,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate,
"GOOD-MORNING."

BY C. M. R.

"Good-morning" is a sweeter word

Than ever a "Good-night" can be.

It breathes of life, the darkness gone,

And that's a sweeter thought to me.

"I love," "what of that?" say you,

Where else will ever word or sigh.

"Good-night" is all too sad a sound;

It pains me to hear it said.

It tells me that my darling's dead.

To sleep with the silent dead.

Trained his eyes, and closed his form,

To rest his weary spirit on.

Good-night! Good-night! Good-night!

It tells me that my darling's dead.

To sleep with the silent dead.

Trained his eyes, and closed his form,

To rest his weary spirit on.

Good-morning! In that world of day.

China, and Her People.

BY REV. J. W. LAMICHT.

(Thirty-eight Letters.)

My Dear Young Friends: These peculiar people have a great many strange customs among them so different from people of other nations.

Suppose a man's house in America should take fire and burn down, and his family should lose their all and be brought to poverty and distress, what would Christian people do for them? They would do all they could to help put out the fire, and if the house should be destroyed, they would take the poor man and his family into their homes and do all they could to make them happy in order that they might forget their terrible loss. Not only that, but hundreds and thousands of kind friends would do all they could to collect money to build them another house, and to the meantime the poor man and his family would be kindly cared for. But it is not so in China.

When a man's house takes fire many persons will come to see the fire, but never move a finger to help put it out. Others will help put out the fire, but these are generally neighbors to the man, and they are interested in putting out the fire lest their own property should be destroyed. If the man's house is burned down, he is not allowed to go into any man's house, but has to remain in the street, or seek some empty place where there are no houses, and put was a mystery to him what had become of them. He was at a loss to know where to move until repairs could be made. He went at once to his uncle nearest to him, and asked if he could allow him to come to his house until he could make repairs on his own. His uncle replied: "I can not allow you to come into my house;

but there is an old out-house which you can occupy until you are ready to return to your house." He moved everything out of his house to this shed, and began the repairs. In a few days he happened to be walking past the field in which his second uncle was working, and he saw him working with his hoe. He said at once: "That is my hoe. I have looked for it in every direction, and did not know what had become of it.

I want it, for I can not do without it." His uncle tried to claim it as his own, but the man contended strongly for it, and at last his uncle pitching it at him, said, "Take it and be gone." The man had stolen the hoe of the fire and taken it home with him. Some of these people seem to think that when a man is in misfortune then is the time when everybody has a right to pick at him and give him a push down the road to ruin. Often have I seen men who their toms by some mischance have their cargo turned into the water, and then it is the signal for every one to help himself. Strangers and those near by rush forward, gather what they can and flee away, claiming it as their own property.

Some time since there was a marriage in the city of Shanghai, and when the family and friends were in the midst of the marriage ceremony

there was a rush of the servants from the kitchen to see and hear what was going on. Soon there was a cry of fire from the interior of the building.

The house was really on fire, and this caused much confusion among the guests and in the family of the bridegroom. With all their efforts they were not able to extinguish the fire until part of the building was consumed. The whole party was concourse, thrown into the street for a time until repairs could be partially made. The wedding ceremony went on as before. The bride was still veiled, and the bridegroom dressed in his best was by her side on the street.

The musicians had erected a stand on the street for themselves, and the music went on, but there was no dancing. For three days they had to remain on the street, for no one would allow them to go into their houses. Thus you see the severity of these heathen people upon any one who should be brought into distress or calamity of any kind. Occasionally you will find those who have tender feelings for the suffering around them; but where you find one such you will find tens and tens of others who are nothing for the sufferings of others.

During the cold winter nights in this city, and around it many of the poor actually die on the streets begins the work of cleansing from sin. That is mere assumption, and;

as we verily believe, without scriptural authority. What does the word say on that point? In Isaiah 1, 18, we read, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." This language is addressed to the unregenerate, as is indicated by the terms "scarlet" and "crimson." And the work proposed is regeneration, the character and extent of which is stated in the text that the "scarlet" shall become white as snow, and the "crimson" as wool.

This is not a work of cleansing begin-merely, but completed. Would not remaining sin, whether latent or active, discolour the snow and pollute

the wool? Ezekiel is equally explicit in chapter xxxiii, 16. "None of his sins that he hath committed shall be mentioned upon him." Again in chapter xxxvi, 25, we read, "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will

I cleanse you. A new spirit will I give you, and a new heart will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them." Now, if cleansed from all filthiness and all idols, how much of the filthiness and idolatry remains?

The radical error of Bro. Pritch-ard's school of theologians is lodged in his definition of regeneration. He says, "Regeneration is a state of partial cleansing from sin, which subdues sin so that it does not reign over us, though it remains in us."

We have not so learned the scriptures. Let us appeal to the word.

Acts xiii, 38, 39. "Be it known unto you, therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins; and by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses."

I John 1, 9, reads, "If we confess our sins he is faithful (to his promise) and just (in view of the atonement) to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Of-serve that here are confession, forgiveness and cleansing from all unrighteousness, in the same transaction, unobscuredly the work of justification and regeneration. "Our brother asks: "Is there not a difference between a field partially cleared from grass and thoroughly cleared?"

In reply I ask, Does not this text take all the grass out of your field, and that, too, before sanctification comes?"

Now let us turn to I Corinthians v, 17. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature: old things are passed away, behold, all things are become new." Here be it remembered that view we have Paul's argument in the second chapter of Colossians, under the figures of circumcision and baptism, summed up in the following words: "Ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power; in whom also ye are circumcised, with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ; buried with him in baptism, wherein ye also are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.

And ye, being dead in your sins, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses." So the work is complete—all trespasses are forgiven, none remaining either regretful or subdued. God is so entirely satisfied with his cleansing work in regeneration that he tells us in Ezekiel, as quoted above, that the believer's sins shall not be mentioned upon him; and in Hebrews x, 17, that his "sins and iniquities will I remember no more." Is it possible that any sins could remain in the heart of one who will not remember or dare to mention?

The only supposed scriptural support that the advocates of the theory of remaining carnality in the regenerated child is in I Corinthians iii,

13, which reads as follows: "And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal;

even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat; for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal; whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?" Now the question arises, Is this carnality the result of remaining sins, or of un-regenerated hearts? St. Paul answers it in Galatians v, 22, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, meekness, and patience, kindness, goodness, faith, trust, gentleness, and self-control."

Again, Bro. Pritchard says: "It is in quality, and not in quantity, that our love may be made perfect—perfectly pure, free from enmity—so that only love may pervade and permeate

the heart, and this perfectly pure love may grow and develop through time, and eternally in heaven." In answer to this I would say that in justifi-

SECOND PAPER.

I concluded when I reached Jackson I would call on my quondam colleague, and ask him to write my wife such a letter as would strengthen her faith and reconcile her to our distant appointment. When I called at the house of his father-in-law he met me at the door, invited me into the parlor, and asked me how I liked my appointment. After canvassing the subject a few moments he handed me a letter he wrote the night previous, to my wife, saying: "I thought Sister Morse might feel alluded on having to leave her friends and home, so I have taken the liberty to give her some encouragement." I thanked him for anticipating my visit and business. On reaching home my wife was anxious to know what disposition was made of us. I handed her Bro. McLennan's letter, which she read, but not without tears. I asked her if she could attend it. She replied: "I can if you can." The next day I circulated notices through the stew them and give them some bread they would pay me well. I had refused but real, and told them I would bake some griddle cakes and warm oysters. So they went to the train car, and I prepared the cakes and set a small-size table for two persons by the time they got back. Then I saw them come in, and put them to men came in instead of two, and refused to the fire, I was amazed. What could I do? I said to those that first that I was not prepared for more than two, and I could not do any more.

They insisted, and said they would make any price. I went in the kitchen and made a fire in the stove, and put on the oysters. It was a large four-gallon kettle, they had, and they said I might have all that was left. I set the table for four, went to call them, and found the room full of men. Some were gentlemen, or looked to be, and others were not. What a terrible strain on me! I was almost frozen, the children crying, and they were piling on wood on the fire in the room. My oysters had gotten up to perfection, and the others were frightened, and my mother was obliged to get in before they kept from freezing. Then they ran to the table, and helped themselves from the pots on the stove, and ate every oyster and all the bread.
I wanted me to cook more. I told
I could not; would not. Then one of the first who came asked me what I charged. I said: Gentlemen, I am gentlemen you will pay me the same sum for this imposition. I wanted to entertain two, and all crowd have rushed in upon me without my consent. I am a wife and a refugee. You have ruined my wood, and I am almost dead and my children too. Please will not begin to compensate me for the discomfort and trouble you caused me. One stepped up to me and said: "Madam, we could have given you supper at a boarding house for fifty cents for a dollar price." I replied: Why did you not go there and not impose on me and my children? I do not keep a hotel.
One spoke and told them all to go in and pay me. Some sneaked out without paying anything, but the others that took the money handed

We—changing the person—even give, from our heart of hearts, blundering waiter at a certain hotel which shall be nameless here, who the table, fails to furnish us with knives and fork, forgets the butter, brings us cold rolls and beefsteak, tiredly beyond our powers of mastication. But we are in an amiable mood and feel that we can afford to be magnanimous.

How pleasant the reunion with friends, preachers and their wives who came thronging into the care-taking in number at almost a station, until when we loved Jack at six in the morning, for Natchez there are fully fifty preachers on hand. At sight of the familiar faces; kind and loved in this years gone, troops of memories come thronging upon the heart, causing the tears to start, unbidden, from the eyes. This is no place for mournful retrospection; the iron horse is bearing us swiftly on to the beautiful and thrifty of Natchez, which we reach at noon, and are soon domiciled in a "chokebait home in town." Hadn't time we might speak at length of different objects of interest here, of costly churches, the lovely homes, elegant suburban residences, the generous hospitality of the people, also of the doings of the Conference of the venerable Bishop's armorial Sunday, the fine addresses which you heard, and many other things. But must hasten on to that last day which all the other days of Conference were made. The ordeal is past—"agony" is over, which means "appointments" are read, and we returned for another twelve months, the people we have learned to love well, and who, we humbly believe, cordially welcome us back. Return home on the South-bound train, miss the society of the preachers, much that we are feeling quite a sense of bereavement, when a fine old gentleman approaches, and says, "P., with a pleasant amilo: "I am from your general appearance that are a Methodist minister." He introduced himself as Rev. J. Cameron, a name familiar to us of an honored member of the

The fact is that the Christian era is a continuation of the Jewish era while the religion is the same. There is a difference only in the ceremonies and sacrifices. We hope Blessed Peter will see the point.

JAMES E. HIRSH
BASTROP, LA., DEC. 4, 1883.

In Memoriam.

Miss Zenobia Flemmons died this life aged fifteen years and months. The good die young, young lady was until her life faithful member of Felicity

This But death has suspended the needs a union, and the husband is left a Street weep and wail, heart-stricken solitude of his sacred grief, unt

all God | Bradford, Ambrose, LA.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

The combination of the Oils and Alkali (Soda) must be complete to form a perfect or true soap, such as will not burn the fibre; or redden and irritate the skin. The Ivory Soap is 99 $\frac{100}{100}$ % pure, which insures its being perfectly harmless, and will leave the skin clear, white and velvety.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to J. C. Hambie, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

FOR SALE. A good place in Amite county, Miss., containing (200) three hundred and twenty acres, a fine two story dwelling-house, beautiful site, healthy location, about four miles from Mississippi Valley railroad, on the Clinton and Greenville road. For further particulars apply to H. Bradford, Ambrosia, La.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND
SOUTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. R. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HERRICK.

THURSDAY JANUARY 17, 1884.

We find the following in the Colorado Methodist:

Rev. David P. Watkins and wife, Guadalajara, Mexico, connected with the Congregational Church, have transferred their relation to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The large church to which he ministered has also made the same change.

Looking over the files of the ADVOCATE we found this interesting note. Will old DeKalb make such another report this century year?

DEKALB CIRCUIT, MISS.

Our protracted meetings are all over, and we have had happy times. Two hundred conversions, and raised $1,600 missionary money. To God be all the glory.

Yours in Christ.

The following beautiful figure, used by Bishop Granbery in a recent sermon is at once striking and suggestive:

The perfect Archer calls the deer his own even before the shaft has gone from his bow. Oh! that God may give us such faith in the means that we are employing for the salvation of the world. A faith to claim success and victory as ours, even before we have reached it.

On the seventeenth of December last the prohibitionists carried the town of Columbia by a vote of thirty to ten. And on the twentieth ultimo four wards in the parish were carried by a large majority. Three wards held no election, as no liquor is sold in either. So seven wards out of ten have already declared for prohibition. Everything encourages the cause of reform. Thorough organization and zealous work will achieve a glorious triumph. We do not expect the millennium with the overthrow of the liquor traffic, but we do look for a great curse to be removed, so that grace may more abound, and Scriptural holiness more rapidly spread over the earth.

Another Episcopal clergyman has emulated Dr. Heber Newton in his pronounced opposition to the orthodox view of the inspiration of the Scriptures—the Rev. Dr. Bush, of Staten Island. The following, from the New York Sun, are wise words from an unexpected quarter, and our sister church would do well to heed them:

Is it not strange that the Episcopal Church permits the utterance in its pulpits of views regarding the Bible which undermine the very foundations of its theology? Take away faith in the Scriptures as the inspired, all-sufficient and unquestionable word of God, and there remains nothing for that theology to rest upon. Reason has replaced faith, and criticism has supplanted devout belief in the written word.

No system is so marvellously adapted to all communities and all conditions of society as Methodism. Many suppose it eminently useful in pioneer work, but lacks the conservatism needed for older and denser populations. It is good for the country, but fails in the cities. Those who so imagine evidence dense ignorance of history. The London Methodist Recorder, of recent date, says: "In no part of the United Kingdom has Methodism so grown in the last twenty-five years as in London." Right in the great metropolis of its birth, and where we would suppose the conditions of growth are most unfavorable for our itinerancy, the increase has been greatest. We only need to wisely work our wonderful system to perpetuate the Pentecostal glory of its early triumphs in old Fetter Lane, Moorfields, and Kennington Common.

The Schenectady Union, New York, reports that the Rev. Dr. Backus had his sight restored after ten years' blindness from cataract. His joy was unbounded in being able to look upon the faces of his family again for the first time in ten years. He had never seen his grandchildren. Many of his old friends had so changed that, though recognizing their voices, he knew not their features. Some whose hair he remembered was black as a raven's wing had become almost white. How suggestive this incident of heavenly reunions in heaven. The joy of meeting will be heightened because of the long and painful separation. Every angelic face will be a new and increasing revelation of beauty. But there will be no difficulty of recognition. Even at best, we now see through a glass darkly, but then face to face. Let the prospect inspire us to right-living and abounding in the work of the Lord.

Louisiana Conference.

This body met on Wednesday of last week in the Carondelet Street Church, Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh presiding. Nearly all the members responded to the first roll-call, and quite a number of laymen. Most of the brethren from the rural districts had the bronzed look of field service, and each had the step and expression of courage and self-denial. But few sections of our wide connection demand so much heroism and fortitude to cultivate as a large area of Louisiana. We honor the brave men who, amid untold difficulties, have kept our flag unfurled and preached a gospel of free and full salvation in all these lands. Their greeting of each other was most cordial. In no other body is there such an esprit de corps as in an Annual Conference of Methodist ministers. And these annual gatherings serve to keep alive the warm attachment between comrades in a common cause. We condole with any preacher who is bereaved of this annual privilege.

The devotional exercises of the opening session had the glow of a camp-meeting. Such fervent praying and hearty singing we have rarely heard. It is well to stress the devotional spirit in Conference deliberations. The morning worship should not be a mere form, but have the genuine spirit and power of true religion. It gives a good key-note to the day's doings. Ambassadors of God, assembled to confer about the great interests of his kingdom, must keep prominent not only the Master's business, but the Master's Spirit.

The Conference organized by the election of Dr. C. F. Evans as secretary and S. B. McCutchen, Esq., as statistical secretary. One of the first items of business transacted was the adoption of a resolution requiring a rearrangement of the roll of members according to seniority of admission, readmission or transfer into the Conference. Such an order has heretofore not obtained. While the presiding elders were out preparing the standing committees, Dr. David Morton, secretary of the Church Extension Society, was introduced, and addressed the Conference in behalf of that cause. It was a straightforward, business-like talk, in the spirit of a man tremendously in earnest and wholly absorbed in his work. The General Conference acted wisely in laying an embargo upon his organizing and executive brain, and calling him to the leadership of a new departure. Church extension is already one of our most popular collections, and soon will command the largest liberality of our congregations. We are especially desirous that the Loan Fund of $500,000 shall be raised this Centenary year, and of this we have little doubt. Dr. Morton intimated that some Centenary donations were expected to that fund that would at once astonish and thrill the whole church. So note it speedily be. The church extension anniversary was held on Wednesday night in the spacious auditorium of Carondelet, with addresses by Bishop Kavanaugh and Dr. Morton. The collection for the year exceeded eleven hundred dollars, about seventy per cent. of the assessment.

Centenary College and Mansfield Female College were presented to the Conference in most excellent reports, the former written by Bishop Keener, the latter by Dr. F. M. Grace. Centenary is having comparatively a very prosperous term, with a larger graduating class than has appeared upon that platform since the war. President Rusk is demonstrating more and more his eminent fitness for the position he occupies. Under all the circumstances Mansfield Female College is doing remarkably well. After the shock and widespread effect of last summer's tragedy, many friends feared that its halls could not be opened this term. But President Grace has evidenced great caution and wisdom, and already the college has quite regained public confidence and favor. That institution has had an honored history in North Louisiana Methodism, and is a real necessity among the conservative forces of our church in that vast and fruitful section.

Bishop Parker occupied the chair from time to time, much to the gratification of his old Conference comrades. This was their first opportunity of observing him in that capacity, his episcopate heretofore being exercised entirely in the State of Texas. He rules with diligence and dispatches business with ease and accuracy. A Bishop off duty at Conference must enjoy a comfortable and comfortable mind. He has not the care of the appointments to tax his brain and sympathies, and often disturb the hours that should be given to sleep. Possibly few of us appreciate how great is the strain upon a Bishop in endeavoring to make such disposition of our forces as best to conserve the interests of the church and not to afflict a single brother or his family. Providence in the cabinet is the secret of his wise decisions.

The reports of the preachers, considering the overflow and drought from both of which Louisiana has suffered, were very creditable, and encouraging. They had stood bravely at their posts, and worked with a zeal and ability that has been honored of God. We know no nobler type of manhood than a true, conscientious Methodist preacher.

"Missionary day," conducted by Dr. Kelley, was an occasion long to be remembered. After the missionary treasurer's report was read he called out first the laymen and then the preachers to state the difficulties in the way of raising the collections. When these had been given the doctor took the platform, and for an hour or more delivered one of the most practical, searching, aggressive and earnest missionary addresses we ever heard. He made points and sharpened them. Never once did he utter a venerable platitude. Some may differ and others object, but the address will provoke thought and good works.

The Centenary Committee organized, outlined their work for the year and appointed a wide-awake executive committee. Dr. C. W. Carter was appointed to preach the Centenary sermon before the next Conference.

On Saturday Bro. L. D. Palmer, business manager of the Publishing House, arrived fresh from the Florida Conference and at once proceeded to business. He was warmly welcomed, and found generous patronage in this body of marked connectional loyalty.

President Rusk, of Centenary College, made an address in behalf of that institution that awakened a hearty response. His speech was interrupted by an impromptu collection of $200 for the purpose of sustaining a young licentiate who is there preparing for the itinerant work.

The following statistical summaries have been kindly furnished by the efficient secretaries: White members, 44,964; colored members, 21; local preachers, 81; adults baptized, 556; infants baptized, 863; number of Sunday-schools, 161; officers and teachers, 981; number of scholars, 7,066; number of Sunday-school scholars received into the church, 314; collected for Conference fund, $2,436 95; for support of the Bishops, $692 95; for foreign missions, $5,144 40; for domestic missions, $890 40; total for missions, $6,034 80; for the Bible cause, $196 70; for education, $317 60; number of churches, 183 5-6; number of parsonages, 37; amount expended in repairs on churches, $19,344 86; on parsonages, $4,829 50.

Admitted on Trial.—Julius W. Bleker, W. H. Maxfield, G. F. Hill. Remaining on Trial.—Wm. Wimberly, A. C. Coney, S. J. Davies, J. M. Davies.

Discontinued.—B. F. Jenkins.

Admitted Into Full Connection.—Hickson Capers, J. White Davis.

Readmitted.—Robt. J. Harp.

Received by Transfer.—F. M. Grace, from Holston Conference; S. Halsey Werlein, from Texas Conference; F. D. Van Valkenburg, from Little Rock Conference; J. W. McLaurin, from Mississippi Conference.

Deacons of One Year.—S. H. Whately, Reuben S. Collier, Charles F. Silvers.

Traveling Preachers Elected Deacons.—Hickson Capers and J. White Davis.

Traveling Preachers Elected Elders.—C. T. Munholland and R. M. Blocker.

Local Preachers Elected Deacons.—John M. Davies, J. Perry Porter, Steven J. Davies, John C. Carnline, Lafayette M. D. Coady.

Located at His Own Request.—Silas H. Cooper.

Superannuated.—A. G. Miller and T. J. Hough.

Superannuated.—John S. Davis, E. W. Yancey, Wm. E. Doty, P. H. Dieffenwerth, R. M. Crowson, Geo. M. Liverman.

APPOINTMENTS.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT.—Joseph B. Walker, P. E. Carondelet Street, Felix R. Hill, Felicite Street, Chas. W. Carter, St. Charles Avenue, Beverly Carradine, Moreau Street, J. W. McLaurin, Louisiana Avenue, S. Halsey Werlein, Algiers and Gretna, James L. Wright, Lafourche circuit, J. P. Scricklock, Baton Rouge, H. O. White, A. G. Miller, sup.; Plaquemine and Donaldsonville, F. S. Hocutt; Agent Northwestern Bible Society, James A. Ivy.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT.—B. F. Alexander, P. E. Shreveport, Chas. F. Evans, Mooringsport, Wm. Wimberly; Caddo, to be supplied; Logansport, J. Fulton; Grand Cane and Woodside, John Pipes; Mansfield, R. J. Harp; Pleasant Hill, Robt. Parvin; Natchitoches and Tiger Island, C. F. Silvers; Acadou to be supplied by Samuel S. Holliday; Red River, R. M. Blocker; Provençal, to be supplied (by John C. Carnline); Coushatta, A. C. Coney; South Bossier, E. B.

Foust; North Bossier, J. B. Cassidy; Robeline and Many, H. Capers; Saline, to be supplied (by J. M. Franklin); President Mansfield Female College, F. M. Grace; Northwest Calcasieu, to be supplied (by J. F. Carroll).

OPELOUSAS DISTRICT.—C. Keener, P. E. Opelousas, James E. Bradley, T. J. Hough, sup.; Washington, Julius W. Bleker; Vermilionville circuit, Thomas S. Randle; Plaquemine and French mission, S. J. Davies; Abbeville, A. E. Clay; New Iberia, Thomas J. Upton; Franklin, T. K. Faunt; Lafayette, Pattersonville and Morgan City, R. S. Trappett; Lake Charles, S. S. Keener; Sugarloaf, H. J. Boltz; Sulphur Mine circuit, J. P. Porter; Grand Cheniere, E. B. Galloway.

DELRH DISTRICT.—R. Randle, P. E. Monroe, B. F. White; Delbi and Floyd, J. M. McKee; Trenton, Wm. Hart; Bastrop, J. T. Sawyer; Lind Grove, R. S. Isbell; Oak Ridge, J. P. Wynny Rayville, C. T. Munholland; Wlinshoro, to be supplied (by T. B. Reneau; Harrisonburg and Sicily Island, T. H. McClendon; Waterproof and St. Joseph, J. M. Brown; Tensas, J. W. Davis; Lake Providence and Pecan Grove, Baxter Glegg; Oak Grove and Macona, Geo. F. Hill.

HOMER DISTRICT.—A. A. Cornett, P. E. Homer, J. W. Medlock; Talp, R. T. Parrish; Haynesville, J. A. Miller; Minden and Mount Zion, J. A. Parker; Minden circuit, W. H. Maxfield; Sparta and Saline, W. S. Collier; Arcadia, J. J. Billingsley; Vernon, J. R. Shepherd; Indian Village, C. W. Hodge; Rochester mission, W. R. Whately; Downsville, G. R. Godfrey; Farmerville, J. M. Johnston; Summerfield, to be supplied (by John L. Williams); Webster circuit, J. P. Patterson; Saline, John M. Davies; Ruston circuit, J. H. Stone.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.—N. A. Cornett, P. E. Alexandria and Pineville, J. M. Beard; Rapides circuit, Jephtha Landrum; Winfield, J. W. Hearn; Jena, D. C. Barry; Columbia, J. D. Harper; Evergreen and Big Cane, S. H. Whately; Spring Creek, to be supplied (by Abel Hauffaull; Black River, Geo. Jackson; Vidalia and Troy, L. A. Reed; Bayou Boeuf, F. White; Colfax and Montgomery, R. A. Davis.

TRANSFERRED.—A. T. Galloway, to Little Rock Conference; J. V. Penn, to Mississippi Conference.

The Advocate for 1884.

Our patronizing Conferences have all held recent annual sessions, endorsed the business and editorial conduct of the ADVOCATE, and pledged themselves to increased effort in extending its circulation. We are grateful for expressions of confidence and appreciation, and enter upon the new year's work with fresh inspiration and aspiration. It is our purpose to give all diligence to the several departments, and make the ADVOCATE more and more a pastoral helper and home companion. Successful pastors write us that the paper is an efficient assistant in all local and connectional enterprises. Every such testimony is an additional argument in favor of increased circulation. What benefits the few ought to bless the many. With an ADVOCATE in every Methodist family an upward movement would be given to the church, the results of which eternity alone can compute.

During this Centenary year special attention will be given to the peculiar doctrines that have characterized our Methodism and the record of God's signal mercies to us as a church for the past hundred years. Scraps of local history will be published, indicating the measure and character of growth in different communities. And here we would suggest the appointment of a local Centenary Committee in each pastorate, who shall be specially charged with this work. At the Centenary mass meeting in May or October this history might be read, and then carefully preserved for some future historian.

We invite correspondence, but ask that due attention be had to the virtue of condensation. Short articles command readers, while long ones are passed over with a single glance at the head-line and subscription. Occasionally a brother writes that he is aware his communication exceeds proper limits, but he could not abbreviate without affecting his argument. In nearly all such cases the argument is never read. A reputation for prolixity is fatal to a newspaper correspondent. A very esteemed friend and brother minister told us he had never preached but one long sermon in his life, but unfortunately that was his first, and it gave him a reputation for pulpit endurance. Verbum sap.

Short communications, if acceptable, can always be utilized. But longer ones, however worthy, have to be reserved or consigned to the waste-basket. We do not promise the publication of everything sent. Our best judgment must decide its adaptability to the wants of our readers. The non-appearance of an article is no impeachment of its worthiness. It might be very acceptable to another character of paper or to the ADVOCATE at another time. Sometimes a little offense is unavoidable in retiring a communication, but not infrequently a writer has cause to thank an editor for such decision. But we want the brethren to write, and keep our columns sparkling with good news from the churches.

We commence the year 1884 under more favorable auspices than when we hailed the first morning of 1883. We bade farewell to the old year with some feelings of gratulation. It was with the eager rejoicing of him who takes off the harness after successful conflict. The ADVOCATE now goes into twenty-five hundred more homes than a year ago. We have appreciative readers not only in every Southern State and in every State where Southern Methodism has been planted, but in twelve Northern States, besides the following foreign countries: England, Ireland, Scotland, Turkey, China, Central America and Mexico. This is a large constituency. May it be more than doubled before we go up to Baltimore to celebrate the Centenary of the old Christmas Conference, that determined the organic life of American Methodism. With many thanks for the favors of the past, from God and the church, we look out upon the labors and responsibilities of a new year.

Report of Trustees of Centenary College, of Louisiana.

To the president and members of the Louisiana Annual Conference, the trustees of Centenary College, of Louisiana, would respectfully report:

That during the past year this institution has had as good attendance upon the regular college course as at any time since the war. That large numbers of students have from the beginning of this college attended its halls who, though they have but partially completed the regular course, yet have received a good education. The faculty has been strengthened by the election of Prof. Harrison to the chair of mathematics. The attendance was large at the last commencement, and the speeches and scholarship of the graduates were as creditable to the college as those of any previous class.

The west wing of the college has been repaired throughout one story, and other repairs are still going on. The facilities offered by the institution to young men who desire an education are unusually good. The trustees believe that the cost of tuition, board, washing, room rent, fuel and lights is less than at any other college in the Southern States. They have had occasion to compare this cost with other colleges of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and believe that the year's entire expenses are nowhere put at so low a figure, say $175 for everything. This has been secured by the devotion of the faculty to their work at scarcely living rates, in the hopes that by and-by a more remunerative attendance upon their instruction would set in from both Mississippi and Louisiana.

The Board believes that Centenary College is doing a good work for Methodism in the Southwest, and has been largely useful in preserving the labors of men who have gone to their reward by maintaining the reputation of the church as a teacher of youth. The college remains as a monument of the Centenary subscriptions and public spirit evoked from the Methodism of 1839, in behalf of higher education. It holds in its walls and history the memory of McGehee, Winans, Lane, Burrows, and a host of noble spirits who labored to establish it and give it to the church, as an expression of their gratitude to God, for the rise and work of Wesleyan Methodism. While many monuments have crumbled and yielded up their charge, this, thanks be to God, abides. After the war it survived to find that its endowment had vanished; but friends were again raised up who started it upon a new career of usefulness. Mr. Edward J. Gay, Mr. William R. Stuart, Mr. May, of Richardson & May, Dr. B. H. Moss, by testament, were those who contributed the largest sums. Many others gave of their poverty. The buildings were repaired and the halls opened. Since then numbers of young men have received an education who but for Centenary would have failed to receive one.

The trustees are grateful for the educational collection ordered by both the patronizing Conferences, and believe this to be a valuable supplement if the preachers will bring it faithfully before their congregations.

It is to be hoped that the two Conferences and the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana will in this coming Centenary year acknowledge the claims of this venerable institution upon the church, and give to it no means share of the offerings which may be made in gratitude to God for our common Methodism. It is asking not too much that it receive at least fifty thousand dollars from this source? In conclusion the board prays that the Holy Spirit may move the Louisiana Conference to devise liberal things for her first-born institution of learning, if it be not the very oldest of all the colleges in the Southern connection.

Very respectfully,
J. C. KEENER,
Pres't Board of Trustees.

JANUARY 5, 1884.

The Salvation Army of England is having fifteen halls built, with seating capacity for 25,000 people.

Rev. J. A. B. Jones, J. T. Nicholson, W. G. Backus and A. D. McVoy, of the Mississippi Conference, were in attendance upon the Louisiana Conference last week and welcomed callers at our office.

David C. Cook, the well-known Sunday-school publisher, has given a $2,500 Cottrell Steam Printing Press to the American Mission Publishing House, India. A very sensible and serviceable donation.

The Irish Christian Advocate, one of our most valued exchanges, has entered upon its second year. It is accomplishing great things for Methodism in the land of the shamrock, and we wish for it ever-increasing prosperity.

The Rev. C. H. Carson, of the South Georgia Conference, dropped into our office for a few hours on Monday last. He was en route to Albany, Oregon, in the Columbia Conference, where he has been stationed by Bishop Hargrove.

The Hon. William M. Inge, of Acomb, was elected Speaker of the Mississippi House of Representatives last week on the first ballot. Col. Inge is an eloquent and pronounced advocate of prohibition, and was the leader of our forces in the last Legislature.

During the presidency of Rev. Charles Garrett, a new weekly journal was started in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, entitled Joyful News, at the price of a half-penny. It is largely made up of postal card reports of revival meetings. The subscription has already reached 50,000.

Bishop Granbery writes to the Richmond Christian Advocate that his threatened blindness has been partially relieved. He thinks by abstaining from night work he may retain his present power of vision. In the prayer that such a blessing may be vouchsafed to him the whole church will heartily unite.

Bishop H. W. Warren and bride, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, spent a few days in the city last week. Dr. J. H. Vincent, the "Bishop of Chautauqua," was also here for a day, and engaged our Crescent City literatus, Mr. George W. Cable, for the Chautauqua platform next summer.

The Alabama State Temperance Alliance, through its president, has issued a call for a State Convention of all temperance workers, to be held in Tuscaloosa, January 22. All reform organizations, churches and Sunday-schools are urged to send delegates. The cause is moving forward, and its friends multiplying on every hand.

We acknowledge a call from our young friend, Mr. W. A. Battelle, general traveling agent and correspondent of the Times-Democrat. He retired from the editorship of the Summit Times and Intelligencer to accept this position. We have known him from boyhood, and expect for him marked success in his chosen profession.

The Rev. Owen Jones, of the British Wesleyan Conference, is spending some days in New Orleans, en route to Belize, British Honduras, to engage in mission work. He was introduced to the Louisiana Conference, and has made several pleasant calls at our office. In connection with the purpose of his coming hither, we are forced to ask why Southern Methodism has no mission organized at Belize.

We are indebted to Rev. S. A. Webber, editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, for a pamphlet copy of his sermon delivered before the under-graduates of the South Carolina Conference at its recent session in Sumter, S. C. It is a spiritual and discriminating discussion of the apostle's great thought: "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power." The Conference did well to request its publication.

At the anniversary of the Wesleyan University Alumni Club, in New York City, speeches were made by Bishop Harris, Gen. Plisk and others. To the toast, "New Theology," Dr. Curry was to respond, but being unavoidably absent, he sent a note of apology in which he characterized "New Theology" as a tadpole which had lost its tail, ever wiggling, ever and anon reappearing, and hoping to come into a normal shape at some time. A facetious, but not inaccurate characterization.

The Kentucky Pool Association, which regulates the production of liquor, at a meeting in Louisville last week, ordered that the capacity of production this year be reduced 60 per cent. of the average production of 1881 and 1882. It really looks as though the long-ridiculed temperance reform was bearing good fruit. Decreasing the distillation of the liquid damnation is a great gain. Let every man of Israel lie away to his tent and bear his part in the great struggle. We have our quarrel just.

The South India Lay-Electoral College elected the Rev. William Taylor, a lay delegate, to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Taylor is at present in Chili, visiting the self-sustaining missions he established in South America. The New York Advocate pronounces it "the most remarkable election in Methodism," and indulges in a good deal of pleasant rhetorical extravagance over the event. He is called "the wondrous comet of the mission work." A very remarkable man he is, and eminently deserving of this honor.

Note from Rev. John Pipes.

Mr. Editor: Last Sabbath we closed up our work on Cable circuit, which makes the thirty-ninth consecutive year of our itinerant labor. We thank God for his goodness to us during another year. We traveled some twenty-five hundred miles, filled the appointments from January to the fifth Sabbath in December, except two or three, which were filled by proxy while we were attending other meetings. We held protracted meetings at every appointment, and took up all the prescribed collections. Now for the first time in life, we decide not to go to Conference. The weather is cold, the Conference far away, and, having been indisposed for a week, we thought it prudent to remain at home and recuperate. We are aware of the great loss we sustain by not attending the session of the Conference, where we are always thrilled with better emotions and new resolves for good. Praying that you may have a harmonious and pleasant session, we remain as ever,

JOHN PIPES.

WHEELER, LA., Dec. 4, 1883.

First Sunday in January, 1884; in Columbus, Miss.

I had the pleasure on the sixth instant of listening to a historical and highly instructive centennial discourse by the Rev. Thomas C. Wier, presiding elder of the Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, in the Methodist Church in this place. His text was: "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

James iii. 5. Without any reference to the connection of the text, he commenced by stating that the first Sunday in January, 1884, had been designated by the Central Centenary Committee as the time for preaching a centennial sermon. He then briefly referred to the centennial of the organization of Methodist societies in England in 1739, of the centennial of the first Methodist preaching in America in 1776, and then of the present centennial year, commemorative of the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Baltimore in 1781, by Dr. Coke and Bishop Asbury, and that the wise plan adopted of a general episcopal oversight of the whole church, that of presiding elders over districts, an itinerant ministry, and Quarterly Conferences and Annual Conferences, all combined and working harmoniously, constituted the great factor in the hand of God in giving such unparalleled success to the Methodist Church. He also spoke of the doctrines of the Methodist Church as being nothing new or fanatical, but in accordance with the plain teaching of the Holy Scriptures. His statistical account of the Methodist Church in the United States, Canada, England and other countries was edifying and even astonishing to those not informed on that subject. His remarks on the doctrines of the Methodist Church was listened to with deep interest. His closing remarks were on what was hoped for, and confidently expected to be accomplished this centennial year, the most important of which was a general revival of religion, pure and undefiled. During his remarks he referred to how the term Methodist originated, not because Wesley acted in all he did methodically, or that method in all things is a part of religion; but as a term of reproach. This remark set your correspondent to thinking of the many reproachful epithets applied to Christ while on earth, still Christianity lives. Many reproachful epithets were applied to Wesley and his followers, still Methodism lives; and now, from that little fire kindled into a flame in 1730, by the labors of John Wesley, the church has continued to spread, and her membership can now only be numbered by millions. In this meditating on the amazing success of the Methodist Church, and her whole-some doctrines, my final conclusion was that I would rather be an humble minister in the Methodist Church than to be a Cardinal or Archbishop of any church claiming apostolic succession. The succession we all want is sound Scriptural doctrine and holiness of heart.

In conclusion, Bro. Wier would do well to preach a Centenary sermon at all his quarterly meetings in his first round on his district.

W. SPILLMAN.
COLUMBUS, MISS., Jan. 7, 1884.

Chronology of Remarkable Events in Methodist History.

January 8, 1738. Rev. John Wesley, on board ship, writes out the result of his heart examination in private meditation. Is not this duty sadly neglected at the present time?

January 8, 1738. Asbury records a wonderful work of grace in Virginia; about 3,000 persons converted.

January 9, 1739. Wesley says in his journal: "I left no money to any one in my will."

January 9, 1823. First number of Zion's Herald.

January 10, 1740. Arrival of Whitefield at Savannah, Ga.

January 10, 1776. Asbury and the Episcopal minister, Jarratt, hold a watch-night service.

January 11, 1726. Wesley wrote his sermon, "On mourning for the dead."

January 11, 1778. Asbury commends highly Baxter's "Saint's Rest."

January 12, 1784. Wesley, in great need of money, prays for it, and it comes.

January 12, 1794. Jesse Lee preached his first sermon in Livermore, Me.

January 13, 1738. Wesley records his feelings during a fearful storm at sea.

January 13, 1882. Boston University realizes the noble bequest of Isaac Rich, Esq.

January 14, 1738. Rev. George Whitefield ordained.

January 14, 1827. Sermon preached by Bishop Soule this day made the subject of General Conference investigation in 1828. New York Christian Advocate.

Kindly Mention.

In a letter to the St. Louis Christian Advocate the Rev. M. B. Chapman, of the Missouri Conference, thus refers to his recent short visit to New Orleans: "He is in error about the representatives from Alabama being present at the meeting of our Publishing Committee. From its birth to a few years ago the Alabama was one of our patrolling Conferences, but has now transferred her official allegiance to another excellent organ bearing her own name and published at Birmingham. Bro. Chapman says:

My stay in New Orleans was necessarily brief, but I took time to call at the Advocate office. There I found the Publishing Committee, consisting of representatives from the Louisiana, Mississippi, North Mississippi and Alabama Conferences, in session and met, with much pleasure my old friend, Dr. C. W. Carter, pastor of Fidelity Street Church, Rev. Christian Keener, presiding elder of Opelousas district, Louisiana Conference, Rev. W. P. Barton, of the North Mississippi Conference, and others. Dr. Galloway, the genial and versatile editor of the Advocate, is proving his adaptability to his position and is making his paper one of the best church organs in the connection.

Southern Methodism is growing in the Crescent City, and is meeting the wants of the people. Dr. Backley to the contrary, notwithstanding.

By the way, the Methodist Episcopal Church has only one white organization in this city, which a prominent clergyman of our church there informed me has an average congregation of fifty, and is supported almost entirely by missionary contributions.

A Card.

The readers of the Advocate have already been informed of the calamity that has befallen Dr. C. G. Andrews, viz: the loss by fire of all his household goods, including the clothing of himself and family, and also his library. Concerning this last item in the sad chapter, I desire to say a word.

To a minister books are indispensable; they are the tools of his trade. This fact is not so generally appreciated as it should be; at least not in Methodist circles. Stewards, in fixing the salary of the preacher, do not usually, as they should invariably do, include an estimate for the purchase of books. Hence, ordinarily, "the wherewith" to procure books is obtained by the practice of rigid self-denial on the part of the inmates of the parsonage. The minister's wife and children do without many things which they need and ought to have, and the whole family live abstemiously, in order that a few needed books may be added to the library. Hence the loss of his library is to the minister a most serious affair. How is that loss to be repaired? Out of present salary? Alas! that salary provides for a living only; it contains no estimate for books.

Now, are there not readers of the Advocate who have useful books which they can spare? Sometimes a person has duplicate copies of a work. Sometimes a deceased minister's library has fallen into the hands of persons to whom most of the books are utterly valueless. Sometimes an aged person has no longer a need for books, and has no one to whom he specially desires to donate them. If this note meets the eye of such persons will they not utilize their unused treasures by sending them to our bookless brother? And can not others who have no duplicate copies spare from their libraries a few valuable books?

W. C. BLACK.

In a note, enclosing a list of Quarterly Conferences, Presiding Elder Rayner writes as follows:

The last has been the most laborious year of my life. I have preached about 200 sermons, attended numerous other meetings, labored in six camp meetings, held 51 baptisms into the church, baptized 50 children, traveled by public conveyance 3,100 miles, by private conveyance 2,100 miles, endured heat, cold, rain, mosquitoes, tobacco, etc., often traveled all day without dinner, and gave much time to our district parsonage, etc. Salary, $500; expenses, $900. And yet it is said presiding elders are a "fifth wheel," "do nothing," and "live on the fat of the land."

Books and Periodicals.

A CHRISTIAN HOME. How to Make and How to Maintain It. By John Hall, D. D. Philadelphia: American Sunday-School Union, 122 Chestnut street.

We are greatly indebted to the publishers for this timely and admirable book. It is needed, and ought to be circulated in every congregation and Sunday-school. After all, the security and purity of our civilization is in the home. If our home-life is kept pure, the good of our race will prevail against our evil and social order. Nations and dynasties have begun their decline and fall first of all in the home. This book is practical. It gives prudent advice about love and marriage, argues for a home and not a boarding-house, shows the influence of home upon business success, and indicates the relations of home to heaven. In the discussion Dr. Hall touches the modern social currents that menace the foundations of true family life. We know of no book so heartily commended at this time. Price, $1.

REVIVALS, AND HOW TO PROMOTE THEM. New York: E. B. Treat, 55 Broadway.

This volume is a compilation of the choicest things on the subject of revivals by the most eminent writers and successful preachers. It is edited by Rev. W. P. Doe, whose taste and labor are worthy of high commendation. There are excellent chapters here from such writers as Bishop McIlvane, Bishop Simpson, Drs. Lyman Beecher, J. A. Briggs, J. C. Wyler, R. W. Dale, C. G. Finney, C. H. Spurgeon, W. M. Taylor, T. De Witt Talmage and others. It can not be read without kindling a fire in the heart and awakening zeal for better service. If circulated, it will promote the revival spirit. Price, $1.50.

THE MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY. New York: Historical Publication Company, 30 Lafayette Place.

This illustrated periodical is edited by Mrs. Martha J. Lamb, author of the History of the City of New York. It is certainly conducted with skill and ability. The December number has special attractions. John Estlin Cooke contributes an interesting article on Christmas. Among the contents are: "Holidays in Early Louisiana, Christmas-Tide in Canada, Col. David Crockett, of Tennessee, and Original Documents. Fifty cents a number. Yearly subscription, $5.

THE LIFE OF ST. PAUL. By D. H. Taylor. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co. Price, $1.50.

This purports to be a popular history of the life of St. Paul, and will justly claim to be a careful reading. The author never weary of reading about the great apostle. This volume, in size, style and price, will meet a general demand. The author seems to have taken unusual care to secure historical and exegetical accuracy. In addition to an excellent narrative, there is a number of important illustrations. The binding is tasteful and durable, after the well-known style of Lothrop & Co.

THE UNDAUNED GOD, and other religious poems. Author, P. E. Randolph & Co., 90 Broadway, New York.

These poems are selected and edited by the compiler of The Chancel Cross, The Shadow of the Rock, etc. We have examined this volume carefully, and think it will prove as acceptable to the public as the above-mentioned books. Price, $1.25.

THE KEYSTONE FOR POETRY. A New System of Verse. By Mrs. L. E. Cotton. Westborough, Mass. Price, 10c.

This is an interesting study and profitable business. It is not only fascinating, but may be remunerative. Mrs. Cotton is an enthusiast on the subject, and is doubtless a good authority. Those wishing to read upon the management of verse will do well to send for this little volume.

The Pulpit Treasury, for January, is full of good things as usual. This monthly has grown in interest and popularity from its initial number. The frontispiece in this issue is a portrait of Bishop H. C. Potter, assistant Bishop of New York. There is also an excellent sermon from his pen on "Light, the Outcome of Life," by Dr. C. H. Parkhurst, is scholarly, evangelical and suggestive. Other writers for this number are such names as Dr. Deems, Dr. John Hall, Dr. D. Curry and Bishop McLaren. New York: E. B. Treat, publisher, 757 Broadway. Single copy, twenty-five cents.

Lippincott's Magazine, for January, contains a varied amount of enterprising reading. If this number is a prophecy of good things for the coming year, we shall have with pleasure its monthly visits. Notes of Conversations with Emerson, "Matthew Arnold in America," Undergraduate Life at Oxford, and Healthy Homes, are among the best articles in this number. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co.

The Homiletic Magazine, for December, is a superb number. All the departments are well filled. The leading sermon, entitled "A Homily for the coming Year," by Dr. H. C. Joseph, Walte, A. M., The theological and expository sections are rich and suggestive. We have no hesitancy in cordially recommending this monthly. New York: Andrew P. Randolph & Co., 100 Broadway.

The Electric for January, is a holiday number, and the best in all its history. The fair young editors, Alfio E. Wilson and Isabella M. Leyburn, have already taken rank among the best literary journalists. We wish this Southern monthly increasing prosperity. Terms, $1 a year. Address Isabella M. Leyburn, Louisville, Ky.

We are indebted to our excellent friend, Col. Wm. R. Stuart, for a catalogue of his fine imported Channel Island catfish, and Southern rabbit, a thoroughbred stock of different kinds.

The Southern Cultivator Free.

All old subscribers by paying up in full to date, and two years' subscription in advance, will receive the Cultivator free for one year, postage prepaid. We will also send the Cultivator free for one year to all new subscribers paying two years' subscription in advance. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters. This is a fine opportunity to secure the only first-class agricultural paper published in the South free for one year.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

SEND $1 BILLS.—We wish our patrons to bear in mind that in payment for subscriptions we do not desire postage stamps, and that they should be sent only or fractional parts of a dollar. A dollar bill is much more convenient and safe to remit than the same amount in one, two or three cents stamps. The actual risk of remitting money is slight; if properly directed not one misarrangement will occur in one thousand. Enclose the bills, and where letters containing money are sealed in presence of the postmaster, we will assume all the risk.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

A little girl in church, after the contribution plate had been passed, complacently and audibly said, "I paid for four, mamma; was that right?"

Read advertisement in this issue concerning the Order Cotton.

An old Spanish saying, full of truth and of general application: "Grandfather, farmer; father, trader; son, gentleman; grandson, lawyer."

St. Vitus Dance is a distressing malady. There is but one cure for it. Simmonds' Nervine.

Some people exclaim, "Give me no anecdotes of my author, but give me his works;" and yet I have often found that the anecdotes are more interesting than the works.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15th, 1880.

GENTLEMEN.—Having been a sufferer, for a long time from nervous prostration and general debility, I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I have taken one bottle, and I have been rapidly getting better ever since, and I think it the best medicine I ever used. I am now gaining strength and appetite, which was all gone, and I was in despair until I tried your Pills. I am now well, able to go about and do my own work. Before taking it, I was completely prostrated.

MRS. MARY STUART.

The conversation was about Bishops, and our fervent theme said: "How good the dear Bishop of Peterborough is! What a good man!" Instantly a gentleman replied: "There is no merit in that. Bishops ought to be so. They get five thousand a year for being in a room, and are expected to be good for nothing and do nothing."

COLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF TONIC. Imparts strength to body and mind. Take one of these.

When does a man become a semi-stupid? "When he hears and hears." "No." "When he reads his way." "No." "When he reads and reads." "No." "Give it up." "Never. If he can help it."

CONSUMPTION CURED.—An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by a friend a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

"I don't take much stock in the proverb," said Brown to Jones. "For instance, look at the old proverb: 'A friend in need is a friend indeed.' Now, most of my experience with friends in need has been that they wanted to borrow. Give me the friend that is not in need."

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP cures obnoxious diseases of the skin.

"I've been across the English Channel six hundred times," says a prominent traveler, "and was sick every time. In fact, it is the only kind of a fresh ever had in life."

If you have diseased lungs, take HALL'S BURNING BUREAU AND TALK.

PICK'S TOOTHACHE DROPS cure in one minute.

"Why do you set your cup of coffee on the chair, Mr. Jones?" asked a worthy landlady one morning at breakfast. "Why, very real," replied Jones, "I thought I would let it rest."

"Do not marry a widower," said the old lady; "a wife, whose family is like a plate of cold potatoes." "Oh, I'll show you them over," replied the daughter-in-law.

Your Lightning Lightning came to hand all O.K. and is moving on as usual. Mr. Ferguson's wife cured of Rheumatism when the bed was suffering for 20 years and had tried every available remedy. He purchased a twenty-five cent bottle of Billington's Lightning Liniment and the rheumatism was cured. I had his testimonial and his medicine. I have sold, as you are aware, over 400 bottles, and every one with the understanding that if it did not relieve to be returned. I have had but one complaint, and then the bottle was not returned. The man had Rheumatism—only one week after he got your Lightning Liniment he had thrown his leg away, yet he returned no letter. I am trying a case of Rhinorrhoea. The cure will not be long and I might rest, the first in seventeen years. Toothache, Neuralgia, Pain in the breast, back and limbs are known no more! I therefore send Post-office money order for $1.00. Yours, W. R. HALL.

CORONA, TEX., Dec. 4, 1882.

A tipper in a Northumbrian town was once asked if he could play "Within a Mile of Ebbw Vale." "Within a mile," he exclaimed, "Wey, man, I can play within ten yards!"

W. C. Shepard asks dinner, ten and breakfast sets, $14.10; more than 100 sets, $1.50; more than 100 sets, $1.50.

What relation is a loaf of bread to a steam engine? Bread is a necessity. A steam engine is an invention. Necessity is the mother of invention; therefore a loaf of bread is the mother to a steam engine.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 123 Canal Street, New Orleans, is prepared to supply pianos and organs on the most liberal terms. Write to him for his prices and catalogue. You need not send off for instruments of a questionable character when you can get a good article nearer home at a fair price. Mr. Werlein's house is well known to all for its fair and honorable dealings. Pianos of the most celebrated facilities are kept. Chickering, Weller, Matheson, Hale, Hardman, Werlein and every instrument known to the great number of years. Uprights, Maudslows, Grand, Bay State, Sterling and others very low. If you will send your order to Philip Werlein you will be satisfied and pleased with your trade. Music or any musical article to be had.

Sydney Smith said marriage resembled a pair of shears so joined that they can not be separated; often moving in opposite directions, yet always punishing any one who comes between them.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

M. E. B.—They all say so that have tried them: "Champion Maudslow" cooking stove. Most Even Bakers.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or no.

We would again call the attention of our subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the House.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite in all summer resorts. "It has been recently with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge, with well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers."

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most palatable and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRUXE, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE OZIER LONG STAPLE SILK CROCHET. The Ozier Long Staple Silk Crochet, giving particulars of yield per acre, awards, and account sales. Premium taken at Louisville Exposition, St. Louis, Little Rock, Montgomery, Ark., etc. Four thousand collars in premiums offered by proprietor on yield and sample for 1881. A. G. LEE, Corinth, Miss. Sample this paper.

H. P. BUCKLEY,

8 - Camp Street - 8

GOLD AND SILVER

New-Winding Watches.

American, English and Swiss.

First Quality and Lowest Prices.

DIAMONDS

Jewelry and Sterling Silverware.

At a Great Reduction.

Special attention to Watch Repairing, National Setting and Jewelry Repairing.

Send for Catalogue and Prices.

ATLAS ENGINE WORKS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., U. S. A.

MANUFACTURERS OF

STEAM ENGINES

AND BOILERS.

CARRY ENGINES AND BOILERS IN STOCK FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD CURES MALARIA.

DYSPEPSIA, NERVOUS AND SICK HEADACHES.

All Liver and Stomach Troubles. It is also a sure PROTECTOR against Yellow Fever, Malaria, Typhoid, Biliousness and Intermittent Fevers, and is a sure cure for Chronic Diseases, Stomach Complaints, Children's Diseases, and conditions from which many have suffered. Beware of imitations. For further information send for a Pamphlet or write to New York personally. If you find it your own drugstore, send for it direct from the office and get your Pad by return mail. Regular Pad $2.00. Special Pad $3.00. Post and duty (Canada), paid. HOLMAN LIVER PAD CO., P. O. Box 2117, 28 William St., N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED For CONQUERING THE WILDERNESS.

WANTED A FEW BOOK-AGENTS OF SUCCESSFUL EXPERIENCE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOUISIANA STEAM

Sash.

Blind and Door

FACTORY.

299, 301, 303, 305, 307, Gravier Street.

ROBERTS & CO.

Proprietors.

Sash, Blinds, Doors, Mouldings, Flooring and Ceiling, News, Builders, etc., always on hand, or made to order.

Orders promptly attended to.

Plantation Cabins a Specialty

BRANCH OFFICE:

NO. 52 CARondelet STREET.

1884.

Now is the Time to Subscribe.

HARPER'S PERIODICALS

Per Year:

HARPER'S MAGAZINE $1.00

HARPER'S WEEKLY 1.00

HARPER'S HAZARD 1.00

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE 1.00

HARPER'S FRANKLIN SQUARE LIBRARY 1.00

One Year (12 Numbers) 10.00

Postage Free (all subscribers in the United States or Canada).

The Volumes of the WEEKLY and YOUNG PEOPLE begin with the first number for January; the Volumes of the YOUNG PEOPLE with the first Number for September; and the Volumes of the HAZARD with the first Number for June and December of each year.

Subscriptions will be entered with the Number of each Periodical current at the time of receipt of order, except in cases where the subscriber otherwise directs.

Specimen copy of Harper's YOUNG PEOPLE sent on receipt of ten cents in stamps.

HARPER'S FRANKLIN SQUARE LIBRARY is a weekly publication, containing works of Travel, Biography, History, Fiction and Poetry, at prices ranging from ten to twenty cents per number. Full list of Harper's Franklin Square Library will be furnished gratuitously on application to HARPER & BROTHERS.

Remittances should be made by Postoffice Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Address:

Household.

MARRIAGE FOR FUN.—A curious and somewhat disheartening case is being tried in a Long Island court room, growing out of a "marriage for fun." The plaintiff is a girl of about the same age. At a church "social" last July there appeared to have been several marriages in fun performed among the young people; and in this particular case the plaintiff elected to regard the ceremony as serious, and has brought suit against her "husband," for support. The laws of New York State require no special ceremonies, and no special official to ratify them; a marriage is regarded purely as a civil contract, a promise of the parties contrasted with the solemnity of a husband and a wife makes the marriage legal; and the question whether in this case there was any real agreement or no is the legal question before the court. The sworn evidence has, however, brought out a state of relations between the young people, a "boasting" going on, and a "conquest" and "rescues," which might very well make the girl blush for shame, as we are glad to say they did. We hope that some of our younger readers need the admonition which this case affords, that marriage is always a serious business, and not a matter for jesting. But we are tolerably certain that some of our older readers do need the caution it suggests to all parents, to know not only what sort of associates their sons and daughters have, but also what are their amusements and how they spend their time. The secret of the difficulty in this case is indicated by the statement of the mother of the girl, that "both their father and myself have been engaged away from home for a great part of the time, and therefore have not been able to give them as much of our care as we should have liked." That the other persons in a church social gathering should have allowed a mock marriage to take place without interferences seems incredible; but such appears to have been the fact. We do not know that any of the laws could meet such a case as this. The protection of the Legislature can not take the place of that which parents should afford their children from their own folly.—Christian Union.

LADIES' HATS.—The most costly hats are as far removed from the possible in the picture of a lady of a few seasons ago in being stiff and angular, in the place of soft and shadowing. The stove pipe hat is a sad and unbecomingly affected by young ladies to whom it is suitable and becoming, but more popular is the tall hat with the tall crown and the trim, slightly poked in front. The prince's triplet in ostrich this and stuffed birds in conjunction with a tangle of velvet and feathers and plumes of fancy feathers still appear in the trimming of hats, but the latest freak has expression in small stuffed animals.

SOMETHING TO AVOID.—Avoid the scolding tone. A tired mother may find it hard to do this; but it is she who will get most good by observing the rule. The tone of scolding wears upon the throat, just where the woman, who is not over strong, is apt to feel the ache of extreme fatigue. The child, too, who are great irritators, will be sure to catch the scolding tone, and will talk to their dolls, to one another, and by-and-by to their own children, very much as their mothers are not talking to them. By all means avoid this habit, and tell your children that you will not talk to them.

THE HOT WATER REMEDY.—At the present moment the fashionable cure for dyspepsia is hot water, which, after all, is only an old-fashioned remedy. The London News commenting upon this, says that the hot water treatment has been taken up by the medical profession in London and internally in America is in progress.

APPLE SLEEP.—Good quart hour sifted with one measure each of soda and two measures each of bicarbonate of soda, and moderately heaping teaspoonful of soda of Hordford's Bread Preparation; shorten with one teaspoonful butter rubbed into the flour. Mix with cold milk or water, the same as for biscuit. Bake two parts of pear, sliced or quartered apples with one part of water into the dish in which the slum is to be cooked. Roll the crust about an inch thick, cut into quarters and with it cover the apples in the dish; then cover the whole with a close-fitting cover, and boil or steam till done. Take out on a platter and grate nutmeg over the apple. Serve with sweet sauce or sugar and cream.

DELICIOUS SOUP.—Boil a small cup of rice in a little over a quart of milk. Boil until it is so soft that it will pass through a sieve with little effort on your part. Grate the nicely bleached parts of the heads of celery, and add to the strained milk and add to this one quart of strong beef stock, or that made from mutton, or veal may be used; it should be strained, and be clear and free from lumps when it is put in with the rice. Let this boil until the celery is tender, or a little curry powder, and plenty of salt. If it is difficult to obtain celery when you wish to have this soup, celery salt may be used, or even celery seed or extract.

MUTTON BROTH.—A superior mutton broth may be made by attending to the following directions:—To four quarts of water put one pound of pearl barley and a tablespoonful of salt in a close-fitting pan; boil this for two hours quickly; it will then be of the consistency of thick cream; then add vegetables, namely, sliced carrots, turnips, onions, celery, white cabbage slices; boil until tender, then add the mutton stock (this can be made from mutton and veal bones), well strained and skimmed of the fat. This is an excellent soup for invalids and children.

GRAHAM CUSTARD PIE.—Fanny and good. One quart of milk, two eggs, half a cup of sugar, half a cup of Graham flour. Beat the eggs and stir all together. The Graham flour sinks to the bottom of the pie dish as the custard bakes and forms a good crust. It may appear to be soaked, as custard pie crust often is, but it is not in the least "clammy." It is entirely digestible. A pleasant cream pie is made from the same recipe, leaving out the eggs and using creamy milk or thin cream.

FOR THE FOWLS.—Lay in a lot of road dust. When we say road dust we do not mean rocks and clam shells. Keep it perfectly dry. Put it in three cheese boxes which fill with the dust. Put these boxes where the sun can warm the dust. The hens will get down in the dust and kill the insects on them.

Hypochondria.

THE MYSTERIOUS ELEMENT IN THE MIND THAT AROUSES VAGUE APPREHENSIONS WHAT ACTUALLY CAUSES IT.

The narrative below by a prominent scientist touches a subject of universal importance. Few people are free from the distressing evils which hypochondria brings. They come at all times and are felt by the very same who they themselves start. They are a dread of coming derangement caused by present disorder and bring about more suicides than any other thing. Their first approach should be carefully guarded.

Editorial Herald:—The following I appear in print and I should not do so now did I not believe myself in possession of truths, the revelation of which will prove of inestimable value to many who they see these lines. Mine has been a trying experience. For many years I was conscious of a want of nerve, tone, and seemed sluggish and I felt a certain falling off in my natural condition of intellectual alertness, activity and vigor. I presume this is the same way in which an innumerable number of other people feel, who like myself are physically feeble, but thousands and thousands I paid no attention to these annoying troubles, attributing them to overwork and resorting to a glass of beer or a milk punch, which would for the time incorporate and relieve my weariness.

After while the stimulants commenced to disagree with my stomach, my weakness increased, and I was compelled to resort to other means to find relief. If a physician is suffering he invariably calls another physician to prescribe for him, as he can not see himself as he sees others; so I called a physician and he advised me to try a little chemical food, or a bottle of hypophosphates. I took two or three bottles of the chemical food with no apparent benefit. My lassitude and indigestion seemed to increase, my food distressed me. I suffered from indigestion, my bowels were constipated, my muscles became sore, my bowels were constipated, and my prospects for recovery were not very flattering. I stated my case to another physician, and he advised me to take five to ten drops of Magendie's solution of hypophosphates or three times a day, for the weakness and distress in my stomach, and a blue pill every other night to relieve the constipation. The morphine produced such a deadly nausea that I could not take it, and the blue pill failed to relieve my constipation.

In this condition I passed nearly a year, wholly unfit for business, while the effort to think was irksome and painful. My blood became impoverished, and I suffered from incapacity with an appalling sense of misery and general apprehension of coming evil. I passed sleepless nights, and the whole with treacherous action of the heart, a constantly feverish condition and the most excruciating tortures in my stomach, living for days on rice water and gruel, and, indeed, the digestive functions seemed to be entirely destroyed.

It was natural that while in this condition I should become hypochondriacal and fearful suggestions of self-destruction occasionally presented themselves. I experienced an insatiable desire for sleep, but on retiring would lie awake for a long time tormented by confused reflections, and when at last I did fall into an uneasy slumber of short duration, it was disturbed by horrid dreams. In this condition I determined to take a trip to Europe, but in spite of all the attentions of physicians and change of scene and climate, I did not improve, and so returned home with no earthly hope of ever again being able to leave the house.

Among the numerous friends that called on me was one who had been afflicted somewhat similarly to myself, but who had been restored to health. I put his name and residence in my mind, and the same treatment he had employed, but with little hope of being benefited. At first I experienced little, if any relief, except that it did not distress my stomach as other remedies or even food had done, and continued its use, however, and after the third bottle I am happy to state that I am again able to attend to my professional duties. I sleep well, nothing distresses me that I eat, I go from day to day without a feeling of weariness, and indeed I am a well man, and wholly free from the influence of ill. Mr. Warner & Co.'s Tippecanoe. I consider this remedy as taking the highest possible rank in the treatment of all diseases marked by debility, loss of appetite, and all other symptoms of weakness, and digestion. It is superior to the tonics, bitters, and dyspepsia cures of the day, and is certain to be an acknowledged by the public universally. Thousands of people to-day are going to premature graves with those serious dyspepsia, and I would say: "Do not let your good judgment be governed by your prejudices, but give the above named remedy a fair and patient trial, and I believe you will not only be rewarded by a perfect restoration to health, but you will also be convinced that the medical profession do not possess all the knowledge there is embraced in medical science."

A. G. RICHARDS, M. D., 465 Tremont street, Boston, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.

SIZES AND PRICES.

Dim. of Bell	Weight of Bell	Price of Bell
No. 1, 24 in.	250 lbs.	$25.00
No. 2, 26 in.	350 lbs.	$35.00
No. 3, 28 in.	450 lbs.	$45.00
No. 4, 30 in.	550 lbs.	$55.00
No. 5, 32 in.	650 lbs.	$65.00
No. 6, 34 in.	750 lbs.	$75.00
No. 7, 36 in.	850 lbs.	$85.00
No. 8, 38 in.	950 lbs.	$95.00
No. 9, 40 in.	1050 lbs.	$105.00

RUMSEY & CO.,
Savannah, N. Y., U. S. A.

McNEANE BELL FOUNDRY manufactures these celebrated Church and School Bells. Price list and Circulars sent free.

Steel Alloy Church and School Bells.
Address: C. S. BELL & CO., HILLSBORO, N. J.

CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE.

One thousand acres cypress timber lands. Situated in townships 10 and 11, south range 10 east, south-western land District of Louisiana. For information, Apply to N. O. Christian Advocate, 112 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!
CATARRH, BRONCHITIS AND CONSUMPTION CURED.

"This Pillow-Inhaler is one of the most effective medical inventions of the age. It is a triumph of science over disease. It is treacherous in its effects, for it is the conqueror of Catarrh and the whole horrible phalanx of kindred ailments."

ONE THING IT DOES—IT CURES!
It is a Medical Pillow that is used the same as one's ordinary pillow. It contains reservoirs for volatile medicines and powerful valves to control its action. The medicines and valves used in these reservoirs are the most healing and disinfecting that science and experience have been able to formulate for the purpose intended. They are entirely safe and the inhaler is perfectly comfortable, a child can use it. There are no pipes or tubes for the mouth or nose. Each place the dangerous period of the twenty-four hours, but about eight hours, health enters the wretched body of the wretched sufferer with every breath he draws. It conquers disease by a continuous application of the medicinal vapors, and while spreading stimulating and soothing agents upon inflamed tissues and purifying the blood, it soothes the nervous system, and thus brings relief of disease and nullifies them.

HERE IS ONE TESTIMONY OUT OF HUNDREDS.
A CURE OF THE WORST TYPE OF CATARRH.

"I had Catarrh of the worst kind, and then I was going into Consumption. I suffered with the Pillow-Inhaler right away, and gave up all other medicines, and now I am in perfect health. It is a great success for me that I had found out so much to spread the knowledge of it to those who are suffering from Catarrh and Consumption. The doctor in my church in Baltimore knew, and I suffered, also many friends in Philadelphia and Baltimore. Very respectfully,
MRS. J. M. J. CHILDS, 112 Camp Street, N. O.

Send for Circulars and Testimony to THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., 1520 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

When writing please mention the name of this paper.

Home Items.

"All your own fault. I've remitted stock when you ought to get hot water that never fails."

The weakest woman, smallest child, and sickest invalid can use hop-bitters with safety and great good.

Old men tottering around from Rheumatism, kidney trouble, or weakness will be almost new by using hop-bitters.

My wife and daughter were made healthy by the use of hop-bitters and I recommend them to my people.—Methodist Clergyman.

Ask any good doctor if hop-bitters are not the best family medicine on earth.

Malarial fever, Ague and Biliousness, will leave every neighborhood as soon as hop-bitters arrive.

My mother, old out of her system with hop-bitters.—Ed. Overgo Sun.

Keep the kidneys healthy with hop-bitters and you need not fear sickness.

Ice-water is rendered harmless and more refreshing and invigorating with hop-bitters draught.

The star of youth for the aged and infirm in hop-bitters.

"I love my Restoration to Health and Beauty to the CUTICURA REMEDIES."

Testimony of a Real Beauty.

Disfiguring Humors, Humidities, Eruptions, itching Tortures, Scalds, Itch, Ringworm, and Itchings cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES.

CUTICURA REMEDIES, the most blood purifier, cleanses the blood and purifies the humors, and removes all skin diseases, such as Eruptions, itching Tortures, Scalds, Itch, Ringworm, and Itchings, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, the great skin cure, instantly cures all skin diseases, such as Eruptions, itching Tortures, Scalds, Itch, Ringworm, and Itchings, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

CUTICURA, an exquisite skin beautifier, and restores the hair.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight to All Points NORTH EAST AND WEST.

The ONLY LINE running PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS AND CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS, AND ONLY ONE CHANGE TO NEW YORK AND EAST-RIVER CITIES.

THE ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO AND ALL POINTS NORTH AND WEST. Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line.

STANDARD GAUGE, ALL STEEL RAILS, ELEGANT COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, AND QUICK TIME.

SPEED, COMFORT, SAFETY

RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST.

On and after Sunday, May 27, 1883—DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calhoun Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE. Exp. No. 2, 8:45 A. M. Exp. No. 1, 7:00 A. M. Exp. No. 3, 5:30 P. M. Exp. No. 4, 10:45 A. M. No. 1, 2, 3 and 4 run daily.

ARRIVE. Ticket Office, 22 Camp Street corner Common.

A. D. SHELTON, Ticket Agent.

A. H. HANSON, Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago.

J. W. COLEMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., New Orleans.

C. M. SHEPPE, Superintendent.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Texas and Pacific Railway.

Now open for business.

The direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NEWARK, EASTON, WESTERN AND TEXAS, TEXAS, and all points in Arizona, Old and New Mexico and California.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from depot foot of Terapichore street, at 12:15 noon. This train stops at St. Charles, Vacherie, Donaldsonville and Deshausselle, between New Orleans and Baton Rouge.

Baton Rouge Accommodation leaves New Orleans at 8:30 A. M., foot of Terapichore street. Stops at all Stations.

California Express arrives at New Orleans depot, foot of Terapichore street, at 12:15 noon. This train stops at St. Charles, Vacherie, Donaldsonville and Deshausselle, between New Orleans and Baton Rouge.

Baton Rouge Accommodation arrives at New Orleans at 8:30 A. M., foot of Terapichore street. Stops at all Stations.

For tickets or information apply at 45 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot, foot of Terapichore street.

A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent.

H. W. McULLOUGH, Asst. Gen. Passenger Agent, Marshall, Texas.

H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

H. M. HONIE, Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Shortest and Quickest Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO: Pensacola, Savannah, Montgomery, Nashville, Louisville, Lynchburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Atlanta and Washington, D. C., in Pullman Cars.

ENTIRE TRAINS RUN FROM NEW ORLEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

Express: Leave, 8:30 A. M. Arrive, 8:00 P. M. Freight: Leave, 8:00 P. M. Arrive, 10:15 A. M. Only one change of cars to NEW YORK AND EASTERN CITIES.

Drawing-Room Cars attached to Coal Trains. Fare 25c. each way.

Ticket office corner 24, Charles and Common streets, where sleeping car accommodations can be secured.

C. J. ATKINS, General Pass. Agent.

JOHN KILKENY, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agent.

JOHN H. HARRIS, Ticket Agent.

J. T. HARRIS, Superintendent.

L & N.

THE GREAT THROUGH TRUNK LINE

Without change and with Speed Unrivaled

SHORTEST AND QUICKEST ROUTE From New Orleans, Mobile and Montgomery to

NORTH, EAST & WEST

PULLMAN CARS Without change to Louisville, Nashville, Louisville, Cincinnati, Chicago, with but one change to all

NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

THROUGH COACHES From Chattanooga and Nashville to St. Louis, connecting direct for Cities in the Northwest.

EMIGRANTS Seeking homes on the line of this road will receive special low rates.

See Agents of this Company for rates, routes, etc., or write C. P. ATMORE, G. P. & T. A., Louisville, Ky.

DR. BLY'S PATENT ARTIFICIAL LIVER, The Best and Only one, Satisfaction guaranteed. I have on hand a large assortment of Trusses, Shoulder Braces, Arm Braces, Elastic Bandages, etc. Moderate prices. Send for pamphlet and price list.

DR. A. McDERMOTT, Manufacturer, 186 Camp St., New Orleans.

CHURCH FURNITURE!

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Settees, Railing, etc.

Send for Illustrated Circular and Estimates.

School Desks and Supplies

OF ALL KINDS.

Send for circular. Agency for the largest Factory in the country. Samples can be seen at 117 Common Street, New Orleans, G. T. LATHROP.

The Great New Southern Route

TO SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO and other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Ports.

Through Sleeping Cars from New Orleans to San Francisco.

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from head of Elysian Fields street as follows:

Alexandria, 7:15 A. M. Houston, 12:15 P. M. Alexandria, 4:15 P. M. Houston, 9:30 A. M.

For further information apply to J. O. SCHREYER, Ticket Agent.

Office corner Magazine and Natchez streets, NEW ORLEANS.

MURRAY'S METHOD

FOR THE CABINET ORGAN.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 4.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1434.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
JAEVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—113 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.
All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. O. HENRIOTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. KELLY, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

CENTENNIAL ODE.

BY A. A. LIPSCOMB, LL.D.

Awake, psalmist and harp—Psalms!
The best of all, God is with us." Wesley.

A hundred years their tributes bring,
And offer them in glad accord.

A hundred years their praises sing,
To thee, O Christ, earth's sovereign Lord.

These blessed years were born of thee,
In providence of care and love.

Thine they glory full we see,
The splendors of thy throne above.

As zephyrs touch the summer flowers,
And make more sweet the wood-bird's note.

Would that the music of these hours,
Night through an air of fragrance float.

And yet, indeed, no song can soar
Unless thy Spirit wing its flight.

On us, O Christ, thy Spirit pour,
And let our praises in His heart.

Witness—best Sabbath of the year,
If harp or voice neglected be.

How rich a past has gathered here!
My Lord, I owe this past to thee.

I lay my hand on prayer book old,
My gratitude used long, long ago.

More dear than jewelry or gold,
I feel his heart within it glow.

The hundred hymns we need to sing,
At early morn and evening.

To glowing years more closely cling,
And in a deeper heart abide.

I love that Methodist voice,
I loved it then; I love it yet.

"And Land Song" still shall rejoice,
For "And Land Song" can never forget.

And "Heart of all"—"God be praised!"
"Droplets of love," his "Will to all!"

To him thanksgiving and praise,
Who feeds his church from every ill.

Yes—this is best—that he should be Both light to guide and might to stay.

Since nearest him we most are free,
And self alone can self betray.

Welcome ye now this festive day,
In robes of kindly grandeur clad.

While angels hover o'er your way,
And blend with yours their anthems glad.

Welcome more sweet than petals the flowers,
When spring unfolds its winter's chain.

Such welcome give this Sabbath's hours,
And bless the grace of Jesus' name.

*The allusion is to the prayer book used by my grandfather, who was one of the early Methodists in Virginia.

—Louis Christian Advocate.

The Error of a Moment Makes the Sorrow of a Life.

Many an example of this great truth has been seen since the error of Esau. His story has been on the pages of sacred Scripture through these long thousands of years for the warning and instruction of mankind;

but young men and young women who have read it from their childhood, and have often said, "What a great fool Esau was," turn out to be as great fools as he, and all the rest of their days lament that the error of a moment made the sorrow of a life.

I read the other day the very beautiful remark that in the most serious and important matter, one that involves more intimately and completely than any other the happiness or misery of a lifetime, young people exercise the least judgment and act with the greatest possible precipitation. That is, the matter of marriage! It is quite likely that most men take far less pains to decide the question of a wife than they would if they were buying a house for her to hang a millstone around the neck of that contemplated union and drown it forever in the depth of the sea than to make it a reality. The error of the moment that completes the engagement with no heart in it becomes the sorrow of a life. The two-fold nature of every human soul is made up of reason and emotion; both are inseparable from the being. They ought to be equal in power. Nobody is complete without both in lively exercise; in some natures one is in excess, and in other natures the other; one is more frequently dominant in man, the other in woman.

Both have not their highest and intensest development in the decision of this question, then all the future is the result of blind chance, or, what is more, the mercy of Providence that is far better to us than our deserts. But as this question is often decided in the immaturity of the mind; in the real time of life when even love itself is sometimes prole-gated called love, before either of the little couple of people know what their minds are, if they have anything fit to be called mind, before they know what they are going to do and do, and, therefore, before they know what they want, stumbling into a passion that sets judgment aside

as an impertinence, and, being governed solely by an impulse which is as fickle and transient as it is sudden and silly, they fall into an error that makes the sorrow of a lifetime.

I do not care to consider the vexed question of the comparative number of happy and unhappy marriages.

In the church and in those circles of society by whom we are surrounded there are doubtless hundreds of happy households in one where the married state is long drawn out misery. But the records in the daily newspapers of separations, fights, murders, divorces that project themselves upon the public horizon so that they seem to heaven in their wickedness and shock humanity by their wretchedness, are so many, so tragical and deplorable as to prove beyond all denial and doubt that these marriages were made unwisely, and the error is punished with sorrow that no tongue can tell and no imagination conceive.

And underneath the surface of fair society, smooth and pure to the eye of the world, how many fearful fragments are performed! A husband converted by wine into a fiend; and a wife with unconquered temper turned from a ministering angel into a fury;

homes with skeletons in every closet and walls echoing forever the sighs of crushed affections and blighted hopes. Over these the pall is thrown to hide them from the sight of men.

Now, I am not a newspaper which says to young people about to marry,

"Don't. The future it implies is undeserved and despicable. To all young people who have the means of being comfortable in the married

Rev. J. Lane Borden.

(A eulogy delivered by Rev. Charles F. Evans, D. D., at the Conference Memorial Service, and published by request of the Bishop and his cabinet.)

I had the pleasure of standing for years in the most intimate and confidential relations with Bro. Borden.

As the memoir has just recited he commenced his itinerant life under me. I married him, received his wife into the church, baptized his first child, and now, with tearful tenderness, participate in this service.

The circumstances of our brother's sudden, tragic death have given occasion for multitudes to scrutinize his life, and for those who knew and loved him best to con their recollections and publish his praise. His early childhood finds a loving admirer in the venerable and renowned

Prof. Tutwiler, of Alabama, who says: "I have no hesitation in saying that I have never had a better or more successful student, nor one more upright in all his deportment.

An experience of more than fifty years with boys has convinced me of the truth of the adage that 'the boy is the father of the man.'" A classmate of his in the Southern University says: "He enjoyed the confidence of the faculty and the con-

Centenary Committee's Report.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Conference Centenary Committee met in the pastor's office of the Carondelet Street Church, on Thursday, the tenth instant, at two

P. M., and perfected its organization by the election of the following officers, viz: Rev. J. B. Walker, D.

D., president, Rev. J. M. Beard, secretary, and S. B. McCutcheon, Esq.,

treasurer. Upon motion Rev. C. W.

Carter, D. D., was elected to preach the centennial sermon at the next session of the Louisiana Annual Conference. The following committee was created to arrange the necessary preliminaries of the centennial celebration within our Conference boundaries: Rev. John T. Sawyer, chairman, Revs. B. F. Alexander and

Charles F. Evans, Rev. C. K. Sener offered, substantially, the following resolutions which, after prolonged discussion and some lucubral changes, were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the leading object of the Centenary observance of this Conference shall be the spiritual improvement of our people by reviewing the signal mercies of God to us as a church the first hundred years of our organic life, and that, as an expression of our gratitude to God for his blessings, we make a thank offering of such a character as shall not only be permanent, but also increase the efficiency of our church in this

State for years to come.

Resolved, That as such thank offering we endeavor to raise the sum of fifty thousand dollars as a Centenary fund to be divided between the wages of church extension, of education and of domestic missions as follows: $20,- 000 for church extension, $20,000 for education, and $10,000 for domestic missions.

Resolved, That while we will recognize the right of each donor to give specie direction to the contributions which he may make to the fund; yet,

in view of the destitution throughout the territory occupied by us of parsonage and church buildings, in a measure, by those peculiar difficulties with which we,

as a Conference, contend, we recommend that one-half of that portion of our Centenary fund to be raised for church extension be expended in the erection of parsonages and churches, or the payment of debts upon such property within our own State.

Resolved, That among our educational enterprises in Louisiana, Centenary College stands forth first and prominent, the oldest institution of learning in the Southern connection, it being the magnificent monument of a former Centenary of Methodism;

and that, in view of the good work it has done in years gone by and is continuing to do in the Southwest by educating ministers and the sons of ministers free of tuition, and thereby conserving the interests of Methodism

by filling our pulpits with an intelligent and consecrated ministry, therefore, we recommend that one-half of the fund donated to education be expendent in the repair and endowment of Centenary College; and that, in view of our special obligation to Mansfield Female College, it being the exclusive property of this Conference, the other half of this fund be expended in the repair and endowment of that institution of learning.

Resolved, That the fourth Sunday in May, of the current year, and as many Sabbaths thereafter as will suffice for the accommodation of works composed of more than one appointment, be set apart for the public centennial services in all the churches within our Conference boundaries.

Committee adjourned subject to call.

J. B. WALKER, Chairman.

J. M. BEARD, Sec.

Old Friends.

MR. EDITOR: Two numbers of the ADVOCATE recently were poorly printed on the inside, and my wife and daughter remarked: "That won't do, for we can not afford to lose any thing in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE," and so it has been for years past that we never lay aside your paper for any other. I have been a subscriber almost from

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

H. A. LANE.

Of what a blessed hope inspires
Those happy hearts, warmed with love's fire,
With joy they look beyond the grave,
To him that died their souls to save.
There sickness, sorrow, pain and death
No more are felt, but every breath
Is spent in praise to that dear friend
Who purchased joy that never shall end.
Bright angels shall their comrades be,
No clouds, no doubt nor gloomy fears
Will pain the hearts that heaven cheer,
Nay in perpetual joyful strains
They praise the Lamb on the bright plains.
Well might the psalmist turn his heart
To loud strains from the full heart:
Thus may I my love proclaim,
And join to praise my Saviour's name.

Damaging Blunders.

The Reformers, along down from Luther one and two hundred years and more, addressed themselves to the visible, practical effects of popery rather than to the fundamental principle that underlies these separate erroneous doctrines. The reason for this is, it seems to me, clearly in sight of a carefully discriminating eye, but there is not room for the explanation just here. The one, single, sole principle which is fundamental in all popery, and all other forms of high churchism,
is a new religion introduced by Jesus Christ.
The fruits, products, results or outgrowths of this fundamental error are priestly forgiveness, virgin worship, image adoration, holy water, sacerdotalism, ritualistic worship, with the long train of theological and ecclesiastical laws that follow.

It was the duty of a later age to push these reform principles to the bottom, and attack the foundation, cut the taproot, remove the corner-stone, and leave the edifice to tumble into ruins.
But we have not done it. The consequences of this neglect are the following damaging blunders, which greatly hinder the progress of practical Christianity. All error is damaging.

Blunder first. There are two separate and distinct systems of religion in Scripture, fundamentally different, one in the Old Testament and one in the New. The former is called the law and the latter the gospel.

Correction. The whole of Scripture revelation knows but one system of religion. The doctrines and faith of the Old Testament are the doctrines and faith of the New, with not the slightest variation. The New Testament elaborates the doctrines of the Old, but changes nothing.

Second. This first revelation, sometimes called Judaism, was a mere temporary system, not designed for mankind at large, but for a special people—the Jews—only.

Correction. Revelation knows nothing temporary, for Jews or anybody else.
The only morals or religion known to any part of Scripture was and is plenary for all mankind. This is palpable, and is read plainly all over the Bible.

Third. The condition of salvation under the law, or Judaism, in the Old Testament, was the performance of certain religious rites or ceremonies, particularly the killing of certain animals by way of atonement for sin.

Correction. The law knows no salvation. The supposition is absurd. Law requires obedience, and nothing else.
Ceremonies are modes of illustrating and inculcating truth or principles.

They have the same place in religion now that they always had.

Fourth. The ceremonial slaying and offering of animals in sacrifice, under the law, was a real, proper and true sacrifice for sin.

Correction. Sacrifice for sin was always exactly the same in all ages.
There never was any other than Christ, our Saviour. In early ages the offering of animals was a mere instrumental mode of teaching the doctrine. No other mode conceivable to us could be practiced before the incarnation and real sacrifice.

Fifth. When Christ appeared, he, by his supreme authority, abrogated this system of Old Testament religion, or Judaism, and forever discontinued all ceremonial worship.

Correction. The Saviour never abrogated or changed any religion or doctrines of the Old Testament. He abrogated no ceremonies. There are probably as many, or nearly as many, in number in the church now as there ever were. Nevertheless a number of religious ceremonies ceased forever at that time, but not by any means because of any authoritative command, but because of the absolute and natural necessity of the thing. These particular ceremonies shadowed forth the incarnation and real sacrifice; then, of course, they could not continue; No other ceremonies ceased to be practiced but those of that class, and for that reason. A thing needs no more abrogation.

Sixth. The Saviour ordained and established for all mankind forever a wholly new religious system, called Christianity, or the gospel. This new religion was so thoroughly novel that it never existed before.

Correction. The Saviour did not or-dain, establish or teach any Christianity different from the religious doctrines of the Old Testament. The gospel of the New Testament is the gospel of the Old. They differ not in doctrines or principles, but in the modes of teaching them.

Seventh. This new religion and the salvation it introduces rests upon the atonement of Christ, was not restricted to Jews as the old religion was, but was for all mankind. It rested not on external observances, as did the old, but on the new principle of faith in Christ.

Correction. All religion of all Scripture was always plenary as to all mankind; it was never restricted to Jews or to anybody else. It always rested on faith in Christ and never on external observances. Christ is in the Old Testament as well as in the New.

Eighth. Christ invited, entreated and commanded the Jews to abandon their old religion and embrace the new religion, the gospel; but they all refused, except a very few, perhaps twelve or twenty or so.

Correction. On the contrary, the Saviour entreated and commanded all the Jews to adhere strictly to their old religion, and not depart from it; and great multitudes, probably one-half, did so; and their successors, afterward called Christians, have continued to do so, at least nominally, to this day.

Ninth. All the Jews of that age except those very few, being very wicked and accustomed to their old religion of the Old Testament, refused the gospel; and their descendants still adhere strongly to the old religion of the Old Testament.

Correction. On the contrary, great numbers of the Jews of that age, probably a full half, were among the most pious and self-sacrificing Christians known to the history of the church. For about ten years they constituted the entire apostolic church, apostles and all. It is not known that they or any of them ever opposed the Saviour in any way or in the least.
The people known as Jews now are descendants, not by any means, of the Jews in general of that age, but of those only who in that age apostatized from their religion by denying Jesus as the Christ, and who, by so doing, constituted themselves a new and false church with a new and false faith therefore unknown.

Tenth. The whole Jewish people, therefore, became very much incensed against the Saviour for attempting to destroy their religion, and they unanimously sought and procured his death.

Correction. Very few of the Jews, probably not more than one or two hundred, if so many, out of all their millions, had anything to do with the crucifixion. They could not have known of it, most of them, until long afterward. So far as their sentiments are known, with a few exceptions, they were friendly to the Saviour up to the time of his death. Popular opposition to him was worked up by a few desperate leaders afterward.

Perhaps the above ten blunders are sufficient for the reader's digestion for the present. If the editor is willing more will follow. But from these few popular errors none can fail to see that in consequence of them the church has a heavy burden to carry. Why not roll it off? Why so heavily elogg and hamper the church? But it may be inquired: Who teaches these errors?

Our popular, front shelf book writers.
Of if we had but one-tenth the number of religious book writers and ten times more religious book authors. Our shelves are burdened with copy-books.

YAZOO CITY, Mississippi.
R. ABNEY.

From California:

Our Conference is over, the preachers are at their posts, and hard at work, trusting to the Lord for success in his vineyard. We had many changes this year; in fact, the nature of our work on this coast is such that we are compelled to make more changes than are made in most the older Conferences.

The great centers of California seem to care but little for the Christian religion, and our branch of the church is among the weakest. The great strength of Southern Methodism is in the country.
Our people here are mostly an agricultural people. True, we have many wealthy men in our cities from the Southern States, brought up under Southern Methodist influence, yet very few of them are with us in church matters, but many are in other churches.

The cause of these things would be hard to get at, for the man who thinks that he understands California and Californians is likely to be mistaken.
The calculations of our Bishops and the best of our preachers often prove to be a mistake, but all try to do the best they can under the circumstances. I often think of the second verse of the one hundred and thirty-seventh psalm, the poor exile Jews had hung their harps on the willows. One would think that the Jews had a fine opportunity to be missionaries to all the people of Babylon, but they gave themselves up to the indulgence of their sorrow, and hanged their harps on the willows.
This feeling is not peculiar to the Jews, but all people away from their home and country have more or less of the same feeling.

All reformation or revolution in nations of individuals must begin on the interior and never on the exterior; the transformation begins within the heart of an individual and works outwardly, and so with a nation. The great revolution and reformation now going on in Mexico began in the heart of the country, and is destined to work wonders in a short time. Now is the time for missionary effort in Mexico. And if ever China is brought to Christ there must be an uprising of the people of China; the work must begin on the interior.

Now, the exile Jews in Babylon must not even sing one of the songs of Zion for the Babylonians when asked to do so; thought of nothing but Jerusalem; all of religion was at Jerusalem, so they hanged their harps on the willows. I suppose that all human beings have harps, but all of our harps are not in tune at all times and in all places.

California is being filled with people from all parts of the world, nearly all religions are represented here, and most of them have their harps on the willows, their Jerusalem and all that is good and religious they left back home. A gentleman said to me this other day that he wanted to go back to Tennessee on a visit, just to have one more chance to attend a good protracted meeting before he died, and this man lives near our church and is not in it once a year; his harp is out of tune; he would tune it up if he were back in Tennessee. I am of opinion that no great work for Christ and his cause will ever be accomplished where the people are so dissimilar, where there is no assimilation with the masses.

When this will take place in California I know not; some generation will doubtless see it. It is likely that the miracles on the day of Pentecost was to cause an assimilation of the language, for all who heard seemed to hear in his own tongue, "and they marveled, saying one to another, are not all these which speak Galileans?" It is more than likely that ten dollars in Mexico is worth more to our church than one hundred is in California. The old harps that we have here have been used and abused, and there is doubt if many of them will bear tuning again or if we can ever get the rust off of them. But in Mexico and heathen lands they begin with newly-tuned harps, and they will play at their own Jerusalem.

Let me say that Bro. Hunnicutt's notion about filling the South with immigration from all parts of Europe and the Northern States is correct. Fill the South with this class of people, and every willow in the South will have a harp on it, and our assimilation as a people ruined for ages to come.

F. M. FEATHERSTON.

Dead-Heads in the Church.

Min. Editor: Perhaps many will be surprised at the appellation given to some that belong to the different churches, as dead-heads, but I know of no other name appropriate, unless it would be dead-souls, which I fear will be the condition of many of the members of our churches when we come to the final reckoning. And why? Not for anything they have done, but because they have not done anything.

There are different grades of such members that we might designate as evils in the church; only that, some would come into that class who often work and give to a considerable extent, but it is for the praise of men and not the glory of God. The first class we will mention are those that do not do anything; they do not show their faith by their works, for they never work or ever give to the cause of God. Ask them to give something to the support of the gospel, and they will tell you they are too poor, poorer than the widow that gave two mites. Call on them to sing or pray, and they will plead want of talent. Great pity, indeed, that the Lord created them without a talent for anything; they might have been useful to the church and society.

The second class we will take in consideration are those who will work, but if we are allowed to judge the tree
by its fruit, they have their works without faith. Their conduct and every-day life is such that where they are known it is like pouring water on fire to make it burn for their minister to call on them to exorcise in public worship. They are like some in our Saviour's time; they honor God with their lips, but their hearts are far from him. Such members stand in the way of sinners, not only working out their own, but the eternal ruin of others, even of their own household, bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh.
What their condition will be at the final judgment they can find out by close application to the Holy Scriptures.

The third class we will notice are such as belong to the church for the sake of popularity. Of this class we very often find them holding some office of note in the church for the sake of popularity. They very often, according to ability, give liberally to the church and charitable institutions, but they are like the Pharisee, they give and work for the praise of men and not of God, for follow them to their closet, and instead of finding them on their knees, will often find them tipping the wine glass, whisky bottle or something else nearly as bad. Members of this class are very circumspect as a general thing while in the presence of their pastor and other members of the church; who they think will take cognizance of their conduct. By thus attending to the opinion of the church, when they are stumbling blocks of offense to many. There seems, however, to be no remedy for such evils, and as the Lord commanded his servants to let the wheat and tares grow together till the harvest, so it is with such members in the church. We have them and will continue to have them until the sheep and goats are separated at the last day, that great day of accounts when the secrets of all men shall be made known. We can only pray that there may be fewer such and more genuine Christians in the church than there now is; pray that such as belong to the above-named classes may see the error of their ways, and become to be true, genuine Christians.

F. A. LANE.

TRENTON, Mississippi.

Retrospective.

THIRD PAPER.

The night before reaching Yazoo City our driver found his team fast stuck in a deep mud hole. In trying to pull out he broke the double-tree, which compelled us to alight and wade through as best we could. We made a firm landing, but not without leaving a deposit of one of the boys' new shoes, which was not found. A clever man living near by gave us lodgings for the night. Next day we were in Yazoo City in time for the regular packet.

Traveling in the night down the Yazoo river, we could make no observations, but enjoyed a night's rest after a day's fatigue. Next morning my wife for the first time looked out upon the "Father of Waters," and enjoyed the scene. On landing at Bayou Sara I went to the railroad depot, to secure tickets, etc., for Woodville; was asked by the agent if I was a preacher.
Being informed that I was, he said:
"You have nothing to pay for passage or freight on this road, as Judge Mc-Gee's instructions are not to charge preachers." At nightfall we reached Woodville. A tall, portly looking gentleman was standing on the platform.
He approached me, making the inquiry if I was one of the preachers sent to Woodville. Ascertaining that I was, he gave myself and family a cordial invitation to his house. I have never forgotten the kind hositalities we received at the beautiful brick residence of Col. Lewis and his pious and intelligent wife. Rather against the colonel's entirety I left, the next morning, for Bayou Sara, to lay in supplies for housekeeping, and two days thereafter we were snugly fixed in a parsonage the stewards had provided for us, at the Pate Place, near Whitesboro.

When the neighbors heard that we were there they called to make our acquaintance, after which they sent us furniture, chickens in abundance, a good cow to milk. We had a neat, commodious dwelling house, with an access near by, garden piled in and affore to a good pasture. So you see, Mr. Editor, our first move, with these pleasant surroundings, convinced us that we had not moved beyond appreciating friends, where new friendships could be formed as endearing as those we had left behind.

Woodville for many years had been kept a station; their presiding elder, Bro. Drake, the year previous thought it best, contrary to the wishes of many in the station, to nite them with the Wilkinson circuit, calling it Woodville circuit.

Our first Quarterly Conference was held at Woodville, when it was ascertained that neither the circuit nor station was pleased with the new arrangement. To meet the wishes of a majority of the members of the Conference our presiding elder, Dr. Winans, consented that the finances might be divided, but the preachers were to alternate occasionally. The stewards on the circuit made me a liberal assessment, and met it during the year, while the station gave our worthy (but now deceased) brother, William H.
Watkins, a good support. At the next Annual Conference Woodville was again made a station, and Bro. Watkins returned as their pastor. I was also returned to the Wilkinson circuit, some account of which I may give you readers in my next paper.

MAURIAL, TEXAS, Dec. 31, 1883.

Report of Committee on Quarterly Conference Records, Made at Shreveport District Conference, May 26, 1883.

(Published by request.)
Your Committee on Quarterly Conference Records would respectfully submit the following report:

The records of the Quarterly Conference of the Shreveport station have been well and faithfully kept.

The records of the Quarterly Conference of Mooringsport circuit were examined, and we found that Question 24, which pertains to statistics, was outruly omitted at the fourth Quarterly Conference last year. The roll of official members was put in the proper place, but in a mixed and confused way.

The records of the Quarterly Conference of Sabine circuit have been handsomer kept, but the Board of Trustees have not been properly put down.

The records of the Quarterly Conference of Coushatta circuit were in fine answer to Question 24 at the fourth Quarterly Conference last year, and the Board of Trustees in the roll was mixed up with other officials.

The Quarterly Conference of Mansfield station has a new and suitable book, but has in it the records of only one Quarterly Conference. It has commenced well.

The Quarterly Conference records of Natchitoches circuit have been well kept in the main, but there are some omissions of Question 5, on estimated claims, and in some other minor matters.

The records of the Quarterly Conference of Caddo circuit have not been well kept. The reason given for it by the recording steward is that he has been waiting to get a new book. As he has now a new book, he assures us that the records will be all right.

Your committee recommends that the recording stewards at the beginning of each Conference year, at the first Quarterly Conference, place a roll of the entire official members of the circuit on the book, keeping the Boards of Stewards and Trustees apart and distinct, and that whenever Boards of Trustees have been organized, to notify the officers of the respective boards.

Signed, JOHN PIPES, Chairman.

Min. Editor: The advent of the "new preacher" to his field of labor is one of the most important epochs in his universal life. How varied are his emotions when contemplating this event! Solitude, anxiety, hope and fear come and go in rapid succession.
He wonders how he and family will be received—whether cordially or coolly.
And sometimes the question of a home is shrouded with gloom and doubt, for all of our charges are not supplied with parsonages. This is to be lamented.
May this Centenary year be one of great improvement in this particular,
as well as all other church enterprises.

It is the earnest desire of this writer that all of our preachers on reaching their works should have similar experiences to that of the preacher and family on the Houston and Wesley Chapel charges. When we arrived at the parsonage some of the "elect ladies" met us at the gate and extended a most cordial greeting. The house was in perfect order and a sumptuous supper awaited us. The good sisters had anticipated our wants in the dining-room and pantry and met them fully. The safe was filled with good things. Santa Claus did not forget the "little ones," but left a testimonial of his desire that they have a merry Christmas.

Mr. Editor, with such a reception we enter upon our work with hearts filled with gratitude and love, strong faith and buoyant hope. You will hear from us again before the Centenary year closes. I expect to send you a large list of subscribers for the Advocate.

EUGENE JOHNSON.

Houston, Miss., Jan. 2, 1884.

Marriages.

ARMITAGE-FISHER.—At the residence of the bride's father, January 6, 1884, by Rev. George L.
Thompson, Mr. R. A. Armitage, of Tulsa, Miss., to Miss Alice W. Fisher, of Claiborne county, Miss.

FEWELL-CHADWICK.—In the Methodist Church, in Meridian, Miss., January 8, 1884, by Rev. R. D.
Norworthy, Mr. R. H. Fewell to Miss Maggie L.
Chadwick.

BROOK-AKIN.—In the Methodist Church, in Meridian, Miss., January 8, 1884, by Rev. R. D.
Norworthy, Mr. Henry Brook to Miss Ophelia
Akin, all of Meridian, Miss.

DOWNER-ROGERS.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Margaret Nell, of Cookeville, Miss., January 3, 1884, by Rev. J. E. Phillips, Mr.
John C. Downer to Mrs. Ida C. Rogers, all of Cookeville, Miss.

WARREN-JACKSON.—In Edwards, Miss., December 18, 1883, by Rev. E. H. Moulter, Mr. John F.
Warren, Jr., of Tusculoo, Ala., to Miss Mary W.
Jackson, of Edwards.

BROWN-BEAL.—In Hinds county, Miss., January 9, 1884, by Rev. E. H. Moulter, Mr. T. S.
Brown to Miss Maria M. Beal, daughter of Rev. W. T.
Beale, M. D.

BROWN-HARBORN.—At the residence of the bride's father, January 8, 1884, by Rev. T. W. Harvey, J. Wilcox Brown, of the Mississippi Conference, and Miss Sarah T. Harborn, of Union Rouge, La.

McKEE-COLOUGH.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Canton, Miss., January 10, 1884, at eight o'clock P. M., by Rev. W. L. C. Huntcutt, Mr. Samuel T. McKee and Miss Clara C. Colquhoun.

PEARSON-JOYCE.—In the Methodist Church,
Arcola, Miss., January 6, 1884, by Rev. John W.
Price, Rev. B. T. Pearson, of the Northwest
Texas Conference, to Miss Lulu Joyce, of Arcola, Miss.

POSEY-WILSON.—In the Methodist Church,
Vernon, La., December 25, 1883, by Rev. J. A. Mc-Lain, Mr. J. H. Posey and Miss Lulu E. Wilson, both of Vernon, La.

Obituaries.

EDGAR.—The subject of this notice,
SISTER MARY A. EDGAR, was a member of Mt. Carmel Church, Yazoo county, Miss., and, having lived a long and useful life in the neighborhood, it was no wonder the community mourned for her when it was said, "She is dead."

For some time she had been in feeble health, but not ill enough to be confined to her bed, and not forbidden to attend the services of the sanctuary, where it was her delight to be and take part in the service that was dear to her heart.
She had no warning of her approaching dissolution. So sudden was the summons, and so soon the end, that all of her children did not get the last parting blessing; but they knew mother died right, for she had lived right. Like a ripe sheaf she was gathered into the heavenly garner in the skies. Here was a life of trust in the blessed Saviour from that eventful year to her death, while attending a camp meeting held at Tusculoo, in Tallahatche county, Miss., God, for Christ's sake, forgave her sins and gave her the witness of the Spirit. She soon united with the Methodist Church, in which community she lived and rejoiced for forty-three years. At a special service held in her neighborhood, while she was rejoicing and praising God, exhorting her children and friends to be religious, I could but say within myself, A ripe soul for glory, sure. So deeply laid was the work commenced so many years ago, it was seen all through her life, and seemed to shine brighter as she neared the other shore.

She was first the wife of Archibald L.
Holt. After his death she was married a second time to Harry Edgar. By these marriages God ordained to her care and training six children, and well did she perform her part. One of the children is to-day a member of the Mississippi Conference—Rev. E. P.
Edgar. The others are near the old homestead and church of the now deceased mother. May they emulate their mother's example of piety and usefulness, and meet her at last in glory with God! The aged husband still lingers a while below ere he joins her in the land of eternal rest. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." One by one we are gathered home. Sweet thought! Rest at last!
Sweet rest! Happy home!

R. T. DAVIS.

WINTERS.—MISS FANNIE L. WIN-TERS, daughter of Mr. William and Mrs. Frances Winters, was born in Rodney, Miss., June 20, 1859, and died in the same town on December 5, 1883, from the effects of epilepsy. She had suffered with this distressing malady since her seventh year, but ever bore her sufferings—sometimes excruciating —with great patience.

In early womanhood she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South,
under the ministry of Bro. David P.
Bradford. She felt the need of a thorough change of heart, and as she sought it diligently till the priceless pearl was found. Quietly in her own chamber, alone with God and his holy book, she made that full surrender of self to be saved by grace alone which brought abounding peace to her soul. This gracious state of conscious forgiveness was always retained. It reflected itself in the soft light of the eye, in the radiant face, in the very tone and manner of her conversation. Her pastor could not be with her any time and fail to feel drawn closer to heaven by the interview. She never murmured at the affliction God sent upon her, but was so exalted thereby that it wrought out for her an exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Once, last summer, when a dear young friend (Miss Tweed) was suddenly snatched away she seemed to think it was "strange" that one with such promise of long life and usefulness should be taken and she remained. She little knew, in her sweet humility, how much God had planned for her. God-glorifying life was accomplishing. She will be long and sadly missed by that community.

I was summoned to her bedside when dying. Though almost gone—just outside the nearly gates—unable to speak or open her eyes, within a south-west of God or heaven she would press my hand to bid me know she understood.
Her precious Bible which she daily read till too sick to see the words, and then had read to her by the fond watching mother, was appropriately buried with her mortal remains, while her dear spirit, how many Christian manna she loved so much to read of.

The dutiful daughter, the loving sister, the tender friend, has passed within the veil where her faith was safely anchored. May father, mother, sisters and friends all form an unbroken circle around the great white throne.

J. P. DRAKE.

RAIL.—On Tuesday, December 11, 1883, at two P. M., the soul of our dear brother, BARTHELOMEW RAIL, winged its flight to realms of endless day from his home in the south-west of Clinton Hinds county, Miss. Here he had resided since early manhood; here he had reared a large family of children
—some of whom have passed on before and, doubtless, bade him welcome to the plains of lasting light; here he had built up a character for integrity and unswerving Christianity that makes his memory "like oilment poured forth." For fifty years a faithful member of the Methodist Church, respected by all who observed him, loved by all who knew him, his record is worth enduring the trials he met and overcame.

That a man of his decided stamp, and constantly could mode of expressing his views, should have enemies is very probable, though we do not know of any such. Doubtless his sometimes scathing denunciations of sin provoked opposition. But his words were always well weighed and weighed too, who he ever wounded, it was with the desire and purpose of good soul-surgery.

Bro. Rail was "one of a thousand." He thought of his duty to every subject that came to his notice for himself.
He took not the time of any leader, whether President, Senator, or even Bishop. This made his company incomparably interesting, and often instructive. He was a Methodist of the old style, fond of the special means and methods that have made our church a power in the world. His leading doctrine of conscious acceptance in the "Beloved" was his, experimentally.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY JANUARY 24, 1884.

D HOUSE OF MANY MANSIONS.

BY E. N. GUNSON.

In my Father's house are many mansions:
 O house of many mansions!
 Thy doors are open wide,
 And dear are all the faces
 Upon the other side.
 Thy portals they are golden,
 And those who enter in Shall know no more of sorrow,
 Of weariness or pain.
 O house of many mansions!
 My weary spirit waits,
 And longs to join the ransomed
 Who enter through thy portals
 The mansions of the blest!
 Who come to thee weary
 And find in thee their rest.
 —Canadian Methodist Magazine.

Reminiscences.

BY REV. E. J. MARBLE.

COLES' CREEK (NOW PAYETTE) CHURCH, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

From the Covington circuit I was returned to Paulding for the year 1834. Having already devoted one or two chapters to this circuit and made mention of men and things that would likely interest my readers, and as no very marked changes had taken place in the interior, I conclude to pass over the experiences and observations of that year with only brief mention. During my absence, Montrose Academy, under the direction of Rev. J. N. Waddell, had been established in the northwestern part of Jasper county, and a Presbyterian Church had been organized in that neighborhood under the pastorate of Rev. John H. Gray. A Catholic Church had also been organized at Paulding.

My old friend, S. R. Adams, the founder of the Clarion, now printed at Jackson, was still thrilling the "mighty East" with the bugle notes of democracy, and a new paper in the interest of the old whig party had sprung up under the editorial management of John C. Heideberg, Esq. This last became the champion of the Roman Catholic Church, in a controversy that was my lot to have that year. The Clarion was the medium of this controversy, and occupied strictly neutral ground until friend Heideberg volunteered his aid on the Catholic side and indulged in such personal criticism as justified my friend Adams in a reply that had most telling effect. In this connection I must also acknowledge my indebtedness to Dr. Waddell for help afforded me. I found in him always a genial spirit, a true friend and brother, and it has been a pleasure to me that his merit has been rewarded by promotion to the highest position in literary circles. Wonder if Dr. Waddell is still opposed to choir singing as he was in those days? He condemned it then, because, as he said, "it seemed like praising God by a committee." Rev. J. H. Gray was called, soon after I went to the circuit to serve a church in Memphis. Dr. Waddell only fairly launched his educational enterprise at Montrose when he responded to other calls, and with the retirement of those two strong men from that country, the Presbyterian Church seemed to have lost its footing, and has not been attended with any great degree of prosperity. But I must now, at least, give an introduction to my recollections of Coles' Creek circuit, the scene of the happiest and most successful year of my ministry. To this dear old circuit, hallowed by association with some of the noblest and best men and women of the olden times, I must ask you to allow me space for perhaps two or three numbers.

The Conference for 1834 was held at Port Gibson, and is memorable on several accounts: 1. Because it was the first and perhaps the only session ever held in that town. 2. It was the last Conference held in connection with our brethren of the North and presided over by a Bishop of the entire church. 3. It was the Conference of which the vote was taken in accordance with the plan of separation upon the question of separation. 4. It was the scene of most unfortunate personal controversy between certain brethren. I will not name, who will doubtless remember it with pain, while any of them live. 5. That Conference was remarkable for the presence of a greater number of its strong men than I had seen together before. Winans, Drake, Lane, Campbell, Cooper, Marshall, Porter, Houghton, John G. Jones, Watkins, Levi Pearce, D. O. Shattuck, Rogers, Fly, and others were there, besides distinguished visitors. Not least among the last named was Leroy Swarnstedt, the book agent at Cincinnati, whom every man, who was indebted to the Book Concern, dreaded to meet, unless he was fully prepared to settle his account.

The vote for separation from the Church North was unanimous with one exception. Bro. B. A. Houghton, a precious good man, loved and honored among his brethren, felt constrained to differ with the majority, and voted "no" when the ayes and nays were called. It was a sad hour to him. No one reproached him. I have never heard an unkind word uttered concerning his action in the premises. He went into comparative obscurity, lost his influence as a minister, but died a good man, and I have no doubt is safe in heaven.

What made this Conference one of

special interest and the occasion of surprise to me, was the appointment I received to Coles' Creek circuit. This was considered at that time the best circuit, if not the best appointment in the Conference, outside the principal cities embraced in our territory. It was the only circuit in the Conference that had provided a parsonage for the preacher. I had not the least intimation of my appointment until it was announced by the Bishop. It was no less a surprise to some of my prospective parishioners, as the following colloquy between one of them and my presiding elder will show: Bro. "Joe" Davenport, who lived some five miles south of Port Gibson, held his membership in my circuit. He attended the sessions of Conference daily, and contributed largely to its support by taking care of the preachers' horses, which was quite an item in those days. He was present when the appointments were announced, standing near Bro. Drake, my presiding elder. He had seen me, and by recurring to a trifling incident was enabled to identify me, though he had not learned my name before. When my name was announced in connection with Coles' Creek circuit, he turned to Bro. Drake and asked: "Who is Bro. Harris? I didn't know there was such a man in the Conference?" Bro. Drake replied by referring Bro. Davenport to the incident above alluded to, and they identified me. "Well," said Bro. Davenport, "what have we done, that you send so young a man to our circuit, we have a parsonage, and are prepared to take care of a man with a family, and besides this, we pay our preachers. Why did you send us a young man?" "Oh," said Bro. Drake, "Bro. Harris is married, has a wife and three children; well enough off in that line, certainly." Bro. Davenport seemed reconciled at once. Immediately after adjournment, he sought me out, introduced himself, and related to me substantially the foregoing. He was a genial spirit, and generous as he was a genius. The "Ark" (his elegant mansion was always a delightful home for me. The storied kindness of his truly Christian wife, the graceful attentions of their lovely daughter, Ruth, to the wants of the preacher, made it always pleasant to rest within the "Ark." I thank God that he gave me such friends, and that our friendship was never marred while these good people lived. Now I trust Bro. and Sister Davenport are reaping the promised reward for ministering to humble disciples of Christ. May their works follow them, and their children's children, down to the latest generation, be found walking in the way to heaven. Sister Davenport was the sister of "Nat" and "Van S. Jeffries, and of the Jeffries family I shall have occasion to speak hereafter.

My colleague this year was William M. Haskell. He was admitted on trial at the Port Gibson Conference, was my senior in years, and I will admit, of more commanding appearance. He wore a clerical coat, and was lavishly of leather in his outfit for itinerant life; had a fine saddle and saddle bags; double-reined bridle with martingales, and wore a buffalo rug over his saddle; carried an elegant riding whip; was so far as equipping was concerned, an attractive man. Not being able to support such style, I felt as though I was eclipsed by the junior preacher. Bro. Haskell started at once to fill the first round of appointments, while I went after my family, then still in the eastern part of the State. I was to follow him two weeks later at the completed appointments. He had not completed his round when I met him at Bro. Davenport's, where he had an appointment on Saturday, before preaching at "Old Cane Ridge" Church on Sunday. It was a cold, disagreeable day, and we held services in Bro. Davenport's house for the benefit of his family and servants. My family remained here over Sunday, while Bro. Haskell and myself, accompanied by Bro. Davenport, attended church at "Cane Ridge." Now, fairly entered upon my work, I close this chapter.

Letters to Young Men.

THE YOUNG MAN WHO MAKES JOURNALISM HIS PROFESSION.

To many young men the press has a strong fascination. They perceive and acknowledge its power; they hear it held up as more influential than eloquence, whether of the pulpit, the bar, or the halls of legislation. As it is practically omnipotent, wherever they go they feel its influence, and as they see the avidity with which its mounds are devoured they come to feel that the sphere of activity which it affords is second to none, and peculiarly adapted to their restless and driving age. The great pecuniary success and commanding position of a few leading editors increase the spell.

STERN FACTS FOR THE ASPIRANT.

Behind all this are some facts which the aspirant for an editorial career would do well to consider. The compensation to newspaper men is, on the average, not large. Their hours are irregular; their work frequently hard; their disappointments great; their temptations very numerous; their associations such as require constant watchfulness to prevent contamination. Brilliant newspaper men, as a rule, burn the candle of life at both ends, and if they have to do night-work and use stimulants, they may complete Adam Clarke's strong expression, and say that in addition to burning a red-hot candle at both ends they put a red-hot poker in the middle. Nevertheless, some have preserved moral integrity and physical health down to the full term of human life. Many, too, whose success has not been conspicuous, have done as well as the average of men in important pursuits in other professions. The successful men are dying and retiring, just as the successful men everywhere are one by one relaxing their grasp upon the work which has given them fame and money. No one need suppose that there is no room for him in the chosen profession; death and old age always making room. The door is open for the new generation, though the struggle to enter it may at certain times be greater than at others.

NATURAL GIFTS.

It is especially necessary in this case to ask whether the requisite natural gifts be possessed. A person may have great intellectual gifts suited to oratory, statesmanship or commerce, and not be at all fitted for newspaper work. Journalism makes a peculiar demand upon the nervous energies, and requires a quickness of thought and action not essential to the other professions. The resources must be well in hand. There will be no time for deliberate examination, but the thought, the decision, the language, must all be ready at short notice.

THE PREPARATION FOR JOURNALISM.

It is this fact that furnishes the key for the preparation for journalism. Rhetorical studies are important, mental and moral philosophy, language and the art of composition. Penmanship must be mastered, legibility and speed rather than grace being cultivated. A knowledge of general history, and of the history and political institutions of our own country, is very important. Familiarity with the principles of business, with the terms used in the different professions, with the leading names of the present and past generations; facility in the use of encyclopedias, histories, dictionaries, books of statistics, and a thorough acquaintance with the United States census, are all of the greatest value. The memory must be trained; note books and index volumes are of great value to the minister and the teacher, but must not be the sole or chief dependence of the journalist. He must know what he knows, and know it accurately. He must refer to his brain rather than to those of his bookcase. The young man contemplating entering upon this profession should be a reader of the best newspapers, secular and religious, observe how the editorial and other departments are arranged, and note the difference in the management of such newspapers as occupy a commanding position in the literary, the political, the religious or commercial world.

If he studies newspapers, and nothing else, he will be without depth, and have none of the marks of genuine culture. If he pursues rhetorical studies, and neglects the studies of newspapers, he will be prepared to write essays, but will have much to unlearn when he enters upon his life-work. The newspaper style must have the accuracy of the essay combined with the intensity of excited personal conversation. This preparation may go on while the student is in college or in the academy. No one should confine himself entirely to the curriculum. The intending journalist in the reading-room may have fine opportunities for preparing himself for his chosen vocation.

DETTING THE FIRST SITUATION.

When he enters upon it, he will be compelled to take the situation he can get. So great is the demand, that if he waits until he can get the position that he thinks he would prefer, he will wait many a month or many a year. There is a prejudice in most newspaper offices against college men, and if they undertake to furnish specimens of their style of writing, in nineteen cases out of twenty they will be rejected promptly. Many of them, I am told, appear unprepared to take any position which may be vacant upon our editorial staff. I emulate the fame of a Raymond, a Greeley, a Reid, or a Dana. Give me but the opportunity, and I will soon rival or surpass them.

There are four general departments in newspaper work apart from the publishing of the paper. Of the last I shall say nothing, as that is but one of many kinds of business, governed by the general principles of business. These are the reporter, the specialist, the author-editor, and the editor-in-chief. It would be useless to discuss any question concerning the duties and responsibilities of an editor-in-chief, for the young men to whom I write are a long distance from that position, and before they reach it will have the opportunity of learning a great deal more than I could tell them.

THE REPORTER.

The reporter has sometimes a great deal to do, and at other times will be idly unemployed. When there are few columns of matter and few columns of space, and the paper is to be got ready for the press in a few hours or a few minutes, an almost innumerable slaughter is necessary. Hence, the young man who writes a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately after he has written a beautiful description of a convention, an exhibition, or a political meeting, and carries it in with the air of a person about to read an essay on commencement day, and who expects to receive from three to five bouquets immediately

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND
SOUTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.
Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HENNING.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1884.

Centenary Watchword.—No. 1.

A revival in every congregation and a regular collection to be taken at once and in full.

K. B. HENDRIX,
Chm. Cen. Com.

Bishop Kavanaugh occupied the pulpit at Carondelet, last Sunday, and "bad liberty." All know what that means with the Bishop. He will spend some days in the city and preach next Sabbath at Felicitee Street. His presence at the preachers' meeting on Monday morning was much enjoyed. Some of his anecdotes brought down the house.

A friend having written Mr. Sprague to come to America and substitute Florida for the south of France, where he usually goes for rest and health, he replied as follows. Its gentleness and humidity are the very essence of true greatness:

I am better, but getting weary. I go to Mentone soon. America would kill me with kindness. I can not run that risk. It would depress me greatly to be had in honor. Abuse I can bear, but kindness shows me my own unworthiness, and sends my heart into my shoes.

Our excellent confrere of the Southern Christian Advocate has a centennial leader entitled "The Key-Note," in which he quotes
"some wise suggestions" from Bishop McVeyre. We feel quite compelled to know that so competent a judge should deem any suggestions of ours as "wise," and that they have merit worthy of the Bishop's pen. If our brother will read the leader in the NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE of December 13, 1883, entitled "Clear the Decks," he will find those "wise suggestions."

The varied and diverse comments of Christian writers on the death of Keshub Chunder Sen, the great reformer in India, indicates how far we are from a common standard of belief. He was a man of marvelous gifts, and while the whole world was studying his new dispensation, he died when yet less than forty-six.
He believed in the unity of God, in a revelation, in the immortality of the soul, in the necessity of a new birth, and in the efficacy of prayer, but repudiated the doctrine of Christ's divinity, mediation and atonement as taught in the gospel.

The question of Rev. William Taylor's eligibility to membership in the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he has been elected a lay delegate, has been raised. He was elected by the South India Conference, a body he organized some years ago. His methods of work are well known. He has traveled far and near, planting missions of his own without appointment of any board or Conference.
He is a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but to what Quarterly Conference he is attached, if any, is a matter of some doubt.
Ten years have passed since he visited India, yet he is elected a delegate from that Conference. At the time of his election he was, and is now, in South America. The case seems to be a little irregular, but we doubt not it will occupy his seat not only unchallenged, but warmly welcomed.

If there is one thing our Roman Catholic fellow-citizens despise above another it is our system of public education. They ring the changes on our "godless schools," and warn the faithful to keep their children far from such places on penalty of having them forever ruined by rank heresy. If possible they would abolish them all, close every door, and if pupils refused to attend their schools, have them grow up in ignorance. They are the sworn, inveterate and uncompromising enemies of public education. Is it not a little strange, not to say immodest, for any Romanist, therefore, to aspire to any position on a Board of Education?
What is his business there? If in sympathy with the system, he is in disfavor with his church. We ask how many Romanists are on our board in this city? And what proportion of their children attend these public schools? We make no discrimination against any man on account of his religion, unless his religion makes him an enemy to our educational system. An enemy of a cause should not be its executive officer.

The Cost of Administration.

It is an old complaint that the expense of administering missionary affairs is excessive. We are all familiar with the saying that it takes two dollars to send one to convert the heathen. Some, possibly, have relied upon this as an apology for penuriousness. For fear their contributions will not go direct to China or Mexico, they give nothing at all.
They do not propose to support secretaries and treasurers and perfunctory members of missionary boards on fat salaries. What they give must go direct—the very coin, if it be but a probable nickel. Some things should be considered: 1. Money will not go alone to the foreign field. It has no wings with which to fly.
Somebody must send it, and he must have some knowledge of routes and rates, with a bank credit and correspondence. 2. If all monies could be sent independently and directly by each contributor, we could never have a successful mission in any country. There must be a central office to secure harmony of administration. Then an executive officer is a necessity. 3. Ecclesiastical affairs are administered at the minimum of cheapness and economy. Take the expense account of any denominational Board of Missions, and no other business of the same magnitude can compare with it in economy.

But so far as our own executive offices concerned there is no shadow of reason for complaint. The premiums on exchange almost entirely meet the whole cost of administration, including salaries of secretary and treasurer. So that every dollar contributed makes a full dollar in China, Mexico or Brazil. This is matter of great gratification. When our mission was first planted in China, and for years afterward, the discount on American exchange was twenty-five per cent. or more. An hundred dollars forwarded by our treasurer netted only seventy-five dollars in Shanghai. But with the growing commerce of the past decade or two a change has been wrought, and the large discount has become a substantial premium. Thus international commerce is subsidized by the Holy Spirit to the furtherance of the gospel. He makes money increase in value as it goes to the relief of the missionary. American exchange in Shanghai is worth about eleven per cent. premium; in the City of Mexico about fifteen per cent. There is possibly a little advance on these figures in Rio de Janeiro, though we have not the data at hand to speak with accuracy.
It will readily be seen, therefore,
that the premiums on foreign remittances will meet all the expenses of administration. The old "saw" must be surrendered, however bitter the tears at parting. It has served its generation by the will of Old Avarice, and ought to "fall on sleep." That it may know no waking is the prayer of all true Christendom. How ingenious and inventive is avarice when an argument is needed to resist a call of God and yet maintain a quiet conscience! In reply to a criticism on his expense account, Dr. Kelley makes a straightforward business statement about the affairs of his office in the Nashville Advocate that might be read with profit by many. We make the following extract:

The office is expected to conduct the financial correspondence of the board with all treasurers of Annual Conference Boards, missionaries in the field, and individuals at home, both preachers and people.
The work of two men may or may not be profitable to the cause. A part of the results the church may desire to see. In some sort the plan begun at Louisville, in 1874, when collections had been not above $48,000.
The church had gone forward in 1882 to $103,741.74. This was on a partial trial of one man and a fraction. The full experiment of two men, with their whole time given to the work, shows—April 1, 1883, the close of our fiscal year—$160,272.82.
The annual report of 1882 shows 153 missionaries under the care of the General Board, with 391 native helpers, where we had at the Louisville General Conference 53 missionaries and 80 native helpers; 20,619 members in fields where we had in 1874 less than 6,000; 8,706 Sunday-school pupils where we had less than 1,000; churches and other mission property valued at $202,051 where we had in 1874 less than $60,000—39 of which churches have reached self-support.
True, many things beside the work of the officers of the board have contributed to these magnificent results.
They are only given to show that the board is wide awake, cautious but progressive, so that the church may fully trust the plans of the board.

A REQUEST.—Will the secretaries of the various Annual Conferences please forward at once the names of the members of the Centenary Committee of their respective Conferences, as elected at the last session?
By doing so immediately a great favor will be conferred on.

W. P. JARVIS,
Sec. Central Centenary Com.

The Leading Object.

In the first of these series of resolutions adopted by the General Committee on the Centenary of American Methodism at their meeting in Nashville last May, embodying a proposed plan of Centenary observance, it is stated that "the leading object of this Centenary observance is the spiritual improvement of our people."
That result is to be secured by reviewing the history of our church and in monumental offerings to our connectional enterprises. But, above all, we are to pray for and look for spiritual improvement. Our fathers wrought wondrously because they sought divine power themselves, and led the people up to high spiritual places. In the early days every pulpit was a sort of mount of transfiguration and every home the dwelling-place of the Spirit. Let each seek such an experience, mind the same things and walk by the same rule.
The following, from the Christian Neighbor, we hope will be adopted as the motto and aspiration of every reader of this ADVOCATE:

Every Methodist in North America should get on a higher plane of Christian experience this Centenary year. This is within the reach of all.
Then every one should do something for furthering the cause of Christianity. No one so obscure but that he can do something toward encouraging some pilgrim for Zion, or entreating the sinner far gone in the downward road to retrace his steps and look to Calvary. Avenues for usefulness are upon every hand, and they are to be seen every hour. Agitate, let every Methodist make a grateful free-will offering to the loving Father for his gracious blessings upon the church. Besides contributions for education and missions, churches and parsonages are to be repaired and others erected. This is to be a year of effort. Let there be no laggard in the Methodist ranks.

A Day at Winona.

In response to urgent invitation we spent Thursday of last week in the thriving town of Winona, within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference, attending a prohibition mass meeting. Under the leadership of Rev. W. S. Lagrone, president of the local prohibition club, and other active friends of reform, a widespread and intelligent sentiment in its behalf had been awakened. Petitions for a county prohibitory law had been industriously circulated, and from the reports already in hand
a handsome majority of legal voters has surely been secured. Though the weather was exceedingly disagreeable, a fine audience assembled from the county at large, and manifested an enthusiasm and purpose that assure speedy victory. Rev. W. B.
Murrah, our pastor at Winona, and this editor delivered addresses on the occasion. Old men and young, white and colored, united in a warm expression of sympathy with the efforts being made to suppress by statute the iniquitous traffic in intoxicating liquors. It was a representative gathering of the best citizens of Montgomery county. We were especially gratified to see the number of negroes present, and to learn that they were joining heartily in the movement. But few withhold their signatures from petitions. This is encouraging, because liquor men taunt us with the threat that they will control the negroes and manipulate their votes whatever our schemes of agitation or legislation. A committee was appointed to take charge of the petitions, have a bill prepared, and appoint a large committee to proceed to the capitol and secure its passage through the Legislature.

Bro. Lagrone has worked with great vigor and persistency for this result, and looked as exultant as a commanding general the day after a successful, decisive battle. From figures he had gathered we learned that in Montgomery county last year about eighty-six thousand dollars were expended for liquor. That was about twenty-seven dollars to every legal voter, and seven dollars to every man, woman and child in the entire county. That of itself is sufficient argument in favor of reform, without another word of explanation or exhortation. If that eighty odd thousand dollars can be retained and diverted into proper channels, in one year gratifying results will be apparent everywhere.
How many miles that would purchase, with improved implements of agriculture! How many and better laborers it would employ! In the towns it would fill empty larders, paint dingy houses; replenish faded wardrobes, purchase school-books for children and brighten many a darkened home.

Winona is a young, growing town, with an enterprising and excellent population. Many private residences are gems of architectural taste and beauty. Long blocks of solid brick buildings indicate a thriving business. Every brick store in a town or village is another expression of confidence in its future. There is an air of permanency in brick and stone that wooden structures fail to command. When a man erects a brick building he has no thought of going to Texas. We rejoice to visit such towns in the great States of Mississippi and Louisiana. With our fertile fields, productive lands, salu-brious climate and exhaustless resources, no one needs to migrate to make a fortune.

Our church building in Winona is a handsome frame structure, freshly painted, and neat in all its appointments. Bro. Murrah, the pastor, has favor in the eyes of his people, and is doing good work in the double relation of preacher and teacher. To him, Bro. Lagrone, and Capt. D. L.
Sweetman, a distinguished lawyer of the place, we are indebted for special attentions and most delightful hospitality. We feel proud of the county of Montgomery, and hope it will soon have a good prohibitory law and a wider circulation of the NEW OR-LEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Prohibition in Mississippi.

The cause of prohibition in the State of Mississippi is advancing steadily and intelligently. There is no spasmodic movement, but a solid growth that will not retrace its steps.
Reform sentiment is crystallizing around the idea of the legal suppression of the liquor traffic, and is being felt in at least two-thirds of the counties in the State. The cause has passed its apologetic period and has reached the point when all men recognize it as a positive and prominent factor in our social life. It is no longer sneered at and laughed out of countenance. Politicians uncover before it and treat its advocates with the profoundest respect. A number of counties are already quita well organized, and others are catching the spirit of reform. The Legislature, now in session, contains the names of many able men who are its foremost champions. Mr. Speaker Inge was our eloquent and able leader in the last House of Representatives.
That he was elevated to his high position on the first ballot is evidence that his temperance convictions are not at a discount.

On Tuesday of last week a committee of fifty citizens from the county of Lincoln, headed by Dr. H. P.
Johnson, President of Whitworth College, visited the capitol and presented a petition, signed by a large majority of the legal voters, asking for a prohibitory law for that county.
It was a strong body, and the House manifested its respect for the committee and their measure by suspending the rules for its introduction, second reading and reference to the Committee on Temperance.
By resolution the hall was offered in the evening to Dr. Johnson and this editor for the purpose of discussing the general question. The doctor improved his opportunity in a clear, logical, able speech of an hour, and the editor exhorted after him according to the instinct of the Methodist preacher.

A general local option law will be introduced at an early day, and its friends think will have an easy passage through both Houses. We record these facts to cheer our brethren in their good work. A little more activity in neglected communities will give us an organized sentiment that no opposition can withstand.

Progress in China.

We read the letters of our missionaries in China with increasing interest. There is a tone of hopefulness in every communication. Their faith seems to grow more vigorous with each year's labor. Our excellent and faithful correspondent, Dr.
J. W. Lambuth, our readers say, never wrote so well in all his long and varied missionary experience.
Some people are in the habit of estimating the results of mission work by the number of converts reported.
But many things seen and felt, that have no place in statistical exhibits, are necessary to be known in order to a full appreciation of the work accomplished. These are only known to those in the field. We thank God for what is being done in the great empire of China. As further evidence of the onward march and influence of Christianity upon that empire of idolatry and superstition, we make an extract from a letter written by Bishop Merrill, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has just returned from China and the presidency of the Foochow Conference:

This is a Chinese Conference, and out. The business is done in the Chinese language, and recorded by a Chinese secretary; the committees deliberate and report in Chinese, and the discussions are in the same tongue. A missionary sits by the president and translates his words into Chinese, and also interprets to him what the others say. The few missionaries holding membership in the Conference recognize the large preponderance of the Chinese element, and also the fact that they are in China working for the Chinese people, and that the church they are founding is to be in the future a Chinese church; and they readily conform to Chinese methods and seek to develop the Chinese talent and character in Methodist lines.

The reports showed that a large amount of work was done the past year, with only moderate success.
Large gatherings did not occur.
Revivals as we have them are scarcely known. The heathen are first interested by some flashes of truth reaching their minds through the preaching of the gospel. They then seek or accept interviews with the preacher, and become inquirers. In this character they are often enrolled and continue for months, receiving instruction and studying the rudiments of Christian religion. In the course of time they decide to accept or reject the "doctrines." If the former, after suitable trial and instruction, they receive baptism, and enter the church as probationers.
Then they begin religious duties, and seek further knowledge, till, after much waiting, and not a little stumbling, their dormant sensibilities awake and the signs of conscience appear, and the emotions hitherto so dead exhibit the rudiments of life. This is the usual process.
It may be the only way of leading such an unemotional people into the experience of salvation. Well, that it is being done thus! But it does seem that a greater baptism of the Spirit on the workers would sometimes cut short the work in righteousness and bring Pentecostal results. The statistical report gives the following figures: Number of probationers, 845; members, 1,085; adult baptisms, 144; children baptized, 73; deaths, 45; number of churches, 43; probable value, $14,200; parsonages, 42; value, $5,460; number of Sunday-schools, 73; scholars, 1,430; collected for missions, $172.79;
other collections, $111.64. In most of these things there is some increase, showing a healthy condition and faithful work. In the matter of self-support the progress is necessarily slow, and will be for a long time; yet the preachers continue to be interested in the matter, and constantly keep it before the people.

Visiting a Methodist Neighbor.

The Mississippi Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, met in Jackson on Wednesday of last week,
Bishop I. W. Wiley presiding. This Conference is composed almost entirely of negroes. There were present several white men, who serve a few white circuits in a certain part of the State. We visited the body, watched with interest its deliberations and heard one or two spirited debates. Several years ago we saw the Conference in session, and therefore had opportunity of studying its progress. Some things we noted specially and favorably: 1. The more rigid enforcement of disciplinary law.
2. A stronger emphasis upon the moralities of religion. 3. A higher educational standard of ministerial qualification. 4. The kindly references they made to the white people in all their reports.

Bishop Wiley, who was our agreeable guest during his stay at the capitol, is a conservative, clear-headed, well-poised man. His short Conference speeches indicated the vigilance and prescience of a wise administrator. He very thoroughly understands the negro's character and needs. His views, as expressed to us, on that great social and religious problem, we can very well endorse. And here we take pleasure in correcting the report of the Bishop's speech before the General Missionary Committee in New York.
He made no reference to our church at all, and therefore could not have uttered the sentiments ascribed to him. We are glad to put this correction on record, and to have had an opportunity of learning from him the whole spirit and tone of the much-discussed discussion.

Dr. J. M. Reid, of New York, missionary secretary, Dr. A. J. Kynett, of Philadelphia, secretary of the Board of Church Extension, Drs. R.
S. Rust and J. C. Hartzell, secretaries of the Freedman's Aid Society, and our neighbors, the editors of the Southwestern, were the visitors from abroad. Drs. Reid and Kynett preached for our congregation, greatly to their delight and profit. They were earnest, able, evangelical, Methodist sermons, delivered with the old fire of the fathers. Dr. Reid was quite amused that a lady, in thanking him profusely for his excellent sermon, traced a striking resemblance between himself and Mr.
Jefferson Davis.

"The Prayer of Faith."

MR. EDITOR: I feel constrained to say something upon this subject by the occurrence and publication of two notable examples: The curing of the young man at Oxford, Miss., and the finding of the hidden money at Hinkley, O. The latter is to be read in the weekly New Orleans Times-Democrat, of December 20, where it is stated that after twenty-four hours' prayer the widow of the deceased miser was led, in an unac-countable way, to the discovery of $203,000.

Now, what I want to say is: 1.
Not questioning the facts in either case, we can not give the faith a very high grade. The Israelites asked meat in the wilderness, and quails were sent. But the Almighty was not pleased with the petition. They asked water, and the smitten rock gushed it forth; but God was angry.

Manna fell forty years, and came near being a perpetual miracle; but the people ought to have been above praying for it at least thirty-seven and a half years.

2. Miracles of this kind are recorded in the Bible of the dark rather than of the bright ages of faith.
When people were generally obedient to the Divine law miracles became rare, and yet there was vastly greater general joy and prosperity.
If, therefore, there is anything in these examples it is rather a rebuke than a token of Divine favor. Fifth, of the true kind realizes the unseen.
The kingdom of God is not made of the natural, but of the spiritual.

3. It takes a brighter and higher faith to die than to live, to surrender than to gain. I will not criticize either of the parties mentioned above; but faith of the Pauline order lays hold upon eternal life and covets spiritual riches. I pray God to enable me to make money honestly, but I also pray him to help me to do without it and yet think as well of myself and of him. In fact of two men praying, one that he might be rich and the other that he might be poor, I should accredit the latter with the higher faith.

4. I think it time that we speak out on this subject, and endeavor to lead the people to "covet the best gifts," even the spiritual, and ask God for them. "He feeds the ravens when they cry," but will he forget us in these inferior things if we ask the higher? By no means. We preach against Rome, the miraclemonger. Let us not do that which we condemn in others. These alleged facts may all be true, but the soul saved from death is worth more than $200,000. If a disconsolate widow could pray twenty-four hours for that might we not pray longer for a friend whose soul is in jeopardy?

T. A. S. A.

Centenary Programme for the Louisiana Conference.

1. Let Centenary mass meetings be held at the following points: Carondelet Street Church, New Orleans; Shreveport; New Iberia; Houma;
Alexandria; Monroe. The presiding elders will fix the time of meeting, appoint the speakers, designate for each speaker his field of thought, and make all other necessary arrangements. Let special prominence be given to devotional exercises.

2. Let the children's day be held in every charge at such time in June as the pastor may consider best. Let the exercises be by the children and suited to the occasion. Let the collection be provided for beforehand and not left to the caprice of the moment.

3. Let one day at each District Conference be wholly devoted to Centenary purposes, and each presiding elder preach a Centenary sermon, the day to be opened with a love-feast.

4. Let each pastor appoint at once a committee of three men and three women to circulate in his charge centennial literature, and secure subscribers for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, aiming to place said paper in every family.
Let this committee aid the pastor in all his Centenary operations.

5. Let special attention be given to the establishment and maintenance of class meetings in every congregation, and let all, by prayer and diligent effort, seek the baptism of the Holy Ghost, to the end that thousands may be converted to God and added to our Zion.

J. T. SAWYER, Chairman.
C. P. EVANS,
B. F. ALEXANDER,
Executive Committee.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Jan. 19, 1884.

—The corner-stone of "Keener Chapel," San Diego, Cal., was laid on the morning of January 1 with imposing ceremonies. It is to be a handsome and tasteful building.
A copy of Post Oak Circuit was placed in the corner-stone.

—Hon. Warren Easton, the candidate for superintendent of education of Louisiana, is a young educator of fine scholarship, patriotic enterprise and a faculty for administration.
His election will put new life into that important department.

—We have read with pleasure the address of the New Orleans Educational Society and the account of its organization. That is a good move, and it needs the cordial support of all patriotic citizens. We shall have something to say of it next week.

—While sitting in a hotel in Sumter, S. C., a layman stepped forward to Dr. Kelley and presented him an unasked, written pledge to pay $50 for missions yearly for ten years.
He added: "If I do my will shall provide for the payment as promised." That and other expressions assure us that missionary intelligence and liberality is growing in the church everywhere.

We see in the Advocate of Missions that Mr. Thos. Hamsworth, who died recently in Galveston, Texas, left a liberal bequest to St. James Church, of that city. It includes several hundred acres of land, a brick store, several building lots and a sum of money.

A note from Rev. T. S. Randle announces the death of his little boy, Newton Jay. Bro. Randle was summoned home by telegraph during Conference on account of his illness, and this is the sad result. May great grace sustain the bereaved!

We were pleased to have a call on Monday last from Rev. J. H. Warren, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., chairman of the Executive Committee of the Monticello Sunday-School Assembly. He reports the outlook for Monticello this year very cheering. Bro. Warren is the Dr. Vincent of this Southern Chautauque.

The death is announced of Dr. John Peter Lange, the great German theologian, author and commentator. His body was found in a canal at Hamburg, but as yet it is uncertain whether the death was by accident or suicide. He was the author of "Leben Jesu" and of "Lange's Commentaries."

The editor had a sad duty to perform last week in officiating at the burial of his old friend and parishioner at Jackson, Bro. John W. Patton. He died quite unexpectedly after a few days' illness, leaving a host of friends to mourn his untimely loss. His was a modest, retiring life, but in his home and among his intimate friends his virtues shone with a singularly steady ray. A more extended notice will appear.

We have seen a copy, thanks to the publishers, of the Methodist Centennial Year-Book, by Dr. W. H. DePuy. It is a stout volume of over four hundred pages, full of interesting facts and statistics of old Methodism and new. Dr. DePuy has a genius for figures and their analysis, and in this work has exhausted the Methodist arithmetic. We must say, however, that he has given our Southern Methodism proportionately rather short space. Some errors and omissions we note in the references to our church. In the list of official papers this Advocate and others of our leading Conference organs are not mentioned. But for general Methodist facts, skillfully arranged, the book will serve a grand purpose this centennial year.

Rev. P. Howard, writing from Satartia, Miss., reports the death of an old friend and brother in the ministry.

Another local preacher of our Quarterly Conference is gone, Rev. James S. Harris, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference. He died in the faith, at his home near Phoenix, Yazoo county, Miss., on the seventh instant.

A note from "Gilderoy" brings us the following gratifying intelligence: The Palme Institute, Augusta, Ga., opened with about forty pupils the first day. They have rented a school-room, where they have ample room and good accommodations. Dr. Callaway and Prof. Walker are greatly encouraged. The outlook is favorable, so Dr. Haygood writes me.

A Centenary Manual.

In reply to many inquiries, we desire to state that we have now in preparation, and will issue at the earliest date practicable, a short manual for the Centenary of American Methodism. The object of the book is to place in a small compass the information that is requisite for intelligent action by ministers and laymen. It will be arranged for ready reference, and will guide the reader to the sources of more extended knowledge of the subjects discussed. Further notice will be given as to the nature of the work and the time of publication.

W. P. HARRISON, Sec. Central Centenary Com. Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 18, 1884.

No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, gentle, pure and good without the world being better for it, without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness.—Phillips Brooks.

The Christian will find his parentheses for prayer even in the busiest hours of life.—Cecil.

The Southern Cultivator Free.

All old subscribers by paying up in full to date, and two years' subscription in advance, will receive the Cultivator free for one year, postage prepaid. We will also send the Cultivator free for one year to all new subscribers paying two years' subscription in advance. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters. This is a fine opportunity to secure the only first-class agricultural paper published in the South free for one year.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

WATCHES.—Mr. H. P. Buckley, known for years to our readers, is still at the old stand, No. 8 Camp street. He has kept pace with the times as a watchmaker and jeweler. Mr. Buckley's judgment in matters pertaining to his business can not be surpassed, and purchasers can rely on what he says. See advertisement elsewhere.

Impudence, ingratitude, ignorance, and cowardice make up the creed of infidelity.

How long? Much depends upon one's judgment. Economy hinges not on the amount invested, but on the investment itself. Are we sure our purchase is the best? Is the vendor reliable and trustworthy? Are his goods as represented, and with these last? First-class goods always command a better price than inferior articles. As in labor, so in art, first-class work is the cheapest. Photographs can be procured for a trifle that will satisfy for a time and then fade away beyond recognition. For a small advance above the cheapest you may procure one to last for ages at Washburn's, Canal and Exchange Place.

Did you ever hear of a man's re-nouncing Christianity on his death-bed and turning infidel?

The attention of our readers has doubtless been attracted to the voluminous card of Messrs. W. Atlee Burpee & Co., seed growers, of Philadelphia, Pa., which appears in our pages this issue. The usual enterprise of the firm is manifestly this season by the offer of cash prizes, on a competitive basis, open to all who may choose to enter. Read their advertisement. The honorable record maintained by this firm entitles them to the attention of all who may be interested in farm and garden products.

Gambblers, nor free-thinkers, haven't faith enough in their profession to teach it to their children.

BEATTY'S GREAT OFFER.—The offer made by Mayor Beatty of a $500 parlor organ for only $15, in another column, is a great offer, and our readers who desire an organ should avail themselves of it at once.

No theist, with all his boasted bravery, has ever yet dared to advertise his unbelief on his time sheet.

The standard restorative—especially in cases of nervousness.—American Nervine, Hilo. "I am perfectly cured," said J. S. Corbin, of Washburn, Ill., "thanks to Dr. Richmond's American Nervine." At Druggists.

It is a statistical fact that the wicked work harder to reach hell than the righteous do to enter heaven.

COLUMB'S BODY-BEET TONIC imparts strength to body and mind. Take neither. Of druggists.

I notice one thing: when a man gets into the spot, he don't never send for his friend the devil to get him out.

SANTALINUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures. Nose, Throat, Lungs, full idea. $4.00, bottle, cost free.

I had rather be an idiot than an infidel; if I am an infidel, I have made myself one; if an idiot, I was made so.

For sufferers Chronic Diseases, 36 pp., symptoms, remedies, help, advice. Send stamp to Dr. Whittier, St. Louis, Mo., (oldest office). State case your way.

I never have met a free-thinker yet who didn't believe a hundred times more nonsense than he had in the Bible any where.

Read advertisement in this issue concerning the Oiler Cotton.

It is always safe to follow the religious belief that our mothers taught us—there never was a mother yet who taught her child to be an infidel.

CONSUMPTION CURED.—An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by one of the most eminent physicians of the age a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, he felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, he will send free of charge, to all who desire it, his recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. ROYCE, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

A man may learn infidelity from books, and from his associates, but he can't learn it from his mother nor the works of God that surround him.

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP cures obnoxious discharges of the skin.

If an infidel could only comprehend that he can prove more in his faith than he can in his reason, his impudence would be much less offensive.

If you have diseased lungs, take DAVIS'S HONEY OF HYPOCRYSE AND TAR. FINE'S TUBERCULAR CURE is one infallible.

Unbelievers are always so ready and anxious to prove their unbelief, that I have thought they might be just a little doubtful about it themselves.

Your Lightning Linctum came to hand all right and is moving on as usual. Mr. Ferguson's wife cured of consumption when she had been suffering for 20 years and had tried every available remedy. He purchased a twenty-five cent bottle of Billington's Lightning Linctum and received immediate relief. I had his testimonial—but it was misplaced. I have said, as you are aware, near 400 letters, and every one with the understanding that if it did not relieve he would be returned. I have had but one complaint, and then the bottle was returned. The man had Rheumatism—one week after he got your Lightning Linctum he had thrown himself away, yet he claimed no relief. I am trying a case of White Swelling. The party tells me he has had 7 nights rest, the first in seven years. Toothache, Neuralgia, Pain in the breast, back and shoulders are known no more! Therewith send two office money-order for $16.00.

Yours, W. P. HALL

CHICAGO, TEX., Dec. 4, 1883.

The infidel, in his impudence, will ask you to prove that the dead did occur, when the poor idiot thought that even prove, to save his life, what a hen's egg is white, and a duck's egg blue.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner, tea and break fast sets, $14.00 moss rose tea sets, $14.00 moss rose chamber sets, $14.00.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street New Orleans, is prepared to supply pianos and organs on the most liberal terms. Write to him for his prices and catalogues. You need not send north for instruments of a questionable character when you can get a grand article nearer home at a fair price. Mr. Werlein's house is well known to us all for its fair and honorable dealings. Pianos of the most celebrated factories are kept. Chickering, Weber, Mathushek, Hale, Hardman, Werlein and every instrument guaranteed to last a great number of years. Organs: Mason & Hummel, Bay State, order to Philip Werlein you will be satisfied and pleased with your finds. Music or any musical article to be had.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

M. E. B.—They all say so that have tried them: "Champion Monitor" cooking stoves—Most Even Bakers.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or no.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—In the favorite all-summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails, has adopted the standard gauge, will offer ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine, New York, for cough, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the oil. The most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRUAX, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

PHOTOGRAPHS!

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WASHBURNS

Photographic Parlors.

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal Hotels and almost directly opposite the City Square.

You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever.

We make every kind of portrait known to the art, from the miniature for the locket to life-size, in Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon or Oil.

Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged and the likeness faithfully preserved.

FOR RENT.—A good place in Amite county, Miss., containing about three hundred and twenty acres, a fine two-story dwelling-house, beautiful site, healthy location about four miles from Natchez Valley railroad, on the Clinton and Greenville roads. For further particulars apply to Mr. Broadford, Ambrosia, La.

MANFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANFIELD, MISSISSIPPI, LOUISIANA.

The twenty-ninth Annual Session will begin on the 12th of September, 1883.

Manfield is situated on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, forty miles south of Shreveport in a beautiful and healthy country, and is easily accessible from almost every portion of Texas and Louisiana.

The College is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is managed by the Louisiana Conference. The buildings and grounds are extensive and all the facilities for instruction are provided.

The College last year had nearly a hundred boarders and sixty pupils in Music, thirty in Art and one hundred and twenty in all.

Board and tuition, per term: $80.00.

Music and use of instrumentum: $10.00.

Special charges in Art Department and Modern Languages. F. M. GRACE, President.

CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE.

One thousand acres cypress timber lands. Situated in townships 10 and 11, south range 10 east, south-western land District of Louisiana.

For information,

Apply to

N. O. Christian Advocate, 112 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

A. BALDWIN, President.

SIGMUND KATZ, Vice President.

SEMI-ANNUAL STATEMENT

OF THE

New Orleans National Bank,

At the Close of Business,

December 31, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Bills discounted..... $ 529,644 00

Demand loans..... $381,417 28

Overdrafts..... 2,500 00

U. S. bonds, par value..... 201,650 00

$200,000 Louisiana Contols.....

Crossman's..... 222,000 00

Agency and checks on other banks..... 450,228 76

New York sight exchange..... 80,947 04

Due from banks and bankers..... 1,320,243 90

Five per cent. fund with Comptroller of the Currency..... 9,000 00

Furniture and fixtures..... 500 00

Total..... $1,984,881 45

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock..... $200,000 00

Surplus fund..... 250,000 00

Undivided profits..... 4,818 45

Circulation outstanding..... 130,000 00

Dividends uncalled for..... 1,740 00

Dividends payable Jan. 2, 1884..... 8,000 00

Individual deposits..... $1,241,862 26

Due banks and bankers..... 75,160 23

Total..... $1,984,881 45

I certify the above to be a true statement.

WM. PALFREY, Cashier.

Correct—Attest: JOHN H. HANNA, SIGMUND KATZ, W. T. BENDISOT, Directors.

MISCELLANEOUS.

READVILLE SEMINARY,

BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

Is a select home-school for young ladies and little girls. All branches of a religious education taught by accomplished teachers. Pupils are awarded diplomas who complete the prescribed course of study. The next session opens October 3, 1884. For information apply to MRS. MARY W. REED, Principal.

The E. A. Seminary

This school, for boys and girls, is located at Arcadia, Blountville Parish, La., a town on the railroad that joins Monroe and Shreveport.

The course of study is thorough and practical. The discipline is rigid, with mildness.

For circulars, address

R. ARMY, Principal.

SCHOOL TEACHERS!

The Central Educational Bureau secures TEACHERS, LECTURERS, EXHIBITORS, POSITIONS, furnishes schools and families instructors FREE OF CHARGE. School property and apparatus supplied.

Address H. MAYBEE, Sec.

27 Seventy-five teachers wanted at once.

FREE BUSINESS UNIVERSITY,

Atlanta, Ga.

For illustrated Circular $10 year.

H. P. BUCKLEY,

8 - Camp Street - 8

GOLD AND SILVER

New-Wholesale Watches,

American, English and Swiss.

First Quality and Lowest Prices.

DIAMONDS

Jewelry and Sterling Silverware,

At Great Reduction.

Special attention to Watch Repairing, Diamond Setting and Jewelry Repairing.

BARGAINS

IN THE BEST

PIANOS!

AT

P. WERLEIN'S

135 Canal St.

Competition Defied!

CHICKERING, WEBER, MATHUSHEK, RIMAN, guaranteed to remain in tune and last for a great number of years. No sticking of keys, no breaking of strings, no squeaking noises. Mason and Hamlin, and other organs of noted makers, very low in price. Music and musical merchandise of all kinds. Send for our catalogue, and prices, and you will deal with us, finding it your interest so to do.

P. WERLEIN.

Established over 30 years.

121, 123, 125 Common St.

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS AND TRUNKS.

PARLOR ORGANS ONLY $35.00

Warranted to last six years.

Including Reed, Book and Music, providing order is given and reasonable price within seven days from date of purchase.

THE PARLOR ORGAN AND NEW YORK

ORGAN is built expressly to supply every household throughout civilization with music. It is the best instrument for the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

For the parlor, the family, the church, or the school. It is an instrument of the highest quality, and is built by the most skillful workmen.

Christian Advocate.

Congregational Singing.

Nothing so attracts the people to the house of God as good congregational singing. A preacher of moderate abilities, with a singing congregation, will have larger attendance than a minister of greater eloquence where the people are silent and the choir do all the singing. Nor will the people stand to hear singing in which they take no part; hence, where choirs alone sing, the congregation do not stand up and bless the Lord! More than once or twice in the third hymn, and many do not rise at all. The habit also is formed of quitting all but two or three of the stanzas. Standing, when nothing else is done, is very tiresome; it is more fatiguing than to walk during a time three times as long. When the people sing they will stand and sing a hymn of six verses, with less conscious fatigue—if the singing and prolonging the spirit by interludes—than they would feel in standing to hear any choir that can be commanded, at least without great expenditure, sing half as much. The great churches in every denomination in all parts of the world have congregational singing. Sprung from the first refined help of choir or organ. It says, "The people come to church to hear the preaching, and to hear and do their own singing, and thus they worship God." The songs of those who crowd Talmage's Tabernacle can be heard through the whole neighborhood as the voice of a great multitude. In Plymouth Church, though the choir sing the anthems, all the people sing the hymns. In Scotland the people all sing; in Germany they all sing; in the Moody meetings they all sing. It would, perhaps, be possible to have a revival without any singing; but if there be singing at all, though the songs and the photos, and, perhaps, the quietists may assist the people must sing, and will sing the choruses, the standard hymns, and the doxologies.

A church in Maine had an excellent pastor, a fine location, large congregation and fine congregational singing. The finances were also prosperous. Someday, "We are able to have the best choir in the city, why not have it?" They got it, with the understanding that the people should join with the choir in singing the hymns, but the choir would not sing congregationally. The artistic execution of the people, the interludes threw them off the track; in six months the choir was doing it all. It was admitted to be the best choir in the city. A few musical friends of the choir were added to the congregation, but the attendance as a whole fell off one quarter the first year; at the end of the second it was not more than two thirds what it formerly was. The preaching meantime was as interesting as ever; the pastor was humiliated by the declining attendance. The church returned to congregational singing, and the seats were immediately filled as before. From the pastorate of this Episcopal church, with their fine choir, have gathered congregational singing, without interludes, or with but two or three notes; and they preserve the spirit of the singing from the first line of the first stanza to the last line of the last. That long interlude is necessary in an assumption contrary to three facts: the long anthems that choir will sing; the long hymns the people will sing in prayer-meeting, and the singing, without interludes, of very long hymns in the German congregations, the Jewish synagogues, and of hymns of ordinary length in the Episcopal churches. All that some moribund churches, with able ministers need, to transform them, is that the people should sing. They pray for the Holy Spirit when they violate the instructions given by the Spirit with regard to the worship of God: "Speaking to yourselves in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." While the Protestant Churches that use liturgical forms generally have congregational singing—as the Lutherans and many of the Episcopalians—it is especially necessary for those who have no liturgy; for unless they sing the people have no part in the service. A critic of Methodism says: "When Methodism arose the converts were very demonstrative; they shouted and sang as no other Christians did or could. Now they have quit shouting and hire their singing, like the most formal of those from whom they came out." "This witness" of some churches.

Which is better, pretended congregational singing, where only a few sing and that feebly, or good choir singing? Which is better, the language of a cripple, or well men, that hand and foot, riding in a carriage, with ill-dressed coachman and footman? Question comparing the best of its kind with the worst of another kind shed no light upon the relative value of different species at their average, or at their best. Average congregational singing promotes the interest of the church much more than average choir singing; the best choir singing, compared with the best congregational singing, is spiritual and emotional effects, is feeble. Do not suppose that we are declaring war against choirs. A good choir, that will sing the regular hymns, so that the people can and will join with it heartily; and that will, in every case, consult the pastor concerning "voluntaries," is of great value to the church. But a good choir that does not care to have the people sing, that stands upon its dignity, considers itself co-ordinate with the pastor, whose members take no interest in the services, and practice their pieces, and bring their forward importantly, is an incubus upon any congregation, as many an enslaved and discontented pastor knows. But if this be true of a good choir, ministerially speaking, what must a poor choir be that fails on similar aims?

A Dangerous Enemy.
We can not too earnestly urge the necessity of the use of the Vindictive Treatment of Drs. Starkey & Lefebvre, 110 Girard St., Philadelphia, in the very commencement of Pulmonary trouble, and before the disease has made serious inroads upon the system and reduced its power to contend with so dangerous an enemy. Too many of the cases which come to, them are of long standing, and the chances for a radical and permanent cure just as far remote. That their Treatment benefits over a large proportion of these cases is often a matter of surprise to themselves and their patients. If your cough is becoming troublesome, if you are beginning to lose flesh and strength, and have night-sweats, don't wait a day before sending to Drs. Starkey & Lefebvre for such documents and reports of cases as will enable you to understand the nature and action of their new Treatment. Take your money in time, and the chances are all in favor of your discharging him.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, cure all Biliousness, Constipation, Indigestion, Headache, Malaria, Kidney Diseases, Fever, Chills, Impurities of the Blood, Colds, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased Liver. Lemon Juice is prepared from the fresh juice of lemons, combined with other vegetable liver tonics, cathartics, aromatic stimulants and blood purifiers. Fly over for one half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally.

Then, John I. Martin, editor opposite Four Courts, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Lemon Juice has no equal for the disease for which it is recommended. Myself and family have used it for two years and recommended it to our friends."

O. F. Richmond, Druggist, Neshio Rapids, Kansas, writes: "Lemon Juice is the only medicine I ever sold or used that does more good and cures more diseases than is claimed for it."

J. H. Witherson, Druggist, Auburn, Ark., writes: "Lemon Juice is the best of all the medicines for which it is recommended. I have used it for several years and it has cured me of all my ailments."

Dr. H. Moxley—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from Indigestion or Dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and biliousness, disordered kidneys and constipation, during which time I have tried all known remedies, and exhausted the skill of many eminent physicians, and continued to grow worse, I have been cured by your Lemon Juice, and am now a well man. Very truly, J. H. Moxley, No. 28 Tenth Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Lemon Juice prepared by H. Moxley, M. D., Atlanta, Ga. For sale by all wholesale druggists, New Orleans.

FERRY'S SEED ANNUAL FOR 1884
Will be mailed FREE to all applicants and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains illustrations, prices, descriptions and directions for planting all Vegetable and Flower Seeds, Plants, etc. Invaluable to all. D. M. FERRY & CO. DETROIT.

CUTICURA
See What Cuticura Does for Me!
INFANTILE and Adult Itch, Milk Crust, Scalded Head, Eruptions and every form of itching. Sealy Pimples, Scrofulous and inherited diseases of the Blood, Skin and Scalp, with loss of hair, cured by the Cuticura Remedies. It is a pure and safe, reliable, and the great Skin Cure, 50 Cts. Cuticura Soap, 25 Cts. and Cuticura Remedies, the new Blood Purifier, 50 Cts. are sold by druggists. Better than any other. Boston, 20-22 South Street.

THE GREAT NERVE
IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURE
Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Falling Stitches, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Syphilis, Scrofula, and all Nervous and Blood Diseases.
To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, and all who are afflicted with sedentary employment causes. Nervous Prostration, Irrregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetite or stimulant, Samaritan Nerve is invaluable.
"The Great Nerve" is the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50 per bottle.
THE DR. S. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.
Sold by all Druggists.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

THE GREAT NERVE
IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURE
Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Falling Stitches, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Syphilis, Scrofula, and all Nervous and Blood Diseases.
To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, and all who are afflicted with sedentary employment causes. Nervous Prostration, Irrregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetite or stimulant, Samaritan Nerve is invaluable.
"The Great Nerve" is the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50 per bottle.
THE DR. S. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.
Sold by all Druggists.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, cure all Biliousness, Constipation, Indigestion, Headache, Malaria, Kidney Diseases, Fever, Chills, Impurities of the Blood, Colds, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased Liver. Lemon Juice is prepared from the fresh juice of lemons, combined with other vegetable liver tonics, cathartics, aromatic stimulants and blood purifiers. Fly over for one half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally.

Then, John I. Martin, editor opposite Four Courts, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Lemon Juice has no equal for the disease for which it is recommended. Myself and family have used it for two years and recommended it to our friends."

O. F. Richmond, Druggist, Neshio Rapids, Kansas, writes: "Lemon Juice is the only medicine I ever sold or used that does more good and cures more diseases than is claimed for it."

J. H. Witherson, Druggist, Auburn, Ark., writes: "Lemon Juice is the best of all the medicines for which it is recommended. I have used it for several years and it has cured me of all my ailments."

Dr. H. Moxley—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from Indigestion or Dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and biliousness, disordered kidneys and constipation, during which time I have tried all known remedies, and exhausted the skill of many eminent physicians, and continued to grow worse, I have been cured by your Lemon Juice, and am now a well man. Very truly, J. H. Moxley, No. 28 Tenth Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Lemon Juice prepared by H. Moxley, M. D., Atlanta, Ga. For sale by all wholesale druggists, New Orleans.

FERRY'S SEED ANNUAL FOR 1884
Will be mailed FREE to all applicants and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains illustrations, prices, descriptions and directions for planting all Vegetable and Flower Seeds, Plants, etc. Invaluable to all. D. M. FERRY & CO. DETROIT.

CUTICURA
See What Cuticura Does for Me!
INFANTILE and Adult Itch, Milk Crust, Scalded Head, Eruptions and every form of itching. Sealy Pimples, Scrofulous and inherited diseases of the Blood, Skin and Scalp, with loss of hair, cured by the Cuticura Remedies. It is a pure and safe, reliable, and the great Skin Cure, 50 Cts. Cuticura Soap, 25 Cts. and Cuticura Remedies, the new Blood Purifier, 50 Cts. are sold by druggists. Better than any other. Boston, 20-22 South Street.

THE GREAT NERVE
IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURE
Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Falling Stitches, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Syphilis, Scrofula, and all Nervous and Blood Diseases.
To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, and all who are afflicted with sedentary employment causes. Nervous Prostration, Irrregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetite or stimulant, Samaritan Nerve is invaluable.
"The Great Nerve" is the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50 per bottle.
THE DR. S. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.
Sold by all Druggists.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, cure all Biliousness, Constipation, Indigestion, Headache, Malaria, Kidney Diseases, Fever, Chills, Impurities of the Blood, Colds, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased Liver. Lemon Juice is prepared from the fresh juice of lemons, combined with other vegetable liver tonics, cathartics, aromatic stimulants and blood purifiers. Fly over for one half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally.

Then, John I. Martin, editor opposite Four Courts, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Lemon Juice has no equal for the disease for which it is recommended. Myself and family have used it for two years and recommended it to our friends."

O. F. Richmond, Druggist, Neshio Rapids, Kansas, writes: "Lemon Juice is the only medicine I ever sold or used that does more good and cures more diseases than is claimed for it."

J. H. Witherson, Druggist, Auburn, Ark., writes: "Lemon Juice is the best of all the medicines for which it is recommended. I have used it for several years and it has cured me of all my ailments."

Dr. H. Moxley—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from Indigestion or Dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and biliousness, disordered kidneys and constipation, during which time I have tried all known remedies, and exhausted the skill of many eminent physicians, and continued to grow worse, I have been cured by your Lemon Juice, and am now a well man. Very truly, J. H. Moxley, No. 28 Tenth Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Lemon Juice prepared by H. Moxley, M. D., Atlanta, Ga. For sale by all wholesale druggists, New Orleans.

FERRY'S SEED ANNUAL FOR 1884
Will be mailed FREE to all applicants and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains illustrations, prices, descriptions and directions for planting all Vegetable and Flower Seeds, Plants, etc. Invaluable to all. D. M. FERRY & CO. DETROIT.

CUTICURA
See What Cuticura Does for Me!
INFANTILE and Adult Itch, Milk Crust, Scalded Head, Eruptions and every form of itching. Sealy Pimples, Scrofulous and inherited diseases of the Blood, Skin and Scalp, with loss of hair, cured by the Cuticura Remedies. It is a pure and safe, reliable, and the great Skin Cure, 50 Cts. Cuticura Soap, 25 Cts. and Cuticura Remedies, the new Blood Purifier, 50 Cts. are sold by druggists. Better than any other. Boston, 20-22 South Street.

THE GREAT NERVE
IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURE
Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Falling Stitches, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Syphilis, Scrofula, and all Nervous and Blood Diseases.
To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, and all who are afflicted with sedentary employment causes. Nervous Prostration, Irrregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetite or stimulant, Samaritan Nerve is invaluable.
"The Great Nerve" is the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50 per bottle.
THE DR. S. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.
Sold by all Druggists.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, cure all Biliousness, Constipation, Indigestion, Headache, Malaria, Kidney Diseases, Fever, Chills, Impurities of the Blood, Colds, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased Liver. Lemon Juice is prepared from the fresh juice of lemons, combined with other vegetable liver tonics, cathartics, aromatic stimulants and blood purifiers. Fly over for one half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally.

Then, John I. Martin, editor opposite Four Courts, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Lemon Juice has no equal for the disease for which it is recommended. Myself and family have used it for two years and recommended it to our friends."

O. F. Richmond, Druggist, Neshio Rapids, Kansas, writes: "Lemon Juice is the only medicine I ever sold or used that does more good and cures more diseases than is claimed for it."

J. H. Witherson, Druggist, Auburn, Ark., writes: "Lemon Juice is the best of all the medicines for which it is recommended. I have used it for several years and it has cured me of all my ailments."

Dr. H. Moxley—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from Indigestion or Dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and biliousness, disordered kidneys and constipation, during which time I have tried all known remedies, and exhausted the skill of many eminent physicians, and continued to grow worse, I have been cured by your Lemon Juice, and am now a well man. Very truly, J. H. Moxley, No. 28 Tenth Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Lemon Juice prepared by H. Moxley, M. D., Atlanta, Ga. For sale by all wholesale druggists, New Orleans.

FERRY'S SEED ANNUAL FOR 1884
Will be mailed FREE to all applicants and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains illustrations, prices, descriptions and directions for planting all Vegetable and Flower Seeds, Plants, etc. Invaluable to all. D. M. FERRY & CO. DETROIT.

CUTICURA
See What Cuticura Does for Me!
INFANTILE and Adult Itch, Milk Crust, Scalded Head, Eruptions and every form of itching. Sealy Pimples, Scrofulous and inherited diseases of the Blood, Skin and Scalp, with loss of hair, cured by the Cuticura Remedies. It is a pure and safe, reliable, and the great Skin Cure, 50 Cts. Cuticura Soap, 25 Cts. and Cuticura Remedies, the new Blood Purifier, 50 Cts. are sold by druggists. Better than any other. Boston, 20-22 South Street.

THE GREAT NERVE
IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURE
Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Falling Stitches, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Syphilis, Scrofula, and all Nervous and Blood Diseases.
To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, and all who are afflicted with sedentary employment causes. Nervous Prostration, Irrregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetite or stimulant, Samaritan Nerve is invaluable.
"The Great Nerve" is the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50 per bottle.
THE DR. S. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.
Sold by all Druggists.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock; though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.
To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from goods that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.
W. G. TEBALD, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

H. D. McCOWN, DEALER IN FINE CLOTHING AND Men's Furnishing Goods.
Headquarters of the celebrated STAR SHIRT. Boy's Clothing a Specialty. MEN'S AND BOY'S HATS. Clothing Made to Order. Corner St. Charles and Columbia Sts. N. O.
Reductions.
To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1884.

MARTHA.

BY JULIA C. K. DODD.

Yes, Lord: Yet some must bear
Not all with tranquil hearts,
From thy dear feet,
Wrapped in devotion sweet,
May I kneel.

Yes, Lord: Yet some must bear
The burden of the day,
The burden of the night,
While others at thy feet
May kneel and pray.

Yes, Lord: Yet some must bear
The burden of the day,
The burden of the night,
While others at thy feet
May kneel and pray.

Yes, Lord: Yet some must bear
The burden of the day,
The burden of the night,
While others at thy feet
May kneel and pray.

Yes, Lord: Yet some must bear
The burden of the day,
The burden of the night,
While others at thy feet
May kneel and pray.

Sunday-School Lesson.

PREPARED BY REV. CHRISTIAN KENNEDY.

Final Quarter—Lesson V.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1884—ACTS—XV, 35-41.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Come over this Macedonia, and help us."—ACTS XXI, 9.

PAUL'S SECOND MISSIONARY JOURNEY.

We now return to the history of the church in the Acts. After the decision of the conference at Jerusalem, Paul and Barnabas went with Paul and Barnabas to visit the church at Antioch. They took with them a fraternal letter, reporting the decision of the conference, that the Gentiles need not become Jews in order to be saved. This news was received by the Gentile converts with great joy. The hateful restriction withdrawn, many of the hesitating entered at once the Christian church. It is a wise thing to do away with conditions which keep out many who would strengthen the church by their presence, and just as wise to keep fast, on their hinges with bolts all closed, every door through which may enter those whose presence only weaken and paralyze the church of God. But this doing away with that relic of Judaism lightened up the Gentiles like a declaration of independence.

Paul, for the few days that he remained in Antioch—there were too many preachers thereabouts for him to stay in that city many days—used his time in reading, in clear tone, the authoritative document from Jerusalem, supplementing it by oral teaching, until he had well impressed the substance of that remarkable decree upon every Jew and Gentile in that city. This done, and feeling that the freedom of the Gentiles had been fixed upon a firm foundation, and that Judaizing bigotry had received a thrust from which it would not soon recover, the old yearning of life, to work among the Gentiles afar off, laid hold on him. He speaks of this project, so near his heart, in very modest terms. At this center of attraction, where preachers were grouping and inquiring Gentiles were coming for light, he was almost afraid to speak out all that was on his mind, for fear that it would not be popular. As if not expecting to do much, he breaks the project gently to good Bro. Barnabas: "There are plenty of preachers here to do the work at Antioch; let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word, and see how they do." Barnabas consented at once, and invited Mark to go with them. Mark, it seemed, consented, even though he has proved a poor missionary on a former occasion; but this was only to ho a tour around to all the churches; no new ground to be cultivated. But Paul would not consent to Mark going with them. He called up his former desertion, when he had left him at Pamphylia. Paul's objections were not to be overruled, nor would Barnabas consent to go without Mark. Paul's persistent rejection of Barnabas' kinship gives us a clue to what was in Paul's mind. If the trip was only to be a home missionary tour, a visit to the churches, why not take Mark? But this visit to the churches was but the preface of Paul's real journey. He was seeking more and more clearly every day that his call was to go far and wide and that it would require a courage and earnestness such as he did not find in Mark. Paul was right; and Mark learned a lesson that helped him in after years. There was no alternative but for them to part. This contention grew out of very natural causes, Paul's earnestness of purpose and the bias of kinship on the part of Barnabas. A most reasonable agreement to disagree. Their ways diverge. Barnabas and his relative sailed to his native Cyprus, and Paul chose Silas and departed, the church commending him unto the grace of God. The separation was overruled by the Spirit for the furtherance of the gospel. We catch a glimpse of Paul as he passes through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches. He makes a short halt at Derbe and Lystra, where he makes the acquaintance of Timothy. He finds in him an earnest helper. To disarm a prejudice which he had not time to break down, he circumcised Timothy; this son of a Greek, proving that in things indifferent he was ready to submit. When the apostle had gone through Phrygia and the regions of Galatia, and was forbidden of the Holy Ghost to go into Asia, he came to Mysia and essayed to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit suffered him not. So the Holy Ghost had him in charge, and was guiding him toward Europe. He hedges his way once, twice, and he comes to Troas, on the coast of the Aegean Sea. At this stage of his mysterious journey he was strangely conscious of the presence of his guide. He had lead him to the sea, near the site of ancient Troy. From the shore Paul could see the island of Greece, and that outward sight as he gazed upon those "isles of the sea" was the preparation of his soul for the vision he saw that night.

Macedonia was that part of Greece that lay opposite Troas. It had been distinct from Greece, but now was united with it. The Romans had conquered the whole country, and had named Macedonia Northern Greece. The man of Macedonia, therefore, represented the nations of the west. After the vision of that night Paul recognized where the restraints of the Spirit were leading, therefore leaving from Troas we came with straight course to Samothrace, and the next day to Neopolis, and from thence to Philippi, the chief city of Macedonia. The Spirit course betokened a fair wind. Their guide assumed his chariot. This Spirit of the new birth, who bloweth where he listeth, filled the sails and drove, with unthought speed, the vessel through contending wave and current. This vision Macedonia's cry, if not a conscious desire for the gospel, was at least expressive of the deep need of the gospel and of unconscious preparedness to receive it, not only of that region, but also of the whole western empire, which Macedonia might be said to represent. Paul interpreted that cry as a confession that the highest splendor of heathendom, in the arts of Greece and in the polity and power of Rome, had arrived at the end of all its resources. God had left the Gentiles to walk in their own ways. They had sought to gain salvation for themselves, but those who had carried it farthest along the paths of natural development now feel that all had been indeed but vanity. This result had been reached by the history of all heathendom, and Israel going along the way God had marked out for him had likewise arrived at his end. At last he is in condition to realize his vocation by becoming the guide to lead Gentile nations unto God, the only Author and Creator of man's redemption, and in Paul this vocation of Israel is divinely realized and by this nocturnal apparition of the Macedonian crying for help.

This voice is crying still to the Christian church. Oh! that the church may heed the cry. It can be abundantly shown from Scripture and history that this cry has been rightly recognized by the church as interpreting the unuttered cry of heathendom for help, and it is just as plainly shown that it is death to any church or Christian either not to hear this cry or, having heard, not to heed.

We can neither excuse ourselves upon the plea of ignorance nor inability. The demand which missions lays upon us is as great as our own salvation, for it is part of it and inseparable from it.

Louisiana Conference.

REPORT ON TEMPERANCE.

Your Committee on Temperance beg leave to submit the following as their report:

That the licensed liquor traffic is the most gigantic and all-pervading evil of the world and age no observant or thoughtful person will deny. In the face of the ruin in body and soul, for time and eternity, of the million of drunkards every year manufactured by it in these United States and of its other millions of wretched victims in all lands; in the face of the broken hearts, blasted hopes, grinding poverty and immeasurable anguish of the innocent millions of women and children made to suffer because the government must have the blood money, euphemistically called revenue, that comes from granting license to liquor dealers; in the face of the fact that three-fourths of the crimes committed and of the costs of criminal procedure are directly chargeable to the drink system; in the face of the fact that the good people of this or of any land have it in their power to rise in their might and down the monster; in the face of all these indisputable facts it is the wonder of wonders that the liquor power is found ruling in national, State and municipal governments and sweeping away the barriers of public virtue and private rights. The granting of license for the manufacture and sale as a beverage of intoxicating liquors is in itself a crime.

Rev. Dr. J. W. Harmon, of the Mississippi Conference, says: "The exercise of all rightful authority under organized forms of society, covered by the eagle of constitutional law and common law, must, of necessity, be so exercised as to protect the public weal and insure the moral, the physical and the religious safety of her citizens. The fundamental maxims of all sound law declare that no person or persons shall be permitted to use their property to the damage of society or persons in the State. How then did State Legislatures obtain the authority to turn loose upon the world such an evil principle as the liquor license system, contravening the very spirit and intent of all sound constitutional law, and subversive of good government? This gigantic wrong perpetrated against all the interests of humanity, against the dignity and virtue of good government, against the fundamental prosperity of these States, against the peace and happiness of millions, must be dispossessed and driven out from its stronghold; it must be cut out, or torn out or voted out from the statutes of all the States; and this criminal legislation must not be held as legal in any true sense of law, because such legislation is crime producing and, therefore, wickedly attempts to legalize that which is illegal. If a just and righteous retribution could be visited upon the guilty legislators who continue to sanction this criminal legislation by the murdered millions who have been cruelly immolated on this bloody altar under the form of law, never again would there appear a license statute to blacken and smirch the pages of State legislation. The whole liquor license system from the State constitutional conventions, which opened this Pandora's box, to the State Legislatures, which hilled on the vile serpent, and from the Legislatures to the counties, towns and cities, which have multifurcated the fiery heads of this great monster, the whole web and wool is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States."

In the Nashville Advocate, of September 8, 1883, Guilford Jones uses the following language: "In the providence of God, the people of this country are the rulers; their votes control the law-makers and those who execute the laws; hence they are particeps criminis, in all the mischief which the liquor traffic is doing in this land."

After giving the facts and figures concerning the liquor traffic, he concludes his article in these strong and truthful words: "Now, before the bar of public opinion, and before the Judge of all the earth, we charge that the freemen of this country are responsible for all this waste and terrible tide of woe. They have the power to throttle this great 'blood-gorged dragon' and destroy him. If they fail to do it, they must stand charged with being partakers in this dark and terrible criminality; and if the court of public opinion fails to abate the evil, the guilty must face the charge in the light of the judgment fires."

Your committee are convinced that in order to the death of the liquor power the temperance people, male and female, white and black, in and out of the membership of the various churches must organize, not for a day, not for a year, but for the war, and the end, absolute prohibition. Our foe is found thoroughly organized, and, wholly unprincipled, spent one million and more of dollars to defeat the women of Ohio in their late effort to carry that State prohibition. The enemy wherever the vote is taken are ever moving to battle as well-trained, thoroughly equipped soldiers. The friends of temperance must learn wisdom from their foe and, as in Iowa, Ohio, Georgia, Arkansas, Mississippi, and in other States, and in some portions of our own State, go into permanent organization and, relying on God and their own persistent efforts, move forward with close ranks and steady march. The police jury of a parish are compelled, upon the petition of a respectable number of citizens, to grant an election in each ward of the parish. There should be promptly organized in each town, village and neighborhood a woman's Christian temperance union, and, thus handing together in one the Christian temperance element of all the churches, there will soon be in active operation throughout this State a moral power that can not be long resisted. The enemy must be fought in detail: a ward at a time, a parish at a time, a county or a parish, and then a State, and another and another until our broad, fair land shall be saved from the curse.

The church of Christ, helped by the respectable and moral people who are not church members, can do away with this evil, but not without thorough organization and the unconquerable spirit that can stand defeat to-day to win tomorrow's battle. The ballot, wielded not on the line of a political party, but in obedience to Christianity and the demands of highest citizenship, can bring relief in the near future. In God's fear, and for love of man, let us use

"The weapon that is fiercer yet
And surer than the bayonet."

Your committee submit the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we do not identify ourselves with any partisan movement; but, as a Conference, representing the true interests of the people of Louisiana, we do seek such legislation as shall free our State from the power and influence of the grog-shop, which we recognize as the enemy of all good, and we do hereby call upon all good citizens, irrespective of party or creed, to aid in this object.

Resolved, That we heartily commend the self-sacrificing and efficient labors of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and we will co-operate with and assist them in their labors when they come among us.

Resolved, That a Committee of Three be appointed by this Conference whose duty it shall be to confer with similar committees, which may be appointed by other religious bodies, to prepare and circulate for signatures petitions to the Legislature of Louisiana, asking that body to submit to the people a proposition so changing the organic law of the State as to forever prohibit the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors except for medicinal, scientific or sacramental purposes.

JOHN T. SAWYER, Chairman.
ROBERT PARVIN.

Is it the Better Way?

I see from the list of appointments of the Mississippi and other Conferences that the number of charges in most of the presiding elders' districts precludes the possibility of holding the quarterly meetings as in former days, upon Saturday and Sunday, and necessitating week day appointments for those important official gatherings. The only reason I have heard for this is that the districts are financially inadequate to the support of the presiding elder. It certainly can not be that the presiding elder is enabled to give more direct personal attention to the work. For the fact is that when the districts included in the same territory, but fewer charges, the presiding elders gave more time to each, and was about as well, if not better, sustained. There can be no doubt if the presiding elder could have time from the pressing business engagements that this multiplication of charges imposes, to go through the circuits, preach and visit among the people, that more good would be accomplished. His presence would be felt, and he would have opportunity to magnify his office, while the churches would recognize more readily the obligation to sustain him.

If the rule of addition-by-division works well in the circuits why should it not work well on the districts? A few examples will suffice to show how the rule works on circuits. I have traveled perhaps more extensively within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference than any other member now upon the effective list. In 1881 I traveled a circuit 250 miles around, preached every day in the week but Monday, and received $216 for the support of wife, child and myself. Now, within the same territory, with slight addition, there are three or four preachers employed, and any one of the charges pays more to the support of the presiding elder and pastor than the whole paid then, and the spiritual development is wonderful. In 1886 I traveled a circuit which embraced parts of Claiborne, Copiah and Hinds counties. Now there are, and have been for several years, some five or six different pastoral charges created out of the same territory, parsonages provided in most of them, and any one of them gives as liberal support to the preacher as the whole gave me. My appointment this year is a fraction of the circuit I traveled in 1842. My old circuit has one station in the midst of it now, one half station (two churches), and altogether three or five pastoral charges that were embraced, in whole or in part, in Rankin circuit in 1842. There are better churches, better provision made for the support of the preachers, and, as a rule, our membership are better informed as to the doctrines and usages of the church. I was allowed only $366 for my support in 1842. Now there is not one of the five different charges but would scorn to be so niggardly in their allowance to their preacher. Now, the secret of this prosperity is that a faithful pastor has more frequent access to his people, better opportunity to indoctrinate them.

If it be true that for a time some members may have had to pay a little more than they have been accustomed, others are being educated up to the standard of duty, and are now helping liberally. The more any one pays to the various institutions of the church the more they will be interested in her prosperity. As a rule, it is the man or woman who pays little or nothing that complains most.

In reference to the presiding elders' districts, in looking over the minutes, I can not see that the multiplicity of appointments has added materially to their support, and I am sure the office is no more esteemed nor its moral force more apparent than when there was a reasonable number of appointments and the presiding elder was more with the people. H. J. H. MARVIN, Mississippi.

The Year 1883.

BY REV. J. W. HARMON.

Standing over the hier of the dead year, 1883, a solemn hush of sadness falls on broken harp and song, while weird phantoms flit through the imagination. As the night of the death of years and centuries deepen we enter upon the silent juncture of ages, and the overlapping of dispensations, when the morning will soon dawn upon the strange events, both physical, profane and divine, that will mark the history of the new year, and the development of olden prophecies. The dead year, which has been so full of secret sines and open shame, so full of life and death, of spiritual joys and worldly sorrows, has closed up and sealed its pages, until the hand of God shall break every seal and reveal its mighty wonders for judgment.

And now that the clasp of destiny is upon the past, let the sparkling wine cup stand on the sociable board untouched and unquaffed, while love and grief, hope and fear, penitence and faith bend low in uttered prayer over the departed year, for the rich and poor, the learned and unlearned, the good and the bad have all sinned had the joyous or terrible lessons of the year 1883 chiseled upon body and brain and graven on mind and heart, which they will bear with them to their graves. The light-hearted revellers of the hall-room, the frolicsome sons and giddy daughters of pleasure and fashion have turned aside from the banqueting halls of mirth and song and dance, to mourn and weep, with throbbing hearts, as they never wept before.

Far out on fiery wing and unheeded the swift-winged destroyer hurled his shattered wrecks of human habitations and human lives and happiness all along his tortuous pathway of earthquake and cyclone, of flood and fire and volcano, shrouding the sunset of the world in strange colored glare, awakening predictions of olden time. His bloody altar has been burdened with human victims, rolling living forms in black, and chattering awful memories in the soul, to be rehearsed in other days with bated breath and husky voice.

But, marked as it has been with success and failure, with expectations and disappointments, with death and progress, right and wrong, joy and sadness, loves and hates, it has met its doom and destiny; and the sepulcher has closed its everlasting doors with a clang that will echo all through the aisles of time, awelling up with a dull boom to the judgment day.

Eighteen eighty-three, we bid thee farewell, with all the wondrous changes which thou hast wrought upon the tangled pages of this world's strange and checkered history. Thine own page has indeed been one of mingled light and shadows, for long and deep scars have thou cut upon human hearts, and weird pictures hast thou photographed upon human memories. Long indeed will your dreadful changes among the nations and cities and isles of the sea stand as an epoch among the years. And thou hast taught us, by a sad and bloody record, that when the wrathful elements of nature eucamp against our common humanity, and keep up their deadly assaults, tearing out the spirits from frail bodies, smashing skulls, breaking limbs, and pouring out human blood like water, that we have no defense and no safety save in the mighty God. But as thou art dead and gone, carrying with you to the tomb such a mingled catalogue of human history, we turn with hopeful eye and bounding spirits to scan the distant horizon, and with hearts full of love and faith in God we greet the new year, 1884. And now, standing on its threshold, with all its undeveloped secrets, with uplifted hands and arms, we beseech the all-merciful God, who holds all the elements and powers of the universe at his command; to deal mildly and kindly and mercifully with us poor helpless mortals in the name of his only begotten Son.

Now, we begin the record on the new page of the new year with brave spirits and under the inspiration of new thoughts, setting our standard higher than ever, and we will, by the help of the eternal Spirit, make a better use of our influence and God-given faculties than in any year of our earthly history. Some writer once said that when Napoleon lost the battle of Waterloo the clock of the world went back six centuries. But we rejoice to know that when the great Captain of our salvation lost the battle of mere human life on the battlefield of Calvary then the clock of the world moved forward to the mighty drum-beat of eternal centuries.

Marriages.

MINOR-HAEBTEL.—At the residence of the bride, in Natchez county, Miss. November 28, 1883, by Rev. H. H. Moon, Dr. H. A. Minor, of Macon, Miss., to Mrs. Ellen Haebtel.

CORNER-BENTON.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Holly Springs, Miss., December 18, 1883, by Rev. H. H. Moon, Mr. D. A. Cooper to Miss Jimmie Benton.

MCALXANDER-GRIER.—At the residence of the bride's brother, near Holly Springs, Miss., January 8, 1884, by Rev. H. H. Moon, Mr. J. P. McAlxander to Miss Lollie Grier.

BONLEY-CUMMINGS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Levi Cummings, in Marshall county, Miss., January 15, 1884, by Rev. H. H. Moon, Mr. S. B. Bonley, of Yazoo county, Miss., to Miss Lela Cummings.

GREGORY-GLINN.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Aberdeen, Miss., January 1, 1884, by Rev. R. P. Mitchell, Mr. P. M. Gregory, of Clay county, Miss., and Miss Sue Glenn.

EDWARDS-WALKER.—At the residence of the bride's father, Dr. Walker, near Aberdeen, Miss., January 15, 1884, by Rev. H. P. Mitchell, Dr. J. W. Edwards, of Jonesboro, Ala., and Miss Cora May Walker.

HATCH-BUMPASS.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Aberdeen, Miss., January 17, 1884, by Rev. R. P. Mitchell, Mr. Robert L. Hatch and Miss Belle Bumpass.

WILCOX-PARKER.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. S. J. Parker, to Enterprise, Miss., by Rev. J. M. Weems, Mr. W. D. Wilcox, of Butler, Ala., to Miss Clemmie E. Parker.

Obituaries.

KENNARD.—Fell asleep in Jesus, at midnight, December 14, 1883, after a short illness, of acute tuberculosis, HATTIE TILGHMAN KENNARD, daughter of J. L. and A. B. Kennard, of Port Gibson, Miss.

Thus, has entered into rest one who from childhood had made her peace with God. Though stricken down in the bright sunlight of her youthful days, though called before the evil days had come, death found her not as a conqueror, for this slumber was removed as one who had fought the light, kept the faith, and was ready to enter the Christian's rest. To herself, and her family the summons was unexpected; to the latter it came like a mighty thunder clap from a clear sky. When she realized her disease would prove fatal she talked of dying, and expressed a perfect trust in her God. She had no fear of death, and with the utmost composure spoke of "going home," "almost home," "nearly there," as one who had arranged to return to an earthly home and sent messages to her friends. At times her suffering was severe, but she murmured not; patiently she awaited the messenger, and slowly, calmly she sank to rest "as one that wraps the drapery of his soul about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

She was always reserved—by no means a demonstrative Christian; yet her face was ever set toward, and her feeling was such as that described by the poet when he said: "Feeling is deep and still; and the word that floats on the surface is as the tossing buoy, that betrays where the anchor is hidden."

Young in years, lovely in life, beautiful in death, Hattie, thou art now resting in the sweet fields of Eden to be "forever with the Lord." Glorious thought! O hest shade! Thy earthly home is saddened by thy transfer to heaven; but the loss of thy loved ones here is thy eternal gain. May they follow Christ as thou hast done, and may the Lord increase their faith that they may say, though their tears, "He gave thee, he took thee, and he will restore thee."

JACKSON.—J. A. JACKSON died at his home, near Phenix, Yazoo county, Miss., March 12, 1883, after a brief and painful illness. He was born near Nashville, Tenn., August 27, 1838.

The subject of this memoir was married to Miss L. J. Alexander (daughter of Rev. C. W. Alexander, who was a member of the Holston Conference, September 13, 1881, who was to him all that a worthy and devoted wife should be, and to whom he was bound by tenderest ties of love and confidence. This devoted wife and constant companion of only a few short months is left to mourn the loss which can only be regarded in the realms of eternity. She mourns not as those who have no hope; her loss and ours to his eternal gain. He was received in the church at an early age, and over remained a consistent member. He was not a loud and demonstrative professor, but a deep and abiding one. During his last hours he called those who were near and dear to him around his dying couch, and asked them to meet him in heaven.

The deceased leaves a wife and one little babe. May the Lord bless his wife and little one! May he comfort them in their sorrow and make them to feel that their loss is his gain in Christ Jesus!

Nashville Advocate and Southern Baptist please copy.

JOHNSON.—The cheerful home of Bro. J. C. Johnson was saddened, January 2, 1884, by the death of his bright little boy, aged one year, eleven months and fifteen days.

After a severe illness of only a few hours little "Sweet" sank into the cold embrace of death—"The dust returned unto the earth as it was, and the spirit returned unto God who gave it." Being possessed beyond his years of a tender and affectionate disposition, he lived just long enough for the love of a large family to have grown almost into idolatry. If mother was sick or weary, none could soothe him like the tender caresses of that loving little heart; but to-day he must leave her wretched and sick in the lonely home once made happy by his baby face. To-day he can not return her loving embrace, or lean, as in other days, his warm head on her bosom, but he is waiting and watching at the beautiful gate to bid her welcome to that better land.

Who but Jesus, tender, loving Jesus, can supply that darling's place or bind up this painful wound? Bereaved ones, hark! his little voice, as he waits for the coming of his little footsteps, remember that death has only opened the cage door and let the birdling free. The voice, though now in no way hushed, but is music now in the heavenly choir.

ANNIE.

SCOTT—PALMER C. SCOTT died in Teahna, Miss., December 30, 1883. The place and date of his birth are unknown to me. He came to Lexington last summer, and attended our meetings in September and united with our church. He said he had formerly belonged to the church; but his profession required frequent changes in his place of residence, and his church relation was lost. He was about fifty-five years old; a gentleman in every respect—high-toned, noble, dignified. He leaves one daughter and many friends who hope to meet him by-and-by. The Lord bless his heart-bereaved daughter!

T. W. LEWIS, Pastor.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

To thoroughly cleanse and purify garments without injury, they must be boiled to dissolve the oily exudations of the skin; and loosen the dirt, when both can easily be removed by using a mild but effective soap, like the "Ivory" (99 1/2% pure). Washing Compounds and Soap recommended to be used in cold water, to save labor, fuel, etc., are highly chemicalized, and are so strong that they attack and destroy any fabric they are used on.

PHOTOGRAPHS!

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WASHBURNS
Photographic Parlors.

109 CANAL STREET,
Are situated within a block of the principal Hotel, and almost directly opposite the City Square.

You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY.

There will be no obligation whatever. We make every kind of portrait known to the art, from the miniature for the pocket to life size, in Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon or Oil. Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged and the likeness faithfully preserved.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
BY T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HENNING.

TUESDAY JANUARY 31, 1884.

Centenary Watchword.—No. 2.

A centenary page in every Advocate and an Advocate in every Methodist family. "He that soweth sparingly shall also reap sparingly."

E. B. HENDRIX,
Chm. Cen. Com.

"Clear the Decks." This is our first Centenary watchword. Let the echo fly until every dollar of every connectional collection has been raised.

The next few months will determine whether our Conference Centenary reports were mere "mellituous resolutions" or the sturdy expressions of intelligent purpose and denominational loyalty. Brethren, which shall they be?

We heard a brother preacher say recently that his cigar bill last year exceeded his account with the butcher. "But," said he, "by the grace of God it shall not be so this year." That is a good new year resolution. Pastors should be an example to the flock. Many dollars go out in cigar ashes and smoke that ought to be given to the Lord.

Father Hyacinthe, the distinguished French orator and ecclesiastic, whose break with the Romish Church some years ago made him famous, is in the city, accompanied by his wife and little son. He lectured on Tuesday evening last on "France and America." This evening his subject will be "Catholic Reform." Pere Hyacinthe is an eloquent preacher, but as a reformer he has disappointed all expectations.

Temperance petitions and local prohibitory bills are flooding the Mississippi Legislature. And to the honor of that body be it said that these bills are becoming laws as fast as presented. Last Saturday was a red letter day in the House. Prohibitory laws for four entire counties were passed with scarcely an amendment or word of objection. A general local option measure was submitted on Monday. We take pride and pleasure in this grand movement of our native State.

Bishop Keener sails to-morrow (Friday) on the Whitney for Vera Cruz on an official visit to our missions in the Republic of Mexico. The Bishop projected that mission, was present in the City of Mexico at its planting, and has nursed it into vigorous growth. The little company has now increased to quite an army. Dr. Patterson and his brave co-laborers are doing a great work. We wish the Bishop a prosperous journey and safe return, with a report that will wake the echoes throughout our Southern Methodism the entire Centenary year.

The editor spent Sunday last in Brookhaven, and had the pleasure of preaching twice for the pastor, Dr. H. F. Johnson. That is an interesting congregation, composed largely of young people. Two hundred girls from Whitworth College attend there steadily. The new college building, in process of erection, is assuming grand proportions. It will be a monument to the enterprise and ability of the distinguished president. In all respects the college is doing finely. Mrs. Kidd mentioned it as an item worthy of record, that in a family of two hundred, through all the severe weather of the past few weeks, not a single case of pneumonia had occurred. As the guest of Dr. Johnson's family, we always have a true home feeling and enjoyment.

Centenary First Fruits in Mississippi.

We publish the following as the first Centenary offering in North Mississippi. This no doubt is the early beginning of many liberal gifts that will generously follow. To this end may it be an inspiration:

Resolved, That the Centenary Committee of the Corinth district, of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, hereby tender their grateful acknowledgments to Miss Ann Ford, of Iuka, Miss., for her liberal bequest of five hundred dollars as a Centenary offering for the use and benefit of the Iuka station, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for all time to come, the interest only on said amount to be collected and used annually.

AMOR KENDALL,
J. A. BOWEN,
J. W. STOKES,
Centenary Committee,
CORINTH, Miss., Jan. 22, 1884.

The Church and Secret Societies.

We heard a spirited discussion recently in a colored Conference on the adoption of a resolution discouraging membership in secret societies. A few days thereafter, while meditating upon the points made by the colored brethren, a prominent layman of the Baptist Church unexpectedly propounded this question: "Have you considered the effect of secret organizations upon the work of the churches?" We told him of the debate above alluded to and of the reverberations from which his inquiry aroused us. Then the matter was discussed in all its varied phases and bearings. Having been a popular and distinguished grand officer in one of the bodies, we listened with special and profound interest to his matured convictions on the subject. He said that as he became more identified with and active in church work, he had less interest in these benevolent orders. Though moral and eleemosynary, they were not distinctively and positively Christian. Speaking from the inside, we gave heed to his opinions.

Without intending to inveigh against the purposes or principles of any such order, we propose to give some of the conclusions reached from our observations and reflections upon the general subject.

Every organization outside of the church that proposes to do her proper work weakens and cheapens the church's mission and authority. In and through the church all practical religion should find expression. Her field is sufficiently large and comprehensive to command every unwarmed energy of all our ransomed powers. The church suffers when her mission is relegated to another person or organization. If Christian men dispense the charity through another agency that should be disbursed by their church, they discount the church and put a premium upon the brotherhood. They say, in effect, that the society is a better expression of brotherly kindness and charity than the church of God. That it hears the cry of want with a readier ear, and dispenses relief with a more liberal and discriminative hand. True, the mission of the church is not limited to mere temporal and physical benevolence. She is to care for the soul—to seek and to save the lost. But in so far as she is commissioned to care for the widow and the fatherless, to feed the hungry and clothe the naked, and this service is rendered through any other organization, she is wounded in the house of her friends. Men will turn elsewhere for that comfort and sympathy they supposed was resident in the church of the living God.

Nor less deleterious is the effect upon individual church members. They are the rare exceptions who are active and faithful alike in both the church and the secret society. As a rule, those who never fail to attend a monthly meeting of the brotherhood never fail to be conspicuously absent from the weekly prayer meeting. They pay their dues punctually and freely to the lodge, but slowly and grudgingly to the church. This can not be practiced without weakening the church tie, and doing one's self spiritual hurt. If Christ will not occupy a divided throne, neither will his Bride, the church, be satisfied with a partial and secondary love. The church is not an after thought, to be entertained or not at will, but the spiritual mother of us all, demanding at once our reverence and service. First of all, and above all, should we prize membership in the body of Christ. No obligations should be so binding, no vows so solemn and exacting, no love so tender and confiding.

We further state that these additional, though not antagonistic, organizations interrupt the development of a distinctive church life. A man will visit a brother in affliction in his character as a member of the fraternity. If in distress he assists, as a brother craftsman. But when and where does he render a like service in his distinctive character as a fellow-Christian and brother member in the church? It is difficult to indoctrinate the people into the idea and duty of ministering to each other as Christians and as Methodists. And so long as such fraternal spirit is diverted into other channels, we may expect the church tie to be a frail, attenuated thread, invisible and almost unrecognizable. The church should be the great disbursering agency for all Christian benevolence. A gentleman was solicited for a contribution to a town charity. He refused by saying that he gave to that object the day before in his church meeting, and the deacons were instructed to disburse it to the most needy. That was the wiser course.

The above are general principles that must be applied by each individual conscience. We do not antagonize the great benevolent orders of the world. Their principles and purposes may be most wholesome and praiseworthy. Their good deeds are known and read of all men. But they can neither substitute, complement nor supplement the church. They may teach morality, but not Christianity. The purpose of this article is to arrest a tendency, which may be merely incidental to these orders—the tendency to make the church and her work secondary and subsidiary.

The characteristic of our times is a rage for organizations. They have multiplied, until they are like "leaves in valambrosa." There are societies for everything, and called by almost every conceivable name. Some one has facetiously said that "we have to get up a society in order to spank a baby." At all events one has been organized to regulate how, and how much, he must be spanked. In the churches they are multiplying with alarming rapidity. Too many of these tend to distract, disorganize and deconsecrate church life. We are jealous for the honor and authority of the Bride of Christ, hence these words of caution.

Political Abuse.

The stock in trade of the average little political editor is billingsgate and vituperation. Personal detraction he thinks both smart and brave. It makes his paper lively and popular. He shows that he is not afraid. If public men need ventilation he is the infallible censor to go through them with a lighted candle and make report. This evil genius is not a modern development or importation. He is indigenous to all soils and ages, but finds the widest range for the exercise of his powers in republican governments. He interprets liberty of speech to be a license to abuse. When at times we read his poisoned detractions we imagine ours to be the worst of all historic periods, and our public men to have least virtue and honor. But it has always been so. The fathers whom we canonize were similarly assailed. Their names and worthy deeds were no protection from the venomous shafts of petty spite. If any one is tempted to think we have fallen on evil times—that all public virtue was buried with the fathers, that they lived in inapproachable security and sanctity above all malice or suspicion—

—he is invited to read an article in Harper's Magazine for February, by Thomas W. Higginson, entitled "Our Country's Cradle." On his last day in office Washington wrote to a friend, comparing himself to "the weary traveler who sees a resting place, and is bending his body to lean thereon. To be enfolded to do this in peace," he added, "is too much to be endured by some." So on that day a newspaper in Philadelphia dismissed him with a final tirade, which is reproduced here for those who think all political virulence is the monopoly of our times. Here is its adieu to the father of our country:

"Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation!" This was the exclamation of a man who saw a flood of blessedness breaking in upon mankind. If ever there was a time that allowed this exclamation to be repeated that time is the present. The man who is the source of all our country's misery is this day reduced to the rank of his fellow-citizens, and has no longer the power to multiply the woes of these United States. Now more than ever is the time to rejoice. Every heart which feels for the liberty and happiness of the people must now beat with rapture at the thought that this day the name of Washington ceases to give currency to injustice and to legalize corruption. When we look back upon the eight years of Washington's administration it strikes us with astonishment that one man could thus poison the principles of republicanism among our enlightened people, and carry his designs against the public liberty so far as to endanger its very existence. Yet such is the fact, and, if this is apparent to all, this day should form a jubilee in the United States.

Race Progress in the United States.

This is the subject of an able and elaborate article in the February number of the North American Review, by the Hon. J. R. Tucker, of Virginia. It is an impartial, skillful and careful analysis of our national census reports from 1790 to 1880. The rate of decennial increase is studied with the varied causes affecting it at different periods. When the advance sheets of the census report for 1880 were first given to the public much surprise was created in the South at the supposed greater increase of the negroes over the white population. This it was feared would complicate an already difficult and perilous problem. That report gave the increase of the white population as 21.1 per cent., and of the colored race as 34.8 per cent. But a comparison of those tables with the decade from 1860-70 shows their gross inaccuracy. The increase for that decade, as per report, was as follows: whites, 15.4 per cent.; colored, 9.8 per cent. During that period we had passed through a bloody war, with great loss of life among the whites. The negroes lost nothing by emigration or the casualties of war. Yet their increase is only 9.8 per cent., as against 15.4 per cent. for the whites. The only way, therefore, to arrive at the facts is to compare the race progress of the double decade from 1860 to 1880. The following figures will help to a fuller understanding of the facts:

	1860.	Per Cent.
Total white population.....	26,022,557	85.6
Total colored.....	4,411,850	14.4

	1880.	Per Cent.
Total white population.....	42,402,979	86.5
Total colored.....	9,685,792	13.5

These and other tables given in the admirable paper show that the natural increase of "the white population has been slightly greater than the colored; that the white population, native and foreign, has constantly gained upon the colored population; and that while the one has gained nearly six per cent. of the whole since 1790, the other has lost nearly six per cent.; and that in the last twenty years the whites have gained and the colored people have lost nearly one per cent."

In another table, grouping the late slave-holding States into two classes, those known as the Northern and border slave-holding States and the cotton and Gulf States, with Texas by itself, the reviewer deduces the following facts: "First. The whites in the whole South gain and the colored race lose 1.7 per cent. Second. In the border States the whites gain and the colored lose 2.7 per cent. Third. In Texas the whites gain and the colored lose 5.8 per cent. Fourth. In the six cotton and Gulf States the whites lose and the colored people gain 2.2 per cent."

Education in Louisiana.

We publish on our first page an account of the organization of the New Orleans Educational Society, with an address from the executive committee to the people of Louisiana. The high character of the gentlemen enlisted in the enterprise, and their manifested zeal for its success, augur well for the great cause of general education. Their address is worthy of study. The figures arrayed, giving the ratio of illiteracy and school attendance, are at once a humiliation and inspiration. We read with regret the statement that "Louisiana ranks third from the last among the States of the Union in the results of education." Whatever causes have conspired to produce such a result, the fact is a public danger, menacing and mortifying. We of course resent on the one hand the Pharisaic boast, and on the other the mandarin, patronizing commiseration, of those who live in more favored States and prate about our educational poverty. There are such, and the generation seems to be on the increase. It is not to be expected that with our thousands of illiterate blacks recently enfranchised, and a section bankrupted by war and in a condition of social and political chaos for years, that any of the Southern States should rank with the foremost in the results of education. That we have done thus much, under the circumstances and with our poverty, is cause for encouragement. But apologies and explanations do not remove or disprove the fact that nearly thirty-four per cent. of the total population of Louisiana, thirteen per cent. white and fifty-three per cent. colored, are unable to write. This picture is further shaded and saddened by the statement that the attendance upon the public schools of the State is less than twenty per cent. of the school population. This strangely small attendance is attributable to two causes—indifferent schools and the indifference of parents and guardians. Many more might attend during the short scholastic term. The fault is their own. But, on the other hand, the schools are very unsatisfactory. The available public fund for their maintenance last year was only thirty-one cents to each educable child. In 1882 some parishes reported "no schools for want of funds," while others had scholastic terms varying from one to three months only.

We approve and applaud the ringing address of the Educational Society. It is timely and patriotic, believing implicitly that illiteracy is the fruitful mother of vice and crime, we give our heart and hand to the most available agencies for its removal. Liberal appropriations of public money for this purpose, wisely administered, are the State's cheapest defense. Better educate the child than feed the pauper or punish the criminal.

The objects of the society are outlined in the address to which we call special and favorable attention.

Pistols—Let Them be Abolished.

"Last week the London police arrested a man named Wolff, a member of the Advanced Socialist Club, for having dangerous explosives concealed on his premises." On similar principles why should not the man who makes, sells, owns or carries a pistol be arrested? We have laws in most of the States forbidding men to carry pistols concealed. But is not such a law almost necessarily ineffectual? How is it to be known that a man has a concealed pistol? If he exhibits it, that act and its accompaniment usually constitute a graver offense than that of carrying a concealed weapon. So that the laws upon our statute books against carrying concealed weapons are almost wholly nugatory. Besides, the form of the pistol is intended to facilitate its concealment on one's person. It is also primarily intended to be used in killing men. All other uses of the pistol are incidental. It is an invention designed almost exclusively to facilitate the killing of human beings. The evil of pistols is immensely great, and is almost without mitigating concomitants. It may be safely affirmed that if pistols were totally abolished the destruction of human life by firearms in times of peace would be diminished by at least one-half. If the use of ardent spirits as a beverage were discontinued, pistols remaining, perhaps seven-tenths of the criminal killings would be prevented. If both pistols and drinking saloons were abolished we may reasonably estimate that unjustifiable homicides would be diminished by nine-tenths of the number now daily occurring in our land. Of the two great evils just mentioned the saloon is unsceptible of by far the stronger defense. Faith in the virtue and varied uses of whisky is hereditary, widespread and sincere. Pistols have scarcely a plausible excuse for their existence. As a weapon of defense they are at once a sham and a snare. One pistol has rarely, if ever, been known to carry the ball of another, while a pistol in one man's hand has in thousands of instances provoked or excused a deadly fire from a pistol in the hand of another. It can scarcely be questioned that in the large majority of deaths from pistol shots the real or supposed possession of a pistol by the person shot is the cause of his being killed. Few men will shoot a person known to be unarmed. As to pistols being a defense against robbers, few ideas are more delusive, since a robber must in every instance be supposed to have such advantage of his victim that his possession of a pistol would only furnish excuse for killing before robbing him.

The existence of pistols under our present laws is a great wrong to good and law-abiding citizens, since the liberty and life of every man who obeys the law forbidding the carrying of concealed weapons are at the mercy of any who choose to carry them in violation of law. Thus the law works actual injustice to the best citizens. The pistol is a dastardly weapon, invented for concealment and murder. Let it be driven from the pales of civilization. Let it be abolished forever. No man ought to be blamed for having one so long as any other man may have one. Let every man having one be fined one thousand dollars or imprisoned six months, or both, at the discretion of the court, and let ten dollars reward be paid to any one pointing out a pistol and its owner. Let the shortest lawful firearm be three feet long. The pistol is a reproach to our civilization and an enemy to the lives and liberties of our best citizens. Let all good men unite, by all proper means, to drive it from the earth.

We are glad to find, in the recent message of the Governor of Mississippi, a strong recommendation looking to the suppression of this form of firearms. The great State of Tennessee has prohibited their use and sale within its borders, and the Supreme Court of the State sustained the law declaring that while the right to bear arms is constitutional a State has the authority to regulate the form of weapons, and thereby the manner of carrying them. There is really so little good and so much evil in pistols that there should be no hesitancy about abolishing them. Even toy pistols do a great deal of harm, not only in preparing the way for the use of more deadly forms of the instrument, but by explosions and accidental shooting of the holder or of his companions. Scarcely a day passes on which the newspapers do not report dangerous or fatal injuries from the accidental misuse of pistols. The public mind of the day looks to the entire suppression of pistols, and it is to be hoped that the day is not far distant when they will be utterly and universally abolished.

W. L. C. H.

Brief Sketch and Golden Wedding of Bishop Pierce.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me a little space for a personal sketch and the announcement of an event which does not often occur in the history of men.

I have passed my threescore and ten. That I am growing old is a fact of the calendar rather than of consciousness. I know it, but do not feel it, as one would suppose. The pains and infirmities of age are yet to come, if come they must. I thank God I am not superannuated. To me this is a great blessing. God be praised.

I was converted in my sixteenth year. Well nigh co-existent with it was my call to preach. The settlement of this question I held in abeyance till I had gone through college, secretly hoping that the conviction of duty would wear out and pass away. When the time for decision came I was reluctant—nay, rebellious. Verily, I had a fearful struggle. But I surrendered, absolutely, unreservedly. If ever a man had a victory over self, nature, ambition, the world, I had it. The battle has never been renewed. The enemy was slain. There has been no looking back, no regrets, no pining of spirit. I am content, and have been all along through a ministry of fifty-four years. Now, if I could repeat my life I would renew my consecration.

I left all to follow Christ, and I wish gratefully to record that he redeemed every word of promise to me. My life has been one of self-denial and close economy, but have never suffered. Accepting Christ's teaching, I have lived like the lilies and the birds, by the providence of my heavenly Father.

I was born February 3, 1811. On that day, 1834, I was twenty-three years old; the next day, the fourth, I married. The birthday is at hand again, and "the golden wedding." My wife and I had determined on a quiet, private recognition of the event, but our children insisted upon a more formal celebration. Our son, our only son, claims the privilege of entertaining us at his house on the night of February 4. It will be a family reunion. Four daughters with their husbands, my son and his wife, thirty grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. I hope my two brothers, James and Thomas, with their families, will be present. Some remote kin may also be on hand. The house is not mine, and the tribe is too large to allow a much larger invitation of guests. Nevertheless we shall be glad to see all who choose to honor us with their presence. Bridal presents were not the fashion when we were married. Nor do we expect them now. If, however, Florida will send us a box of oranges, Virginia a bucket of oysters, and Georgia will furnish us cigars then the other States and the rest of mankind may do as they please—nothing if they like.

By way of apology let me say that numerous friends have urged me to make this announcement. There will be no cards, "no hop," but a simple, rational Christian entertainment, commemorative of a long wedded life.

Heaven prepare us all for the great marriage supper of the Lamb.

G. F. PIERCE.
SEASHORE, Jan. 9, 1884.
—Boston Christian Advocate.

Brazil and China.

A letter from Rev. J. J. Ransom, December 14, gives the following items of cheer:

I have a fact that ought to quicken the pulse of the church toward our Rio College enterprise. Yesterday a Brazilian handed me 500 milreis, at two milreis per dollar, equal to $250 United States money—which goes down as the first contribution toward the college foundation. This liberal giver desires to remain unknown, but I may say that all the circumstances of the case are such that I shed tears over the gift. May God bless this beginning.

To-day a member of our church handed me an envelope containing 50 milreis, a contribution toward the organ which, at my suggestion, the Rio City Church is to present to the San Paulo City Church. Said Mr. Kennedy: "If I have ever seen it (a more liberal congregation than ours here) I did not know it."

Respectfully,
J. J. RANSOM.

A letter from Soochow, China, reports:

The Chinese in Shanghai have given over $650 to the hospital at Soochow, the foreigners over $850, making $1,500; receipts from hospital last month, $50. Pretty good beginning, don't you think? Four generals and two high mandarins, with quite a number of inferior mandarins, have shown interest in the hospital by calling to look through.

Annual Meeting of the Board of Missions.

At a meeting of the Board of Missions, and after mature consideration, it was agreed to hold our annual meeting during the first week in April, beginning on Wednesday, the second, at nine o'clock A. M.

HOUSTON, A. YOUNG, Sec.
MISSION ROOMS, Jan. 10, 1884.

BISHOPS' ANNUAL MEETING.

Upon consultation the annual meeting of the Bishops will be held on Monday, March 31, at nine o'clock A. M., at their room in the Southern Methodist Publishing House.

GEO. F. PIERCE.

The Primitive Methodists have opened a new chapel at Epworth.

The missionary anniversary of the Florida Conference reached the handsome sum of near one thousand dollars. Well done, fairer hand of flowers.

The Princess of Wales has opened a subscription to construct and endow an English Church in Copenhagen. A large sum has already been raised.

Granby Street Church, Norfolk, Va., Rev. Dr. Stead, pastor, has already "cleared the decks." On a recent Sabbath $8,000 was raised for church extension, missions and other objects. The Richmond Advocate entitles it "Pitching the Tune."

Bishop Kavanaugh yet abides with us in the Crescent City. He preached at Felicity Street on Sunday last. Before returning to Kentucky he will visit Ocean Springs, Mobile, and Columbus, Miss. His stay among us has been greatly enjoyed.

Rev. Thomas Harrison, the "boy preacher," has commenced revival meetings in Centenary Methodist Church, St. Louis, Rev. Dr. Tudor, pastor. His first service attracted an immense audience. He prophesied a wonderful revival, such as St. Louis has never enjoyed. We pray it may be so.

After a little "speck of war" Dr. J. J. Newman, a local Methodist preacher, is to remain pastor of the Madison Avenue Congregational Church in New York City. He had better return to the itinerant ranks and do the work assigned him, "not mending, but keeping our rules for conscience sake."

In referring to the calamity that befell Dr. C. C. Andrews at Vicksburg, Miss., in the burning of his house and the bare escape of his family with their lives, the New York Christian Advocate concludes: "The doctor was one of the prominent Southern delegates to the Ecumenical Conference."

We call attention to the new advertisement of the Illinois Central railroad, "The Great Jackson Route." Through Pullman sleepers are now run from New Orleans to Memphis, in addition to Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago. For safety, quick time and reliable connections commend us to the "Big J." Rates as low as the lowest.

We acknowledge the pleasure of calls at our office from Dr. J. M. Reid, Missionary secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Dr. A. J. Kymett, Church Extension secretary, and Dr. J. C. Hartzell, assistant secretary of the Freedman's Aid Society. They are attending the Louisiana Conference, now in session in this city.

We join with the Western Christian Advocate in commending the spirit of the young lady, a member of the Baptist Church in New Jersey, who refused an offer of $1,500 a year to sing in a Unitarian Church because she would not lend assistance in that way to those who not only deny the divinity of our Lord, but are teaching others to deny it.

A note from Rev. J. J. Lovett, at Moss Point, Miss., under date of January 22, reports the death of Sister Calhoun, widow of the late Rev. C. W. Calhoun, leaving six children doubly orphaned. At the recent session of the Mississippi Conference a memorial service was held in honor of Mrs. Calhoun, who had died during the year. The separation was not long. They are together in the Father's house.

Bishop Wilson, says the Richmond Advocate, made about ninety changes in the appointments at the session of the North Carolina Conference. Whereupon the Arkansas Methodist remarks that Bishop Granbery did some of the same kind of work in the Arkansas Conference. "But when preachers were returned to the fields of labor they occupied the year before." The set time for a general shaking up seemed to have come.

We notice that a son of the Rev. Dr. Cunningham Geike, rector of the Church of England at Barnstable, and well known as the author of "The Life and Words of Christ," was converted recently and joined the Bedford Street Methodist Church in New York City. Whenever a man really "gets religion" he seeks a place where he will find spiritual communion. And whenever a Methodist begins to backslide he contemplates changing his church relation.

Louisiana Conference.

CHURCH EXTENSION APPORTIONMENT FOR 1884.

New Orleans district	$573 75
Bell district	255 00
Shreveport district	274 25
Shreveport district	274 25
Alexandria district	152 50
Opelousas district	216 25
Total	$1,766 00

CHAS. P. EVANS, Sec. L. Conf.

Conference Brotherhood.

MR. EDITOR: During the late session of our Conference we organized the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood, on the mutual insurance plan; except the officers are not paid. We have at present about seventy members. We expect to get a charter during the present session of the Legislature. Any brother in the Annual Conference may become a member of the brotherhood by sending his name and postoffice to Rev. I. W. Cooper, Benton, Miss., with ten cents initiation fee. At the death of any member of the brotherhood the secretary will give notice of the death, making a mortuary assessment of five dollars, to be paid within thirty days. If any member should fail to pay the assessment within sixty days he will have forfeited his membership. We wish every one in the Mississippi Conference to become a member. "All desiring membership will please forward name and postoffice to Bro. Cooper, stating to whom the money shall be paid in case of death."

W. D. DOMINICK, SECRETARY, MISS., Jan. 10, 1884.

Church Dedication.

MR. EDITOR: The new church at State Line, Miss., was dedicated the first Sunday in January, 1881, in happy coincidence with the celebration of the centennial of organized Methodism in these United States. But for the severity of the weather the house would not have held the audience expected. Rev. James A. Godfrey, presiding elder of the Meridian district, preached the dedicatory sermon.

The Methodists at State Line have cause to rejoice over their success in the erection of so elegant a house. Without a dollar of debt upon the building, they make a fine beginning for the new year. Capt. B. B. Rich, Jesse Byrd, T. J. Hood, L. M. R. Knobles, and the builder, Bro. Rockwell, and other generous souls deserve the prayers and thanks of the church and community for the work so well executed. May many souls be born at this consecrated altar.

J. W. H.

This from the Central Christian Advocate:

"Ten Cents Admission," posted on the gate of a camp meeting ground, has stirred some old-fashioned Methodist into a not very successful attempt at poetry, from which, nevertheless, we quote the last two verses:

"To Greenland's icy mountains,
To India's coral strand,
To Africa's sunny fountains,
And every heathen land,
We send a free salvation,
The gospel truth proclaimed,
So that every heathen nation
May learn Messiah's name."
"But in Allegheny's mountains,
In this enlightened land,
The golden calf is worshiped,
Made by Aaron's priestly hand;
And under the gospel fountain
A fence is built up high,
You pay ten cents admission,
Or stay away and die."

Important to Ministers.

The following circular has been issued by our neighbor, the Picayune:

NEW ORLEANS PICAYUNE.

(Established January 26, 1837.)

Reverend Sir: Your attention is asked to the fact that we have an established rule giving all ministers of the gospel, for their own use, the daily and weekly issues of the Picayune at one-half of the regular rates. Should you wish to receive either of these issues we will be happy to place you on our list upon the receipt of the price specified: Daily, (seven papers a week) one year (regular rate $12) to you $6; six months (regular rate $6) to you $3. Weekly, one year (regular rate $2) to you $1.

Remit by postoffice money order or registered letter to Nicholson & Co., New Orleans, La.

Sample copies of the paper sent free on application.

The Southern Cultivator Free.

All old subscribers by paying up in full to date, and two years' subscription in advance, will receive the Cultivator free for one year, postage prepaid. We will also send the Cultivator free for one year to all new subscribers paying two years' subscription in advance. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters. This is a fine opportunity to secure the only first-class agricultural paper published in the South free for one year.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

Books and Periodicals.

IRENEUS. By James Strong, S. T. D., LL.D., professor in Drew Theological Seminary. New York: Phillips & Hunt, 1883. Price, $1.

We are indebted to the publishers for this excellent and timely volume. It is an admirable series of essays, showing the agreement between Science and the Bible; Nature and the Supernatural; The Divine and the Human in Scripture; The Old and the New Testament; and Calvinism and Arminianism, and Divine Benevolence and Endless Punishment. Dr. Strong is a great scholar of vast and varied learning. As one of the editors of McClintock & Strong's Cyclopedia he has an enduring place in sacred literature. We commend this able volume to all our readers.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE RESURRECTION. Edited, Historical and Scientific, by Rev. H. J. Cooke, M. A. New York: Phillips & Hunt, Price, $1.50.

This book seems to have been inspired by Bishop Foster's "Beyond the Grave," and in some sense a reply to it. As far as we have examined we have no hesitancy in pronouncing it a work of the highest merit and a rich contribution to that doctrinal discussion. The Rev. Dr. Dan. McWhedon, who writes the introduction, thus commends it: "It is the first brilliant brochure of a young author, and so far as we know, the completest treatise in our language on the subject." That is high praise from so distinguished a scholar.

THE METHODIST CENTENNIAL YEAR-BOOK FOR 1884. THE ONE HUNDREDTH YEAR OF THE SEPARATE EXISTENCE OF AMERICAN METHODISM. Edited by W. H. Deery, D. D. New York: Phillips & Hunt. Price, $1.

We made commendatory mention of this valuable volume last week. It is full of facts and figures for centenary speeches.

Little's Living Age begins its one hundredth and sixtieth volume in January. Foreign periodical literature is expected to grow both in extent and importance; and The Living Age, which presents with satisfactory freshness and completeness the best of this literature, can not fail to become more and more valuable to its readers.

The first weekly number of the new volume has the following table of contents: The Literature of Seven Days, National Review; Wrexall's Memoirs, Temple Bar; In the Wrong Paradise, Fortnightly Review; The Baby's Grandmother, a story, Blackwood's Magazine; A Florentine Tradesman's Diary, Saturday Review; The Clerical Class in Scotland, Spectator; together with choice poetry and miscellany. This, the first number of the new volume, is a good one with which to begin a subscription. Little & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

The Century Magazine, for February, is a capital number. In variety and character of illustrations no previous issue has so fully equaled it. The frontispiece is superb; the "Head of a Man," by Rembrandt. The article on "Lieut. General Sheridan," by Gen. Badeau, will be read with pleasure by all who are fond of war literature. "Marion in America" is full of facts necessary to be known by all sheep raisers, and is richly illustrated. In addition to another installment of his interesting novel "Dr. Sevier," Mr. George W. Cable contributes a paper on "The Convict Lease System in the Southern States." The "Pope of the Times" is discussed by the editor, as fresh and forcible. The Century Company, Union Square, New York.

St. Nicholas, for February, is on our table. The frontispiece, "A Midwinter Night," is beautiful and very suggestive of the past few weeks, even in this sunny South. Louis M. Alcott, Clara Erskine Clement, Margaret Olney and other popular writers contribute to this excellent number. St. Nicholas is one of the very best of periodicals for young people. Price, per annum, $3; single number, twenty-five cents. The Century Company, No. 33 East Seventeenth street, New York.

Harper's Magazine, for February, is an excellent number in both its literary and artistic features. The opening paper is a description of the Upper Thames, accompanied by ten beautiful and picturesque illustrations. The article, "A Winter in Canada," is a fine study of Canadian country life. The two serial novels, William Blackstone and "The Story of a Soldier," by Henry W. Dole, Resident Secretary, are a commanding interest. The editorial departments are well sustained. Harper & Bros., New York.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.—We take pleasure in calling the attention of our numerous patrons to this great insurance institution, and to the fact that the terms of insurance are very moderate. The premiums charged are very moderate. Hon. Henry V. Ogden, Resident Secretary, and the other resident officers, are gentlemen of the strictest integrity. We heartily commend this great Corporation to all our friends who have property to insure. Their office is located, corner of Canal and Gravier Streets, opposite the Cotton Exchange.

A young lady from the rural district entered a shop the other day and asked for a pair of stockings. The clerk politely asked her what number she wore. "Why, two, of course! Do you suppose I am a centipede, or have got a wooden leg?"

We call attention to the advertisement of J. C. Morris in this issue. Every article advertised will be found in the Advocate in every respect. Mr. E. P. Mackle will be found in charge of the office, and will give personal attention to all orders.

A charity bowl—"Gimme ten cents for buy or loaf or bread with."

The attention of our readers has doubtless been attracted to the voluminous card of Messrs. W. A. H. Burpee & Co., seed growers, of Philadelphia, Pa., who appear in our pages. The card is a masterpiece of the art in its manifestation this season by the offer of cash prizes, on a competitive basis, open to all who may choose to enter. Read their advertisement. The honorable record maintained by this firm entitles them to the attention of all who may be interested in farm and garden products.

Spicer says that "The buzz saw does business with corlons people in an off hand way."

When I hear a noisy infidel proclaiming his unbelief, I wonder if he will sell for sum brotherly love, and if he will, I guess this will be more likely to send for the orthodox man who engineers the little brick church just around the corner.

"Have you brought your gimlet with you?" "No, Johnny," said Mrs. Yeger. "Why, you mean I asked you, 'I don't want a gimlet, except I heard you say you were coming up this evening to bore us all.'"

The most popular nerve tonic in the world is Dr. Richmond's Serravallo's Tonic. "Fits rendered my daughter deaf, dumb and paralyzed, Serravallo's Tonic cured her." Peter Hogg, Springfield, Wis. At Druggists.

A twelve-year old student of philosophy and theology in a good pastor's household thus suggested to his parents, who were sharply reproving a child: "Papa, didn't that baby inherit Adam's sin, and isn't that of his parents? Is the square inch of his little body, and so is he made to square for not resting."

Read advertisement in this issue concerning the Oiler Cotton.

My dear Mrs. Sholly, what do you think of Mrs. Sholly's conversation? "Oh! it is very bright. She has no power at all."

COLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF TONIC imparts strength (quickly) and builds, takes no other food.

Toward the close of summer in New York State the minister passed one of his people off his duty to make a "dry day for corn." "O, Mr. Johnson," said he, "a fine dry day for corn." "Yes, pastor; but death on the wheat." "Next day it was raining, and the minister drove by." "Splendid day for wheat, Mr. Johnson." "Ah, yes," with a groan; "but death on the corn!"

CONSUMPTION CURED.—An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has decided to offer it for sale to the suffering fellow. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, containing this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Foster's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

"Have I seen Paddy O'Brien," sez you? "No, I have not; but the other day on the shore, I think I saw that Paddy O'Brien beyond that sea. And Paddy thinks as how it's me he sees across the water, when we come up with each other, we don't say a word of it."

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP cures obnoxious diseases of the skin.

A grave-digger, walking the streets the other day, chanced to turn and noticed two doctors walking behind him. He stopped till they passed, and then followed on behind them. "And who they?" said they. "I know my place in the procession," returned he.

If you have diseased lungs, take HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. It's TONIC AND BRONCHIAL CURE is one to rely on.

When asked what she had for dinner, she replied "cold roast." And he looked by her manner that there would be some of it left for supper.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner, tea and breakfast sets, $4.00. "Moss rose tea sets, $4.50. Moss rose dinner sets, $1.50."

"I am so glad I don't like beans," said Mrs. Lareford, of Chicago, who, visiting in New York, found that she should not like them, but she thought that would be very disagreeable."

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street New Orleans, is prepared to supply plans and organs on the most liberal terms. Write to him for his prices and catalogues. You need not join for North for languages of a questionable character when you can get good articles never bought at all prices. Mr. Werlein's house is well known in all foreign fair and honorable dealings. Plans of the most celebrated factories are kept. Chickering, Weber, Malmshank, Hale, Hardman, Werlein and every instrument guaranteed to last a great number of years. Organs: Mason & Hamlin, Bay State, Chickering & Sons, and every low price. If you would send your order to Philip Werlein you will be satisfied and pleased with your trade. Made or any musical article to be had.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

M. E. B.—They all say so that have tried them: "Champion Monitor" cooking stove—Most Even Bakers.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or not.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed: Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails, has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Business Notices.

QUERO'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for cough, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary consumption, and general debility. This is a pure, bland and delicious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured than in any other form. It is a single teaspoonful of this Jelly will double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TITUS, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

AND GLOBE

INSURANCE COMPANY.

Office, Cor. Carondelet and Gravier Streets. DIRECTORS IN NEW ORLEANS.

J. F. SCHROEDER, Chairman.

Newton Luckner, A. Delville, Rodolpho Worster, Agents in the United States. $5,514,762.12 Surplus over all liabilities. $2,546,385.12

HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.

JULIUS P. ROUX, Assistant Resident Secretary.

CLARENCE F. LOW, Deputy Assistant Resident Secy.

WOODEN AND WILLOW WARE,

Cordage, Demijohns, Paper,

Tinware, Twines.

Ammonium, Glassware, Axes, Grates, Hops, Hides and Buts, Hat Ties, Cheese Scales, Coffee Mills, Crayons, Curry Combs, Cutlery, Furnaces, Fish Hooks and Lines, etc., etc.

J. C. MORRIS

40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas Street.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Blind and Door

Illinois Central Railroad.

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight to All Points.

NORTH, EAST AND WEST.

THE ONLY LINE RUNNING PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MEMPHIS AND CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF TRAINS.

ONLY ONE CHANGE TO NEW YORK AND EAST-RIVER CITIES.

THE ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO AND ALL PORTS NORTH AND WEST. Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line.

STANDARD GAUGE, ALL STEEL RAILS, ELEGANT COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, AND QUICK TIME.

SPEED, COMFORT, SAFETY.

RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST.

On and after Sunday, May 27, 1883, DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calhoun Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE: Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

ARRIVE: Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

Exp. No. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58,

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with numerous small, dark spots scattered across its surface, which are characteristic of foxing or dust. A faint horizontal line is visible near the bottom edge of the page. The overall tone is a light, off-white or cream color.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 6.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1436.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. FELIX R. HILL.

REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.

REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.

REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. SCHULZ, D. D.

REV. W. P. BARTON.

REV. J. D. CAMERON.

ARISE IN ME.

BY MAMIE GIBSON.

Arise in me, a dark, unpolished vase,
Wherein no form nor comeliness I trace;
This heart of mine—thy light illumined these Makes the poor vessel radiant and fair.

Arise in me, my love, a fountain sealed,
To other hearts no blessedness may yield;
Thine own outpoured, and lo! my scanty store
Flows on in streams of healing evermore.

Arise in me, my life, a withered vine,
Wherein no purple clusters richly shine;
Thy perfect life infuses strength and grace,
Thine life my vineyard life may find a place.

Arise in me, Oh, Lord, a human heart,
In utter darkness sitting far apart;
From out its light—no cries aloud to thee:
Light of the world abide in me!

Arise in me, a human soul, to all De human insufficiency, the call
To life divine receives, and answers thee—
Oh, Christ, alone the life, abide in me!

Arise in me, no shall this life of thine,
With all its beauty and joy be mine;
And from my weakness lift me to thy side,
Henceforth with thee, my Saviour, to abide.

—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

Some Aspects of the Itinerant System.

BY REV. J. H. WALKER, D. D.

It no doubt requires more versatility, sturdiness and adaptability than the ordinary pastor has, to be acceptable and useful in the same church for a considerable term of years; hence the justification and wisdom of our itinerant system. This system, however, involves many sacrifices and discomforts on the part of our ministry. It requires the constant breaking up of social ties—the formation of new friendships, the rendering of new friends, the difficult education of children, and does not seem most favorable to our children's social and business prospects. It is an expensive system—so many moves, each one involving losses which must be borne either by pastor or people. Some of these discounts incident to our system could be reduced and modified by the building of comfortable parsonages, substantially furnishing them, and putting in them a library of most useful books of reference, such as commentaries, general encyclopedias and biblical encyclopedias, dictionaries, and the like. Another good thing for preachers and people would be the establishment of Methodist schools (not colleges) in all our considerable centers of population. These needed improvements would greatly soften and render more tolerable the itinerant life, and keep in the regular workmen of experience and influential character—a consummation devoutly to be desired.

The itinerant system has worked well, has achieved great and excellent results, and we should do what we can to conserve and perpetuate the system. The itinerant idea does not necessarily involve frequent changes, but the power and the willingness to make these changes as often as may be found needful for the best results. There are peculiar drawbacks to the system against which ministers and people will do well to guard. For example, frequent changes are not most favorable to regularity of study. Continuity and regularity of study are broken into. Men who expect to be changed are tempted to feel that constant mental growth and constant study are not necessary, and hence are in danger of making no intellectual advance and of continuing in the mediocre position, growing duller and less interesting as years roll by.

But I think, perhaps, the greatest danger to the system is the harm it may do to the laity, unless it is watched and prayerfully guarded against. The natural tendency would seem to cultivate "itching ears" and desire for novelty. The system seems to teach too much reliance upon preachers, and to expect them to accomplish all results by them rather than by increased efforts on their own part. We have sometimes heard it expressed on this wise: If the Sunday-school does not seem to prosper, but rather languish, the officers and teachers do not say, "Our remedy is increased activity out of the school, and in the school to gather in wandering children and make its sessions more interesting and attractive to the scholars." No! But, "We must have a preacher more in sympathy with the Sunday-school, and who knows how to talk to the children and draw in the young."

If the congregation does not grow, hold its own, but is falling off, the people often, do not say: "We must visit more. We must look up more church-goers and invite and bring them to church. We must notice and call attention to the good points of our pastor. We must all be constantly at church, and thus endeavor and encourage our pastor's efforts." No! But this: "We must have a new preacher; some man whose sensational manner will draw hearers, or some man of strong health and active habits who will visit much, and by his social qualities win men from their homes to the pews of the church."

If the stewards find that they are falling back in meeting current expenses, they do not generally say: "We must try to improve our financial plans. We must make greater efforts to educate our people to more liberality and promptness. We must give more prompt and earnest personal attention to the great interest committed to us." No! But: "We must have a more popular preacher—not only a pastor, but a financier as well—who will devise new and better methods of finance, and may, with the help of two or three active young men as his aids, work his plans and save us the time and care of this business."

If the church is in debt, or a new one needs to be built, generally a "new preacher" is the solution, and not a proposition for greater diligence and liberality on the part of the church.

Now, we submit the educative tendency of all this is unfortunate, almost paralyzing. There is not that development of Christian zeal and activity that there ought to be. The pastors have duties personal, great and imperative which may not be discharged by proxies, and this is true of the laity, especially those who hold responsible positions. No doubt the true idea is that pastor and his flock should be co-workers; neither expecting the other to do their work. Let not the laity think that the remedy for failure lies always in a "new preacher," or that any kind of a preacher, no matter how greatly or variously gifted, can relieve them of their responsibilities. "For every man shall bear his own burden." Let pastors do all directions what they can. Let them not excuse themselves by saying: "I shall not trouble myself. I will be changed and be in a new and may be better suited, field next year." No, let us rather make the best of our present field. It may be our last. Resolve on success, and you are far more apt to achieve it.

We say our system has these perils to pastors and people, and we should watch and see to it that we do not fall into these temptations incident to the working of the itinerant plan.

Wesley Leaving Savannah.

EXTRACT FROM FORTHCOMING HISTORY OF METHODISM, BY BISHOP M'YRE.

The door at last seems to be open for converting the Indians. Ingham, after making the beginning of a grammar and a vocabulary of the Muskogee language, has gone to England for laborers at John Wesley's request. Oglethorpe tried to get Charles to return. John meant to stay, and was arranging for his sister, Kezzy, to come out and keep house for him. Whitefield was preparing to come to his help. "A man's heart deviseth his way," but the Lord directeth his steps. As Wesley came to America, so he left it, "contrary to all preceding resolutions." In four weeks from the date of the above letter, he had left Georgia forever.

Wesley's excessive severity made enemies, and they found occasion to avenge themselves in an affair connected with one of his parishioners, Miss H—. It seems he thought of proposing marriage to her; but Delamotte warned him, and the Moravians advised him "to proceed no further in the matter." Wesley answered: "The will of the Lord be done." The lady's uncle, Causton, of bad record, and then in brief authority, "some time afterward hatched up indictments—ten bills, some civil and some ecclesiastical—against him. Wesley was prepared to answer, and moved for an immediate hearing; but the court evaded his request. From September 1, when the indictments were first presented, to the end of November, when Wesley made known his intention to return to England, he seems to have turned not fewer than seven different sittings of the court, asking to be tried on the matters over which it had jurisdiction, but denying its right to take cognizance of the ecclesiastical offenses alleged. Thus harassed and obstructed—power being in the hands of his enemies, and he unable and they unwilling to reach an issue—he gave notice of leaving, and left. This was what they wanted. The chief power in Oglethorpe's absence, came to disgrace and grief in a twelve-month, being turned out of his offices. The enemies of Wesley and of Methodism have sedulously endeavored, but in vain, to fix a blot upon him in this matter.

The Creeks or Muskogees, the Choctaws and Chickasaws, the Uchees and Cherokees, dwelt in the country lying between the thin strip of white settlements on the Atlantic and Gulf coast and the Mississippi river. They were shy of the white man; but Wesley lost no opportunity of seeing and interviewing them and their occasional representatives—of hearing, through translators, of their numbers, customs and worship; what he saw and heard doubtless mollified his views, but did not abate his desire for the conversion of the Indians. He died without the sight. Methodism was to be honored of God in giving the gospel and a Christian civilization to the Indians, but not then. Its instruments were not ready. Its Pentecost had not come. By a way that Wesley knew not God would bring it about; and in less than a century Methodist preachers would have schools among those very tribes in which Indian children would be learning the Wesleyan Catechism, and thousands of Indian members under their pastoral care would make the western wilds rejoice as in their own language, they sang Wesleyan hymns.

The vision was not granted the missionary, and he left his friends sad. He himself was saddest of all, for his mission seemed a failure. These are his reflections on his way back to England:

Many reasons I have to bless God for my having been carried to America, contrary to all my preceding resolutions. Heretofore, I trust, he has in some measure blunted me and proved me. Hereby I have been taught to be ready of heart. Heretofore God has given me to know many of his servants, particularly those of the Church of Heretofore. Heretofore my passage is open to the writings of holy men in the German, Spanish and Italian tongues. All in Georgia have heard the word of God, and some have believed and begun to follow. A few steps have been taken toward publishing the glad tidings both to the African and American heathens. Many children have learned how they ought to serve God and to be useful to their neighbor. And those whom I most concern have an opportunity of knowing that a firmer foundation of peace and happiness to many generations.

When Whitefield arrived in Georgia, a reaction had taken place, and he wrote: "The good Mr. Wesley has done in America is inexpressible. His name is very precious among the people, and he has laid a foundation that I hope neither men nor devils will ever be able to shake. O that I may follow him as he followed Christ!" John Wesley's latest and best historian thus concludes the account: "Who could have imagined that, in one hundred and thirty years, this huge wilderness would be transformed into one of the greatest nations upon earth? and that the Methodist began at Savannah would pervade the continent and, ecclesiastically considered, become the mightiest power existing?"

Anniversaries at Conference.

There is the time-honored anniversary of the Conference Board of Missions, the anniversary of the Conference Board of Church Extension and the anniversary of the Ministerial Educational Association which sometimes gets in for a night, though not always, important as it is. At the late session of the Mississippi Conference, in Natchez, one night was given to the Centenary meeting, and the Ministerial Educational Association was crowded out and had to hold a very unsatisfactory meeting in the afternoon of Monday, December 17, 1883.

What I want to say in this connection is, these anniversaries are getting too numerous to be held at night during our Conference sessions. They occupy too much time that ought to be devoted to preaching. Preaching the gospel is our great business in the world, and our Conference sessions ought to be made occasions of spiritual power in the line of our work. It is due to the people who have opened their doors and their hearts to entertain us, and it would be immensely profitable to the young ministers in firing their hearts for the work to which they have just consecrated themselves.

But how can these anniversaries at night be dispensed with? It would be but little trouble to otherwise provide for the Ministerial Educational Association and the Board of Church Extension—but will it do to touch the missionary anniversary? The very suggestion of such a thing may make some zealous brethren raise their hands in holy horror. Nevertheless I make the suggestion and undertake to maintain that it would be better, all things considered, to dispense with the usual Saturday night missionary anniversary.

The Discipline provides that the presiding elder shall bring the subject of missions prominently before the Quarterly Conferences of each circuit and station, and see to it that efficient and well-declined modes and plans be adopted for raising missionary funds. Let this be done in the first place. It also provides that the Conference Board of Missions shall arrange for holding anniversary meetings within the several presiding elders' districts of the Conference in the interest of foreign missions. Let this be done in the second place. Then if all our pastors would preach on the subject of missions, and circulate missionary literature—"turn on the light," as Dr. Young would say—our people will be tuned up to their duty in this matter and the assessments will become what they ought to be—the minimum, and not the maximum of our missionary offerings.

Then comes "missionary day" at Conference, when the various methods of the most successful collectors are brought out, compared and discussed, and a thrilling address is delivered by a connectional officer, if present. Now, what I maintain is that this is the time, above all others, for the missionary anniversary. A report from the secretary and treasurer of the Board, a collection and the election of officers for the ensuing year would chime in most harmoniously with the spirit of the hour. I remember with pleasure "missionary day" in Crystal Springs, December 1882. After Dr. Kelley's speech Bro. Carradine suggested a thank offering, and $344 was the prompt response. The tide was high and the occasion auspicious. Why not repeat this every year, and let it suffice for the annual collection at Conference? The churches with which our Conferences are held, as a rule, pay up all their assessments, and they are at considerable expense in entertaining the Conference. Hence the money raised on these anniversary occasions comes mainly from the ministers. They are more likely to be out in force and to be in full sympathy with the occasion on "missionary day" than on Saturday night. Then a missionary sermon delivered some night during Conference, say from the night before "missionary day," from a text, and not followed by a collection, would do more good to both preachers and people than any other address, by whomsoever delivered, that every body understands are designed for immediate effect. As for the Saturday night missionary anniversary, they are losing their efficiency as means of raising missionary money. I know that some of our preachers avoid them, and I know that many of the people look upon them with disfavor. There is significance in the following extract from Dr. Young's letter to the Nashville Advocate and the Advocate of Missions in regard to our late Conference in Natchez: "The church building must have been planned by the great-souled Dr. Watkins. It is large and substantial every way. Yet, except on Saturday night, the people filled and crowded it every service." (Italics mine.) Why was it not filled and crowded on Saturday night? Dr. Johnson and Dr. Young were on the programme, and they were orators whom the people everywhere are eager to hear. It was the anniversary of the Conference Board of Missions, and it was understood that the collection would be the main thing that night.

Let us relegate this whole matter to "missionary day," and on Saturday night, and on every other night during Conference, have a sermon and a charge upon the enemy. Let us go to Conference praying for a fresh baptism of the Spirit upon the pulpit and the pew. Let these appointed to preach deliver their message in the demonstration of the Spirit and the power. And let us expect the conversion of sinners and the uplifting of the church in the line of our work. Our Conference holds its sessions as the result of our conviction. Then we can return to our loved employ with new zeal and power after these annual gatherings to push forward the victories of the cross. A genuine Conference revival would be reproduced all over our territory with great power for good.

W. B. LEWIS.
CRYSTAL SPRINGS, MISS., JAN. 15, 1884.

Letter from Dr. Cottrell.

Ever since leaving Louisville, in October, have purposed to communicate through the ADVOCATE with many of my old-time friends who have assured me of interest in what I write; but the claim of the Courier-Journal is first for a consideration, and many other things have prevented.

I spent the week of the session of the North Alabama Conference in marking its deliberations. There was, indeed, some "Conference" of the brotherhood, especially on the question of blending the North Alabama Conference with the other Alabama Conference in patronage of the Southern University at Greensboro. Dr. Anderson West gave the proposition no quarter, but he was speaking against a foregone certainty of Conference agreement to the enterprise, so that nothing was expected of his speech in result, saving the deliverance, in very plain terms, what he evidently thought and felt concerning the venture. One thing impressed itself very forcibly upon my mind as I listened to a leading member in reply to Dr. West. He had, as we supposed, taken down from the lips of his opponent the positions urged against the measure; but, singular to say, in nearly, if not quite, every point he misstated the positions. Dr. West endeavored to correct him, but he would hear to nothing of the sort, so I took it down from your own lips.

he vociferously urged, and went on his way with stentorian voice to answer what had not been said. I could but think how illustrative this is of no little in the way men think they prefer. They listen to themselves, and fancy it is the speaker they heed, and then afterward affirm that the speaker said what they thought as he spoke.

Last spring, in Montgomery, Ala., I gave, to an intelligent audience as could have been gathered in the State the lecture on "Discontented Ministers; or, the Philosophy of True Life." I was the guest of Hon. David Clifton, who presided and presented the lecturer on the occasion. After we returned from the lecture hall, I said to him: "Judge, I observed to-night that you listened closely to what I said, and, knowing the clearness of your apprehension and the closeness with which you are accustomed to listen at the bar, I'll take the liberty of asking you candidly to state if there was a word of the lecture in contradiction of what you understand to be our Methodist view of the Christian religion?"

He answered, promptly: "Not a word, sir, struck me as unobnoxious to such criticism."

He added, what was very grateful to me, his appreciation of the discussion. I took the liberty of thus asking on the score of his having been in the quarterly Conference that gave me license to preach and recommend for entrance into the traveling ministry. His mind is as clear as the water of little Lake Margaretta, just out of the window here, where my eye can glance at its beauty. I now write, and, being a devoted, active Methodist, alive to all the interests of the church, it has been no little satisfaction to me to set over his view against that of some who have been at pains to say their say in no furtherance of a proper understanding of what I claim as a cream of the best thinking of a lifetime.

Gov. Thomas H. Watts was good enough to write a critique of the same lecture, which appeared in the Courier-Journal, in which his commendation was without stint, and in which he declared the positions I took as "irrefragable." Col. John W. A. Sanford was pleased to utter himself in commendation, quite as unqualified, and he is known to rank with the foremost in ability and intelligence, as also in integrity of word. This statement is not made in any spirit of complaint against the few upon whose ear the lecture has struck differently; but merely that friends who have made inquiry of me may know that my own assurance of mind, that I verge not an iota from the line to which I am committed by profession and ordination, is not greater than that of the most competent men who have honored me by their audience. When Bishop Kavanaugh, on hearing me at Birmingham, grasped my hand in the aisle of the church, remarking: "I'm glad I heard you. They have misunderstood you. It is an important distinction you make between inspiration and revelation"—I felt that his generous and candid recognition was indemnity for what had from another source been not so grateful.

Now, I have undesignedly been betrayed into this statement, knowing that a great many readers of the ADVOCATE are not altogether indifferent to the status of any brother who assumes to speak upon the highest themes. "Take heed, how ye hear," was thought to be an injunction quite as important as any in regard to speaking.

Speaking of partial hearing, what is there more annoying than in any essay at converse of conference with another, you perceive a purpose sinister to gild the odds and ends of your little by-play of remark, as if gathering waste locks from your father's tongue, as a spindle, threats for a cord to throttle your reputation? I was recently so vividly impressed with this as the infirmity of a man, who has had opportunity seriously to affect others in their comfort and in that of their families, that a feeling kindred to distress came upon me, and I could but deplore such a mutilation, such a turn aside of the head, breaking the monotony of straight-forwardness in one otherwise qualified for great effectiveness. Such an annoyance is, if possible, more keenly allusive than that of petty purposefully picked and pertinaciously poked into places where it might just as well be considered as implied. When I sat at meat I relish sugar in my coffee; but if the host or hostess beset me on sweetness as to sprinkle my bacon and greens with sugar, it certainly may not be deemed as indicative of any irreverence or lightness that I take occasion to quote from the book, and say, "Salt is good!"

One is not under any necessity so far to recoil from religious cant as to go into profanity; yet between the two, were I compelled to choose, I would delay decision for a time. One whose intense subjectivity betrays him into running a monitorial role will naturally dash out after any game that may be flushed, and, whatever may be suspected of the wildness of him who flies or makes defensive light, the verdict will commonly be that the grander rascal is in the rear, or is the aggressor.

"Behold, I show unto you a more excellent way!" It is the way of generous forbearance, magnanimity and brotherly sympathy to which the Great Father has fashioned the human heart to respond. Localistic severity in self-assurance of personal prerogatives predicated of negative virtues have operated to enslave of manhood in many who, had they but been softened to a service in which the word "brotherhood" would embody and express the ideal, would have gleamed so sweetly in the firmament of God's kingdom of love as to give inspiration of repentance and renewal to many who for lack of just that have gone under in humiliation instead of rising by humility into reinstatement of honor. That is a giant power of which Jesus speaks, and which "works by love." It operates resurrection wonders.

—More on another line anon.

YACON, FLA., JAN. 15, 1884.

Letter from California.

MR. EDITOR: After leaving your city, on the second instant, we were eight days on the plains and deserts and among the mountains before we reached Visalia. I spent about three hours with Bro. Carter in El Paso. This is a growing and very promising mission station. Bro. Carter has fought his way up against great odds, and now has an excellent church building and a membership almost self-sustaining. He is in sad need of a parsonage, and any one wishing to invest money in such enterprises could do no better than to build or help build a parsonage for this charge.

We are delighted with our charge here. The brethren were expecting us and met us very kindly on our arrival, and soon had us comfortably quartered in a good parsonage, and the pantry furnished with all manner of good things. We have a good church building here. I found a happy state of feeling here among many of the members. During December a "holiness band" had visited the town, and by their labors revived and quickened the church, and many professed sanctification. There is a loud and of holiness here holding meetings in our church once a week composed of Southern and Northern Methodists, Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. Considerable interest is awakened on the subject. From all parts of this (Tulare) county comes the inquiry: "What does it mean?" The itinerant holiness band has gone to other parts of the State, quickening the churches of every denomination wherever they go. We have four churches in this town, viz: Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Presbyterian and Roman Catholic. The Southern Methodist Church is in the ascendancy. We are planning for a series of union meetings in the two Methodist and the Presbyterian Churches, and, if carried out, we look for glorious results. The ladies of our charge are making a movement to organize a women's missionary society—an almost unheard of thing in this country.

Visalia is situated in the midst of a beautiful, fertile, wooded valley. To the east some thirty or forty miles are the Sierra Nevada Mountains rising their lofty snow-capped summits heavenward. The snow now glistens in the sunlight in full view as I write. The days here are mild and pleasant in winter; but the nights are cold, and I am told that the nights even in summer are cool enough to make a blanket desirable. It is very dry and dusty here now—a thing very unusual for this season of the year—and much anxiety is felt concerning the crop for the incoming year. Wheat is the principal crop raised here, and many farmers have not sown yet. They have not made a good crop here in five years. No cotton or cane is raised here, and not much corn. The finest hogs and cattle are here that I ever saw. In this country are the famous red wood trees more than thirty feet in diameter. No factories in this country, and yet you never see a piece of home spun. It costs about the same to live here that it does to live in Georgia. The servants here are chiefly Chinese, and they cost twenty-five dollars per month. There are very few negroes here; some Indians, and some Mexicans hardly distinguishable from Indians. All manner of fruits are raised here in the greatest perfection. We have a considerable number of Chinese in our town, and I contemplate making some effort soon to do mission work among them. Let I should make my letter too long, I will close. Yours fraternally,

J. W. TOLSON.

VISALIA, CAL., JAN. 22, 1884.

More sweet than smiles are tears which rise to the eyelids.
When sad fair souls first dawn upon our eyes.
A gift of joy, by nature long kept hidden,
That thrills us with the rapture of surprise.

But deeper yet and deeper is our feeling
When some fair deathly one we love is wrought
Some unexpected grace of soul revealing,
The lovely blossom of some secret thought.

Oh! in those moments of divine emotion
The darkening veil of doubt is rent apart;
More near we seem the God of our devotion,
The heaven we hope for dwells within our heart.

—Lady Charlotte Elliott.

—We open the hearts of others when we open our own.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1884.

AGAINST THE GOLD.

A. J. P. HART, D. D.

"And Peter, good and without self."

The very Christ of whom he bore

Such bold, brave, noble, but a few

Had raised from death, one week before,

Lazarus of Bethany, he saw

New in the church of Roman law,

Drooped, not dead, forsaken of his own,

And "good and without self."

He watched the soldiers, grimly strip

Away the robe, the Mary's mantle,

And pluck the inner garment frayed

By brutal wretches—marked the lip

Shiver, as o'er the flesh laid bare,

How cold of chilling midnight air!

Yet by the slight and sudden dead,

Above the Lazarus' flame he read,

"His hands," and warmed himself."

He heard a maid say: "Here, behold

One of our man's disciples, Le"

Speak, with the speech of truth!"

Ah, then—she, then, his blood ran cold:

And as the tracing blue rose higher,

Among the crowd that girt the fire,

With sharp, remorse, angry "No!"

He thrust his arms and pressed his way,

And cringed, and warmed himself."

"Yes, then at one of them," he heard

The charge come back and back again,

Tossed from the heights of Jericho:

And as with outstretched hand he turned

Straight in their teeth, he called them "Jews!"

And, ah, that look—its terror turned

As if Gehenna's hottest coal

Had down his face and down his soul!

Drooped, while "he warmed himself."

His hands he could no more uplift;

Remorse, despair, self-baiting, woe,

Tore at his heart; and he did not know

If it were night—if it were cold—

He neither looked behind, before,

Nor cared though one who kept the door

Said: "Surely this was he who drew

The word on Malchus; Malchus knew

Him as 'he warmed himself.'"

But prone upon the ground he lay,

A cold, dire horror, nipped with shame,

Too stark to name the Master's name,

Remembering, all the down of day,

How thro' his mystic anguish he

Had mingled with that company

Of mockers in the high priest's hall,

As one of them, and watch him fall,

And—"stood and warmed himself."

So is it still—we walk afar

With scars the sufferer at Christ's right,

So do we, too, name the Master's name,

Remembering, all the down of day,

How thro' his mystic anguish he

Had mingled with that company

Of mockers in the high priest's hall,

As one of them, and watch him fall,

And—"stood and warmed himself."

—Sunday-School Times.

Sunday-School Lesson.

PREPARED BY REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFE.

First Quarter—Lesson VI.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1884.—ACTS XVI, 11-24.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Whom ye have seen, ye have seen."

And he attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul."—Acts XVI, 14.

THE CONVERSION OF LYDIA.

In our last lesson we left Paul under the restraint of the Spirit's leadings, just landed at the port of Philippi.

With a wind breathed from above the little craft upon which Paul had taken passage from Troas made a swift and prosperous voyage. This first city of Macedonia which the apostle entered was famous for its classic associations;

founded by Philip, of Macedonia, father of Alexander the Great, then conquered

by the Romans, it became memorable in their history as the place where Augustus Caesar had overthrown the republic and set up his empire; and now comes a Jewish apostle to this same place to win a greater victory, and found a more durable empire than that of Augustus. So far as sacred history informs us, this Philippi is the first European city to which came the gospel. How minute the seed. The first service a small congregation of women, outside the gates of Philippi,

by the river side. How great the yield.

European Christendom. This congregation furnished our convert, a woman named Lydia, a native of Thyatira, in Asia Minor, from a province where they had been forbidden to preach.

Another woman like the Syrophenician won a blessing out of bounds. This

Lydia was a seller of purple, and may chance have been drawn to this group of women while engaged along the river edge, seeking the unselfish dye. When Paul approached this group of women Lydia was among them; of the whole company she was the only one who heard the gospel.

I suppose that the writer does not mean to say that none of the other women in that company heard the sound of

Paul's words, but that only Lydia heard in the Christ sense of hearing.

It may seem a beautiful picture, but I have always thought that this company of women who resorted "thither" were bent not on worship, but for gathering their daily supply of shell fish,

when were found along the muddy banks of this stream, and out of which they manufactured their dyes. The Holy Spirit chose Lydia out of this company as being already informed of the worship of the true God, and opened her heart and prepared her to receive the message which Paul brought.

Her heart being opened, her mind supernaturally enlightened, the truth,

the mighty truth, which had come from so far, treasured in the yearning soul of this ambassador of God, whose course had been directed by a heavenly

Guide—now free course in her soul.

Oh! how efficacious is the word of the gospel; when attended by the energy of the Holy Spirit. How close sealed the human heart to God and his offers.

What power can open it less than the quickening and informing Spirit that raised from the grave our crucified

Lord. The opening of human hearts by wondrous processes is work of this Spirit. May he ever attend us in our labors as we bear the gospel to the lost.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D. W. O. D.

are then cleansed from all sins.

"Works Vol. I, page 119."

"I can not, therefore, by any means receive this assertion, that there is no sin in a believer from the moment he is justified. 1. Because it is contrary to the whole tenor of Scripture. 2.

Because it is contrary to the experience of the children of God. 3. Because it is absolutely new; never heard of in the world till yesterday. 4. Because it is naturally attended with the most fatal consequences, not only grieving those whom God has not grieved, but perhaps dragging them into

Christian Advocate.

OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND
SOUTH CAROLINA CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. GIBSON.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1884.

The conviction of two men, in separate cases, at Vicksburg, charged with murder, and the sentence of one to death and the other to life imprisonment, has produced a wholesome reaction of public sentiment in that community. The city papers have commented favorably on the result and hopefully as to the better enforcement of law against criminals. There is no estimating the moral force of a rigid, impartial criminal court. When the law becomes a terror to evil doers, the peace of a community is assured. But its lax administration is the mother of crime. It is a license to wrong doing. After the first shock of an awful tragedy has passed we too often indulge a sickly sentimentality toward offenders that secures their escape from just legal penalty. Better make an example of the first murderer, than by excusing his crime encourage a dozen others. We plead for the majesty and integrity of the law.

We had the pleasure of hearing last Monday evening Rev. Dr. A. D. Mayo, of Boston, deliver the first of a series of lectures in Werlein Hall before the Louisiana Educational Society. His subject was "Does Universal Education Pay?" A large audience greeted the distinguished educator, and he was gracefully introduced by Col. Wm. Preston Johnson. He is surely a master of the great question, and discussed it with a luminousness and vigor, and with a variety and facility of illustration, that must have convinced the doubting and confirmed the wavering. There was a sufficient interplay of humor to rest the audience for nearly two hours. Dr. Mayo is a strong friend of our section, and more than once in the Northern prints has defended us against unjust and false charges. The next lecture in course will be delivered on Monday night. We congratulate the society and our entire community in having secured so eminent a specialist to give this key-note to our educational platform.

The society women at Washington are having a stir, with much display of ugly temper. The question is, who has a right to sit next the President at State dinners, and what further order of precedence shall be observed. At the New Year's reception Mrs. Speaker Carlisle had the place of honor. This offense was repeated at a late dinner, when Mrs. Justice Miller indignantly resented it, stating that she had been at the White House since Mrs. Lincoln's time, and had never before been outranked by a Speaker's wife, and immediately changed her place, refusing to sit by Mrs. Carlisle. The Kentucky lady, it is said, true to the royal womanhood of her section, preserved a perfect dignity and composure. We remember to have read some years ago, in the Southern Review, under the editorship of Dr. Bledsoe, an interesting paper entitled "Peggy O'Neal or the Doom of the Republic." It recited the thrilling story of a woman's career in Washington official circles, resulting in a disruption of parties and an entrenchment of public policy. There has always been a good deal of political leadership in petticoats at Washington, and possibly never more than now. When the women politicians fall out their husbands are in a strait betwixt two.

The year 1892—the fourth centennial of the discovery of America—will soon be here. As to how and where the event is to be celebrated is being discussed. In a late number of the New York Independent the distinguished historian, Benson J. Lossing, contributes an interesting paper, giving a resume of all that has been done in the premises thus far. King Alfonso, of Spain, and different members of the Spanish government, insist that the celebration should take place in Spain. Castellar, the Republican statesman, proposes a gathering of the ships of the nations concerned in the great discovery, on August 3, 1892, in the harbor of Palos, the time and the alleged place of the departure of Columbus. Leaving Palos he would have the fleet sail for San Salvador, one of the Bahama group of islands, where the Admiral first saw land on October 12. He would have them sail thence northward to New York and then recross the sea to Barcelona on the Mediterranean, where the monarchs received the discoverer on his return. We agree with the Independent that whatever grand display Spain may devise, America should plan her own celebration. One good result from these centennial celebrations is the more careful and critical study of history they stimulate.

Our Anniversary.

With this issue the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE enters upon the thirty-fourth year of its history. Through the "dangers, toils and snares" of all those years it has come fighting the good fight of faith. Its conception and establishment were the suggestion and ordering of Providence. From almost the very initial number its necessity was appreciated and its weekly appearance was hailed with gladness throughout a wide territory. As this advocate and exponent of Methodism in this great Southwest its potency and efficiency can scarcely be estimated. Methodism within the area of its patronage and influence, in connectional loyalty, integrity and liberality, has always been of the best and highest type.

For the blessings of the past we render devout thanksgivings this anniversary day. This success which has attended its labors through all former administrations inspires the present management to maintain its high character and extend, if possible, the field of its labors.

The prospectus and specimen number of the ADVOCATE was issued July 10, 1850, and contained an address to the members of the Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Arkansas Conferences by the delegates from those bodies to the General Conference at St. Louis. All the members from the Mississippi Conference have passed up to their reward, and but few from either body remain. The names appended to that address are as follows: Elisha Callaway, W. Murrell, G. Garrett, A. H. Mitchell, J. Hamilton, T. W. Dorman, William P. Ratcliffe, William Moore, J. F. Truslow, William Winans, John Lane, B. M. Drake, L. Campbell, G. M. Rogers, W. E. Doty, S. W. Speer, R. Randle, J. N. Hamill. But for various reasons the first regular number of the paper did not appear until February 3, 1851, with H. N. McTyeire as editor, and only the Louisiana and Alabama as patronizing Conferences. Since that time, except when interrupted by the war, the ADVOCATE has been issued regularly and punctually. Amid varying fortunes it has witnessed a good confession, enjoyed the confidence of a host of valued friends, and is able to celebrate this anniversary with the rejoicings of hope. We look out upon another twelve months with strong purpose. We bespeak the cordial co-operation of old friends and new that the ADVOCATE during this Centenary year may be tenfold a greater blessing to our Southwestern Methodism.

"Methodist Logic."

We find an article in our Romish contemporary of this city, the Morning Star, with the above title, from which we extract the following:

THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE of this city wants to know what business Catholics have to be on educational boards when they are avowedly opposed to State schools. We should like to have the ADVOCATE formulate the general principle on which it bases this implied conclusion. If we were obliged to make it up for our neighbor it would be to the following effect: No citizen ought to be connected with the administration of a system to which he is opposed. But it would be impossible for the ADVOCATE to establish such a proposition. If that doctrine were correct, there would be no room for the minority in any government work. In the Customhouse a low-tariff man would have to resign rather than assist in carrying out a high-tariff law to which he might be bitterly opposed. An engineer overruled as to the best method of building a culvert or a levee would quit rather than help in a plan which he might consider erroneous.

In an editorial on "Public Education," in another column of the same issue, we find the following utterances which appropriately accompany the above:

We, in common with all other Catholics, are utterly opposed to State schools for Catholic children. This is on religious grounds. Apart from that, and on strictly political grounds, we are opposed to State schools for any kind of children, because we do not believe the school business to be within the province of political government.

Here we have the Romish doctrine on public education. They are "utterly opposed" to it on both "religious" and "political grounds." From parish priest to Archbishop all sorts of woes are fulminated against Romanists who patronize "godless schools." A few years ago, near the city of Boston, a priest caught a child of his parish on route to a State school and severely flogged him. So if the roaring of papal bulls and the thunders of the parish pulpit fail to terrify, they occasionally resort to a little muscular Christianity—only "apostolic blows and knocks" you know. So much for Rome's utter and unqualified opposition to our system of public education.

Now, for the "Methodist Logic" our neighbor attempts to satirize. We deny the "soft impeachment" of such sophistry being "logic" at all, much less "Methodist logic." It is a false and foolish formulation of the principle on which we arraign Romanists for aspiring to administer a system they utterly repudiate. And the illustrations employed do not illustrate, because they are entirely irrelevant. The relation of the minority to the majority in popular governments is no wise representation of the attitude of Romish votaries to public education. Minorities and majorities differ only on questions of policy, but all agree on great governmental principles. This, however, is not a question between high and low tariff, but between tariff and no tariff—between the friends and the sworn, bitter enemies of a vital principle and institution. The other illustration about the engineer is alike infelicitous. This is not a question "as to the best method of building a culvert or levee," but a contest with an engineer who claims that the whole principle of the culvert or levee is false and unscientific, and attempts to demonstrate it. Now, if to this be added the engineer's religious scruples—his conscientious convictions—against it, you have the attitude of a Romanist figuring on a board of trustees of our public schools. He aspires to administer an institution that he conscientiously wants to kill. How is that for "Methodist logic?" And where is the joint in that harness?

Now, one of two things must be true; either a Romanist does violence to his religious convictions in endeavoring to promote State education or else he occupies an executive position for the purpose of embarrassing the system. If the former, his aspirations are immodest, unmanly and wicked. If the latter, he is a base deceiver, employing at once the voice of Jacob and the hand of Esau. He talks fairly, only to steal with ruthless, nimble fingers a nation's birthright. We hesitate to think the latter of any man in this free, enlightened America and this nineteenth century. But what examples the past few hundred years could produce we need not enumerate. The Star, however, is at liberty to take either horn of the dilemma.

Christ in the Courts of Caesar.

An important and interesting case was recently decided in the New Jersey Court of Chancery which involves the relations of trustees and pastor in the Methodist Church. The case, as outlined in an exchange, is about as follows: A preacher had been reappointed for the second year to a congregation, and went to the church to hold service, but found it locked, and a notice by the Board of Trustees on the doors that it would remain closed until further notice. A committee waited upon the trustees for an explanation of their action, but they simply responded by an appeal to their own power and authority in all such matters. An injunction suit was then brought requiring the church to be opened for divine service. The trustees made answer asserting their loyalty as Methodists to the doctrine and Discipline of the church, and that their action reflected the expressed will of a majority of the congregation and their own opinion that the welfare of the church demanded that he should not be its pastor. The action of the trustees was extraordinary and revolutionary, and transcended disciplinary authority. When a pastor has been appointed he has full and undisputed control of the church and pulpit. If he violates the spirit of his trust, the course to be pursued is very plain. The court admirably defined the limited powers of trustees in the following paragraph:

Nor have they the power, under the Discipline of the church, to close it against the duly appointed preacher, though a majority of the members are desirous that they should do so. Nor have they such power under the trust in the deed. The trust is that the grantees therein named, and the survivors of them, their successors and assigns, will hold the property for the only proper use and behoof of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at ———— their successors and assigns forever. It is admitted that the church was organized under the rules, regulations and discipline prescribed by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States, and it is not denied that it has been so ever since. It was incorporated in 1815, now nearly seventy years ago. The very name of the corporation indicates its character and connection. As a Methodist Episcopal Church, it is subject to those rules, regulations and discipline. It is not alleged that the appointment of the preacher was unauthorized or irregular, but that a majority of the members of the church desire that the preacher appointed shall not be permitted to act as the pastor of the church. It is not claimed that there is any warrant in the Discipline of the church for the action of the trustees, nor that the Discipline provides that the wishes of the majority of the members shall determine whether the preacher appointed to the charge shall act as such or not. If the church belongs to the Methodist Episcopal connection, as it is admitted it does, there is no warrant of law, discipline or usage for the acts of the defendants.

Rome or Ruin.

In another column we have made response to the Morning Star's advocacy of Romanists as good administrators of our public school system. Possibly a few authorities would serve to enlighten our neighbor a little on the subject. Rome means ruin and only ruin to all popular education. Let the following be read and inwardly digested. The late Pontifical IX said: The Romish Church has the right to interfere in the discipline of the public schools and in the arrangement of the studies of the public schools. Public schools, open to all children for the education of the young, should be under the control of the Romish Church, and should not be subject to the civil power, nor made to conform to the opinions of the age.

March 25, 1879, Pope Leo XIII addressed a letter to the Cardinal Vicar, in which he said: That if he possessed the liberty he claims, he would employ it to close all Protestant schools and places of worship in Rome.

Cardinal Antonelli said: That he thought it better that the children grow up in ignorance than be educated in such a system of schools as the State of Massachusetts supports.

Cardinal McClosky said: Stand by the Catholic schools. We must take part in elections.

To the same purport we might quote from the Lenten address of Bishop Gilman at Cleveland, O., March, 1875, and from the pastoral letter of Bishop Gibbons, of Richmond, Va.

We now offer some choice excerpts from the Catholic press. The Freeman's Journal, of September 22, 1873, said:

"The Pope, in a document set forth for the teaching of the whole church, and therefore an instruction which every Catholic must receive as infallibly true, says that Catholics 'can not, in conscience, use such schools.'"

"* * * Those godless public schools are condemned by the church of God, as bad in themselves. * * * Let the public school system go where it came from—the devil. What we Roman Catholics must do now is to get our children out of the devouring fire. At any cost and any sacrifice we must deliver the children over whom we have control from these pits of destruction which lie inviting in their way, under the name of public or district schools."

The following is from the Western (Chicago) Tablet:

"If you son or daughter is attending a State school, you may be as certain that you are violating your duty as a Catholic parent, and conducting to the everlasting anguish and deep despair of your child, as if you could take your oath to it. Take him away. Let him rather never know how to write his name than become the bond and chained slave of Satan—than to rise up at the last dread day of account to curse you in all the unavailing repentance and bitterness of final despair."

"We have other testimony equally clear and emphatic. Yet in face of such official announcements and denunciations, the Morning Star says 'the very man who is most opposed to an intended work may be the fittest man to carry it out.'"

We submit, in view of the above, if any true Romanist is the fittest man to advance the cause of public education. It is his business to rescue children from the devouring fire; not to kindle the flames and push them in.

Note from Bishop McTyeire.

In a pleasant, private note, accompanying the extract from his forthcoming volume, which appears on our first page, Bishop McTyeire writes us some most encouraging words. The following, of general interest, we beg pardon of the Bishop for publishing:

"You have first fruits of the volume which I hope to have out before warm weather and District Conference times. May the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE be on hand, and in good hands, when the second century of organic Methodism closes, and record wonderful things to the praise of our Master."

"If Methodism keeps the original spirit and purpose; if the field preaching (aggressive) element goes hand in hand with the class meeting and pastoral care (conservative); if, with the increased numbers and improved means and appliances now in use and within reach, this former step of progress be maintained, marching to mission fields at home and abroad—why may not Methodism, during the next century, carry the gospel to the whole world? The Lord's promise holds good. His Spirit is willing and able. The planet has been adorned. Where is the impossibility?"

Yours in the hope of a happy centenary year.

H. N. MCTYEIRE.

A Surprising Confession.

The Southern Churchman, of Richmond, Va., is one of our most valued exchanges. It advocates evangelical religion, and has no sympathy with high churchism. That type of Episcopalianism has always prevailed in Virginia. Several years ago, during the session of a Methodist Conference, one of our brethren was invited to preach in the Episcopal pulpit of this town. Such liberality we have not known in the Southwest. But to the purpose of this article. In a recent issue the Southern Churchman has an excellent and thoughtful editorial on "The Oxford System." It is a discussion of the effect of the Oxford tract system upon the Episcopal Church in America. The editor thinks that those tracts arrested the church's progress in this country, and dealt it a blow from which it has never recovered. So that out of a population of over fifty millions they have a communicant membership of only three hundred and forty thousand. The decade before the Oxford tracts appeared the church increased one hundred per cent. The next ten years it was only fifty per cent, and the next thirty per cent. In his comment upon this fact the late Dr. Washburn spoke some plain words, but they are a surprising confession. He says, and truly, that most of their gains from other churches are "waifs and strays," but they are often paraded as great gains. As an indication of the esteem in which clerical proselytes are held by the more thoughtful of the church we quote the words of Dr. Washburn.

If these are read in connection with the statement of the Bishop of Missouri, that nearly all their ministers are received from other denominations, the picture is no wise flattering, and is poor prophecy for the future.

In my youth the best brain and plenty of the Protestant sects were looking toward our ministry. It is not so now. With rare exceptions, we get only their waifs and strays, their inferior men, who want ordination to hide their lack of all else, and who become our advanced churchmen. Our claims of an exclusive ministry, our imitations of early Anglican costume will not ripen in this soil. They may create their little circle of devotees, but the many thought the active strength of the nation will be lost to us. Our episcopate must be seen to be no needless ornament; not the queen bee of the hive to keep up the succession, but the most active in work and the least active in self-seeking. Our clergy must be no caste, who can be inferior in all else because valid in imposition of hands, but must be abreast with the culture of their times.

A Caution and Exhortation.

If I am not mistaken there is a growing tendency among a certain class of teachers in this country to ignore the importance of and the absolute necessity for a change of heart, a new birth, regeneration. This tendency is particularly manifest in their talks and sermons to the children. Many of the children and young people are influenced to join the church on a mere confession or acknowledgment of Christ, without any real experience of grace, without a change of heart. Now, this would not matter so much in this case of small children if they were not taught to believe that this confession was all they needed. "The he and eud all" of the work of the Holy Ghost in them. If the children were taken into the church with the view of leading them to personal faith in Christ in order to a change of heart I would not object. These teachers seem to be in a "muddle" as to whether there has been a general justification from original guilt or a general regeneration of human nature. In shunning the Charybdis of Calvinism they have fallen clear over into the Scylla of Pelagianism.

Now, it seems to me children are not any less in need of regeneration because they have not openly and wickedly sinned against God, nor are grown people any the more in need of a new birth because they have thus sinned. The necessity for a new birth grows out of the depravity or bent to sin which came by the first or old birth. The necessity for regeneration grows out of the fact of generation. The reason why we must be born of the spirit is because we have been born of the flesh. To be born at all necessitates our being born again before we can have the life of God in this soul. The only way to put an end to the absolute necessity for regeneration is to stop generation. Original sin is that corruption which is naturally engendered. Man is of his own nature inclined to evil. By generation "he gets the nature of Adam and by regeneration he gets the nature of Christ. The one is begotten of the flesh in generation and the other is begotten by the Holy Ghost in regeneration." As long as we are controlled by the nature of Adam we can not please God, and when controlled by the nature of Christ we can not displease him; we can not sin.

No amount of training at home or in the church or in the Sunday-school can obviate the necessity of regeneration. It is this or perdition. This fact must be pressed home upon the heart and conscience of every responsible human being, young or old. The not-of-little-sin-of-much-sin or no actual sin has nothing in the world to do with the question of being born again. The trouble lies shack of all sin. It is innate, ingrained in the very woof and warp of our being.

The guilt of original sin has, of course, been forgiven, and a plan has been provided whereby the vile nature may be changed. "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew within me a right spirit." I am wrong inside, in my heart. I do wrong, O God, because I am wrong. Make me right within; give me a clean heart and a right spirit, and then I will be right without. I may, I can, I ought to get off the branches of sin, but God only can dig up the roots. If the fountain be sweetened the stream will be sweet. No confession, no profession can save me from this inward curse, this bad heart; this corrupt nature. I want a new one. I was born wrong and I want to be born again; to be made over, to be renewed in the spirit of my mind. I was not to blame for my first birth, but I will be if I am not born again, because I feel the need of it. I know where my trouble is. God makes me know. I conform and conform, again and again, but it is transformation that I need. I do religious things in religious ways, but they are a drudgery. O! for a heart that would love God and hate sin, a new heart different from the one I now have, a heart that would love to read God's word, love to sing, love to pray. Religious forms and ceremonies are now a burden and a curse, all out of harmony with the heart I have. If I were only out of this pit, out of this miry clay, with my feet on a rock and a new heart inside of me, O! how I'd sing God's praise and lead sinners to Christ.

This year of 1884 we must emphasize the importance of the absolute necessity for regeneration in order to holy living and soul saving. Those who have not found Christ, precious to their souls can not teach transgressors the way to heaven.

GILDEROY.

Father Hyacinth has not met a cordial welcome from the clerical and official Romanists of this city. The Morning Star assails him and the Mascot caricatures him, but he draws large audiences nevertheless. He lectured last Sunday afternoon in the French Opera House to an immense congregation, including many of the faithful. He began his lecture by stating that on his arrival in New Orleans he sent his card to the Archbishop of this diocese, to which he received no response except the following in Le Propagateur Catholique, the official organ of the diocese:

Monsieur Hyacinthe Loysou, apostate, priest and monk, has caused to be announced that his conferences would be for the benefit of the asylums. I beg of the charitable public of New Orleans to understand that none of the Catholic asylums will receive donations which are the fruits of blasphemy and insults to our holy mother, the Catholic, Apostolic and Roman Church.

L. A. CHASSE, Pro-Chancellor.

After reading this the Pere delivered a calm, good-tempered address on Catholic Reform. There is no doubt but that his presence and preaching here have been an eye-opener to many of the priest-blinded.

The Louisville Christian Observer reads a vigorous lecture to the brethren on sectional bitterness in the church. If the case be as serious as the Observer supposes, his points are well taken. Whatever may be, our differences of opinion on social, political, economical or ecclesiastical questions, they should not affect fraternal intercourse. A man ought to be broad enough to separate mere personal feeling from questions of public policy. The Observer says:

But, further, it brings dishonor on the cause of Christ. When the Southern men, who are most bitter in their expressions, want goods they buy of Northern mills; when they want magazines they order from New York; in feeble health they go to Waukesha, or Northern watering places. They can intermingle in business relations, in joint stock companies and in corporations, in social and political intercourse with men from the other section. But as soon as churchly courtesy and cordiality is proposed they recoil. What? Is Christianity to be the cause of animosities and bitterness? Does the gospel have an influence to restrain this natural outflow of animity and kindly feelings? Such will be, may such be, the avenging of worldly men whenever they see this sectional bitterness between Presbyterians. Surely this is reason enough to cause men to eschew it.

to watch with them on the Fri-nearest the full moon. On Fri-abundance of people came, and began preaching between eight nine, and continued a little bey-the noon of night, singing, pray-and praising God. Every one kn-that it is now held, as a rule, on last night of the old year.

hand the same to the nearest Methodist minister, the oldest preacher in charge at the earliest opportunity. Please let me know if you receive the certificate, and will use it as the church will grant it intends and expects you to do. Trusting that you have been trying to be a Christian and will continue to do so, I am —The new book, "The Life of James Russell Lowell," by Henry James, Jr., will be enjoyed by all. The Universe Publishing Company, Saint Louis, Mo. Subscription price, $1.50 a year; single copy, fifteen cents.

—Littell's Living Age is the latest of all such. It has no equal.

tarish, Asthma and all Chronic Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having (tested and wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases) I felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to any who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with the name of the patient, W. A. Knapp, 740, Postoffice Building, New York City.

HOPE

Peck's Patent Tubular Unshlonded By
by scientific men of Europe and America. By doctors, judges, sailors and prominent men of their day. They all insist that

FOR THE DEAF

cluded rain her

A Home Production

YEAST POWDER.

It is a pure powder, a pure, unadulterated article. Bakers from all over the world have testified to its purity. It is a pure powder, a pure, unadulterated article. Bakers from all over the world have testified to its purity. It is a pure powder, a pure, unadulterated article. Bakers from all over the world have testified to its purity.

BARGAINS

IN THE BEST

PIANOS!

P. WERLEIN'S

135 Canal St.

Competition Defied!

CHICKERING, WEBER, MATHIS, SHEPHERD, HARDMAN, guaranteed to resist dampness and to last for a great number of years. No shaking of legs, no breaking of strings, no sparkling of keys. Mason and Hamlin, and other organs of noted makers, very low in price. Music and musical instruments of all kinds. Send for our catalogue and prices, and you will deal with us, finding it your interest so to do.

P. WERLEIN.

Established over 30 years.

KNABE

PIANOFORTES.

WILLIAMS & CO.

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street

Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

Sawing Made Easy

Monarch Lightning Sawing Machine!

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

At all sawmills and lumber yards.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

See 30 Days Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

Weekly Market Review.

For Week Ending February 5, 1884.

COTTON.

Low ordinary	7 1/4	—
Good ordinary	8 1/4	—
Low middling	10 1/4	—
Middling	10 7/8	—
Good middling	10 1/2	—
Fair	10 1/4	—
Galveston-middling	10 7/8	—
Mobile-middling	10 3/4	—
St. Louis-middling	10 1/4	—

SUGAR.

Inferior	41	41
Common	42	42
Good common	43	43
Fair	44	44
Good fair	45	45
Fully fair	46	46
Choice	47	47
Superior	48	48
Yellow clarified	49	49
Gray clarified	50	50
White clarified	51	51
Granulated	52	52

MOLASSES.

Syrup	26	26
Fair	27	27
Prime	28	28
Choice	29	29
Fancy	30	30

RICE.

Choice	51	51
Prime	52	52
Good	53	53
Fair	54	54
Ordinary	55	55
Common	56	56
No. 2	57	57

FLOUR.

Minnesota makers	6 05	6 25
Minnesota patents	7 15	—
Extra fancy	6 40	—
Winter wheat patents	6 90	7 25
Choice	5 25	5 45
Fancy	4 90	4 90

CORN PRODUCTS.

Cream meal	3 40	3 15
Corn meal	2 05	2 05
Grits	3 40	3 65
Hominy	4 75	—

GRAIN, ETC.

Corn:
White	58	—
Yellow	60	—
Mixed	59	—
Oats:
Western	45	47
Texas rust-proof	51	—
Hay:
Choice	20 00	20 50
Prime	16 00	16 00

PROVISIONS.

Pork:
Mess	17 87 1/2	—
Prime mess	18 25	—
Rumps	15 25	—
Bacon:
Choice breakfast	10 1/2	11
Shoulders	7 1/2	—
Sides, clear	10 1/2	—
Sides, clear rib	10 1/2	—
Lard:
Sugar-cured	12 1/2	13 1/2
Dry salted meat:
Shoulders	9 1/2	—
Sides, clear	9 1/2	—
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2	—

FISH.

Mackerel:
No. 1, in bbls.	11 25	—
Half bbls.	7 75	—
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75	—
Half bbls.	8 25	—
No. 3, in bbls, large	13 25	—
Half bbls.	7 00	—

GROCERIES.

Coffee:
Rio, choice	11	14 1/2
Cordia, choice	12 1/2	15
Java, choice	15	22 1/2
Butter:
Western dairy	25	—
New York dairy	26	—
Country	18	25
Lard:
Choice	9 1/2	9 1/2
Teas:
Choice	50	1 00
Fair	25	50
Oils:
Coal, cases	18	—
Coal, bbls	41	—
Cotton seed	43	45
Lard	78	—

VEGETABLES.

Cauliflowers:
Western	4 00	4 50
Country	4 00	4 50
Potatoes:
New York	1 40	2 25
Western	1 40	2 25
Seed, New York	1 40	2 25
Seed, Western	1 40	2 25
Kiwi:
Choice	12 00	13 00
Onions:
Choice	2 00	2 25

BAILING STUFFS.

Bagging:
1 1/2 lb.	104	—
2 lb.	113	—
Baling twine:
1 lb.	134	—
2 lb.	134	—
Ties:
Choice	1 35	—

SUNDRIES.

Poultry:
Chickens, Western	4 00	4 50
Young	2 00	3 00
Chickens, Southern	3 25	3 50
Young	2 00	2 25
Turkeys, Southern	11 00	13 00
Geese:
Western	30	32
Southern	34	35
Wool:
Lake	22	—
Louisiana	26	—
Horry	9	15
Hides:
Green salted	6	6 1/2
Dry salted	10	10 1/2
Staves:
Oak, kegs	50 00	55 00
Oak, barrels	—	75 00
Oak, clarks	90 00	100 00
Oak, hogheads	80 00	130 00
Hoop poles:
Hogheads	40 00	—
Barrels	18 00	20 00
Half barrels	12 50	—
Fertilizers:
Cotton seed	12 00	—
Meal (country)	24 00	—
Meal (city)	25 00	—
Pure ground bone	42 00	—
Muriatic acid	3	—
Sulphuric acid	24	—
Bone black	34	—

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Vicksburg, Miss., Jan. 31.—Trains on the V. & S. P. Railway will commence running to-morrow, Feb. 1, as far west as Arendia, La., 125 miles from Delta and forty-nine miles east of Monroe.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 31.—Rev. John Dubois, aged eighty-five years, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died yesterday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. J. Grace, at Whistler. He was the inventor of the Dubois cotton gin, and was born in South Carolina, educated in Charleston, was local editor in Eufaula and Greensboro for many years, and at one time had a large factory in Greensboro, Ala. He was a man of unexceptionable life and deep piety. He leaves three sons and three daughters.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 31.—The south-bound accommodation train on the Indianapolis & Chicago P. & N. line, due here at 10:30 this morning, met with a terrible accident when seven miles from this city at Broad Ripple. At that point the railway crosses the White River on a trestle bridge, two spans each 150 feet in length. When the locomotive reached the center of the bridge, the fireman felt the structure shaking. He alighted from the engine, which he opened, giving the locomotive all the available steam. The engine sprang forward with great force, breaking the couplings between the tender and baggage car. The locomotive kept the track, but the tender and baggage car dropped through and piled up in one mass at the foot of the pier; the smoking car being partially telescoped on the baggage car. The wreck was partially submerged, but the portion above the water immediately took fire from the smoking car.

The officials of the road went to work vigorously and systematically, and in a short time the fire was extinguished and a search for bodies begun. Six persons were either killed outright or burned to death.

B. J. White was working under the bridge when the train turned over. He says he thinks the rods pulled through the nuts, letting the bridge down. To all appearances one break occurred within fifteen feet of the pier, and another about midway of the span. White's escape was truly marvelous. He was standing on the roof of the tender, and as the cars struck him on the head and drove him through the river, he was not hurt. He was not dead, but he was covered with bruises, but able to walk.

BATON ROUGE, Feb. 3.—The steamer Natchez landed at Baton Rouge to-day at about 12:30 o'clock, and soon after was started on the river closely followed by the Jesse K. Boll. When about four miles above here the main steam-pipe of the Natchez on the star-board side exploded, tearing up the floor of staterooms Nos. 6 and 7, the gangway and doors and the barber shop. The cabin full of passengers was thrown into the air. The pilot headed her for shore and landed safely. The Jesse K. Boll came to and blew a distress whistle, which was answered by the tug Manie Wood, which went up with Mrs. Raymond and Bullington. The Boll soon afterward went up the river. The only person killed was Johnny, a negro boy about fourteen years old, employed in the pastry room, who stepped on the gallery just before the explosion and was instantly killed. He was from Yazoo City, Miss.

VICKSBURG, Feb. 3.—John A. Klein, one of the oldest and best known of the citizens of Vicksburg, died to-day at 1 o'clock. He settled in Vicksburg in 1830.

At the close of the war he went into the banking business, and was one of the founders of the Vicksburg Bank. After a few years connection with others, he started the Mississippi Valley Bank. He was one of the most charitable men that ever lived in this or any other community, and no one will ever know of the countless deeds of charity done by him.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The Daily Commercial Bulletin of Feb. 5 gives the details of January fires, showing an aggregate of $12,000,000 destroyed during the month. Of this amount $10,200,000 was burned up by 234 fires, where the reported loss was from $10,000 and upwards. No such fire loss in a single month has occurred since 1872, so far as the records show, except in January, 1879, and July, 1877. There were twenty-five fires in January where the reported loss was $100,000 or more, the value of the twenty-five fires being $3,250,000, or more than one-fourth of the month's total fire waste.

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—The funeral services of Wendell Phillips will be held at Faneuil Hall the latter part of the week. No day has yet been specified. The funeral services will be held at the residence of the deceased, which had caused death. His sufferings must have been most acute and his fortitude, in the light of the present developments, something remarkable.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Within a radius of ten miles of Ayre 200,000 trees were blown down in the recent storm, 100,000 on the estate of the Marquis of Ailesford.

Mr. Bradnach acquiesces in the suggestion of Mr. Labouchere that he make no effort to take the oath on the opening of Parliament, but remain below the bar. On the 11th of February, however, he will advance to the table of the House of Commons to take the prescribed oath. The trial by jury has been published an ordinance which will make no motion hostile to Bradnach, and will not support any Conservative who does.

VIENNA, Austria, Jan. 31.—Apprehension of further Socialistic disturbances has led to the adoption of extraordinary measures by the Ministry. By virtue of the law of 1869 they have proclaimed a kind of martial law in the districts of Vienna, Korneuburg and Weirneustadt. Special measures have been adopted also with reference to suspicious letters and dangerous publications. In Vienna and Korneuburg the trial by jury is suspended. The President of the Council and Minister of the Interior sent a letter to the lower house of the Reichstag explaining extraordinary measures taken in consequence of the recent crimes, the present means being insufficient to suppress them.

TORONTO, Canada, Feb. 1.—The Society for the Suppression of Vice has appointed a delegate to go to Ottawa to endeavor to secure an amendment to the Lord's Day act to prohibit on Sunday excursions and all unnecessary work on railways, canals, postoffices, and the repeal of the act permitting lottery gambling by raffles at bazaars for charitable purposes.

ROME, Feb. 1.—The Court of Cassation has decided, in the case of the Government against the Propaganda, that the latter's real property must be converted into Government stock. This decision is a severe blow to the Vatican, which talks of appealing to the powers.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 3.—There were 33,000 deaths from diphtheria in the province of Kharkoff between 1878 and 1882.

Is Consumption Curable?

An annual death-rate of nearly 100,000 by Consumption in the United States gives, so far as the medical profession is concerned, a most optimistic and disheartening negative to this question. But under the new Vitalizing treatment of Drs. Starkey and Pelen, of 1109 Girard St., Philadelphia, quite an emphatic affirmative can be declared. This treatment has inaugurated a new era in the healing art. We are speaking within the limits of facts when we say that during the past thirteen years in thousands of cases the progress of Consumption has been arrested by its use, and hundreds of lives saved. In many instances where it seemed that the patient could not survive for more than a few days or a few weeks, the vital forces have rallied, and there has been a slow, but sure, recovery to better and more comfortable health. If you wish to know all about this remarkable treatment write to Drs. Starkey and Pelen, and they will send you such documentary evidence as will enable you to judge of its real value.

WHAT A VOLCANO CAN DO.—Cotopaxi in 1833 threw its fiery rockets 3,000 feet above its crater, while in 1854 the blazing mountain sent forth a column of smoke and ash which was heard at a distance of more than 100 miles. In 1797 the crater in Tungurahua, one of the great peaks of the Andes, flung out torrents of mud, which dammed up the rivers, opened new lakes, and in valleys 1,500 feet wide made deposits of mud and lava. The steam from Vesuvius, which in 1837 passed through Torre del Greco, contained 32,000 cubic feet of solid matter, and in 1763, when Torre del Greco was destroyed a second time, the mass of lava amounted to 45,000 cubic feet. In 1780 Etna poured forth a flood which covered 8,100 square miles of territory, and on this occasion the sand and scoria formed the Monte Rosini, near Nicholosa, a cone of two miles in circumference, and 4,000 feet high. The stream thrown out by Etna in 1816 was in motion at the rate of a yard a day, for nine months after the eruption, and it is recorded that the lava of the same mountain, after a terrible eruption, was not thoroughly cool and consolidated for ten years after the event. In the eruption of Vesuvius, A. D. 79, the scoria and ashes vomited forth far exceeded the entire bulk of the mountain. In 1850 Etna disgorged twenty times its own mass. Vesuvius has sent its ashes as far as Constantinople, Syria, and Egypt; it hurled stones eight pounds in weight to Pompeii, a distance of six miles, while similar masses were tossed up 2,000 feet above the summit. Cotopaxi has projected a distance of 100 cubic yards in volcano a distance of nine miles; and Sunawaba, in 1814, during the most terrible eruption on record, sent its ashes as far as Java, a distance of 340 miles.

Miss Bird in her book, "Unbeaten Tracks in Japan," says, "Of the shadows which hang upon the horizon of Japan, the darkest to my thinking, arises from the fact that she is making the attempt, for the first time in history, to secure the fruits of Christianity without transplanting the tree from which they spring. The nation sunk in immorality, the mill-stone of orientalisms hangs round her neck in the race on which she has started; and her progress is political and intellectual rather than moral; in other words, as regards the destiny of man, individually or collectively, it is at present a failure. The great hope for her is that she may grasp the truth and purity of primitive Christianity, as taught by the life and life of our Lord Jesus Christ, as resolutely as she has grasped our arts and sciences; and that in the reception of Christianity, with its true principles of manliness and national greatness, she may become in the highest sense 'The Land of the Rising Sun,' and the light of Eastern Asia."

THE LUNGS ARE STRAINED AND RACKED by a persistent Cough, the general strength wasted, and an incurable complaint often established thereby. Dr. Jayne's Expectant is an effective remedy for Coughs and Colds, and exerts a beneficial effect on the Pulmonary and Bronchial Organs.

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HOMER DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

us of were 100, is of sugmake peu-below how-

of the prepate

ROYAL

ROYAL

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.-NO. 7.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1437.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

JHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
JAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
JAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

OFFICE--112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KENNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O'NEILL,
REV. O. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. RAYSON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

BY OF GOOD CHEER.

BY MARY JAMES DOUGLASS.

Though taught hard life's knot may be,
And weary we may be,
The sweet touch of Father's love
Some day will surely undo it.

Then, darling, wait;
Nothing is laid
In the light that shines forever.

We faint at heart, a friend is gone;
We grieve at the world's harsh dealing;
We trouble at sorrow on every side,
At the myriad ways of killing.

Yet say we all,
"Thou shalt not die,"
The Lord keepeth count forever.

He keepeth count. We come, we go,
We speculate, toll and fall;
But the measure to each of us will be God only can give or alter.

He sendeth light,
He sendeth night,
And change goes on forever.

Why not take life with cheerful trust,
With faith in the strength of weakness?
The slendered duty rears its head
With courage, yet with meekness.

A sunny face,
Hath holy grace,
To woo the sun forever.

Forever and ever, my darling, yes—
Goodness and love are undying;
Only the troubles and cares of earth
Are winged from the first for dying.

Our way we glow
In the furrow of life,
But after the tilling and growing, the sheaf,
Sift for the rest, but the sun for the loaf.

And God keepeth watch forever.

Adaptation.

BY REV. W. L. ANDERSON, D. D.

This is the great law seen in all the works of God. Every order of nature, arrangement of Providence and provision of grace, is directed by the principle of the adaptation of means to ends, so that the wisdom, power and love of our heavenly Father shall be prominent to the eyes of men and angels. Economy of means, as well as of time and labor, must show the skill of the benefactor as much as the end to be secured shall exhibit his benevolence and charity. Mere costly expenditure might be associated with kind purpose, and yet be a failure in its results because of unwise or inappropriate means employed. The idea of adaptation implies correct views of the ends proposed and of the necessary instrumentalities to be employed. Time and place—or, if you please, well-adjusted occasion or opportunity—must be an element also of adaptation. The agencies and forces to be employed must be as fully considered and determined as well as the value of the objects to be attained and the difficulties to be overcome. One would not employ the club of Hercules to brush a fly from the face of a sleeping babe, nor would load a "Krupp gun" with which to shoot a sparrow.

This law of adaptation is seen in its force and beauty in the history and correct conduct of the church of Christ. The circulation of the gospel, the preaching of the word, the securing the attention of men, of calling sinners to repentance and upbuilding the church "in her most holy faith," Jesus is the great preacher. He kept before him the habits, modes of thought, occupations of his hearers, and in choice of subjects, modes of reasoning, illustration and appeal, impressed himself on the mind and heart of his hearers. The size of the congregation had nothing to do with the zeal and interested earnestness of his sermons. To a congregation of one he preached some of his mightiest sermons. Refer to the woman at Jacob's well, Nicodemus by night, or to repentant Paul after Christ's resurrection. To his apostles he promised to make them "fishers of men." Fishing was their trade, their position in life, their living itself. How complete the idea of industry, patience, skill, exercise of study and genuineness, all crowned with the accomplishment, stimulating certainty of success! Gallies, with its nets and fishing boats and lines and fish traps, and fishes, and bait to catch them, furnishes a complete commentary on Christ's promise to make them fishers of men. This one sentence explained the business of preaching better than a complete course of lectures in a divinity school. Jesus taught theology to the farmers by reference to the plow, the seed and the sower, the harvest and the reaper, and the harvest song when the sheaf was threshed. The Jewish shepherd took a complete theological idea into his mind when Jesus said, "I am the great Shepherd," and called the children his lambs, and Christians his sheep.

The adaptation of the gospel message to the circumstances, conditions and mental wants of the hearers has been one explanation of its success in every age of the church. Here was the reason why "the common people heard Jesus gladly," and stood in wonder and delight listening to his sermons during whole days under the hot Syrian sun, forgetting to become weary or even listening to the calls of hunger to be appeased. The history of the early preachers of Methodism among the colliers, with their faces blackened by soot, and yet with the fear furrows on their cheeks—evidences of the heart's sorrow for sin and joy in the presented Christ accepted by faith.

Lectures on art and science and letters may call out piles of facts, battles of theories, or rejoicings in chaste poetic numbers at discovered, determined truths. Rhetoric may put on its classic dress, and learning may walk out in the majesty of her presence. Eloquence and wit and sarcasm may bleed with logic to show the learning and labor and scholarship of the speaker, and crowded audiences may applaud the speaker and make their choice amid conflicting theories or systems.

The preaching of the gospel hides the preacher behind the cross, and the man is concealed, lost in the message he bears from heaven to dying men. The officer bearing the pardon of the criminal condemned to die, with wreaths of flowers or adorns it with ribbons. In haste he presents his message and the prisoner's pardon. Language puts on its severest simplicity of expression and its tenderest, loving tones of voice. The minister of Jesus uses plainness and directness and earnestness in his address to dying men, seeks to discover the readiest avenues to their mind and heart, and recognizes differences of temperaments, modes of thought, methods of investigation and conclusion. It becomes his study and business, his duty and delight, to become "all things to all men, if by any means he can save some"—after the Pauline method.

CARLENE, KENTUCKY.

How Much is He Worth?

The usual method of finding out how much a man is worth is to survey his lands, estimate the amount of his bonds and count up his ready cash. This is wrong. To know how much a man really possesses he must be surveyed himself. It must be known how much response there is in him to the world's woe and song and laughter; how much sympathy for the wretched, the degraded, the fallen; how much admiration for the true, the beautiful, the good; how much devotion to principle; how much consecration to the right; how completely the laws of heaven are reduced in his heart and home.

Peter Cooper was rich. He made a large amount of money. But if you were to ask me how much Peter Cooper was worth, and I were to reply, Two or three millions of money simply, it would be evident that I had no proper conception of his character. His money was a mere formal expression of what he was worth. As it took on the forms of his disposition and heart, and stood out in great institutions, hospitals and asylums, it did in some degree indicate the value of the man. The two millions of dollars which he possessed served as windows through which to behold the wealth of tenderness and good will his character contained. His money was subordinated to grand purpose. It was venerated and regulated and integrated by the principles of eternal truth—by the same laws in accordance with which the lilies grow and the planets move. His money stood for mercy, for justice, for truth, for goodness, for helpfulness. It stood for God, as his heart did. Such money is not inflammable; you can not burn it up. It is not light; you can not blow it up. It is not proud; it does not mock the wretchedness of the poor. Who can estimate the value of money with a heart like Peter Cooper's throbbing through it, and a hand like Peter Cooper's fashioning it into brick and bread and grammar for the poor and the illiterate? Who can tell the value of the man who lets his heart throbb through his money as he did, and who lets his hand regulate it and his hand manage it as he did? As a dollar is valuable in proportion to the mental and moral value of the man who owns it, so a man is valuable in proportion to his capacity to assimilate for body, for heart, for mind, for social and domestic relation, those elements into which money may be converted. A man consecrated to a noble cause, living for the performance of a great work, will throw more value into one dollar than a narrow, contracted, stingy man will throw into a million. It is the sunshine above the cathedral that makes the stained windows valuable, that turns the dew-drop into pearl and the crystal into diamonds. So a noble human spirit, with the Spirit of God shining through it, will burnish a dollar more brightly, and reveal the eagle upon it more completely, than all the chemicals of the silversmiths. What a vast difference between a dollar in the hands of a noble struggling woman with children to train and educate and a dollar in the hands of a popinjay who lives to slip mint julep, to balance a billiard cue and to make Hogarth's lines of beauty out of a tobacco smoke! Money is worth to a man just what he gets out of it. Some men own simply the food and shelter there is in their money. Such men are poverty-stricken starvelings, though they may possess, in the ordinary sense, stocks and bonds by the million.

William E. Dodge was one of the richest men in his country measured by the proper standard. There was no social, intellectual or moral pleasure in his money but he owned it. The travel, the music, the art, the beautiful into which his money could be turned all belonged to him. Every institution which it could build for the betterment of his race was his. All gladness and good cheer it could send into crushed and bleeding hearts, all courage and hope it could send into homes of wretchedness and sorrow were his. As roots and leaves bring up from the earth and down from the sky all forces necessary to make the tree strong, beautiful and fruitful; so through his money he made levers upon all the world's thought and hope and sorrow for the enrichment of his mind, the strengthening of his faith, and the enlarging of his sympathy. The world's forces were his servants, the world's laws his friends, and the world's outlook upon a grander day his inspiration. He was rich because he knew how to use his money. Every dollar of his millions was a key to him with which he could unlock all doors opening into the treasures of sky or ocean, or social or religious life.

There are thousands of men who do not own, in a real sense, the money which they have made. They have neither taste nor capacity to turn it into anything for the ennobling of themselves. Many men are in a hurry to lay up money in brick, in stocks, but seem to forget that such money can never be enjoyed unless an equal amount is laid up in intelligence, contentment and character. One of the saddest sights in the world is to see an old man wandering among his brick blocks and investments without any capacity whatever to enjoy the high social, intellectual and religious pleasures which they should purchase for him. Sometimes we visit people who entertain us by showing us their fine cattle, or crops, or furniture. When they have made the rounds of their premises they have no more to say. Such people should issue no more currency in the shape of Jersey cows, or Plymouth Rock chickens, or clover fields, than they have represented in thought, in symmetrical character, in a pitiable spectacle for man to be driven to the necessity of having to stand beside a barn, or a railroad, or a Plymouth Rock chicken, in order to excite attention. The trouble with such a man is that when the barn burns down, or the railroad passes into the hands of the receiver, or the chicken walks away, the man is gone also. His worth consisted in plank, in iron, in fowls. The destruction of these is the destruction of the man. It should not be necessary for a man to be dressed in flashy style, or for a lady to be surrounded by tendrils and berries and flowers, to elicit our admiration. People should not seek to call off attention from poverty of spirit or meanness of culture by outward show and adornment. They should make such large investments in beautiful character as that the surroundings, whether costly or economical, should be colored by the wealth and beauty of the spirit within.

JOSE, GA., JAN. 29, 1884. J. W. LEE.

Stewards—Methodist Stewards.

In the widest scriptural sense of the word all men are stewards. The Apostle Peter exhorts all who have any gift from above to be "good stewards of the manifold grace of God." Ministers of the gospel are styled by the Apostle Paul "stewards of the mysteries of God." And of such "it is required that a man be found faithful." God requires and men demand that whoever has charge of the property or interests of another shall be a faithful administrator thereof.

In the Discipline of the Methodist Church the word "steward" is used in a special and technical sense. In every pastoral charge seven men are selected to manage the temporal affairs of the church. The number was, perhaps, suggested by the number of deacons chosen in the days of Stephen, the martyr, to relieve the apostles of the temporal duties of their office; it being "not reason that they should leave the word of God and serve tables." In charges of large membership we extend the number to one for every thirty members. Perhaps, too, the qualifications of Methodist stewards were suggested by those of the seven deacons. They were to be men of "honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom;" while Methodist stewards are desired to be "men of solid piety who both know and love the Methodist doctrine and discipline, and of good natural and acquired abilities to transact the temporal business of the church."

The office of steward is at once difficult and important. Yet, if it is thankless in many instances, it is certainly highly honorable when well filled. What would the liberal ministry do without stewards? Cavalry without horses, an army without commissaries, angels without wings, indispensable and laborious as the steward's office generally is, it is without pay, save in the winning and wearing of that good name which Solomon says is rather to be chosen than great riches. Most officers are expected to pay the incumbent; this one is usually apt to teach the incumbent to pay. Few men are stewards for any length of time without experiencing an enlargement in personal liberality. With them to see and understand the wants of the ministry is to realize a readiness to supply them. If all members could be stewards for a time, the support of the ministry would at once be enlarged and assured. While some stewards are models of faithfulness in collecting, others are conspicuous for the lack of it. The chief duty of stewards as such is to collect and disburse money for the support of the ministry. All their work should be reported to the Quarterly Conference. Some stewards never fail to attend the Quarterly Conference. Others rarely attend, and then only when the Conference is held near them. A steward is supposed to collect money every quarter, and should not fail to report the same to the Quarterly Conference. He should make his reports quarterly. If he has collected no money, let him state the fact and the reasons for it. So much impressed am I with the importance of reports at least once a quarter, and so unconvinced a thing is a report from a steward who is not present, that I report for publication the following report, just as it was made in writing, by a steward whose custom it was to report whenever he could not attend Quarterly Conference.

To the Presiding Elder and Members, Third Quarterly Conference, Madison, Tenn., Jackson Dist., Miss. Conf., M. E. Church, S.

DEAR SIRS AND BROTHERS: I regret to again have to report to the Quarterly Conference in this manner instead of in person, but such is the necessity at this time. My collections during the present quarter for support of the ministry are as follows: $5.31, $2.83, $3.81, $1.00, $2.50, $2.10, which amount has been paid—Bro. P. A. Johnson, P. C. This amount was collected from four church members and one person not a member of the church.

Our Sunday-school is in a healthy condition. We have about thirty-five scholars and six officers and teachers in attendance. The teachers report an increasing interest on the part of the scholars in the study of the Holy Scriptures.

Praying for the presence of the Holy Spirit at your meeting, and for God's continued blessings to you each through life, I remain,
Your brother in Christ,
R. L. BENNETT,
Steward, S. S. S. and Trustee.

Such a report is as rare as it is appropriate. If all stewards were required to make at least quarterly reports, either in person or in writing, the support of the ministry of our church would rapidly and greatly improve. The second question in the proceedings of the Quarterly Conference should scarcely be answered in the negative until all the stewards have reported. All the churches are concerned on this subject, and much has been written upon it of late. We have a system which will give the problem so far as we are concerned. Let us work it.

W. C. H.

A Sabbath Question.

MR. EDITOR: In one of the Southern States there is a little town in which the Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists and Roman Catholics are represented. It is a progressive town, and beautiful for its situation. It is a manufacturing town. The smoke-stacks are tall, and the columns of smoke rise to the clouds sometimes, and sometimes they pile over and come down into the streets. The directors controlling these factories and the directors controlling the railroad are almost without exception professed Christians, and a large proportion of them are official members in the churches to which they respectively belong—Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists and Roman Catholics are all there. And these gentlemen are church-going men. Their pews are seldom vacant. They are liberal men. They give freely to church objects. Individually, they are law-abiding men; but, as members of the great corporations to which they belong, they violate the laws of God and the laws of men; and what is worse, they hire the poor to do these wrongs for them. The factories close at four P. M. on Saturday, and the oil mills at midnight; but the engines and the boilers and the machinery must be overhauled on Sunday, and men are paid double wages to do this work which could and ought to be done on Saturday. The railroad trains run on Sunday, and the trainmen and employees at the depot must be on hand. The clerks at the postoffice are thus compelled to be at their places all day Sunday, and not until night can they get time to go to church. What is to be done? I am the preacher in charge of a small church in this town, and my work is among the poor. I have been faithfully trying to get my flock to observe the Sabbath as a day holy unto God. But how can I do this when the members of other churches will hire these poor people and buy from them their day of rest? Of what avail is it to bid God-speed in my work, or to give money to build the church, and then with money to tempt the poor to commit a grievous sin?

P. ASTOR.

Relation of Baptized Children to the Church.

I agree with Bro. S. R. Mort, of Franklinton, La., in the Advocate, of January 17, that the committee reporting on this subject, at our last Conference, did not answer the question propounded to them. I should answer the question of the relation of baptized children to the church on this wise:

All baptized persons sustain the same relation to the church so far as regards the mere question of baptism. Any other relation must grow out of some personal peculiarity. What has the mere age of any person to do with the question of church relationship? None that I am able to see. If we had a church constitution in the nature of a charter, which I deny, then I should require it to be shown at what age persons were too old or too young to be eligible to membership. Bro. Mort says: "If we are ever regenerated it will be after we have crossed the line of our accountability and are capable of adopting Christ as our Saviour." This I regard as dangerous doctrine. First, we can not dictate what time must or must not do. How do we know that he will not regenerate children of some particular age? Second, what "line of accountability" is this? I know of no such line. According to the brother's description of it, it must be away along in or near the teens, for under that age a child could not ordinarily know much of the strict theology of the atonement. And if children must wait for regeneration in all cases until they are "capable" of demonstrating the philosophy of Christian atonement, alas! for the children—yes, and for most of the grown people.

But what "accountability" is here referred to? There are a hundred kinds in practical life. Any sane child, not greatly diseased, four or six months old, is most certainly accountable to some extent for some things, while the same child or another would not be accountable to the fullest extent for some other things at the age of eighteen or twenty years. This mythical, indefinable "line of accountability" has done considerable harm. I think, in moral and theological discussion.

REV. ABBEY.

Important Centenary Action.

The Central Centenary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held a two days' session, during the past week, at the Publishing House in Nashville.

Rev. Dr. E. R. Hendrix, the chairman, was present, and presided over the deliberations of the session. Rev. Dr. W. P. Harrison, the secretary, Judge James Whitworth, the treasurer, and Bishop McTear, members of the committee, were present. James G. Carter and L. D. Palmer were unavoidably absent. Upon invitation Bishop Hargrove, David Morton, secretary of the Board of Church Extension, Rev. Dr. R. A. Young, missionary secretary, Rev. Dr. Cunningham, Sunday-school editor, Rev. Dr. McFerrin, book agent, and Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald, editor of the Christian Advocate, attended the sessions of the committee.

The secretary reported that he had sent out, in answer to inquiries, not less than three thousand letters and circulars, and that arrangements had been effected to keep the religious and secular press fully informed as to our operations during Centenary year.

In view of the great demand upon the services of the secretary, the committee determined to employ a competent assistant, Mr. Wilson Williams, who will devote his whole time to the work.

In order to supply the great demand for information, the secretary was authorized to prepare slips containing items of interest, and send them simultaneously, from time to time, to all the church papers.

Bishop McTear reported his history of American Methodism, which is being written at the request of the committee, as in an advanced state of preparation, and that it is being put through the press as rapidly as the great importance of the work will permit. It is hoped that it will be ready for the public by the first of May.

Arrangements were perfected for the striking of a Centenary medal, bearing the profiles of Bishops Ashby and McKendree, to be distributed through the Sunday-school department of the church. Further announcements about the distribution of this medal will be shortly made.

It was determined to issue a circular letter, to be placed in the hands of every member of our congregations, setting forth the nature and objects of our Centenary celebration, together with subscription cards for the great connectional objects—education, missions and church extension—to be taken up on Centenary Day. These circular letters are to be sent out to the various presiding elders, and by them to be forwarded to the preachers in their districts for distribution. It was further determined that, as collections for local objects would be taken at different times during the year, the collections of Centenary Day were to be exclusively devoted to these great connectional objects, and that in the case of very large subscriptions one-third is to be cash, and the remainder in six and twelve months, so that all may be in hand before the General Conference of 1885.

It was advised that large mass meetings in the interest of church extension be held in the churches of Louisville during the sessions of the Board of Church Extension, March 27-29, and that similar mass meetings in the interest of foreign missions be held in the churches of Nashville during the sessions of the Board of Missions, April 2-4.

It is to be hoped that the campaign thus opened shall be promptly and vigorously prosecuted at District Conferences and at mass meetings under the auspices of the different Conference Centenary Committees throughout the connection.

These different Conference committees are, therefore, urged to take prompt action in arranging for the times, places and speakers for these meetings.

The meetings of the committee were pervaded by a spirit of hopefulness, as well as by a sense of the importance of the work in hand. It is believed that a large number of the preachers are getting ready for the Centenary celebration by taking the regular collections and preparing the minds of the people for the great event of the year. Let the whole church be prepared for our Centenary campaign which is thus opening so auspiciously.

Good Words.

It is not are they
That live for Christ so well,
The longest day
Would scarce suffice to tell
In what wide ways their benefactions fell.

Poorest are they
That live to self so true,
Their longest day
Brings but such good to view
As they may need self's service to pursue.

—E. A. Champin.

—When he shall appear we shall be like him. In this the human spirit rests; there is nothing greater. Already it appeared so to us when, under the coarse garment, he concealed the splendors of heaven; already it seemed to us that here or nowhere was to be seen the noblest form of humanity; and now the garb of the servant is laid aside, and he has put on the royal crown. And what he, the first-born brother, is, that shall we also be. If, then, he will reveal himself to me in his whole glory, will he not enter me as the unbroken sunshine, and make me wholly light as he is? And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure.—Tholuck.

—Kind words have amazing power to heal and help. They act with wonderful influence in curing a wounded spirit. They produce their own image in men's souls, and a beautiful image it is. They soothe and comfort the hearer and shame him out of his unkind feelings. We do not use them so freely and abundantly as they ought to be used.

—Life is made up not of great sacrifices and duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness, and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.—Sir H. Davy.

—Heaven is the day of which grace is the dawn; the rich, ripe fruit of which grace is the lovely flower; the inner shrine of that most glorious temple to which grace forms the approach and the outer court. Dr. Guthrie.

—The sun shines no matter how thick the clouds. It is the Christian's duty to shine on with a tranquil love which will seize on every ray in the clouds to throw a ray of tenderness through it into the darkness behind.

—Let the ground of all religious action be obedience; examine not why it is commanded, but observe it because it is commanded. True obedience never procrustes nor questions.

—Not so much brilliant sermons, but the telling of the story of what great things Christ has done for us is what is needed.

—The living Christian—pure of heart and unspotted by the world—is the best preacher of the gospel in these days.

NOT FAR.

The Borden Homicide.

contrary opinion. He insisted Borden had been watching him undisturbed that he had not. He felt Borden had never mistreated him and at first I told him not to be pressed by him. I told him I was not going to know how. I told him I thought as he pleased. He said mistreatment that Borden had done to our going to the community hall, which I did not like, and evening following when I was in library getting up my books. Borden came in and asked me what I was doing. I told him I was getting up my books. I thought his mistreatment that Borden had done to me that he thought I was getting up my books.

Letters to Young Men;

THE YOUNG PHYSICIAN.

Young men, therefore, who are contemplating the choice of this profession should consider that in no other life is there more competition and under greater difficulties than in the life of a physician. They should also remember that an unsuccessful physician is a wretched man, having less opportunity for getting a living in any way than of his profession than any other person. The average physician has a very small income.

My about.
aying

THOROUGH GENERAL EDUCATION
PORTANT.

THE VALUE OF OFFICE ST
I would advise you to stu

of a physician, as well as to the courses in the college w

you may select. Two or three intimate association with a practitioner will prepare a person only for the discrimination of right and for the administration of right, but for that dealing with human life independent of the material elements is one of the most important elements in the healing part. Denial at this time seems to be the estimate study in the offices of life with the physician.

BEGIN WITH SOME ESTABLISHED PH

ments to the unmarried physician.

Be prepared for a long period of waiting.

AN ILLUSTRATION.

city within fifty miles of Philadelphia. He had a few hundred dollars, expected soon to get into practice. The first week passed away, and hygienic methods he proceeded her administering but little u

She gradually grew better. Weeks she rode out, and months she could walk. In spite of her ailments, she was almost well. Her father, joyed, presented him with $500, the amount of his bill, and de-his surplus time to sounding his far and wide. At the time he wrote this story, he was driving horses, and was as busy as a bee, to commit suicide, even come to potatoes. The turn near at hand.—New York Advocate.

DO IT NOW

—♦♦♦—

DEAR BOYS: I have another fact to state which is known and read of all possible, to promote the Redeemer's kingdom. Many of them are as faithful their history from early girlhood you would find that they were loving and

HAZLEHURST, MISSISSIPPI.

Sabbath-school this winter. Last year we had a very good small school from May till November. Papa was 80

ASTORIA, Miss., Jan. 23, 1894

WILLIE C. GUST

—MR. EDITOR: AS I HAVE NOT written to you for long time, I will write short letter. I had a very nice time at Christmas. My grandpa and grandma, Rev. J. A. Godfrey and wife, and I had a very nice Christmas with them. Grandpa lives in his district during the cold weather. He was in the first week in the new year. (Grandma left this morning. We are all very lonely without her.) The "girl" is found in Joel III, 1.

Miss K. Miss, Jan. 21 1861.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading the pieces in the boys and girls' column and like them very much. The answer

MILTON C. HOUL,
GREENVILLE, MISS., Jan. 26, 1884.

STREET ETIQUETTE FOR GIRLS.— sensible writer suggests that when 1

"One was that he would make well, and you're not sick any more."

"Ah, my son, you will have to naughty temper, then God will give you the victory. But He won't work for you."

The Rev. Mr. Carrington, of N. H.

The negro, thinking the question addressed to him, replied, in the

THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

In 1905, after several years of tuous industry, Durer made a to Venice. It is said that field much pleased with Durer's especially with his manner of representing hair. One day he began German to give him the brush he used for it; upon this, Durer one of his common brushes and a long tress of woman's hair. Bellini looked on admiringly, declared that had he not seen it, not have believed it.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NEW ORLEANS CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. O. HOWARD.

THURSDAY FEBRUARY 14, 1884.

The latest advices from the meetings at St. Louis, under Rev. Thomas Harrison, are most encouraging. Though rather severely opposed by an Episcopal doctor and a few others, they have impressed the great community and many have been converted. We pray that a Pentecost may dwell upon the churches there.

The recent anniversaries of the birth of Tom Paine were dismal affairs. But few, comparatively, took part in the melancholy proceedings. What a contrast with the world-wide jubilee over the four hundredth birthday of Martin Luther! The one advocated a gospel of hate and gloom, the other a gospel of light and power. The memory of the one will rot, while the other will be held in everlasting remembrance.

It is an inspiration to faith to read of the great success attending missionaries in the foreign field. The Rev. B. H. Badley, D. D., who has been a Methodist missionary in India, says that in the Methodist missions of India the increase of converts from 1851 to 1861 was 53 per cent.; from 1861 to 1872, 64 per cent.; from 1872 to 1881, 86 per cent. He believes that the rate from 1881 to 1891 will be 125 per cent. Verily the gospel is the power of God unto salvation.

Dr. Allen is appealing loudly for more laborers to be sent forth into the great Chinese harvest. The call is urgent, and should be obeyed. We could not more appropriately celebrate our Centenary than by consecrating more money, men and women to the work of saving heathen millions. In a private letter to Dr. Potter, of the Wesleyan, he says: "Fly the missionary flag—the distress flag—till at least nine ladies respond, and are accepted for woman's work, and not fewer than five additional men respond for work under the Parent Board. We must have them, and they must get ready to come; and the church must make up its mind to send and sustain them."

The Rev. Dr. J. P. Newman is having much trouble in playing half Methodist and half Congregationalist. He is a Methodist local preacher and a "supply" of the Madison Avenue Congregational Church in New York. A difficulty occurred some weeks ago which was sought to be healed by a recent congregational meeting. The stenographic account of it, published in the last issue of the New York Advocate, is a humiliation. That such disgraceful scenes could be enacted in a Christian church, and by its members and adherents, appals every honest conscience, to say nothing of the spirit of our religion. The vociferous "outside element"—few holders, we suppose—routed the regular members and apparently carried the day for Dr. Newman. If we had the doctor's ear and confidence, we would advise a return to the itinerancy with a spirit that "will go anywhere," station or circuit, without consultation with Bishop or presiding elder.

A mass meeting in the interest of Sabbath observance was held on Sunday evening last in the First Presbyterian Church of this city. A large audience filled that spacious temple, and entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion. The several denominations united in the service, and gave no uncertain sound in behalf of a more respectful observance of the Sabbath day. Dr. Palmer, president, and presided the meeting. Rev. Felix K. Hill, of Carondelet Street Methodist Church, read the Scripture lesson, Rev. H. H. Waters, of the Episcopal Church, offered the opening prayer and Bishop Kavanaugh prayed fervently at the close of the service. Addresses were delivered by the persons and on the subjects in the order as follows: "The Sabbath in Relation to Religion and the Divine Claims Upon Its Observance," by Rev. Bishop J. N. Galbreath; "The Sabbath as Given to Man, and His Right to the Same," by Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer; "The Sabbath, the Bulwark of Social Order and Good Government," by the editor of the Advocate. We say that the influence of that occasion, and the work of the Sunday League, may aid in creating a moral sentiment that will rescue the Sabbath to the people of New Orleans, and remove from Louisiana the moral stigma of being the only State in the Union without a Sunday law.

Duties of a Preacher to His Predecessor.

Some years ago we contributed a communication to this Advocate on the above subject. It is a matter of practical importance to us with our changing pastorate. And now at the beginning of another Conference year, when plans are being projected for pastoral labor, it has special and timely significance. By request we reproduce the substance of what was written on that occasion:

1. He should endeavor to carry out his predecessor's wisely-formed plans. With our frequent pastoral changes, and limited term of service, a wise master-builder must leave many proposed works uncompleted. They required time and tact for their full development and fruition. These must all come to naught, unless his successor enters into their spirit, and vigorously underlines their achievement. Harmony of purpose is an absolute prerequisite to success. Here we have often failed. This is the vulnerable heel of Achilles in our itinerancy. Nothing is more common than for a pastor's enterprises to lose interest when he removes to another field. His successor doubts their wisdom, and emphasizes others he considers most important. This lack of harmony entails loss and dispirits enterprise. With the fresh aspirations of a new pastorate, are introduced changes and reforms. Old things pass away, and, behold! all things become new. The congregation is led into a different channel of thought and effort. Of necessity, this begets instability of purpose and contrariety of opinion. Observant pastors will acknowledge this to be no fancied picture, but a sad reality.

2. Another duty is to defend his predecessor's reputation. Every man of positive convictions will have had some antagonisms. His style was not according to every taste. Some oversensitive ones have felt themselves slighted. On his first pastoral round a preacher will discover that his predecessor had points that pained. He will hear criticisms favorable and unfavorable. Now, if he is a true Methodist—having approved the passage of the brother's character when the usual Conference question was asked, "Is there anything against him?"—he will be careful not to encourage uncharitable comments on his ministry and good name. You will hear: "Bro.—did so and so, which I never did like. He is a good man, but—" And right there the parishioner ought to be invited to change the subject or unite in prayer. Our predecessor's reputation is largely in our keeping. We can inflict upon him untold injury, or, like a true brother in Christ, we may honor and exalt him. Then, in addition, we should remember two things: First, Our own ministry has to undergo the same hypercritical test; and secondly, The very parties who discuss so freely our predecessor will give as a similar introduction to our successor. Here the true, chivalrous brotherhood of our itinerancy displays itself. By honoring the Lord's anointed we defend and promote his kingdom. To speak evil of ministers is to wound the cause of Christ.

It is also a preacher's duty to honor the labors of his predecessor. What has been accomplished should not be undervalued. Much of our work is to reap where others have sown. Their sowing should have equal honor with our reaping. A circuit, station or district may be served with faithfulness for a full term, without the earnest pastor noting much fruit of his labor. Another comes whose mission is to gather the golden sheaves, and whose joy is to sing the harvest song. Though possibly more honored—credited with being a more successful workman—he largely enjoys the fruits of other planting. Depreciation of our predecessor's efficiency is not an uncommon, but a very reprehensible failure. You will find he reached a class and performed a work never accomplished by any one before him. This constitutes the wonderful wisdom of our system—the employment and distribution of varied talents finding access to all classes, and developing in succession every phase of Christian work. Wherever we have officiated in the above, let us repent and reform.

If anybody is disposed to think that the persecuting spirit of the Roman Church is any less bitter and bloodthirsty than in the days of the inquisition, where it has sufficient power, he is invited to read the following dispatch, dated London, January 28:

"The small city of Astorga, in Spain, was the scene yesterday of a religious commotion. A party of students, under the leadership of priests, made an attack upon an Englishman and a native who were distributing Bibles about the streets. They even threatened to burn the Spaniard. The victims made unavailing appeals to the police for protection."

Some Words for Parents.

Every conscientious parent must feel deep interest in this question: How shall I order my house aright before the Lord? The writer of this brief paper ventures to call attention to some things which of late have given him grave concern.

What sort of books, magazines and newspapers are our children reading? A New Orleans pastor recently suggested to the paternal head of a large family that it would be well to subscribe for a certain religious journal. The pater familias declined on the score of economy. The pastor was bold enough to ask: "How many church papers do you take?" "One," was the reply. "But what do your sons and daughters read?" "Oh my children suit themselves in their reading. I allow them a little money to get such books and papers as they want, but am sorry to say that they buy novels, and they take the—Weekly and—Monthly," and here he called the names of two periodicals which, in the writer's judgment, should never find entrance into a respectable, much less Christian, home.

It need not be added that the pastor's heart was made sad despite the opportunity offered for kindly admonition, which, by the way, he endeavored faithfully to improve.

Now, the example just given is typical of parental neglect, it might almost be said criminally. In many, very many, of our city homes. In the country, possibly, the case may be different; it is to be hoped so at least.

It can not be denied that the class of literature now most popular is most dangerous and corrupting. Much of it is not only frothy and frivolous, but morally unsound. It is positively licentious. It is impossible to estimate what firebrands, arrows and death, what enmity to God and man are produced by these insidious but sure messengers of evil that find their way even into Christian households. Good impressions, which have cost years of labor to produce, may be totally destroyed in a few hours by reading a single licentious novel or newspaper romance.

Here is a grave responsibility attaching to parents. That father is by no means guiltless who will look on indifferently while his son is being poisoned mentally and morally by a growing passion for unsound literature. That mother makes a fatal mistake who will not kindly yet firmly guide her daughters' tastes by wholesome counsel and good example. We can not be too cautious in placing works of fiction in the hands of the young. True, many great works of the masters of pure and elevated thought are clothed in the robes of fiction, but the large majority of books that come under this class of literature are hurtful in their influences. And, now, there is another question which this writer would present for the serious consideration of parents:

Let it not well that we should strive to make home more pleasant and attractive to our children than any other place? An old poet has written:

"A father's radiant face, a mother's smile
Will brighten home with a perpetual joy;
Where fathers frown and mothers scold the while
There surely dwells the wayward girl or boy."

We have seen homes—and of Christian people, too—that have the appearance of prison-houses for the young. In such cases the fault is nearly always with the parents. It is often the case that the husband and father makes his home a mere boarding-house, where he eats and sleeps. He does not spend enough of his time with his family, and it may be he is honestly persuaded that his business demands all his time, except the few moments for hurried meals and the hours necessary for sleep. He does not stop to reflect that the wear and tear upon his own nervous system by excessive devotion to business is a qualifying him for the proper discharge of his temporal affairs, and that, being almost a mere visitor at his own house, he is neglecting the intellectual and moral culture of his children. When he returns to his home after the tolls of the day he brings with him the business concerns that ought to have been left at his office. At heart he is kind and true, yet his presence chills and repels the little ones; and, as they see him in his austere mood, they hardly dare to speak a word, much less indulge a hearty laugh, for fear of meeting an angry frown or harsh rebuke.

The wife and mother is often at fault. She and her husband are at times mutually unamiable—he too exacting of her, she impatient because of his reserve and instability. This unfortunate spirit may not show itself so much in words as in general manner and conduct. The effects are, of course, very soon apparent in the dispositions and conduct of the children. There is no place where they are more unhappy than at home. They dwell under this depressing shadow in early childhood, and when they grow up to be young men and women they are impatient of all restraint; they seek pleasure at the theater, the dance or anywhere else so that they may get away from home.

Even religion is often presented in the home circle in most somber aspects. That which is itself the soul of cheerfulness is made forbidding and distasteful. Such piety may be sincere, but it is morbid and unsonant. By precept and example, we should bring our children to realize that a Christian life is not only wise and right, but that it is also the best and happiest life. While we impress them with the supreme importance of fearing God and keeping his commandments, we should not shut the windows and keep the house in darkness. We should let in the genial light and sunshine. We should indulge them in their innocent pleasures, and share with them their childish joys. And thus an atmosphere of cheerfulness will pervade the house, and to these young hearts home will be the happiest place in all the world.

Oh that we may have grace and wisdom so that we may know how to combine sound, salutary discipline with sweetness of temper and cheerfulness of spirit. A home that is thus governed is indeed a very near approach of earth to heaven. It is the synonym of all that is congenial to the tenderest and most sacred feelings of the heart, an Eden of joy in a world of trouble and affliction.

Bishop Pierce's Golden Wedding.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate contains an account of the most appropriate, Christian celebration of Bishop Pierce's golden wedding. Both of his brothers and every one of the Bishop's thirty living descendants were present, but not one who witnessed his marriage fifty years ago. Among others present from abroad was Dr. Fitzgerald, of the Nashville Advocate. Bishop and Mrs. McTear presented a large stand of silver, gold and tinted glass, Bishop Hargrove presented a brace of coins, and various other gifts from different States made it quite a connectional affair. We quote as follows from the Wesleyan:

Promptly at half-past eight P. M. the Bishop and his wife entered the double parlors and took their places under the festooned arch of the folding doors. There was no mock marriage ceremony, no travesty upon the solemn church rite which appropriately celebrates the union between man and wife. This writer, at the request of the family, and in behalf of the friends present, greeted the happy couple in a few simple but hearty words. Then Dr. Fitzgerald addressed them in fitting style and with a warm, full heart. After which the Bishop responded in a speech of some twenty minutes' length, in his own inimitable way, telling us of his courtship and early married life, treating with chastened humor and touching undertone of affection the tender relation he had so long sustained to the "little woman" by his side, and closing his remarks with unreserved fulness of expression of his gratitude to God for the abundant blessings which had crowned his married life.

Salutations, hand shakings and personal greetings, then followed, and for half an hour the scene was most bewitchingly pleasant and bewilderingly decorous.

The costumes were neat but not gaudy, rich but not extravagant. Indeed, from first to last there was nothing but a dignified display, nor any sign that anybody was trying to be able.

The spread was ample, delicious and decorated with exquisite art. Here as well as everywhere, during the evening, the most impressive management of Mr. Kovick Pierce and his estimable wife made all things agreeable for their guests. No hurry, no confusion, no delay marred the pleasure of the dining hours.

Supper over, grown people and children assembled in the parlors for evening worship, which consisted of reading the one hundred and thirty Psalm, singing and prayer. After this the guests, at their leisure, took their leave, all agreeing that the evening had been a most delightful and profitable one.

Notice to the North Mississippi Conference.

I have just received from Dr. Kelley, Treasurer of our Board of Missions, the following letter. It speaks for itself. Dear brethren, let us, if possible, put our foreign missionary collections in bill and at once into the general treasury.

T. B. MALONE, Treasurer, Conference Board of Missions,
SENIATONIA, MISS., February 4, 1884.

DEAR BROTHER: From this date until April 1 you will please forward to this office all amounts received by you for foreign missions. There is urgent necessity that all collections made be placed in this treasury before April 1, and we hope this request will be promptly complied with by all Conference treasurers.

Yours truly,
D. C. KELLEY, Treasurer.

Crime vs. Education.

MR. EDITOR: I do not often call you to task, but, if you please, allow me to do so upon the following sentence: "Better educate the child than feed the pauper or punish the criminal."

I feel tempted sometimes to go to the opposite extreme, and state the proposition that the common education to-day is productive of pauperism and crime. I shall not do so, but there are facts enough at hand to sustain a plausible argument. But what I want to do is to take the part of the poor and ignorant in this unequal contest. I do not lay this at your door, Mr. Editor, for I know that you do not so mean it; but it is ungracious to twit the poor, ignorant man in such a way. He has enough to bear without being told that he is a villain because he is poor. There is an implication on the other hand that all the wealthy and educated are the good and helpful to the State. It stigmatizes condition rather than character, in which case Christianity has no jewels except among the rich and learned. Let me say again I know you did not mean it, but the construction you will allow to be legitimate. But I feel prepared to argue:

1. Statistics of penitentiaries are not fair guides by which to judge of criminals as to education. Reason: The poor and ignorant are not able to bring to bear that influence both of money, legal counsel and public opinion which the rich and educated so successfully employ. You know that it is a matter of extreme difficulty to convict a rich and shrewd man. During my whole life I have read one execution of a lawyer. He was so notoriously guilty that it was impossible to find a pretext of acquittal.

2. As a class the poor and uneducated are as honest as the rich and educated. Some of the richest people I know became so by frauds which I call stealing. There was no law call it such, but the morality of the act is not changed. Again, there are rich men who became so by stealing and false swearing. Notoriously corrupt men have defrauded the people of millions, and have laughed in the face of all law. I need only refer you to the Washington records. They are fresh in all minds.

3. Much of the education is in the interest of crime, and much of the crime is impossible except by the educated. The organizations of burglars and highwaymen are not composed of poor or ignorant men. There is as sharp talent engaged in systematic crime as there is in running the government. In fact, a little of the government running is along that groove.

4. The uneducated and idiotic or imbecile become paupers just as sometimes a lame rat or a blind fox becomes an object of charity. But go to the streets, and see the educated hummers, dead-beats and rals burrowing under every crib of public or social enterprise. They practice infinitely varied tricks and devices to catch the "greenbacks" not of their sort. These "greenbacks" often are "sponky," but not wise. They raise a row after being deeded. The police come. The rats take to their holes, and the "greeny" goes to the lock-up, and if he has no more money he "goes up for thirty or sixty days" to the workhouse.

5. The rich and educated are not more essential to the government than the poor and uneducated. The rich men, as a rule, are the most liberal and desirous of public spirit. I am happy to know that there are noble exceptions, but if we look around and select one hundred rich men at random we may count on seventy-five of them being utterly selfish and in the way rather than helpful to public enterprise. Compare me to the poor man as the one to whom the country must go for silver if not for brains or gold.

6. Education is now in great part bestowment of patronage and expecting service in return. The schemes proposed by States and statesmen, by churches and churchmen all look largely to this end. Of course I do not object to this if kept in due bounds. But I do say this, that an education obtained at the expense of a deed in trust or mortgage by Church or State or individual is degrading beyond all ignorance. Unconscientious and rough the one may be, while the other may be prepossessing and polished, but an ennobled intellect and heart are there to guard the Scraglio or barren of the despot.

7. Being an educator myself I can not be charged with prejudice; but the experience of twenty years has forced upon me the opinion that if after educating a pupil I have not impressed him with a higher toned moral character, I have done the world an injury rather than a benefit. Some of my pupils were plow boys before going to school to me. Some of them have since become saloon-keepers, some lawyers, some legislators and some editors. The old fields of my native State accuse me of having inflicted those deep wounds in their hillsides. Corn might have nodded there had I not educated the hoy into a great gas-bag and hoisted him into the Legislature or lo a tripod. But I am penitent, and hope to be forgiven.

T. A. S. A.

A Ringing Testimony.

Last week, it will be remembered, we made some comments upon a certain Episcopal clergyman in Jersey City attending a theater for relief and comfort in a great bereavement. We give now on the other side a manly letter from Dr. C. F. Deems, of the "Church of the Strangers," New York City. No man has had better opportunity for wide observation and the forming of a correct judgment as to the moral influence of the modern drama. As pastors, we need to warn our congregations against this fascinating evil. It is the snare that catches many a young professor of religion and leads him away from God. Theater-going church members do not and can not enjoy religion, and are rarely ever zealous in good works. A minister in a country town having written to Dr. Deems, and propounded certain questions, he made positive and timely answer. The following are the questions and the reply:

QUESTIONS.—1. Are you opposed to theaters? 2. Briefly, why? 3. What, in your judgment, is the effect of attending the theater? (a) Upon churches whose members attend? (b) Upon individuals who attend? "Will you please pardon the intrusion of a stranger upon your time and attention, and answer for the good of souls in this place?"

ANSWER.—DEAR SIR: My time is most closely occupied and my reply to your questions must be brief. 1. I am opposed to theaters in general. 2. Because, while there are good plays, the great majority of persons who make up the theatrical personnel are ungodly persons, whose lives are vicious, and the weight of whose influence is thrown against religion and morality, so that the general effect is deleterious to society; so much so that if every theater in the land, the best and the worst, were closed for five years the whole community would undoubtedly not lose, but greatly gain, by the procedure. 3. The effect of attending the theater, by which I suppose you mean habitual attendance upon theatrical entertainments, (a) Upon the churches whose members attend, "is a waste of the moral power of those churches. Last week a gay and beautiful actress was soliciting a member of our church to attend her performance. When the lady positively refused, on the ground that as a church member she could not go, the young actress applauded her and made the statement that whenever she was on the boards and saw a church member in the house she despised that person as a hypocrite. Although this is a violent judgment, every actor may be presumed to feel thus toward theater-going church people. All those people lose their influence over others, both actors and irregular attendants: 'If you were a worldly person, sir, could any man or woman whom you met at the theater have any influence over you to bring you to God? Probably they would never attempt it. Theater-going churchmen are not active workers for Christianity as a rule. If such a man should approach you on the subject of your soul's salvation you would laugh him to scorn. He knows that, and therefore will not address you on religious topics. (b) I have yet to know of a single person who has been converted by attending theaters, and I have had knowledge of a number of men and women who have been ruined by theaters—ruined in body and fortune and spiritual life. The best Christian workers do not attend theaters; those who are active in church work soon lose their zeal if they become attendants upon theaters.

This is as full a reply as I can now make to your questions. It is proper to say that I have never been present during a representation in a theater, with the exception of twice at the opera in Berlin very many years ago. I do not take the ground that a man who attends the theater is necessarily not a Christian. There is no rule in our church which prevents its members attending the theater. But to present the views stated above, I have to their consciences. It is mere amusement of mine gave birth to the pain to the humblest member of my flock which his going to the theater gives his pastor I would drop that amusement at once. Very truly yours,

S. C. P. D.

A Mistake.

MR. EDITOR: You published the following in your paper of January 31, 1884:

Bishop Wilson, says the Richmond Advocate, quote about ninety changes in the appointments at the session of the North Carolina Conference. Whereupon the Arkansas Methodist remarks that Bishop Granberry did some of the same kind of work in the Arkansas Conference. "But such preachers were returned to the fields of labor they occupied the year before." The set time for a general shaking up seemed to have come.

That wise man, Bishop Keener, presided at the last session of the North Carolina Conference to the satisfaction of all, as he generally does.

L. S. BURKHEAD.

NEWBERRY, N. C., Feb. 4, 1884.

Freshly torn and	8.10
Haydies and descriptions.....	8.10
Congregationalists.....	6.00
Uncharlans.....	1.00
Free Thought.....	1.00
Minor Sects.....	2.00
Of no particular religion.....	8.50

MR. EFFORD: Please to say your paper that I want and I have the reports from the secretaries of the Annual Conference of Missions. The printers are working on my annual report, and will not keep well for such far as the Louisiana and Mississippi to be left out. Yours, R. A. YOUNG

HENRY VAUGHAN, Resident Secretary
JULES P. ROUX, Assistant Resident Secy
CLARENCE P. LOW, Deputy Asst. Resident

SEEDS PLANTS

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 8;

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1438.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.
All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D.D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O'NEILL,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D.D.,
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D.D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

OUTWARD BOUND.

BY MISS MURDOCK.

Out upon the unknown deep,
Where the unknown waters sweep,
Where the unseen islands sleep—
Outward bound,
Following toward the silent west
Over the horizon's curved time—
Outward bound,
He with me and I with him—
Outward bound.
Nothing but a speck we seem
In the waste of waters round,
Floating, drifting like a dream—
Outward bound,
Yet within that tiny sphere
Two brave hearts side by side record
All our triumph, grief and weal,
Look up calm and praise the Lord
Outward bound.

China and Her People.

BY REV. J. W. LAMBETH.

(Foreign Letter.)

My Dear Young Friends: I am going to continue in this letter an account of the remarkable characters among the boys of China. A great many centuries since there was a boy by the name of Lan-tatz, who was said to be a very obedient boy to his parents, and did everything he could to please them. When he was seventy years of age his father and mother were still living. Lan-tatz would not acknowledge that he was growing old; he wanted still to be a child to interest and please his parents. He would often dress himself in different colored garments, not as a little child in their presence, and, having toys in his hand, would jump and dance around the room to please them. He would bring in a bucket of water, let it fall as if done accidentally, and then he would fall down and cry out as though he was a little child. He did not want his parents to think he was growing old, for he was afraid if he should in any way show that he was growing old, it would grieve them and make them feel very sad and unhappy.

About the Christian era there was a poor boy whose name was Toong Yoong. His parents were very poor, and when his father died the boy was not able to buy a coffin in which to bury him. He sold himself to one of his neighbors in order to get money sufficient to bury his father. When he had purchased the coffin, and had completed the burial of his father, he started at once to the man to whom he had sold himself in order to fulfill his contract. While on his way there he met a young lady who said to him: "I have heard of your great kindness to your parents, and that you have sold yourself in order to get a sufficient sum with which to purchase a coffin that you might be able to bury your father. I have come to assist to earn that money that you may be able to return it and be released from this bondage."

The man replied: "I have sold myself to be the servant of this man. How can you consent to come and assist me?"

She said to him: "I know you have sold yourself, and it is for this reason I have come to help you."

They then went together, and when they had reached the house of the neighbor, he said to the woman: "For what have you come with this man?"

The woman replied: "I have heard of his great faithfulness to his father, and have come to help him return the money borrowed."

The neighbor then said to the woman: "If you will weave for me three hundred bolts of silk gauze, I will release this man from his contract."

She at once set to work, and in one month the maiden had finished her task, and at once the young man was released, from the contract he had made. He at once set out to return to his home with a joyful heart, not only that he was released from the engagement he had made, but that he had some one to go home with him. When they reached the spot where they first met the young girl vanished from his sight, and the young man was left alone to wonder who this person was. I presume this story was written for Chinese young people, and I hope all my young friends will see the moral.

Some two thousand years since there lived a boy in China named Kwok Jew, and his parents were very poor. His father died when he was but a boy, but his mother lived until quite old. Kwok Jew had a little son three years old whom his grandmother loved very much, and would always save some of her own food for the little boy. Kwok Jew said to his wife: "I am very poor and can not afford to purchase much for my mother to eat, and yet my mother will insist on giving some of her food to my son. I do not like this. Come let us bury him out of sight that my mother may live, for if she dies I can not have another mother." His wife did not dare disobey him in this matter, and they set to work and opened a grave three feet deep, and just then they found a lot of gold which was written these words: "This gold was prepared by heaven and kept here for this obedient and loving son. The oil can never claim it, and the people can never take it from you." His son was saved from being buried alive, and he had sufficient money to support his mother with all her life. Now, my young friends, do you believe this story? I do not. It may seem well for the heathen to talk that way, and think there is no sin in destroying one of their little children; but Christian people think differently because they are taught in God's word that it is a sin to destroy the lives of their fellow-men. The Chinese think they are allowed to do any sin to save the lives of father or mother.

More than two thousand years since there was a man named Kyangsee, who was a loving and obedient son. He loved his mother, and his wife was as loving and obedient as her husband. His mother was fond of drinking the water of the great river Yangtze, which was distant some three miles from his home. The wife of this man was not afraid of the toil and labor of getting the water, but went daily to get a supply for her mother-in-law. His mother was also very fond of fried fish. Both husband and wife did all they could to procure it for her. They would hire themselves out to work, in their neighbors' farms to get money to purchase fish for his mother. His mother would invite all her old neighbors to come and join her in eating the fish thus provided by her son and daughter-in-law. The son and his wife were delighted to do her will. On one occasion the ground opened very suddenly, and from the opening came excellent water such as they had brought from the river. In this water, to their great surprise, there came two fish every day. These the son and wife brought to his mother every day with a supply of the good water, and thus she was made very happy. This is all a fable, and yet there is some good teaching in it. There is a hidden meaning there which looks as if it were teaching us that there is an All-seeing Eye ever watching over us who will reward our good actions in this life. I will write one more short story before I close this letter.

Several thousand years since there was a boy whose name was Tsz-yung. He was quite young when his father died, and he grew up to love and obey his mother. At the time I am speaking of there was a war and a great famine which lasted several years. This boy went every day to the fields and gathered mulberries and other fruit for his mother. He divided the fruit into two bowls. The ripe fruit he gave to his mother, and the unripe he used himself. It soon became known that he loved his mother and was trying to support her. An officer of the government sent him a large quantity of rice and some beef for his mother and himself. Thus he was rewarded for his kindness to his mother. In this we may learn an important lesson. God watches over us and takes note of all good actions. Here in these stories of the heathen we may learn some very important lessons. Pray that these poor people may be able to look to God for his blessing.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Jan. 5, 1884.

Adaptation.

BY REV. W. H. ANDERSON, D.D.

In a very large variety of meanings and uses is this term employed. It seems usually to carry with it the idea of fitness or qualification or preparation. If we look through the works of God, as far as the finite can study the infinite, we find that this feature characterizes the arrangements of three kingdoms: the material, mental and spiritual. Here the rules of growth, the principles of health, the source of happiness. The body is not only adapted for its various and multiplied processes of mechanics, philosophy and chemistry in the suitable preparation of food, and its regular and proper distribution to supply wants and repair wastes; and fit it for the real activities of business pursuits; but here is also the palace of the soul. The residence must be arranged for the royal inhabitant, to furnish a servant as well as a companion.

Adaptation is to be considered in the elements and supplies of growth and development, while it is not to be disregarded in the exercise of our faculties in accordance with the duty required in the work to be accomplished. The Roman giant, Milo, is said to have cultivated his strength by carrying daily a calf across the arena until the calf gradually attained the size and weight of the full grown ox.

Matter and mind must have mutual adaptation. The character of the employment must in a large degree decide the adaptation of the muscular forces to be employed, the period of their use and the time of continuance. A blacksmith used to the sledge hammer, and the force to be employed in his work in the shop, would find himself out of place in regulating the delicate machinery of a watch. His rude touch might be ruin. So, on the other hand, the silversmith would be equally out of place if called on with his delicate tools to forge a cable for a war ship. So, in the practice of the arts, delicate manipulation is of more value than a mule-load of books on science and systems and theories. All the Hebrew ever taught in a divinely school would never mend a watch spring; nor would a university course of classic Greek and Latin give adaptation for the place of a bookkeeper in a bank.

There is a great mistake in the education in our schools and colleges. Too little regard is paid to any natural predisposition to some trade, art or profession. Natural endowment and early developed skill in some peculiar direction remains overlooked. The same order and round of studies are pursued by all alike. So much mathematics, sciences, languages, philosophy and rhetoric must be gone over by all alike. Of course the "little Latin and less Greek" ploughed into an unwilling, perhaps sterile soil, are more speedily forgotten in disgust than the time consumed in their acquirement. We believe in a general, well-rounded, symmetrical education to make the well-developed, properly balanced scholar; but why squander so much valuable time in a very sparse gleaming often of more straw than grain, with the idea of mental cultivation, mental strength, when a rich harvest of practical value might have been reaped during the same time in modern languages and in the strictly scientific and industrial schools. Why lumber the mind with mental furniture long out of date, heavy and unserviceable, when with no more expense and labor the mind might have been stored with more agreeable, more useful subjects, in adaptation for life's practical duties, the bread and meat furnishing department. In selecting a pursuit in life regard should be had to the character of the entire man—body, mind and soul. If the physical stamina is wanting, life may be shortened and embittered while it lasts by mistakes in our pursuit or profession.

In spirituals, as well as in temporals, the principle of adaptation is the general law of existence and health and activity. "Our Father" kindly adapts his instruction to our comprehension, his requirements to our ability assisted by grace, his promises to our self-love which looks to reward for labor and time and thought expended. In the church we find different ages, developments, abilities, endowments, experiences, as in our domestic homes we have differences of a similar character, calling for differences of food, employment, exposure, labor, adaptation of duty to ability, support of weakness, supply of necessity, occupation that shall employ both body and mind pleasantly, healthfully and profitably.

God has to act the part of a kind parent in caring for the health of his children who might injure themselves by their fluctuation between neglect of their powers or abuse of their endowments. He has to supply their food, oversee their business, guard their health, and to develop their growth and preserve and enlarge their sources of true pleasure.

"The glorious system of revealed truth, the simple and sublime plan of salvation, the influences of the Holy Spirit, the addresses to man's sense of duty and right, the appeals to his reason, his conscience, his self-love, the easy and simple terms on which mercy is offered and the stimulants of reward addressed to hope, and of punishment alarming fear, the continual appeals of the gospel, the lovely life of Jesus and his fearful, blood-stained death on the cross—each and all address our sense of duty and privilege, and strive to move our immortal minds to action in accordance with Divine requirements."

How rich and beautiful the adaptation of the gospel to man's necessities. He is ignorant, and is offered light; guilty, and pardon is presented; dead in sin—the grace of God, if accepted, quickens into life; ruined and wretched and bankrupt, the gospel offers safety, life, wealth, happiness—all through the merits of Christ and humble, grateful, entire trust in "him crucified." How manifestly from heaven the unselfish offers of Christ of pardon to the guilty, purity to the defiled, resurrection to life of those now in their spiritual graves, a place in God's family here and God's heaven hereafter—all this "without money and without price"—God's "free gift" to the humble, penitent and trusting soul.

Guilty, ruined wretches through sin are invited in Christ to become God's adopted children, "the sons and daughters of the Most High," the co-heirs with Christ of life eternal. Poor, wretched man is a hopeless, insolvent debtor. God offers him riches and honor and happiness in angel might covet as a glorious gift of his love.

CINCINNATI, Kentucky.

1884 and Its Sacred Reminiscences.

It is remarkable how careful the sacred writers were in recording events which outside of religious sympathy would seem of trifling moment. Since their day no more important event has occurred than the rise of Methodism, and its introduction into America with its minute recitals of incident carry a thrill into the heart of the real Methodist that he loves to ponder over and dwell upon.

A hundred years is a long time, and it is a short time. On my first visit to New York City in 1833 (now, possibly it may have been 1831) one of the first things I wanted to see was old John Street Church. Its appearance, outside and in, is as vivid in my recollection to-day as it was fifty-three years ago. I never failed to attend worship there when I could.

Eighteen hundred and eighty-four is, I suppose, not the Centenary of organic Methodism in America, but of organic Episcopalian Methodism. That is, in 1784 ecclesiastical Methodism organized its episcopal form of government by a formal recognition and election of Dr. Coke as Bishop; and, while I look upon Methodism as permanent as Christianity, what another century may do with its episcopacy is, in my judgment, among the uncertainties of the future. Its continuance in the form in which we know it, depends on important changes yet to be made. As we grow we must divide as we have done from the first. Our itinerant episcopacy can not work with five hundred Annual Conferences as now constituted under our episcopal college.

Are the dates of incipient Methodism in America well established? The old Disciplines say that "in the year 1765 Philip Embury, a local preacher of our society, from Ireland, began to preach in the city of New York, and formed a society of his own countrymen and the citizens."

Is this certainly true as stated? Did Mr. Embury not preach in 1760 and on? And was it not in November, 1765, that he first formed regular and constant preaching with regular appointments? Has the controversy between the New Yorkers and Baltimoreans been settled? The latter claim, in the Methodist Quarterly Review, of July, 1856, and in the quarterly Review, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, January, 1859, and elsewhere, to throw more light on early Methodism, and that John Strawbridge preached at Pipe's Creek, near Baltimore, and built a church there before Embury preached in New York; and the Rev. Mr. Wakeley, in "Lost Chapters," published in 1858, having recovered the old, long lost New York church record book, throws a flood of light on the subject.

So treacherous is my memory of recent things that I do not remember the precise dates of these things as given to us at our last Conference, by Dr. Young in his Centenary speech. Would it not be well in you, Mr. Editor, to republish and keep us reminded of these old and interesting stories?

The first regular Methodist preaching-place in New York seems to have been "a hired room, near the barracks"—hired by the renowned Capt. Webb. Here Mr. Embury and the captain both preached, and in the same year, 1765, they hired the famous Riggings Loft. This they used about two years. On March 29, 1768, they leased the John Street Church, lots, paying ground rent, and proceeded to build a church. There were two lots—Nos. 112 and 113 in "Shoemaker's Ground." They belonged to Mrs. Barclay, widow of Rev. Henry Barclay, rector of Trinity Church. The deed of sale of the lots is dated November 2, 1769, made by Joseph Forbes, of the city of New York, cordwainer, of the one part, and Richard Boardman and Joseph Philmore, ministers of the gospel, William Lupton, merchant, Thomas Webb, gentleman, John Southwell, merchant, Henry Newton, shopkeeper, and James Jarvis, latter, all of said city of New York (trustees appointed for the uses and purposes hereinafter mentioned), of the other part.

The original subscription list, with its unique preamble, is a rare document. Capt. Webb heads the list with thirty pounds. This is the largest item. There are 261 subscribers, the lowest amount being one shilling and sixpence. This first subscription foots up £118, 3s., 6d. Other amounts were gathered up in various ways afterward. The whole amount of cost seems to be £733, 3s., 9d.

I suppose it may be set down as nearly certain that Philip Embury and Robert Strawbridge were the first Methodist preachers who came to this country; that they both came in 1769—the former settled in New York, and the latter near Baltimore; that they both continued to preach and form little societies; that Mr. Embury after some time preached with irregularity until 1766, when he began regular pastoral labor and continued it; that Mr. Strawbridge continued to preach until he died in 1781. Who built the first church? That is more uncertain. John Street has always been called the first church. It was the first of note, being in New York, and costing over three thousand dollars. Mr. Strawbridge's first church was a little affair in the country, but was probably built at least a year or two in advance of the metropolitan. At least the Baltimoreans show pretty good proof of this.

A great many very interesting facts touching early American Methodism have come to light lately that is, in the last thirty years.

New York City, Mississippi.

R. A. VENABLE.

Centenary Business.

Get ready. Improve each fair day. Make every pastoral visit count. Take the collections for missions and church extension. Get the full assessment and more. Explain fully to your people that this is the ordinary giving of the year. Send the money for foreign missions either to your Conference treasurer or to D. C. Kelley, treasurer, Nashville. The printers are now working on our annual report, and your contribution ought to appear in it. Let every Conference treasurer take notice hereof, and send the money in his hands to this office.

Note for the reason why. The Centenary Committee met last week. Before adjournment they set the time for the first, formal, earnest Centenary efforts in the following language:

It is advised that large mass meetings in the interest of church extension be held in the churches of Louisville, Ky., during the sessions of the Board of Church Extension, March 27-29, and that similar mass meetings be held in the churches of Nashville, Tenn., during the sessions of the Board of Missions, April 2-4.

It is hoped that the campaign thus opened shall be promptly and vigorously prosecuted at other mass meetings and District Conferences under the auspices of the different Conference Centenary Committees throughout the connection.

These Conference committees are, therefore, urged to take prompt action in arranging for the times, places and speakers for these meetings.

So you see plainly that if we are not up and out of the way with the regular collections of the Conference, year by the first day of April, we shall get matters fearfully mixed. Let us, therefore, exert you not to hinder or embarrass the Centenary movement by the neglect of duties that can easily be performed before April 1.

R. A. VENABLE.

Good Words.

There must be true in this—
If thou like truth must seek,
Thy soul must overflow, if thou
Another soul would reach,
It would the overflow of heart
To give the lips full speech.

Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed,
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed.
Live truly, and thy soul shall be A great and noble creed.

"The pleasures of the wicked are unsatisfying and short-lived, and beyond this life he has no hope. But the godly man, while he has peace in his soul, here, rejoices in hope of endless blessedness hereafter." In thy presence," says the Psalmist, "is fullness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forevermore." No wonder that in view of these facts it was said by one of old, "Let me live the life of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."—Methodist Recorder.

"The love of Christ, which seemed to culminate when he hung upon the cross, has never declined from the white heat with which it then glowed. It is now and always at the same point; but the infinite efficacy of that proof of his love has forever rendered its repetition unnecessary."—Dr. Dykes.

"If you want knowledge, you must toil for it; if food, you must toil for it; and for pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes through toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love work, his life is a happy one."—Ruskin.

"Ten persons will repent of a sin in one who will confess to the person wronged. Yet such confession is, in truth, far more needful to the wronger than the wronged. It is a small thing to be wronged, but a horrible thing to wrong."

"Ignore the wrongs you receive, and think over the good that has been or yet may be, and evils will dwindle into nothingness. Nothing so contrivances to the growth of evil as to brood over them in our thoughts."

"The warm days in spring bring forth passion flowers and forget-me-nots. It is only after midsummer, when the days grow shorter and hotter, that fruit begins to appear."—H. W. Longfellow.

"There are many men whose tongues might govern their natures if they could govern their tongues."—Pretence.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
THE MACEDONIAN CHURCH.

BY MRS. L. C. CARLEY.

(Golden Text.—Acts xv. 1-4. See also Lesson for February 21, 1884.)

(Written for the Woman's Missionary Society, of New Orleans.)

A voice from over the hills,
Where flowers lived and sang
His mighty songs, so long ago,
Out on the wild waves rang.And Paul, in visions of the night,
Heard some one loudly call,
Come over now and help us,
Come, come, and help us all.We have our great philosophy,
Our heroes, artists—these Have each their separate glories in This land of Pericles.We have our costly temples, Neapolis and Philippi,
And grand and powerful systems,
To please the ear and eye.But a shadow falls upon us,
At noon 'tis dark as night,
Come over now and help us,
Oh! come and bring us light.The light that has been promised,
To Gentiles and to Jews,
Oh! come and bring the gospel,
Come tell the blessed news.Paul, Timothy and Silas
And Luke sailed o'er the sea,
To tell the Macedonians
In Christ they might be free.The church still sees the vision,
And hears the plaintive call,
From lands "that sit in darkness,"
As seen and heard by Paul.Come over, "O! come over,
And help us," ye who know
The blood of Jesus makes
The crimson sins as snow.Come over here and show us
"The truth, the life, the way,"
List, list, the cry of Macedonia
Is sounding loud today.Come over now and help us,
Be like the rallying cry,
Salvation for the heathen,
Let the glad tidings fly.If they "have heard" the gospel,
"They want to hear it more."
"The sound that sent to all the earth"
Must reach to every shore.

JANUARY 21, 1884.

Sunday-School Lesson.

PREPARED BY REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFER.

First Quarter—Lesson VIII.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1884.—ACTS XVII, 1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"These men were more noble than thou, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so."—Acts xvii, 11.

THESSALONIANS AND BEREANS.

The apostle, being released from prison, had no hurried retreat from Philippi, but retired in good order from this stronghold as one who was abundantly able to remain. He bade farewell to Lydia and his other converts, and, leaving Timothy and Luke to carry on the work, he pushed on with Silas to the capital of Macedonia. The apostles made little halt, probably not more than a night at each town. Under the guidance of the Holy Ghost, they were seeing more clearly the vast extent of their work; it seemed to be his plan to plant the seed of the gospel in great and populous centers, from which the truth might spread out to places around. His first considerable halt was at this capital, where resided the Roman governor, which was famed for its commercial enterprise. As his invariable custom was, he first proclaimed his message to the Jews, "opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead, and that this Jesus whom I preach unto you is Christ."

First, he argued from the Scriptures that Christ, the promised Messiah of the Old Testament, was to suffer according to appointment of God, to die and to rise from the dead. Secondly, that all these requirements had been fulfilled in the man Jesus, consequently he was the Messiah. This was his argument to the Jews, but it seemed to be equally adapted to the Gentile hearers, for the report of that meeting was that some of the Jews believed and consorted with Paul and Silas, but of devout Greeks—that is, Gentiles who attended this Jewish preaching—a great multitude, and of the chief women—that is, the women of nobility—not a few. The women were attracted to the gospel by its high morality, for the women of these ancient cities were the largest sufferers from the profligacy of the times. The success of the gospel among the Gentiles moved the Jews to envy. To counteract the influence of the gospel, the unbelieving Jews consorted together with certain lewd fellows, of the baser sort, and gathered a company and set the city in an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, where the disciples were lodging. The devil has a company of this sort organized in every town or city where the gospel comes, made of the loungers and bums, which are the pest of every place, who will not work and are ready for any devilry that unprincipled men may set them to. There is generally about some renegade from the church ready to take command of this squad of mischief makers. But not finding Paul and Silas at the house, they took Jason and certain other brethren who were there, and drew them before the rulers of the city, crying: "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also, and this Jason lodges them, and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying there is another King—one Jesus." This accusation was full of mingled craft and malice, not original, however; the strategem had been used before. They charge the apostles of offending at two points, on which magistrates under Roman appointment were most sensitive; first, they disturbed the public peace, and second, they were opposed to the Roman emperor, insurrectionists and rebels. Both charges were true, and yet not in the sense their accusers pretended. They were turning the world upside down by putting the things of the world places highest as lowest, making war with its evils and ambitions, and setting it right in its moral orbit. They were preaching a new kingdom, and declaring holdly their allegiance to a new King, but not of this world, nor on a plane where the principles of this kingdom and the decrees of their King would clash with those of Rome. These magistrates, no doubt, saw the malice of these accusations, but they feared the Jews; so they chose a middle course by putting Jason under bond to answer for the future good behavior of his guests. On the evening of the tumult the brethren sent Paul unto Borea. No doubt they thought there was no hope at present for Paul to preach unmolested. Here the preachers met a better reception. The people gladly gave them a straightforward and generous hearing, which was free from prejudice. They did not reject the gospel because it contradicted their former opinions, nor did they receive it with blind credulity or the love of novelty, but they tried it well by the light of their Scriptures. Therefore, says the apostle, many believed; faith's search was followed by its proper reward. Seek and ye shall find. This constituted the nobility of these people. The truth of the gospel is addressed to the conscience which it affects as irresistibly as an axiomatic truth does the intellect, but human nature is so at enmity to gospel truth that it resists and suppresses what it feels to be true in its conscience, and thus holds down the truth in unrighteousness. Unbelief of the truth is the most ignoble act of which mortal man is capable; it is no less than the power to keep God out of his life; but God reserves to himself against this unbelief or this power to not believe what God and conscience seals, the power to keep you out of his life; yes, out of heaven. But this little respite from preaching to hard hearts and resisting wills was soon ended. Again malice prevailed, and the devil had his way for awhile. The Jews of Thessalonica, heard that Paul was preaching the word at Borea, and they came thither also and stirred up the people. The brethren at Borea sent Paul away by sea. His next landing was Athens.

Rejoice With Trembling.

Mr. Engron: The proclamation is going to millions of people that this is the Centenary year of organic Methodism. Speakers and writers will be ready to review the history of this ecclesiastical organization, and dwell with delight on its grand achievements. Its doctrines and polity will receive a large share of the praise, and its rapid growth will be accounted for from that direction. Class meetings, prayer meetings, love-feasts, preaching, schools and Conferences will all come for their due merit in recounting the deeds of this agency in the world against the powers of darkness. The publishing interests and the circulation of wholesome literature will claim a fair consideration as powerful instruments in the hands of the church for the dissemination of the truth among the people. The "divers gifts" of officers and offices in the church, from the least to the greatest, will be weighed and valued, and it will be manifested that one can not truthfully say to another, "I have no need of thee." The names and deeds of the great men who are immortalized in Methodism will be read as linger-boards to guide the hosts of the church of a hundred years in the way they had learned. The waymarks will not be mistaken for the way, as the guide-board by the road-side not the road. If John Wesley is a large factor in this Centenary year it is not because Methodists are following him, but because he left marks by the way for the guidance of the followers of Christ.

Millions of Methodist men and women, and thousands of preachers and million more of the children of the church, will rejoice in the success of the organization to which they are indebted for the relation they sustain to the saving influences in the world. It is not becoming in us to undertake to eulogize our church; as a Christian denomination we should be content with the application of the rule: "Ye shall know them by their fruits." If the movement which has produced what we see in the year 1881 is worthy of praise let it come from others, not ourselves. The living Methodism of to-day needs no laudation, and if it should ever die the generation witnessing its death could have no share in its eulogium. Let us patiently wait for the judgment to be passed, and, working while it is day, look for the Judge whose right it is to say "well done." We ought to thank God for what he has done for us through this instrumentality, and give ourselves more heartily to the work yet to be done. While we rejoice that so much has been done since 1781, we ought to consider what has not been done. While we thank the Lord for this revival of Christian doctrine and experience, with its attendant graces, we should not forget the Pauline grace of giving. "Therefore, as ye abound in everything, in faith and utterance and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us; see that ye abound in this grace also." This is one thing Methodism has not done. Let this be remembered and "rejoice with trembling."

J. W. SANDELL.

The Brotherhood.

Mr. Editor: I like the Brotherhood of our Conference; think it is just the thing we need. It shows a care and sympathy for each other that should characterize us as brethren. It also takes in wife and children, and makes provision for them in case we are called away.

O! what a consolation it must be to the dying itinerant to feel and know that there is some provision made for his wife and children when he is gone. So far so good, but I do not like the sixty days' limit, or the condition on which we are to retain our membership. You know, Mr. Editor, that many of our brethren have to travel poor circuits and missions, and some of them hardly see five dollars during thirty or sixty days in the summer months, and if they are so fortunate as to get that amount, it would be a sin to send it off to any one, no matter how worthy. So you see the sixty days' limit will place it out of reach of a great many of our worthy brethren, and then their wives will be deprived of the sympathy and help of the brotherhood. Is this right? I hope the brethren will substitute for sixty days the next following Annual Conference. I think that will do as well, for many would be able and willing to pay at any time of the year, and that would relieve the family till Conference, and then all could pay; hardly any brother that could not at the close of the year save up five or ten dollars, as the case might be, to pay his assessment to the brotherhood, and let a failure then forfeit his membership. I hope to hear the views of the brethren on the subject.

A. R. MILLER.

TORONTO, MISS., Feb. 5, 1884.

The Progress of Temperance.

Social reform is progress. Moral reform is progress. Religious reform is progress. All of these are progress in the right direction. The angel, "flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth," is the great means, appointed by God, for the enlightening, elevating and saving humanity from sin, misery, degradation and ruin; but, then, that angel has a bandmaid that deserves our occasional, favorable notice, and that bandmaid is the temperance reformation.

All along the line, from Maine to Mexico, there is a waking up to the evils of intoxicating drinks, and even Canada has a local option law on this subject. All of the United States have legislated in favor of the sale of alcoholic drinks, granting licenses to sell them, and the money lovers have availed themselves of this privilege, and the people have patronized them and imbibed their poison until we are almost, if not quite, a nation of drunkards. This being the case, who is not glad to see the people affrighted, and through their State Legislatures, striking decidedly blows at this monster, king alcohol? Some of the States are prohibiting at once, some passing local option laws, some by high license and others by other limitations, designed to cripple the monster. The fight is to be a hard one, and before the victory is won, it may be a long one. The large cities are the strongholds of the monster, and the whisky rings feel that they have vast interests at stake. Not only the producers are aroused, but the wholesale and retail dealers are combining their funds and influences to perpetuate and increase the production and sale of the waters of this river of death, and they are numerous and wealthy, and feel that they have vast future fortunes at stake.

Chicago has enacted a city ordinance by which to avoid the Illinois State law, which requires a license of $300 in order to sell the very liquor and $150 in order to sell beer.

It is said of St. Louis that "she is ruled by rum," and she has found a judge who, by his decisions, is aiding the liquor venders in avoiding the payment of the high license imposed on the liquor traffic by the State of Missouri.

In Kansas have been the efforts and expenditures of the whisky forces, that the prohibition law has been nearly a dead letter; but in the last months the friends of temperance have renewed their efforts. Thus the fight goes on, the rural districts mostly being the dret to enlist under the temperance banner.

In this warfare our weapons are not carnal; they are prayer to God, moral suasion and our votes. We have no disposition to drift the subject into politics, but if sometimes it does so we can not help it. Any way, we are tired of being ruled over by rum. By preaching, by lecturing, by temperance associations, by voting, by some means we must conquer this evil, and by the blessing of God, we can do it. The outlook now is encouraging. More than two-thirds of the counties in Georgia prohibit, and in your issue of December 13 we are assured that nearly a county a month is added to the prohibiting list.

Texas has a local option law, and we are told that in the towns local option means high license, and soon we think it will become prohibition.

Louisiana has a local option law, and several of the parishes, by their votes, prohibit, as do some of the towns. Mississippi has some counties that have done the same, allowed to do so by her State laws, and in that State the fight goes successfully on.

In South Carolina prohibition candidates have been elected to the State Legislature.

Michigan taxes the liquor maker $500 a year, and the wholesale dealer also $500, and imposes also many restrictions and liabilities on the traffic in these firewaters of death.

Oregon is also after the liquor sellers, with severe exactions and penalties.

Ohio is all afloat for prohibition, as everybody knows.

Vermont, Maine and Massachusetts are pressing harder and harder on the liquor traffic.

New York is waking up; but space fails me in which to say the tenth that might be said to encourage us.

The spirit is up. The war rages. Already, so far as we can see, two-thirds of the real sentiment in the United States is opposed to the dram shops. Will these United States be redeemed from the clutch of the monster? Yes, yes, and what a redemption! What a about will go up, up to God, for this redemption from the ruin wrought in a thousand ways by rum!

LOCAL ITINERANT.

The Duty of Ministers as to Sunday-Schools.

Mr. Editor: I notice a controversy that is going on in a secular paper, in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, in regard to union Sunday-schools. It appears that the preacher in charge proposed to organize a Sunday-school, according to the law of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a community where a union school had long existed. He met with strong opposition, even from members of his own church.

Now, leaving out all questions of expediency, let us see what is required of the preacher in charge by the law of the church which he is under the strongest moral obligation to obey. In the Discipline (edition of 1882), we find the following:

Section 5.—Of Sunday-schools.

Question 104. What directions shall be given concerning Sunday-schools?

Answer 1. Let Sunday-schools be formed in all our congregations where ten persons can be collected for that purpose.

Ans. 2. Let all Sunday-schools be connected with our congregations be under the control of our own church, and let them use our own catechism, question-books and periodical literature.

Ans. 4. It shall be the duty of the preacher in charge . . . to be present in all the Sunday-schools in his charge as often as practicable, to catechize the children, to preach to them as often as convenient, to exhort them to attend regularly upon divine services, to look after their spiritual welfare as a part of his regular pastoral charge and to see that they are instructed in the doctrines and usages of our church.

Although the union school may be a good one, and be acceptable to all denominations, still it is the solemn duty of the preacher in charge to organize one if he can find the required number. He has no discretion. He must act. If the parents will not allow their children to attend the Methodist school, and he shall fail, then he has done all he could and is not to blame.

I think it would be a good investment for every church member to buy a Discipline and read once a year at least. It would prevent a good deal of friction, and "from many a blunder free us."

LAYMAN.

From the Work.

VERNON, LA.

Mr. Editor: Just two weeks has transpired since the adjournment of the Louisiana Conference. Yet we are at home in our new field of labor, having moved fifty miles across the country over frozen roads. Notwithstanding the inclement weather our trip was made pleasant by the kindness shown us from beginning to end. Every door was open to us, and good cheer greeted us everywhere. A special Providence guided, shielded and protected us, and a hearty welcome awaited us here, and we feel that we are at home and among friends. We are thirsting for the Advocate. Yours truly,

J. L. P. SHEPARD.

JANUARY 28, 1884.

MOBILE CITY, LA.

Mr. Editor: Mrs. J. N. Pharr, superintendent, and Mr. M. I. Hamilton, secretary, of the Methodist Episcopal Sabbath-school in Morgan City, organized, on last Sunday, a missionary society in connection with the school. We have the names of forty members enrolled. Miss Carrie Gathright was elected president, Miss Josephine Parker, vice president, and Miss Julia Ozeu, treasurer. We have made our membership fee only five cents a month, so that even the smallest child can join. Every one is to earn the money given. In addition to this monthly meeting and contribution we propose to have a missionary nite meeting occasionally, with a dime admission, and have songs and recitations from the children. So this centennial year we hope to have a large missionary offering. Don't you think it a good idea?

LILLIAN K. LYONS, Sec.

Centenary Meetings.

The Centenary Committee of the Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met at Black Hawk, Miss., February 2, 1884, and the following members were present, viz.: Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, Rev. J. F. Evans and J. B. Streator. Rev. T. Y. Ramsey called the meeting to order, and J. B. Streator was elected secretary. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted, viz.:

Resolved, That each Quarterly Conference be requested to select the time and place for holding a centennial mass meeting, and make the necessary arrangements for conducting the same.

Resolved, That pastors are hereby requested to take collections from each of their congregations during the month of September for the purpose designated by the general committee.

Resolved, That pastors and Sunday-school superintendents be requested to bring the matter before the Sunday-schools, and adopt their own plans for taking collections.

Resolved, That the last Sunday in May, or as soon thereafter as practicable, be the time for holding special centennial services in each pastoral charge.

Resolved, That pastors be requested to use all diligence to instruct their people in regard to the objects contemplated by these centennial services, and that they urge the people to pray for the special outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

J. B. STREATOR, Sec.

Marriages.

DOWNS—ALDERSON.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Downs, December 31, 1883, by Rev. J. H. Smith, Mr. G. M. Downs and Miss E. Alderson, all of Lafayette county, Miss.

SPRADLIN—GRIFFIN.—At the residence of Mr. Robert Davis, January 13, 1884, by Rev. J. H. Smith, Mr. A. Spradlin and Mrs. Beale Griffin, all of Quitman county, Miss.

LEARN—REAMS.—At the residence of Mr. W. H. Leam, the bride's father, January 16, 1884, by Rev. J. H. Smith, Mr. J. B. Leam and Miss E. Z. Reams, all of Combs county, Miss.

BUCHER—TERRY.—At the residence of the bride's mother, January 31, 1884, by Rev. J. P. Evans, Mr. J. T. Fisher to Miss A. E. Terry, all of Holmes county, Miss.

BELOVED—HURBERT.—At the residence of the bride's father, February 8, 1884, by Rev. J. P. Evans, Mr. John Beloved to Miss Ella Hurbert, all of Holmes county, Miss.

JOHNER—DUNCAN.—At the residence of Dennis Majure, Esq., near Walnut Grove, Miss., February 7, 1884, by Rev. Irvin Miller, Mr. Z. T. Oizer to Miss E. A. Duncan.

Obituaries.

HOLLIMAN—MRS. MARY E. HOLLIMAN, the daughter of Mr. Thomas L. and Mrs. H. E. Holliday of Madison county, Miss., was born December 4, 1851; was graduated at Sharon Female College in 1871; became the wife of Mr. H. Holliman, February 5, 1874; was the mother of seven children—four boys and three girls, and died in Yazoo City, Miss., December 28, 1883.

Of her early life none can know, save the stricken ones who called her daughter and tenderly watched his sweet bird-die. It was in the school-room that she had opportunity to study her character as she studied books, and to forecast such a life for her as hers has been—a life whose watchword was truth and whose motive power was duty. Of the hundreds whom I have taught she was one of, perhaps, a dozen of whom I can say that no time during a daily association with them in the school-room for years could I have found an excuse, had I ever sought one, for reproving them. As a pupil, she was a model of propriety in all things. In these school days sprang up that attachment between Mollie Holliday (for so we called her) and Thomas Holliman, then also my pupil beloved, which, leading to no neglect of duty nor indiscretion of conduct, resulted, when each was prepared for so important a step, in a marriage which was truly a union of hearts and a blending of lives.

Of this united life it was my privilege to catch glimpses in my periodical visits as presiding elder to their parsonage home. I found Sister Holliman in the sacred position of wife, mother and partner in an itinerant's lot what I expected—patient, firm, prayerful and true. At who can fault the dutifulness of that parsonage now, or measure the agony of one heart, as the piteous cries of the little ones for mother smite his ear?

It is to some a mystery that the purest and the best often die first. Yet who but the good should die first? Are not they only called to heaven? W. L. C. H.

DICKINSON—BRO. JOHN P. DICKINSON was born in the State of North Carolina, 1816; moved to the State of Florida, 1839; was married to Miss A. Edwards in the year 1850; moved to Madison county, Miss., 1857; soon after settled himself on what may be known now as Cedar Ridge, in sight of old Pearl River Academy (now Pearl River Church,) where he lived to the day of his death, which occurred January 11, 1884, after a painful suffering of seven days of pneumonia.

Bro. Dickinson was a good and true man. He possessed a warm and genial spirit and was generous and kind. He had the respect, confidence and esteem of all his neighbors and all who knew him. He was a faithful, tender husband, an affectionate father, a neighbor in the true sense of the term. He had but few, if any, enemies; never heard any one speak against him. He was soundly converted to God at a camp meeting in Florida, 1847. He at once united himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which he lived a consistent member to the day of his death, holding the position of class leader, steward and trustee the greater part of his Christian life. He was placed on committees, and counseled in all church work.

In his sickness he seemed to be apprised of his approaching end and talked calmly of death. He said to his weeping wife: "I would like to say, but am willing to go. I am ready, ready; my Jesus is with me." This was his last expression. Thus he died as he had lived. Though we deplore his death, we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for he died with a bright hope of a blessed immortality beyond the grave.

In the midst of many weeping friends we placed his body in the tomb in the old graveyard at Pearl River Church, where he sleeps beside Bro. Lambuth (father of the missionary) and many others of his old friends as a subject for the general resurrection. He leaves a broken-hearted wife and four children to mourn their loss. W. A. RAY.

WILBURN—MRS. MARY D. WILBURN was born in Morgan county, Ala., and died at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. J. V. Tucker, in Hanover county, Miss., October 17, 1883.

Sister Wilburn's parents moved to Mississippi when she was small. She professed faith in Christ in early life and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which she lived a consistent member until the day of her death. She was twice married: first to Mr. Virgil H. Mayfield, and last to Mr. J. K. Wilburn. She was a widow twice; thus we see she had her part of the sorrow of this life. But she has gone where they have no sorrow. She has raised a family, and they are all grown and in the church, I believe, except one, and that speaks a well for her life.

The writer was permitted to see her during her illness. She expressed herself as being ready to go if it was the Lord's will. She leaves friends, besides children and relations, to mourn over her loss—but, thank God, she is done with grief, and we must not grieve, but think of her as one of those that will be "watching and waiting at the beautiful gate" for us when we get to the better land.

I will say to those of her relations: Prepare to meet her in the next life. Though we have lost a mother and a friend, yet we will see her again, if we are faithful unto death, beyond the horizon of the setting sun. This is the difference between the skeptic and the Christian: we will see our friends again. H. B. SHERMAN.

ADAMS—JULIA B. ADAMS, daughter of Mr. J. B. and Mrs. P. J. Adams, was born January 21, 1879, and died in Clark county, Miss., of malarial fever, August 17, 1883, aged four years, six months and twenty-three days.

God's ways are not as our ways, nor his thoughts as our thoughts. We would have our little ones remain with us; but who is wiser than we sees fit oftentimes to transmute them to the skies. Willing submission to his providences is the part of wisdom for us.

The subject of this notice is said to have been a sweet-spirited child. She was obedient to her parents, loving and beloved by all. Many said of her: "She is too good a child for this world." So it proved. Doubtless she is filling a higher mission in heaven to-day than would have been the case here had she remained on earth. May the bereaved parents and remaining children continue to follow him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," and after awhile afflictions will ripen into joy and all will be well. L. CARLEY.

GARDNER—REV. WILLIAM WILEY GARDNER, M. D., was born in North Carolina, October 6, 1809; married Miss Mary A. Ellis, in Alabama, in 1830, and died in Forrest, Miss., November 4, 1883. After he came to Mississippi he lived for a while in both Winston and Kemper counties; but for the last thirty years his home was here in Scott county.

He was a local elder, and had been a preacher more than thirty years. In the prime of his life he had been a strong and active preacher. As a physician he was in demand and was successful. It ought to be said to his credit that he did his full share of charity practice. For several years past he was not able to do much, and was partly dependent on his children for a support.

He leaves an aged widow, five children and many friends to mourn his loss. He was continued to his room for several weeks, during which time he loved great peace and comfort, expressing himself ready for the final triumph. May his loved ones follow his footsteps to the better land! C. M. DONALD.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

In this age of adulteration there are few things more difficult to obtain of a pure quality than soap. Unfortunately the mischief by inferior soaps is done before their dangerous nature is discovered. The Ivory Soap is 99 1/4% pure, so may be relied upon as entirely safe to use.

PHOTOGRAPHS!

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WASHBURN'S

Photographic Parlors,

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal Hotels and almost directly opposite the City Station.

You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever.

We make every kind of portrait known to the art, from the miniature for the pocket to life-size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon or Oil.

Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged and the likeness faithfully preserved.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY FEBRUARY 21, 1884.

DO YOUR BEST.

Have you failed to-day, Good Heart?
"Tis no cause for sorrow.
Try again; the clouds may part—
Perhaps may part to-morrow.
If you are a brave, strong man,
You will do the best you can.
No you best and leave the rest;
Better may come to-morrow.
Have you lost your land or gold?
That's no cause for sighing;
One bright hour doth oft unfold
Many a year's denying.
He not weary or downcast;
"Patience holds the scale at last."
To your best, and leave the rest,
And never give up your trying.
Rich or poor, be all a man;
Wear no golden fetter.
Do the very best you can,
And you'll soon do better.
Every day do your best;
Is a vantage for the rest.
Don't complain; every gain
Is making your best still better.

What Can Woman Do for the Cause of Temperance?

It hath been truthfully said that there is no profession in which men gain more applause and renown than in the profession of arms. It is also true that their victories are won amid havoc and ruin, their march discolored by blood, and their laurels won at the sacrifice of human lives. What a contrast to this picture is the holy war now being waged by Christian women against the evils of intemperance.

At the mercy seat they plead for fathers, brothers and sons. Like the Syrochenean woman they take no denial. Having grown desperate in their self-defense they rise up in the name of the Lord "to vindicate the sacred home of chastity, beauty and hope, against the fell monster drink which would destroy them." The evils of intemperance have existed with mankind since the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the garden of paradise. The glorious precincts of that happy abode was forever closed against them by the sword of the angelic guard. "When the serpent had accomplished his deadly work and the tree of knowledge yielded its fatal gift, the soft values of paradise were no longer to be their inheritance and the bright inhabitants of heaven, their familiar guests, never more. With labor, sorrow and care they were to obtain all earthly good. Since then their posterity have drunk of the cup of sorrow, of shame and of humiliation."

The Scriptures denounce all forms of intemperance both in the Old and New Testament. In the history of Noah, of Nabal and others, we find unhappy instances of drunkenness recorded. In Proverbs xxiii, 30: "Be not among wine-bibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh; for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty." Proverbs xxviii, 7: "He that is a companion of riotous men shameth his father." Proverbs xx, 1: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." Luke xxi, 34: "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." I Corinthians vi, 10: "I have written to you. If any one that is called a brother be drunkard, with such not to keep company, nor to eat with them." Luke vi, 10: "Drunkards shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Galatians v, 19: "The works of the flesh are these, drunkenness, revelings and such like: they that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Ephesians v, 18: "Be not drunk with wine wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit."

Perchance never, in the history of the world, has the evils of intemperance been so widespread and universal as now. "In every city, town and village in the country, and almost in every family, the evils are felt in its direct forms and influences. In England, Ireland, Germany, the world—the cost of bread is not so great as the money expended for beer, whiskey and other pernicious drinks. The blight of this evil has fallen on America with a deadly fatality, and has almost become a nation of drunkards. It pervades every grade of society from the inmates of the hotel to the occupant of the highest office."

With alarm we confess to include women, yea mothers with precious souls committed to them to train for immortality, in the catalogue of evil. "Nor is the church free from this deadly curse. How many degenerate expenses of ministers and church members are traced to the use of pernicious drinks!" It is also a painful fact that in almost every denomination there are ministers of the gospel who withhold their support from the cause of intemperance. They seem to regard the temperance society as a human invention, and not as an arm of the church whose relations and interests will last beyond this life."

Rev. Dr. T. L. Cuyler is quoted, "Can not ministers of Christ agree to preach more frequently and earnestly against drunkenness and the dangers of the cup? From many pulpits the whole subject is practically excluded. The drunkard is rarely prayed for; the young not named against the ensnaring device of the devil; the law of God against drunkenness is substantially ignored. And yet it is undeniable that the bottle is sending more souls to perdition than all the infidel tongue and pens in the land. We utter no calling against our brethren who ignore this stupendous moral evil, but we would not choose to have a son of ours trained up under such a ministry." "The friends of temperance have thrown around society many restraints, have prevented many evils, and done much good."

That their work is owned and blessed of God no one will deny. Good impressions made must be followed up, and eternity alone can tell the result of their labors. The question is asked, "What can woman do to promote the cause of temperance?" Her work must begin at home in the "hallowed seminary," for there the men of the nation are formed. Begun with the children and imbue their minds against all pernicious drinks; so they will flee them as a deadly poison. The Rev. Dr. Clark's mother controlled her children by holding up to them the fearful consequences of disobedience to God. Often when she would quote passages of Scriptures to her rebellious sons they would become subdued and weep gently.

We read in ancient history of the Spartans, how they taught their children sobriety by exposing to their view the behavior of slaves when in a drunken spree. They made them personal witnesses of the follies of drunken slaves, that the impressions might be remembered, and the vile and sinful change would not be forgotten in the lifetime of the beholder, thereby making temperance men and women of them during life. I remember when a child how I trembled when I saw a drunken man on horseback passing my father's residence in the town of C—. Some one had put him on his horse and started him home. He held a black bottle in his right hand and with his left clutched the mane of his horse. His face was red and his eyes glaring. He held the fatal bottle so high that it swayed right and left, sometimes it was higher than his head. Aunt Maria, the negro nurse, laughed and said: "Look, Miss M—, Mr. A— is riding faster than the horse." Mother came to the door and was deeply shocked at the ludicrous spectacle. "Never laugh at such a pitiable sight," she said, "that man once gave promise of usefulness. He has been a member of the Legislature. By the habit of drinking he has forfeited the confidence of his friends, wife and children. If in this sober moments he could see himself as he is now, it would shame him into sobriety."

A young man in the same town graduated with honor in a law school. While at college he contracted the habit of drinking with friends and young ladies. They little thought of the injury they were doing to an immortal soul. His parents had educated him at the sacrifice of their home, thinking their grateful son would repay them for all their labor, to fit him for practical life. With bitterness of soul they realized when he returned from college that their hopes were blighted. He promised to reform, and with many prayers and tears they bade him good-bye, and he left his boyhood home to make a fortune in the far West. For months he kept his temperance vow, and was building up a good business in his profession in the town where he located. He wrote frequently and cheerfully to his parents, and a new light dawned in their hearts. Then his letters came less frequently, sometimes months would elapse without hearing from him, and his watchful, careful mother could detect in the language of his letters the unmistakable signs of drunkenness. Five or more years had passed when he wrote to his parents that he had married and was coming home. The poor mother was almost wild with delight at the thought of again beholding her son, and of folding him and his young wife to her bosom. She said in her heart, "the young wife will reform him."

Fond hearts were looking high,
Fond eyes were watching for the loved one come;
And gentle voices dreaming he was nigh,
Talked of his glad return.
He came, but what a shock to the sensitive souls of his parents. Intemperance with woman's help had swiftly, but surely done a fearful work. His countenance was haggard, his nerves unstrung and his hands trembling. His dark eyes that once glowed with the fires of intellect and passion were swollen and bloodshot, now rising in fury and sinking in despair. Sometimes he would laugh wildly, then would weep bitterly and sob like a child. Instead of the young and lovely wife, they would love as a daughter, they were horrified to behold a woman more than twice the age of their son. Her face was hard and repellant. She was full of cupidity, and as false at heart and in principles as the marriage she had imposed upon the victim of intemperance. A marriage so dishonorable was a shock and horror to the virtuous and a ridicule to the vicious. He continued on his downward course for a few months, when one of his wicked courtesans, with a contemptuous leer, asked for his wife, calling her "old Mrs. Noah." The poor husband was not lost to all honor and shame; and, being maddened with drink, threw himself in front of the locomotive, the train passing over his body. Later his scattered limbs were gathered up and placed in a coffin with his crushed and mangled body and carried to his mother. God pity the mother of intemperate sons!

My mother visited a certain judge with the view of inducing him to join the temperance society. He had a noble Christian wife and a lovely family of sons and daughters. He was deeply affected at her visit, and I shall never forget his mournful look when he said, "It is too late. Ten years ago I could have been saved, but the time is passed, and I have no will of my own." Then wringing her hand he said, with a faint effort at a smile, "It would almost exhaust the plan of salvation to save me. Go save the young. Tell the members of the committee I thank them for their kindness, but I can not keep a pledge now."

These are sad pictures of real life. I could place beside them many others that would make these seem tame and spiritless. A young man, writing to a lady friend, with whom he was discussing the subject of temperance, said: "In all my nineteen years of life I have never tasted liquor." I honor that young man's mother who so thoroughly instilled the principles of temperance in her son. We bespeak for him a useful and prosperous life, and for his goodly mother "a crown of glory in her old age." How essential then that every mother live in that sphere which she has been destined by an all-wise Creator.

But how different we find it with many who bear that endearing name. To free themselves from the dullness of domestic cares they frequent the ball room, the theater and other places of amusement. Fashion is their God, and they have no higher aim than to become "the arbitress of dress and the priestess of frivolity." Some of the highest women of the land will deck themselves with the utmost splendor, and exhibit themselves at balls and other public assemblies to be seen and admired by men.

At a Persian feast the modest beautiful Queen Vashit refused to appear before King Ahasuerus and his drunken Balthazarians, although she knew it would cost her her crown and perhaps her life. Her courage was equal to her modesty, and we have few women like Vashit.

Then let our women practice temperance in all things. Check the inordinate love of dress and money; so often hurry men on to financial ruin. Make home a reality, and teach them the glory of purity and goodness by leading a life of purity. It matters not how humble the home may be, honor it with a silent reverence and dignity and let it even be a haven of rest to the tired, weary men of the world. Feed the hungry hearts with love, with truth, and let it ever be as the one witness yet existing of the paradise of the past and a symbol of a home in heaven.

"A religious home is the fountain of all pure emotions and high motives." We need such homes now to roll back the tide of intemperance and to keep America "great and true and conquering." MATTIE A. HOEVER, STANTON, VIRGINIA.

Can God Answer Prayer?

BY REV. J. E. SMITH, D. D.

To raise the question in a religious journal may, to some, have an air of impiety. Why, it may be asked, by discussing the question, should we tacitly concede the possibility of a negative answer? The reason is obvious. The question is not raised by us, but it is forced upon us by the gross materialism of the age. The infidelity of our times arrays itself in scientific garb. It is boastful, enthusiastic, confident. It over-reckons its own strength, and propagandist of its ghastly theories. The press teems with tracts, pamphlets and books teaching the new gospel of science—a science that banishes God from the world of his own making, or exhibits him a fettered, powerless spectator of his creature's doings. There is no question of laws, no question of a deity, no question of a God who looks with sphinx-like indifference upon his children, who is unable or unwilling to aid them in their hour of need, is a God whom it is impossible to adore. The thought enters every man's mind of religiousness from the human spirit. It oppresses the soul beyond all expression. It turns the world into a charnel house, in which happiness and hope are buried forever.

But men tell us that many prayers are not answered. They have prayed long and earnestly for blessings that are not granted; for deliverance from troubles that still afflict them. Well, be it so. Is prayer an instrument for taking the affairs of the universe out of the hands of our heavenly Father? Do earthly parents never refuse the prayers of their children? Have we anywhere the Divine promise that the desired blessing shall be granted at our request? Obviously finite wisdom is not competent to decide what is best for us or for the world. The power to grant or refuse our petitions must be in the hands of infinite wisdom and love. The last analysis will show that the faithfulness that watches the sparrow's fall, that numbers the hairs of his children's heads, has made no mistake. Every petition then for temporal blessing should be made in a submission to the Divine will. If it be best for us God will command the ravens, as of old, to feed us; the angels will encamp about us, as a defense, and the very stars of heaven shall fight against our Sinner. The days of miracle are not past. They are always present. But God seeks our enlightenment. The road thither may lead through privation and trial. Thorns may pierce us and storms may beat upon us, and to our every prayer for deliverance may come the response, "My grace is sufficient for thee." The prayer is answered in its highest sense, it with Paul, we are enabled to say, "Most gladly, therefore, I will rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me;" or with the Master in the garden, "not as I will but as thou wilt."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Seven of the nine graduates from Andover are pledged to mission work—five in the West and two in foreign missions.

Fortunately, the answer is not equivocal. With one voice the entire noisome host, from Buchner to Tyndal, respond, "The uniformity of nature makes prayer for temporal good an absurdity." I demand the proof of this assertion. In the absence of this proof I declare the assertion unsound. All that can be said in favor of the uniformity of nature is this: from the investigations of scientists in different ages and climes the uniformity seems to be invariable. It would be easy to quote from J. T. Mill, Murphy, Jevons and even Tyndal, concessions that the conclusion contains far more than the premise. But let us ask what is meant by the invariability of nature. Ordinarily it means that nothing does, or can, interfere with these laws, so as to change the final income. This statement we daily deny. In the history of correct science, in the list of daily experience, in the name of our common Christianity, we deny the fact. Law has in it no potentiality. It is simply a mode by which the lawgiver expresses his purpose. There are forms of energy which are neither potential nor kinetic. Will, we admit, is neither the one nor the other. The theist believes it to be the origin of both. And will, even the human will, interposes with the laws of nature and changes the results. Will compels the elements to obey its mandates. Man has tamed the lightning and harnessed the coiled serpent of the forests and lessened the rainfall. He has planted trees and increased the showers and the fertility of the soil. He forces water backward in a perpendicular of hundreds of feet, contrary to the law of gravitation. He lifts the key-stone of the arch and the result for centuries passed above the yawning chasm. He multiplies the product of the soil and turns the wilderness into a garden. Every new comfort of life is given us through an interference with the invariable laws of nature.

But it is objected that these do not violate any of the laws of nature; granted; but the result is not a whit less great or important. The fact holds; will is a factor in the affairs of men. It interferes with the laws of nature. It brings to pass results contrary to the common expectation of the course of things. Even the human will demonstrates the falsity of the infidel creed. What then may we expect from the operation of the divine will? What if we put behind the laws of nature the Infinite Father keeping watch over his children, and guiding them in their career? And may we not this illustration of the human will teach us also of the method by which the divine will may answer prayer? The force of the objection lies here, that it implies the breaking of his own laws. This led Haeckel to speak of "the arbitrary arbitrariness" of a creator, and Oskar Schmidt to write of the caprice of the God of Christians. But, if law is violated; if, as among men, one law is overcome by the exercise of another and higher law, who shall say that prayer for temporal blessings may not be answered? What is the force of the objection? It is that it is familiar with all the laws and forces of the universe?

To the Christian these forces ascend, from the lowest to the highest, in an unbroken chain to the throne of God. Each and all are shaped by the divine will. Their uniformity is due to his immutability. They are the expression of his will. Without an infraction he may cause prosperity to crown the toil of a people, or grant famine to stalk through the land. He may, in answer to prayer, inspire with energy, enrich with wisdom, in his word with power, any of his children, and thus throw wide to them the storehouse of his abundance. In these days no doctrine needs more to be taught than that of divine immutability. We need to see that in every sprouting grain, and every lushing flower, and every floating cloud, and every shining star, there is a witness to the fact that God is at work in the world.

But men tell us that many prayers are not answered. They have prayed long and earnestly for blessings that are not granted; for deliverance from troubles that still afflict them. Well, be it so. Is prayer an instrument for taking the affairs of the universe out of the hands of our heavenly Father? Do earthly parents never refuse the prayers of their children? Have we anywhere the Divine promise that the desired blessing shall be granted at our request? Obviously finite wisdom is not competent to decide what is best for us or for the world. The power to grant or refuse our petitions must be in the hands of infinite wisdom and love. The last analysis will show that the faithfulness that watches the sparrow's fall, that numbers the hairs of his children's heads, has made no mistake. Every petition then for temporal blessing should be made in a submission to the Divine will. If it be best for us God will command the ravens, as of old, to feed us; the angels will encamp about us, as a defense, and the very stars of heaven shall fight against our Sinner. The days of miracle are not past. They are always present. But God seeks our enlightenment. The road thither may lead through privation and trial. Thorns may pierce us and storms may beat upon us, and to our every prayer for deliverance may come the response, "My grace is sufficient for thee." The prayer is answered in its highest sense, it with Paul, we are enabled to say, "Most gladly, therefore, I will rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me;" or with the Master in the garden, "not as I will but as thou wilt."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

The grand difference between the Christian and the man of the world is, that the burden of the one is gathering while he proceeds, while the other is becoming lighter and more easy; the man of carnal mind and worldly affections clings more and more to the earth, and new enns thicken around his death-bed; his is collecting as he advances, and when he comes to the edge of the grave, it bears him down to the bottom like a mill-stone. But the Christian, by gradually elevating the Christian's feelings and desires, makes obedience more easy and delightful, until he mounts in the presence of God, where he finds it a service of perfect freedom.

Seven of the nine graduates from Andover are pledged to mission work—five in the West and two in foreign missions.

Our Young People.

TEN TRUE FRIENDS.

Ten true friends you have
Who, five in a row,
Upon either side of you Go where you go
Suppose you are sleepy.
They help you to bed.
Suppose you are hungry.
They see that you're fed.
They wake up your dolly
And put on her clothes,
And tangle her carriage
Wherever she goes.
They buckle your skate straps
And haul at your sled;
Are in summer quite white
And in winter quite red.
And, these ten they follow,
They serve you with care;
And they ask nothing from you,
But work hard to please.
Now, with ten willing servants
So truly and true,
Pray who would be lazy
Or idle, would you?
Would you had out the name
Of this kind little band?
Then count up the fingers
On each little hand.
—Congregationalist.

Our Boys.

DEAR BOYS: You, and the men that have been made out of such as you, only make about half of our population. The other half is made up of the gentler sex called girls and women, and they are so essential to our comfort, happiness and success in all that pertains to this as well as the life to come, that you ought to know how to conduct yourself toward them and how to avail yourself of their much needed help to bear the toils and burdens of life. To associate affectionately, honorably and gentlemanly with refined and well behaved girls and women will have a refining and elevating influence on your minds, morals and general character. Then begin with your mother. Always speak to her as kindly and submissively and politely as you would to the most elegant lady in your knowledge. Next acknowledge yourself the special guardian of the safety and happiness of your sisters; anticipate their wants; never say an unkind word to them. As to a boy speaking roughly to his sister that is not to be thought of. Always accompany and wait on them with gentlemanly politeness when they desire your company as an escort. Also be on your best behavior toward all your female schoolmates; never say an unkind word or commit a rude act in their presence; act the real gentleman toward them at all times; bring them fresh water and divide your fruit with them and help them to make their play-grounds and clear off their play-grounds and you will have their esteem and confidence while your own virtue and honor will be elevated. The time will come when you may want one of these little dainty angels for a life-time partner, but if the "old folks at home," hear that you treat your mother, sisters and schoolmates discourteously and angrily, they will say that you would treat a wife just that way as soon as honeymoon is over and then you will wish that you had always been a gentleman in your intercourse with ladies. I purpose to write one more article and then pause awhile. J. G. JONES, HAZLEBURST, MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. Editor: I was glad to see my letter in the Advocate. We have an Advocate in this State, but papa prefers the New Orleans. Our school was out in December, but I am glad to say it has commenced again. We have but very few scholars, but hope more will come. Papa sends two—Bro. Sammie and me. He is the youngest one of the children, and I am the youngest one of the girls. Bro. Willie is going to school in Snow Hill. I will be so glad when winter is over. It has been threatening to snow all this month, but has not succeeded yet. Every spring some of my friends and I meet and take a horse-back ride. We have each a nice time. We have a large bay horse which I ride. Papa requests me to tell you how long he has been a member of the Methodist Church. He has been a member fifty years, and my mother thirty-eight years. Papa is seventy-six years old; his birthday was Christmas Day. Mamma gave him a dinner which he enjoyed very much. Mamma is fifty three years old. One of my sisters is a widow. She has a little girl seven years old, and they are living with us. Now, I will ask some of the little correspondents some questions: Where is the longest verse in the Bible, and where is the shortest? What was Samson's riddle? Was there ever a war in heaven? If there was: who fought and who whipped? Jarvis is the name of the ruler whose daughter was raised from the dead. It is found in Mark iii, 35. Moses was one hundred and twenty years old when he died, and it is not known to this day where he was buried. I will close for fear my letter will be thrown in the waste-basket. Your friend, KATIE CRUM, FAIRMONTVILLE, ALA., JAN. 30, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl eight years old. My father is a physician, but does not practice medicine now. He takes the Advocate, and likes it very much. I am going to school to mamma, who teaches Sister Emma and me at home. I love my books, and want to grow up an intelligent and useful woman. We live a mile from the Methodist Church. Rev. B. F. Phillips is our pastor this year, and we all love him very much. He preached for us last year, and did a great deal of good here. We have a nice church, with an organ and a stove in it. Our Sabbath-school has been well attended all the winter until January, which was so cold that we had to quit and wait for the weather to get better. I love to go to Sabbath-school and say my lessons to my aunt, Mrs. Neill, who teaches our class. I have a missionary tin, and am trying to raise all the chickens I can to sell and send the money to the heathen. Hoping that my letter will escape that dreadful waste-basket, I will close by answering Minnie E. Hamilton's question. Moses was a hundred and twenty years old when he died, and the Lord buried him in a valley in the land of Moab; but no man knows of his sepulcher unto this day. It is found in Deuteronomy xxxiv. Your little friend, MARY A. M. STRAIT, CLARK HILL, MISS., JAN. 8, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I have been wanting to write to your excellent paper for some time, and, as I want to answer some questions asked by some of the young friends, I thought I would write. Jarvis was the name of the ruler whose daughter Christ raised from the dead. Allah began to reign in the eighteenth year of Jeroboam. It is found in I Kings xv, 1. Magdala was Samson's father. Asa succeeded Jehoshaphat, and he was a good king. I found these questions in a Bible history we have. Our school will commence to-morrow, and then I will have no time to write. I would be very much pleased to see this letter in the Advocate, as it is my first. Rev. V. D. Skipper is our preacher again this year. We have become very much attached to him and his wife. I will close by asking a question: Where are the words "fence," "mosses" and "looking glass" mentioned in the Bible? Your new friend, WILLIAM L. BECKLEY, HAZLEBURST, MISS., FEB. 2, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I have read all the letters from the little folks with great pleasure for a long time. I have been thinking of writing again, as I have not written to your paper for a good while. I am not going to school now, as we have no teacher at present. She has gone to Louisiana to live; but I hope we will succeed in getting another soon. Our preacher's name is Rev. C. D. Cecil. Rev. T. W. Brown was our pastor last year. I have a missionary tin, and I will send you all that I make off of her this year. Now, I want to answer Katie Kennard's question she asked in last week's number. It was Elisha who made iron swim. It is found in I Kings viii, 1. I will close for fear my letter is too long now. Your true friend, MATTIE PETTY, CENTREVILLE, MISS., FEB. 3, 1884.

Mr. Editor: As papa takes the Advocate, and I see so many nice letters in it from young folks, I thought I would write one, too. I am a girl ten years of age. I go to school and learn very fast; I love to study my books. We have two good schools here—Methodist and Baptist. I will answer some of the questions the young folks asked. Moses died on Mount Pisgah. He was a hundred and twenty years old when he died, and his burial-place is unknown. Elisha caused iron to swim. I will ask some questions: How many years after the death of Adam was Noah born? Also, how was the history of antediluvian times handed down to Abraham and Moses? Yours, etc., WILLIE L. WEEMS, DESSON, MISS., FEB. 6, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I have had news to tell the little readers of the Advocate. My missionary tin is dead. If there is a heaven for the good folks, I know my tin has gone there. My little sister and I interred her in our graveyard where we bury all of our little pets that die. I have bought another tin, and I hope I will have better luck this year. I will answer Cousin Barney's question. It was Jehoshaphat's body that was cast out to the heat and frost. I will also answer Katie Kennard's question. It was Elisha that caused iron to swim. I will close by asking a question: Whose head was cut off and cast over the wall by a wise woman? Your little friend, MARGIE HOWARD, SATISFA, MISS., FEB. 6, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl eleven years old. This is my second letter only to the Advocate, and my first did not reach you. My mamma, through a mistake, addressed it to my Aunt Lou. I live near Rayne station, La. We expect to have a church there soon. I will be so glad, for we have no church near enough to attend regularly. Papa takes the Advocate, and I like to read it very much. I have one little brother only; no sister. He is seven years old. Please do not throw this in the waste-basket. I will try and do better next time. Your little friend, DOMA WINDHURST, RAYNE, LA., FEB. 7, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I have read so many letters in the Advocate that the little boys and girls have written, I thought I would write one, too. The answer to Katie Kennard's question, "Who caused iron to swim?" is found in I Kings vi, 6. We all go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Year before last I received a prize for being present every Sunday in the year. I am ten years old, and this is the first letter I have written to the Advocate. Please do not cast it away. Your little friend, LUCY EASTON, VICKSBURG, MISS., FEB. 6, 1884.

Faith Unfeigned.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY FEBRUARY 21, 1884

Dr. Buckley, of the New York Advocate, according to promise, rises to further explain his speech in the General Missionary Committee, which was the subject of much comment and criticism. He denied the correctness of the published report of his address, and claimed to have a verbatim report of what he did say, which consumed forty minutes in delivery, and which would in good time be given to the public. In last week's issue he prints two columns and a half, but very little of the speech is reproduced. Most of the space is occupied with observations and explanations. We like the temper of his editorial, but for a thorough appreciation of the question, issue would much prefer to read the verbatim report entire. Even with all of his explanations we must believe that the eloquent editor has fully and mis-leadingly characterized our church. What he may have heard of exceptional instances in few local societies did not type the spirit and life of the church, and were unworthy of use in such argument. And as the doctor disclaimed the slightest purpose of intimating that these cases described the church in general, we will just set them down to mere buncombe, thrown to spice a rattling speech.

The City Item is waging a com-

the fund used for a public charity is a municipal disgrace. It is making merchandise of vice and dignifying it in some weak minds by allowing it to become the patron of an almshouse. The Item has been publishing a series of interviews with promi-

"I myself," said his grace, smiling, "know something of euchre and would not object to playing a game in a family or at a social gathering, but not in public, for a serious consideration; but I would condemn playing for money in such amount as would embarrass the loser. Innocent pastimes are good for both body and soul, and I am not so strict as you would think."

So, then, according to this high Romanish authority, it is the amoral of the state, and not the act itself that is wrong. If you can only keep within bounds, so as not to "emburress the loss," gambling is an "innocent pastime." Such a deliverance from a gospel minister—an Archbishop of supposed learning—a piety—a vicar-general and infallible expounder of the word of God—shocking to the most obtuse mortals, to say nothing of intelligent Christian sentiment. His grace simply condemns the social evil as a sin, but observes that it is not the sin, but the inherent sin of the act he seeks to be strangely ignorant. If Archbishops do not object to card-play for a small consideration, "we may we not expect of the faithful that these things are done in the grove which will be done in the dry

Yet faith has its degrees. Our Lord spoke of a "little faith," to rebuke it, and of a "great faith" to conserve and applaud it. There are undoubtedly differences of attainment, that Christian graces, in their strength and efficiency, are in exact ratio with their purity. It is this character that makes faith "great" or "little." With every element of alloy eliminated, by whatever process may be employed in the mysterious chemistry of Providence, faith becomes stronger. The fire that purifies, strengthens. In other words, it is the quality of faith that determines its mightiness. Where all impurities are expelled all weakness is gone. A pure faith is omnipotent.

No one word is so descriptive as suggestive of this grace in its rarest and most radiant character as the word "unfeigned." Not feigned opposed to a mere semblance or pretense of a (thing or a line of conduct). So that unfeigned faith is a real, sincere faith without guile, fabrication or semblance. It responds with accuracy and fidelity to every Scripture characteristic and requirement. It is not a seeming or a shadow, a substance and conscious infallible evidence.

Now, a little observation and a little discernment will convince us that such a grace is by no means a universal possession. There is much of mere semblance among the Lord's disciples. That is counted a cardinal and conspicuous virtue often which lacks the transparency and concrete reality of truth. It seemeth right, but is really wrong. Sometimes suggestion to the mind, more or less detained and entertained, is taken for a settled religious conviction. A mere plausible sentiment made to wear the aspect and manner of a Christian grace. This is a subtle device of the evil one to deceive with fair spiritual guise every other agency has failed of purpose.

A feigned faith is not a rare spiritual exhibition. It bears a strong resemblance to the reality, but lacks its inward life and sturdy strength. An illustration or two will suffice to make a clear and most important distinction.

Some great calamity has befallen a man, and he is left a disciple—a loss of fortune or a domestic bereavement. In the presence of the dreadful misfortune, with an overwhelming sense of futile helplessness—no possibility of recovering or recalling that which is gone—there is a forced yielding to the inevitable, which is mistaken for the resignation of faith. There is a looking to God for comfort and consolation of His Lordship over the living and the dead, but an acceptance of a sorrowful fact which could not be averted or remedied. Now, a true, a fegined faith would say: "My God, Thou hast permitted this and experienced it, but I cannot as yet understand its meaning; but he is too wise and too good to be unkind. I will therefore recognize his hand, and yield myself to his guiding love." It takes but a little discernment to discover the difference between the two characters. The one is cold calculation, the other is the humble, loving resignation of faith unfeigned.

Again, around some great truth the infinite efficacy of the merit, the virtue of prayer or the efficacy of the Sabbath, thought and may have gathered. We may suppose that they had a supreme and precious object of that they were the clear and convictions of the soul. But time of trial comes—when prayer is needed and must be—when the power of our religion to be tested—we discover that supposed faith was but a senseless such was Peter's experience and much was Peter's personal admiration tachment for a well-grounded faith, that could not be shaken. But, alas! how bitter was the revelation of his weakness. We must guard against a mere semblance, and pray mightily for a faith unfeigned. It was of such a grace our Lord spoke when he said: "I have not found so great faith, no not in Israel."

While we are arranging to cele

While we are arranging to celebrate the centennial of organic American Methodism our brethren across the sea will also have a Centenary. Theirs occurs on the twenty eighth of this month, ours on Christmas day. We will honor like events—the legal, permanent organic establishment of Methodism in England and America. Dr. Whitehead, in his Life of Wesley, well says that the year 1784 was “the grand climacteric year of Methodism.” In this year the famous Deed of Declaration was adopted and enrolled—“Methodism’s Magna Charta”—Bishops were ordained for America and the Methodist Episcopal Church was formally organized. On the twenty eighth of February, 1784, Mr. Wesley executed the Deed of Declaration, which, a few days thereafter, was enrolled in the high court of chancery. The execution of that instrument gave Methodism a distinct ecclesiastical existence. The event is to be appropriately celebrated on Thursday of next week in old City Road Chapel, London. As they have just raised a thanksgiving fund of £212,000, nearly a million and a half of dollars, the meetings will be soiree and historical, without any effort to secure a monumental offering of a kind. Before the adoption of the Deed of Declaration all property was held in Wesley’s own name, and anyone alone could determine who and where to preach and be preached in the chapel pulpits. At his death his brother, Charles, could exercise the same prerogatives; or if his death occurred before William Grimsham he should succeed. When the latter had died the chapels were to be in trust for the preachers who should be appointed by the Yearly Conference, provided they preached other doctrines than those contained in Wesley’s Notes on the New Testament, and his four volumes of sermons.

This Deed of Declaration involved all power in one hundred preachers known as the Legal Hundred. They held all property in trust, and administered the whole business of the church. The President of the Legal Conference must be of the number, and all legislative action of the full Conference must have official and separate concurrence. The members of the first Legal Hundred were selected by Mr. W. B. Hatfield, and caused much dissatisfaction, and became a serious blot on the history of the great movement. But at length the excitement passed off with the loss of five prominent preachers. As we gave the legal features of the Deed of Declaration some time ago they need not be repeated. This should be a yearning Methodist historical study. Let us great even, with its associations and consequences, be carefully studied.

n editorial article in

From an editorial article in issue of the Baptist Record we
the following extract:

Methodists hold, in short, that salvation is a co-operative work, the helping of man and a part of God's generation is not a "sovereign act of God," but a co-operative work. Theists have written many things beyond question, but never knew any folly, but in positing that man could co-operate in his own creation, for it is said he is created anew in Christ. Again, we are "born of God and of His Spirit." Theological folk reached their greatest heights when men are represented as co-operating with God in their own new birth. When men are seen to be the fathers, such ideas may be to outside an insane asylum.

Nothing is gained by unfalsified extreme statement. It has little in convincing an opponent, a dangerous weapons in the hands of unskilled friends. Here the editor defines the Methodists on "regeneration" and "salvation" and then pronounces it the "work of theological folly," and these ideas are not to be tolerated in an insane asylum." We submit that such a characterization of a large body of Christians, in company with the editor and his associates as zealous in good works more curt than courteous. I submit that we subscribe to the Atonement theory of salvation are only the wards of an asylum, the place where will they find those who are sane enough to tell them in? Surely our Baptists would not undertake the kind of thing that man shows a lamentable ignorance of theological history, not noted the decline of Calvinism and the corresponding growth of Arminianism. Nor is this ration of a Methodist writer merely but of such a well-known Calvinistic author as Dr. Philip Schaff: "We have no disposition to bandy epithets with anybody. But we might question the sanity of a Christian writer who would misstate our position as above. Methodist theology is stated in two evangelical axioms in the language of Fletcher: 1. "All our salvation is of God, by free grace through the alone merits of Christ." 2. All our damnation is of ourselves, through our avoidable unfaithfulness."

Now, does that look anything like the ridicule of the Record?

We believe the Scriptures teach conditional salvation—and the conditions are, repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus, Christ. Now, if man has nothing to do with the acceptance or rejection of the conditions, they are utterly meaningless, as are all the exhortations to repentance found in the word of God. If the Record believes in an unconditional necessitated salvation, we ask attention to the following formulation of his creed: "The sum, of all is this; one in twenty (suppose) of mankind are elected nineteen in twenty are reprobate. The elect shall be saved, do what they will; the reprobate shall be damned, do what they can. Read, believe this or be damned. With my hand, A. T."

FROM A REJECTED LEAF IS RISE
M'TYRE'S FORTHCOMING HIS-

John Wesley paid more tolls and ferrage fees than any man in England. First on horseback, later in life by carriage, he journeyed incessantly five thousand miles a year defiant of weather. To spare time and to carry on his work, he read as he rode along, and, as reading, became acquainted with and digested and criticized new books than men who pass for great readers get through with in the quiet retreat of a library. We have no incidents by the way, and we have no occurrences which he had the human enjoy and the leisure to record. Following, otherwise than grave, he picked out of the Journal, covering a long space of time :

I explained, at Chelsea, the nature and necessity of the new birth (who I afterward heard was a senting teacher) asked me what I had done, "Quid est tibi nomen." And, on my not answering, took in triumph to his companions, and said: "Ay, I told you he did not understand Latin!"

"gentleman came to me for good; he, to exhort me not to the church; or (which was the thing in his account) to use prayer, which, said he,
 will prove to a demonstration no prayer at all. For you can-two things at once. But this bow to pray and praying ar-things. Ergo, you can not think and pray at once." Now it not be proved by the self-demonstration that praying is no prayer at all? E. g.:
 can not do two things at once reading and praying are two things. Ergo, you can not both re-pray at once." — Q. E. D.

Between Doncaster and Epsom I overtook one who immediately costed me with so many and so pertinent questions that I was amazed. In the midst of so many, concerning my travels on my journey, I interrupted him and asked: "Are you aware of the way to a longer journey, that is, to the Kingdom of God eternally?" He replied instantly: "O! I find you find you! I know where you are! Is not your name Wesley?" "Yes, my friend." "Is that great pity?" "What?" "Why not your father's religion?" "Yes?" "Why must you have a religion?" "I was going to repeat to you that I had been cut me short by crying out triumph: "I am a Christian! I am a Christian! I am a Christian! I am a Christian! I am a churchman! I am a churchman! I am a churchman!" and you, my friend, are a Unitarian!" "I could speak, for he was so desirous to hear me, that I kept his arm, and then clasped him the day, or thereabout, in my arms, and said in phrase was, "put them all in the hands of the Lord, and he began kicking his horse on the sides, and rode off as fast as he could." "I was desirous to call upon him, but he was not to be had." "Walker," the pillar of the church in these parts. As soon as I fell upon me with his might, I main for saying "People know their sins were forgiven, and brought a great blessing upon the world." He asked if it was true, and upon his answering "I quired no further, but bid him go down."

The next afternoon I stopped at the Newport Pagell, and rode on till I overtook a series of whips I immediately conversation. He apparently to know what his opinion therefore I said nothing to either them. But that did not him; he was quite uneasy whether I held the doctrinal decrees as he did; but I over and over: "We had better to practical things, lest we be angry at one another." And for two miles, till he came unawares, and dragged me dispute before I knew where He then grew warmer and told me I was rotten at heart supposed I was one of John's followers. I told him: "I John Wesley himself." Upon he would gladly have run a right. But, being the better of the two, I kept close to him and understood to show heart till we came into the Northampton.

BY BISHOP PARKER.

It is a time for reflection as well as for action. A time not merely for an array of statistics, but for the consideration of principles. The period is long enough to warrant conclusions and settled convictions. Episcopalian Methodism, after a century of probation, may now be regarded as received into full connection. A century is not much in the lifetime of a church, but it is sufficient to establish its claim as a legitimate branch of the sisterhood. As among Methodists, this probation has vindicated whatever may be regarded as distinctive in our organization and doctrines.

The itinerancy has been tested most thoroughly. It has been maintained with vigor unimpaired since the date of the Christmas Conference. It was good in the beginning as a great revival movement, and is the only effective means of giving the gospel to the people in a new country, and in the sparsely settled frontiers. That it would meet the changed conditions of society, and prosper in the midst of wealth, intelligence, and settled and prosperous and refined communities, remained to be seen. The itinerant minister still lives, and has shown itself to be on the whole, a system of incompatible power, and adapted to all circumstances and all times.

The episcopal feature has its child illustration and trial in our branch of Methodism. Except in the twilight limit of the pastorate—a limit first introduced in 1804—the prerogatives of the Bishops have not been touched. The authority in making appointments is the same now as in the days of Ashbury. Serious agitation and considerable secessions, however, occurred in connection with the feature of our episcopacy, notably in 1792 and 1828. But since the latter date there seems to have been general acquiescence. The "itinerant general superintendency," with its functions and prerogatives, has stood the test of the century. It has during this period passed through several severe ordeals; it has been fiercely assailed, sifted, debated, and, at periods of tempest and storm, it remains intact, and more heartily and generally accepted than ever. At a hundred years, Episcopal Methodism thrives marvellously, and is very far outstripped all other members of the Methodist family. This century has delivered its testimony for the episcopacy. If any feature of Methodism could have been regarded as tentative a century ago they were the itinerancy and episcopacy. They have been subjected to every conceivable strain, but in unbroken vigor, they remain.

The Methodist Discipline, for its stance, including the General Rules and articles of religion, is unchanged. The experience of a century has added little, and not essential has been taken away. The book has grown in elaborate details and provisions in regard to jurisdiction and the temporal economy. Additional sections have been added as the enterprise of the church has developed the interests of Sunday schools, education, missions, church extension, Lay representation in the Annual and General Conferences have been introduced. But the Discipline of 1784, in essentials, was the same as the Discipline of to-day. Another thing, the Discipline has not changed for a hundred years, and its rules, doctrines and economy are unchanged through the ordeal of time.

The usages peculiar to Methodist and the means and expression of life, in the days of the fathers survive. The love-feast is maintained in its primitive frequency and in the class meeting, less prosperous still kept up, and in many cases flourishes, and the old Methodist altar, and attendant exercises familiar to our people. If there has been a decline in vital power, usages and expedients still stand among the recognized means and exponents of our church life. Mission for good is still maintained. The emphatic lesson of a hundred years is that they are still real and as essential to the spiritual life of the church, as at any time in its history. It is now fully demonstrated that they were merely suited to meet an emergency. In the beginning of a great revival, but that they are essential to the permanent and organized life of the life and spirituality of the church.

Methodist preaching had a distinctive type a hundred years ago, different from that of any other, the doctrine of an unlimited atonement, free will, the witness of the Spirit, conversion from sin, and human salvation from sin, and human conversion were proclaimed as the potent element is less prominent now, but the doctrines and principles are the same. Here and there is a manifest strain in novel and unusual doctrinal tions and statements. A morbid and restless tendency, and even clamor, for new ways of apprehending and presenting old truths are occasionally manifest. There is peril in this direction, but as yet the old and distinctive type of Methodist preaching holds its place. The atonement as substitutional, conversion as an immediate and mighty change to be felt, the witness of the Spirit as a real and personal assurance, and the blood of Christ as cleansing from al sin, are the staple of our preaching. This preaching has been crowned with a century of wonderful success, and, as to doctrine and manner, is vindicated, as of God. As a type of Methodist preaching—preaching without manuscript, doctrinal, direct, hortatory and earnest—is the preaching for all time. It has inspired and molded the successful preaching of all the churches, of all generations. To preach "like a Methodist" is a way other churches now have of praising their ministers.

After a hundred years, then, Episcopalian Methodism commends itself to Methodists, at least, as a most satisfactory form of doctrine and polity. Those without have come to this well of it, under the irresistible compulsion of historical demonstration. It is no longer on probation, in an uncertain attitude toward the world and toward its own children. It must be accepted as thoroughly to be, as possessing all the attributes of a Christian church, and as more successful in winning souls than other since the days of the apostles. This period of trial has placed its seal of truth upon the system. Its capabilities are shown, and its doctrines and polity are permanent. Methodism is in the world to stay.

The only question for anxious thought concerns our church. The past makes us hopeful for the future. Will the spirituality Methodism endure? From worniness, lax discipline, and a declining herosim in the ministry, there perhaps some apparent deterioration. As the world advances in wiser education and general material prosperity, new and more severe conditions arise to test the spirituality of our church. Some of these elements have been met in the past, but the near future will disclose them more fully. It will especially test their truth and the experience. The younger is; that while the form may survive, the power will be but a tradition of the past. A spiritual man, a true, converted preacher, imbued with the spirit of self-denial, having an experience to tell as well as a doctrine to expound, is of great importance. And, next to this, we must be careful to keep up our great nurseries of spirituality—the love-feast, the class meeting, the family prayer.

Besides the argument of which this centennial deliverance comes to us also with the voice of admonition. It should be an appeal. We should be especially of our spirituality, there be any symptoms of declivity, the tendency to worldliness, we must return to the simplicity and fervor of our fathers. It is abundant occasion for thanksgiving, but reason also for searching heart. The century of Methodism commits to us, upon whom the future of the world are come, a priceless heritage. How to be faithful to that great trust should be our prayer and anxious study.

—We are indebted to our ex-confere of the Arkansas Me-for a graceful and grateful n-of this ADVOCATE—its past i-present.

—The Centenary medal of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which will bear Bishop Asbury's name on one side and Bishop Pierce's, senior Bishop in 1884, on the other. Dr. Lavick Pierce, the father, was born in 1765, only a few years after the organization of the Methodist in 1784. These two thus span the century.

—A great revival has been in progress among our churches in Philadelphia. The Rev. S. P. Jones, Georgia, did the preaching, and the pastors co-operated heartily and methodically. About four hundred have been converted in many of our churches, and there have been many renewals of covenant and awakenings of sleeping consciences. We are grateful for the outpouring—a good beginning for the new year's work.

Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Md., commencing on the third of May, 1884. The session has been held in Fairmont, W. Va., but for important elements reasons the place of the conference was changed to Baltimore. The General Conference will consider and join with all other causes Methodists in the grand annual celebration next Christmas.

DOMESTIC.

The Publishing House and the Centenary.

COTTON.
Low ordinary.....	7 1/2	60	—
Ordinary.....	8 1/2	—	—
Good ordinary.....	9 1/2	—	—
Low middling.....	10	1-16	—
Middling.....	10 1/2	—	—
Good middling.....	10 3/4	—	—
Middling burr.....	10 3/4	—	—
Fair.....	11 1/4	—	—
Delaware middling.....	10 1/2	—	—
Mobile middling.....	10 1/2	—	—
.....	10 1/2	—	—

SUGAR.
Inferior.....	34	4)
Common.....	42	5
Good common.....	52
Fair.....	51
Good fair.....	52
Fully fair.....	53
Prime.....	54
Strictly Prime.....	57
Choice.....	52
Seconds.....	51
Yellow clarified.....	61	7

Choice whites.....	71	—	—
Granulated.....	77	—	74
MOLASSES.
Syrup.....	—	—	—
Pair.....	21	—	20
Prime.....	31	—	30
Choice.....	—	—	—
Fancy.....	—	—	—
RICE.
Choice.....	—	—	—
Prime.....	54	—	64
Good.....	52	—	52
Pair.....	54	—	51
Ordinary.....	49	—	51

Common	44	48
No. 2	23	24

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	0 00	6 25
Minnesota patents	7 15	—
Extra fancy	6 40	—
Winter wheat patents	6 30	7 25
Choice	5 40	6 05
Fancy	4 05	5 25

COIN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 55	—
Corii meal	—	3 15
Grits	3 50	3 65
Hominy	4 15	—

GRAIN, ETC.
Barley	—	—
Buckwheat	—	—
Chaff	—	—
Chowder	—	—
Clay	—	—
Coal	—	—
Corn	—	—
Corn meal	—	—
Cornstarch	—	—
Cottonseed	—	—
Cottonseed oil	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—
Cottonseed refuse	—	—
Cottonseed dross	—	—
Cottonseed lard	—	—
Cottonseed soap	—	—
Cottonseed meal	—	—
Cottonseed cake	—	—
Cottonseed hulls	—	—
Cottonseed trash	—	—
Cottonseed waste	—	—</

CORN:
White	62	—
Yellow	62	—
Mixed	62	—
OATS:
Western	50	5
Texas rust-proof....	48	5
BRAN:
1 cwt	1 15	—
HAY:
Choice	19 00	20 0
Prime	16 00	18 0

PORK:
Mess.....	19 124	—
Prime mess.....	16 75	—
Ramps.....	16 75	—
BACON:
Choice breakfast.....	114	—
Shoulders	87	—
Sides, clear.....	11	—
Sides, clear rib.....	114	—
HAMS:
Sugar-cured.....	134	—
DUX SALT MEAT:

Shoulders.....	77	—
Sides, clear.....	104	—
Sides, clear rib.....	104	—

FISH.

MACKEREL:
No. 1, in bbls.....	14	25
Half bbls.....	7	75
No. 2, in bbls.....	13	75
Half bbls.....	6	25

No. 3, in bbla, large.	13 25
Half bbls.....	7 00
GROCERIES.
COFFEE:
Rio, choice.....	11
Cordova, choice.....	12 1/2
Java, choice.....	15

BUTTER:
Western dairy.....	26	—
New York dairy.....	25	—
Country.....	18	—
LARD:
Choico.....	10	—

TEAS:
Cholco.....	50
Fair.....	25
OILS:
Coal, cases.....	18
Coal, bills.....	11
Cotton seed.....	43
Lard.....	78
VEGETABLES.

CARRIAGES:		—	—
Western.....		3	50
Country.....
POTATOES:
New York.....		1	40
Western.....		1	40
Seed, New York.....		1	40

Seed, Western.....	1 40
KRUT:
P bbl.....	12 00
ONIONS:
P bbl.....	2 50
BALING STUFFS.
BAGGING:
12 lb.....	107
2 lb.....	11½
BALING TWINE:
3 lb.....	134

TIES:
P bundle.....	1	35.
SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western..	4	75.
Young.....	3	00.
Chickens, South'n..	3	25.
Young.....	2	50.
Turkeys, Southern..	10	00.
EGGS:
Western.....	17
Southern.....	16
WOOL: $ -
Lake.....	22
	10

LYSLANA	75
Boulay	9
HOOPS:
Green salted	6
Dry salted	10
STAVES:
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, charr.	100 00
Oak, boghead	80 00
HOOP POLES:
hoghead	33 00
Barrels	18 00
Half barrels	12 50
PELLETS:
Cotton seed	12 00
Meal (country)	21 50
Meal (city)	22 00
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3
Sulphuric acid	22
Romp black	31

The Church holds the copyright of its doctrinal and denominational books and gives this House the exclusive right to publish them. For this there were two very good reasons. One was to insure uniformity, the other to get the books, etc., at a fair price, with the understanding that any profits arising from concentrated patronage should belong to the Church.

by which the debt was placed on a basis of 4 per cent. bonds maturing in forty years, and have given a life patronage which has enabled the Flourens during a period of five years, to pay every expense in any manner connected with its business, and from its surplus to retire more than $200,000 of the debt of 1878. No better demonstration

We make no appeal to the Church to come to the rescue of the House. It is in no danger so long as its natural customers can procure what they need from it at a fair price. It has passed the crisis, and has a capital sufficient to take care of itself completely.

people and unite their purposes efforts as no other agency can.
many avenues of trade, and ext nary facilities for distributing and pamphlets and tracts whic affect the public mind in favor Centenary enterprise. In ever that is legitimate, this house day of rejoicing in Baltimore. Centenary movement is a success. People must be informed and through the pulpit and the press then they will be liberated to a great movement. What a tragedy it would be if a religious paper be placed in every family, and

104	supply, but the effect would
55 00	rest upon the zeal and intelli
80 00	generality of our members
105 00	home and foreign Church
130 00	Send us your orders, brethren,
— — —	the "cash or its equivalent"
— — —	House is your store-house.
— — —	are full, and have been sent
21 75	reference to your wants. It

KOSSE, Tex., Feb. 13.—The heaviest rain for ten years occurred last night. One of Capt. Dake's houses were up another was partially demolished. Is still pouring.

BEAUREGARD, Miss., Feb. 13.—Hector Benjamin Kling, Sr., died to-day at 1 o'clock P. M. of pneumonia.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Feb. 13.—Hector Booth was arrested late Monday night.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The House today acted on the reports of the election committee in the Manning-Clemens contest. It decided to adopt the majority report of the election committee. That report is that neither of the south side of Park, near Lud street, had fallen, and ten persons buried in the ruins or drowned.

New York, Feb. 15.—The trouble the Madison Avenue Congregational Church were continued this evening by the antagonists of Pastor New. They adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the real interests of the Madison Avenue Church will be advanced by the discontinuance of

The law was passed several months ago and has met with much opposition. The court in its opinion said: "To serve the quiet and peace of a community on the recognized Sabbath day, the people of the United States, is a legitimate object to be consummated by a governing body of a city in such private manner as shall serve the public interest."

according to necessities. The merged country is slowly sharing the water, and the devastation part description. Roofs, houses on brick and timber, tell the tale in directions. Provisions are as plentifully supplied, but this is sullen from the cold weather. May Ohio, is a wreck.

New York, Feb. 17.—Gen. Sherman will have no further to say.

arrived to-day, and after a brief stay started back this evening. The following describes the situation at the points as most desperate. On the 6,000 used persons were distributed and 30,000 rations were distributed. The condition at Bridgeport, New Albany, is pitiable; the town is submerged, and the people have all fled. Rosewood is almost water-tight, and is expected there-merged. Many houses have away, and 5,000 persons are Twenty-five thousand rations Four hundred rations were Wolf Creek and 600 at A hundred destitute people were Derby and supplied with rations.

At Rome the awells from swopt three houses from the tations. There was much suffering

Maxville is entirely swamped with people. The situation at Grand View and great suffering is reported from the interior. Eight thousand are left there and at Rockport for county. Enterprise is overwhelmed, and nearly all of its agents have gone to places of refuge. The wants of those remaining will be our Several persons were seriously wounded.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Mr. Bradlaugh issued an address to the electors of Northampton for re-election. Ritchards, who once before gave Bradlaugh a close run, will be the candidate of the Conservatives.

It is reported that a majority of Cabinet are urging more vigorous action against Mr. Gladstone. Earl G

CAIRO, Feb. 18.—A letter from Obeld says: Mahdi is in great fear of assassination. Visitors are permitted to approach him only on all-fours, must remain at a considerable distance. The condition of the Christians in the arles is most deplorable. They lie straw butts outside of town, and are destitute of food, clothing and money.

EXPOSURE TO DRAFTS WHEN
ED, and sudden changes in the te ature of the atmosphere, are p sources of severe colds, from many cases of inflammation of Lungs, Pleurisy, Asthma, and Pulmonary Affections are deve

Address in French
LEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE
Orleans.

MISCELLANEOUS

Grant, although

Absolutely Pure

This powder never varies. A pure strength and wholesomeness. More correct than ordinary kinds, and can not be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, cheap and inferior alkali or phosphate powders. Sold only in the original tins.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., LTD.

ly sub-	Strandon	7	53	65	14	50
ve floated	Manila	7	25	63	16	50
n distress.	Marvin	7	00	60	14	50
were left.	Trouton	7	00	60	14	50
were left at	Strong River	7	00	45	16	50
lton. One	Forest & Norton	7	30	15	16	50
re found	Hillsboro	6	25	40	10	50
ons.	Wheat Grove	7	40	40	10	50
in the boat	Deane	6	00	40	12	50
her founda-	Newton	7	25	65	14	50
ter and	Lake	7	75	65	14	50
	Halleg	6	00	40	12	50
	Westville	6	00	40	12	50

	WHEELING	ELKINS	BIRMINGHAM
Woodville station.....	111	110	20
Wilkinson circuit.....	87	8	70
N. Wilkinson circuit.....	62	2	60
Amite circuit.....	72	7	70
Amite City station.....	75	7	70
St. Helena circuit.....	77	7	70
Clinton station.....	100	10	90
E. Feliciana circuit.....	91	9	90
Jackson station.....	80	8	80
Ilaya Sara circuit.....	85	8	80

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FIRST ROUND

Columbia circuit, at Columbia..... Feb

Jenn circuit, at Jennsville..... Feb

Rich and Ada circuit, at Palestine..... Feb

Spring Creek circuit, at Spring Creek..... Feb

Ittle Cheery and Goodwin circuit, at Chico..... Feb

Alexandria and Pineville..... Mar

Vadala and Troy circuit, at Troy..... Mar

Black River and Cold Springs circuit, at Wilcox..... Mar

Free Green and Big Cane circuit, at Bayou Clair..... Mar

Colfax and Montgomery circuit, at Mont-

Mooringsport, at Mooringsport (Wed.).....
Caddo, at Liberty.....
Grand Cane, at Grand Cane.....
Longview, at St. John Chapel.....
Muskeled, at Muskeled.....
Pleasant Hill, at Pleasant Hill.....
Saline, at Negrete (Wednesday).....
Roheline, at New Hope.....
Anacoco, at Anacoco.....
Waco, at Calais.....
Provencal, at Friendship.....
Natchitoches, at Natchitoches (Wed.).....
Coushatta, at Davis Springs.....
Red River, at East Point (Wednesday).....

more

Oak Grove, Watson's Sch. at Bostons, Mass., U. S. P.
Lind Grove, Bartholomew

4

RODER RAND

HOMER DIST.—FIRST ROUTE

Tallapoosa circuit, at Athens.....
Arcadia circuit, at Arcadia.....
Sparta circuit, at Sparta.....
Saline circuit, at Saline.....
Lawrenceville circuit, at Ebenezer.....
Farmersville circuit, at Shiloh.....
Sumnerfield circuit, at Sumnerfield.....

New

GEPELOUSAN DIST.—FIRST R

Washington.....

Lake Charles.....

Grand Chenier.....

Catcnieu.....

Jeannette.....

Adlerville.....

Plaquemine Brate.....

Savallion and K.....

Chepoian.....

New Iberia.....

Morgau City.....

Sugar Town.....

Strong River, at Grange Hall.....
Forest and Motion.....
Newton.....	P. M. WIL
JACKSON DIST.—FIRST P
Canton.....
Hinds, at Vicksburg.....
Shadock.....
Madison.....
Edwards.....
Jackson.....

ure.

nel of purity.
omical than d in competi-
tional weight.
y cans.
New York.

DeKath.....
Neohob.....
Enterprise.....
Clark.....
Wilchester.....
Vreburg and Hiedelburg.....
Sammerville (Wednesday).....
Panding.....
Meridian circuit.....
Meridiao.....

JAN. A.

SEASONS DIST.—FIRST

[illegible]

RESID- ENT	RE- CORD	CLAIM- ANT	EXT- RA	WINONA DIST.—SECO ND
41	22	47	24	Konczakusko and Hurant.....
85	18	36	14	Belzonia.....
11	12	24	14	Belzonia.....
52	15	33	17	West.....
13	11	22	11	West.....
17	18	39	14	Lexington.....
13	11	22	11	Minter City.....
10	21	45	10	Greenwood.....
95	20	42	22	Carrollton.....
79	17	36	10	Hick.....
63	16	30	15	Hick.....
				Winona circuit.....
				Winona and Valden.....
				Waltham.....

115	13	28	15
40	7	16	6
910	250	480	256

shops. -

French Camp.....
 Zilpali.....
 Laboucha.....
 Newport.....
 Atala.....

5

THOS

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 9.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1439.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HENRIOT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

LEARNING.

Oh, O Christ, thy mind be wrought,
Thy Spirit in us dwell.
By thee, the perfect Teacher, taught,
Our wills to thine submissive brought,
Who doest all things well.

With thee, O Christ, we walk the deep;
Ablinded, temptest thou us here,
With thee our loving vigils keep,
Watching with those who sweetly sleep,
Departed, but not lost.

Thy path, O Christ, are perfect peace.
Thy thoughts are full of love,
From bonds of sin our souls release,
And bid the power of passion cease,
And all our guilt remove.

—Advocate.

Centennial Signals.

BY JOSEPH H. CUTRELL, D. D.

This centennial year of Methodism is occasion of much. It is cause of nothing. In the economy of corporate, organic life, membership persons into unity above mere oneness, and sancteness, in order to catholic brotherhood, formation of secondary centers may be expected, analogous to those in our individual physical organism, whereby distribution of nervous power is passed off reproductively from the sensorium; or (to change the figure of illustration) in the advance of Zion to conquests over ignorance, perversions and perversenesses of humanity there will inevitably transpire that which is after the order of secondary bases of operation, where through an army finds more available for its succor and sustenance, its ultimate sources of supply secure under cover of primary base.

Centennial signal guns reverberate just now from every quarter of the field of Methodist operation. "Deep calls unto deep," and the shallows ripple and gurgle responsive to the pulsings of this great ocean over which the star of Methodism is aglow. Any raven-like croaking, or critical distrust of the inspiration of the hour, can only come from solitary birds that fly not in flocks, or ever warble repetition of the song the winged messengers of paradise have brought to earth. May this, indeed, be a year of renewal—a year of revival; one of review and renovation.

Bearing in mind, with sentimental sincerity, what is more than implied in the raven-croak criticism or suggestion, touching the harmonies of our centennial hymn, suggestion may be ventured that variation in the cadences thereof, according to the tension and the fibre of each individual strings as Heaven hath drawn it, is requisite to consonance complete and to redemption from monotony. Monotony is as little of heaven as is dissonance or discord. The highest harmonies and deepest melody are only reached when the medium of sound is as flexible and elastic as is the genius appointed of heaven to vibrate the heart of Zion in unison with songs celestial, versatile and facile. How my very innermost soul is hungry for a word other than that which comes to the point of my pen or tongue when protest against even semblance of intellectual obstruction would leap into expression!

Franchisement! No other word alight upon the tide of letters serves so fully to meet the exigencies of thought tentatively or provisionally until a new one, coined from out the quarry whence language issues for relief of mind in parturition of philosophic truth, comes forth to smite more keenly the benumbed ear of arbitrary officialism.

I listened lately to a sermon from a man who has been the beau ideal of my fancy as a pulpitist; one whom nature has cast in her choicest mold; in whose physical, moral and intellectual blending are her choicest elements. His theme was "Prayer." One of the salient points of criticism he made was that, in comparison of the volume of prayer on the part of the church, bestowment is meager. The implication of insincerity upon the part of the church in just that which would bring her faith and truth to a perpendicular, were her inspiration of the Spirit, seemed wonderful. I shuddered! Instantly, however, the mind recoiled, and the comforting assurance arose that just the reverse is the case; that blessings, enlargements and upliftings of this humanity of ours in accelerating progress along the line God-ward are after an order and to a degree far more exceeding and abundantly above what has been stammered from our poor lips; only that they have come of forces and agencies operating empowerment, liberation, liberalization and refining of humanity that are discounted by the epithet secular as in contrast with what is termed sacred. Whatever is not sinful is sacred. To hear one in prayer ask the blessings of God's Spirit on our institutions of learning, "secular and sacred," gives rise to suspicion of limitations and hindrances of mind wrought by superstitious religionism. The genius of religion and life, as embodied and illustrated in him who came that we might realize complete enfranchisement and have life "more abundantly," hath a catholic claim. "All my springs are in thee." The sermon of which I speak, especially in its peroration, was on a heroic key, modulated to movement though, as if conquests of the kingdom are along prospective territorially. The signal seemed altogether in respect of horizontal movement and advancement of lines. No glinting of thought whatever, indicative of apprehension that intellectual pioneering must ever be co-ordinate or concomitant with genuinely benevolent proselytism.

With such exceptionally rare gifts of utterances and graces of diction, as qualified the matchless orator so pleasingly to engage the ear of that vast assembly, it only required that his tongue should have sounded a note on this behalf to have thrilled the collective mind of his audience. Elect ones who read and hear in order that they may know, and that they themselves may speak live words and escape the vulgar commerce of traditional phrases, hackneyed and luscious, are inspired most and assured when these inner springs are touched—when the occasion itself is made by true chivalry of mind a battle and a victory. Yea, verily, did I feel that the preacher that day might have knocked a hole in the sky at one stroke and let in upon us a glory that would justify a shout. The stack he built deserved the placement of just that cap-sheaf. Had the symmetrizing thought, quarried from depths of intellectual, philosophic mining, come forth, how joyfully we would have shouted "grace unto it!" A great big hallelujah came creeping up from my soul in anticipation of that vertical lick—that daybreak of olivaceous thought; but—disappointment!

Now, I am dependent upon the suggestive force of what I am writing to awaken apprehension in the minds of such as give me audience. Details are tedious. Specifically stated, my meaning is this: In this centennial year of ours may there not be resuscitating of Conference? That is our word. Regarding any question of polity, administration, legislation, dogmatic formulation, ordinal, or ritualistic regulation, may we not confer, freely and frankly confer, and have vitality of thought in exercise of ever reigning judgment along a progressive, consolidating, reproducing line of honest inquiry? The world of mind is going to have just that, at any rate, as it has in the past, persisted in claiming, and the reproach should no longer fall upon Zion that she marches up to entrench upon ground won for her by valor of those without. Let her be so thoroughly self-liberalized as to lead. Intellectual leadership will be her salvation. The world is fast coming to this: its ear is given to him whose thought is most vital and vitalizing. In its swift movement it can not stop for argument. We have got to say it briefly, and say only that which shines in its own light and is its own proof. Only radiators should stand in the pulpit. It is not the place for reflectors. That which does not pass out and off from a man as his own, and as his very self, is without power. Therefore let there be individual enfranchisement. This is one of the many centennial signals, that should sound clear and keen from lips official and from every tripod. This was the genius of original Methodism whose organizing, symmetrizing and consolidating force was in virtue of no dogmatism, but per operation of "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus." Such as nail their eyes to dogma cease to behold the light of the knowledge of the Divine glory in his face whose ravishing beauty alone wins the soul to worship. Such as engage their eyes in contemplation of him who is "Chief among ten thousand, and altogether lovely," have them sprout and grow as into production of multiplying lenses, telescope and microscope, and are, par excellence, seers. To them are discoveries of "wondrous things" in God's law, and they pass along "from glory to glory" by operation of that spiritual force, potential, in the very constitution of our being, of all truth and life and love and beauty and bliss. Paul was jealous over such as had by his ministry been smitten with a streak of this fine love, and it was the main exercise of his truth-wrought and love-fraught soul to steer these far off from breakers, ritualistic. In his time they were the snare. He generalized them by "the law of commandments," the subtle legalism, whose serpent glance and forked-tongued assertiveness taxed Paul's ultimate powers of verbal delineation and characterization, was aced in ritualistic foldings. As found in that form, asserting prerogative at this day, it is rather provocative of amusement than dread. But it is the same genius that has slid off into metaphysical, dogmatic formulae, constituting the same "yoke of bondage" whose entanglement is the more enslaving that it is in range above the sensuous. It is a grasp of soul rather than body. Its inquisitorial sting, being in word rather than in form and fashion of performance, makes more poignant the infliction. Were Paul in environment of our Centenary, and piloting the Methodist ship, her prow, by command of the same Divine Captain, would he hold firmly and decisively off from direction of Devil's Bridge, whose deceitful rocks, dogmatic, have shattered into ruin so many crafts. Those who tell us of a storm, agnosticism, hurling or raging in the firmament, cry to us: "Make for the rocks! make for the rocks! Devil's Bridge is steadfast!" This is that "wordly wisdom" for which Paul chose an ugly word from Proverbs. When storms are high the deepest and the broadest places of the sea are safest for the ship—

"Where every shock
Of the wave,
And not the rock."

Muzzling God's Oxen.

We have many churches and many charges that increase largely every year in numbers and names, but in nothing else. Year after year it is marching up the hill, just to march down again. The membership is doubled, but this increase divides the financial strength of the charge or church. The stewards are glad to get in what they call "good material," paying members, but the church and charge pay no more. The stewards, and the few members that do pay, manage to secure for themselves all the financial advantages of the increase. A harvest of souls for the preacher means a harvest of cash for the members. They save money by the paying converts, hence there is great joy over the conversion of good material, paying men and women.

The preacher may do the work, sow the seed amid toil and tears, but a parsimonious membership manages to muzzle him so he can not lick up a wisp of the wheat as he treads out the corn. They say to him in actions if not in words: "Pastor, you may have the souls and we will take the cash. This increase will lessen the amount each of us have to pay."

As a church grows in numbers it ought to have a corresponding growth in financial ability and in liberality. Where things are as they ought to be this is always the case. It is not so in some places.

I know some churches that are from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars stronger now than they were four years ago, and yet they pay just the same, and have harder work to do it. The stewards and the members have made merchandise of all the souls converted and added to the church. The increase in numbers and wealth has decreased the liberality of those who were doing none too much before. Instead of raising the standard of liberality it has been lowered. As men increase in wealth they generally grow in stinginess, and the same is often true of churches. Every revival of religion and increase in membership ought to bring a corresponding increase in the assessments and in the payments. This process would soon develop the giving capacity and power of the church.

Many of our best churches are now reaping sparingly, because they have sowed so sparingly. They have plenty of temporal seed to have sown ten bushels to the acre, but, lo! they have thrown down less than a peck. This has hurt the church.

When preachers sow spiritual things they ought to reap carnal things, but the church in many places has taken the spiritual things and then gathered to herself, her carnal things. This has been a great curse to the church. They have muzzled God's oxen, and then whipped them on to treading out the corn. Doth God care for oxen? Hath he no care for men? For those whom he hath called to preach?

When one is converted he ought to be taken into the church and taught how to give, to give liberally. Don't make a new convert an occasion for increased stinginess. It will hurt him, and you too.

GOLDEROY.

Letter from Memphis.

THE GREAT REVIVAL.

We have just closed here a meeting of remarkable power and usefulness. It began early in January and continued for upwards of five weeks, increasing in interest all the time. I do not know what sort of weather you have in New Orleans; but I am sure you could not have worse than we have had here in Memphis: from a freeze that ran the mercury away below zero to a warm drizzle that made every muscle limp and lifeless—undoubtedly the meanest weather on record—so mean that one may be excused for noticing it. But the bad weather did not hinder the work; the people packed the largest church in the city at every service almost to suffocation. There were over four hundred conversions, and all the churches that joined in the meeting—for it was a union service—were greatly revived. My own charge, the First Church, will gain about seventy new members from the meeting, and I do not think I ever received a better class into the church. We have organized our class meetings to hold fast what we have gained, and are under full headway now.

—SAM JONES.

The meeting was conducted by Rev. S. P. Jones, of the North Georgia Conference. He came to us well endorsed as a good and true man. He is a remarkable man in many respects. Totally unlike most evangelists, he is as calm and quiet in his work as if nothing special was on hand. He only talks easily, clearly, directly—just talks, that is all. There is no oratory in the popular acceptance of that word, and he violates almost every rule of the books. But his talk is unique. Humor oozes through every sentence; sometimes rich as the flavor of ripe fruit, sometimes sharp as an acid that bites to the bone. His style is mainly that of the Georgia Scenes: illustration follows illustration, drawn not from books or far-fetched analogies, but from every-day life—the home, the field, the shop. They are pertinent and clear as a sunbeam. He fires a Winchester rifle, and at point-blank range. I never heard plainer speech from the pulpit. Hell is no myth and the "smoke of their torment" no figure of speech with him, and the deep impression produced on thousands in this godless city prove how vital such truths are when brought in contact with the consciences of men. There is no end to the original sayings of "Sam Jones."

A brother prayed for showers of grace. Jones exclaimed, "O Lord, let it be a regular, trash mover and gully washer!" "If you were to get some men to heaven, they would lope around until they found a low place in the fence and come back." "You don't want to hear of hell, eh? You cynic-headed simpletons, you had better learn something about the country where you are going"—and a hundred other quaint, piercing things that stick in the memory. His gift is his own, and no doubt his eccentricities of speech—for he has none either in manner or methods—constitute a large element of his power; but there are many things about this man which we all might learn to advantage. His independence of public opinion, his marked individuality, his calm, self-possessed manner, his simplicity, his intensely practical aim, the deep earnestness that pervades all he does—in all these points he sets as a good example. We call him here simply "Sam Jones," and will never forget him.

PROHIBITION.

I have watched with intense interest the acts of the Mississippi Legislature with reference to prohibition, and rejoiced to see the temperance cause had so much strength. When we consider that the cause of prohibition is comparatively recent in the State, there is every reason to be encouraged at the progress which has been made. Let our friends take heart. They must not rest on their arms a moment. The same and greater zeal will be necessary to enforce the laws which may be passed. If the Legislature refuses to pass such laws as they want, they have only to go to the people. The problem must be worked out through popular agitation. Get the majority of the people, and the politicians will turn clear around on themselves. I hope this will be the most earnest and active year the temperance cause has ever known. We have liquor here until my very soul is stirred with deep disgust. The nasty poison runs freely on every side, and is damning men and women by the thousand. God bless every man that helps to put down this horrible curse! The Advocate has a noble record on the question, and I dare say will continue to lead in this mighty conflict.

REV. R. N. FREEMAN.

You have already noticed the death of our dear Bro. Freeman. Only a few weeks ago I bade his fair young wife good-bye. Her heart was too full for her lips to utter the words, and, alas! how soon were her bright hopes quenched. We have not had particulars; but when the intelligence came the vast congregation joined in earnest prayer for the widowed bride and the bereaved family. May God protect the heroic young woman! Both she and Bro. Freeman have many warm friends here who mourn the early departure of our talented brother.

—THE BISHOPS.

We can scarcely get one to even visit Memphis. Our people think they are afraid of yellow fever, and avoid us. I dare say there is not a city of its size in the South that has less attention from the chief pastors than Memphis. We are to have Conference here next fall. That may bring one. We are now—I mean the city—on a high tide of progress. Memphis never knew a more prosperous time or had a more hopeful outlook for the future. If we can not get a Bishop, we would like to have an editor come to see us, so I give Dr. Galloway a hearty invitation.

B. A. STEEL.

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, on Thursday, February 7, 1884, Frederick S. Winston, Esq., vice president, in the chair.

Religious services were conducted by Secretary Gilliam.

Reports from several of the foreign agents announced the completion of long journeys. Mr. Milne having reached Monte Video, December 24; Dr. Collic, being at Shanghai, January 1, and Dr. Bliss at Constantinople, January 5. Mr. Whipple had been detained at Tabreez, and compelled to defer his trip to Teheran, by the sickness and death of his little child and the dangerous illness of Dr. Holmes. The report from Mexico showed that by the year ending December 31, there had been sent out from the central depot 19,178 volumes, of which 3,410 were Bibles. Letters were also presented from Dr. Trumbull, of Valparaiso, congratulating the society upon the inauguration of its work on the Pacific coast of Bolivia and Peru; from Dr. McDonald, reporting the number of pages of Scripture printed at the mission press in Bangkok; from George H. Prince, Esq., concerning work in Siberia and the Amoor; and from Mr. Loomis, with cheerful intelligence from Japan and Corea.

Grants of books were made by the Board for copyright, and for sale and distribution in the United States, and also in Mexico, Brazil and other foreign countries, to the value of about $19,500; funds were granted to the amount of $1,355.90 for work in Africa, Cuba, and elsewhere.

One Bible society was recommended as an auxiliary in Texas, and one in West Virginia.

The total receipts for January were $61,168.07; and 101,690 volumes were issued from the Bible House during the month.

Good Words.

The wise man, says the Bible, walks with God, surveys, far off, the endless line of life; Values his soul, thinks of eternity; Both worlds considers, and provides for both; With reason's eye his passions guards, abates; From evil; lives on hope, he hopes the fruit of faith, looks upward, purifies his soul; Expands his wings, and mounts into the sky; Passes the sun, and gains his Father's house; And drinks with angels from the fount of bliss. —Psalms.

—Suffer not your thoughts to dwell on the injury you have received or the provoking words that have been spoken to you. Not only learn the art of neglecting them at the time you receive them, but let them grow less and less every moment, until they die out of your mind.

There is dew in one flower, and not in another, because one opens itself and takes in, while the other closes itself and the dew runs off. So God rains goodness and mercy as wide as the dew, and, if we lack them, it is because we will not open our hearts to receive them.

—There is nothing more to be esteemed than a manly firmness and decision of character. I like a person who knows his own mind and sticks to it; who sees at once what is to be done in given circumstances and does it. —W. M. Hazlitt.

—Be true. Truthfulness in all transactions and all relations is not only essential to real influence, but confers true nobility of character. A life true on all sides and in all actions is faithful life.

—A man's own conscience is his sole tribunal; and he should care no more for that phantom "opinion" than he should fear meeting a ghost if he cross the churchyard at dark. —Lytton.

—We are oftentimes happier in giving up our will to others than we would be in having our way. —Methodist Recorder.

—Conduct is the great profession. Behavior is the perpetual revealing of us. What a man does tells us what he is. —F. D. Huntington.

—Washington said: profanity is a vice, mean, low, and without temptation, so that every man of sense and character will despise it.

—God writes the gospel, not in the Bible alone, but on the trees and flowers, on the clouds and stars.

—Be in peace with man; nevertheless have but one counselor of a thousand. —Jesus Sirach.

—The wise and active conquer difficulties by daring to attempt them. —Rowe.

—I know the Bible is inspired, because it finds me at greater depths of joy being than any other book. —Coleridge.

—We can not have fertilizing showers on the earth without a clouded heaven above. It is thus with our trials.

—Applause is the spur of noble minds; the end and aim of weak ones.

—Old proverb: The way to heaven is by the weeping cross.

—The heart has reasons that reason does not understand. —Hosnet.

—If thou canst tolerate a liar, thou art half a liar thyself.

—No man can lounge into success. —Christian Intelligencer.

—True love is ripened friendship.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate,
A SATURDAY PAPER.

BY INVITATION.

On the subject of all and New Year.

The wind and rain, like sighs and tears.

And the night till morning;

And the clouds of sorrow;

We see in the clouds of grief,

And hear the glad bird singing

How cold, how silent nature lies.

And in death's repose,

It seems that never again the skies

Will smile on blooming roses.

How shall these dead "again" revive?

Life hearts, dead hopes, and dreams;

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

And that decayed and cold will

habitable regions, had brought themselves in contact with the farthest ends of the earth, accordingly the apostle declares to their astonished ears that all these nations, so widely differing in customs and manners and appearance, are yet the work of this almighty Creator, and were not alien and inferior in nature to themselves. He announces the life-stream of the whole human race to be one, flowing from one source; "ye are all brethren." Not only so, but each nation and each man is under his care, and he hath determined before and appointed the times of each, when they shall be born, when they shall die, and places where they shall dwell. There is no blind chance but he created them, and hath appointed their bounds that they might seek after him and love him and trust him. This is the high end of all these arrangements of Divine power, wisdom and love, if happily they might feel after him, as men groping their way in the dark, a lively picture of the murky atmosphere of natural religion, and find him. The difficulty of finding God outside the pale of revealed religion lies not in his distance from us, but in our distance from him, through the blinding effect of sin. They sought in vain, for blindness had fallen on them. The fault was in them, for God remained close by them and changed not. Paul has asserted the majesty and supremacy of God, and by a quick turn, with a quotation from one of their own poets, asserts the dignity of man as being the offspring of God, and therefore the life that animates man is the divine principle by which God himself exists. He shows the unworthiness and falsehood of the Epicurean creed, and the unreasonableness of their idolatrous worship of images, and condemns all attempts to visibly present an invisible God. He announces that a new era has dawned, and with it a new responsibility; that God up to this had borne with this ignorance without interposing to punish it, but now commands all men; everywhere, to repent, not only in the narrow precincts of favored Judaism, where repentance had always been urged and demanded, but everywhere, and as an incentive to immediate repentance and a seal to this pre-emptory command he announces a day of accounts, appointed wherein he shall judge the world in righteousness, and this judgment shall be carried on by a Man, the proof of whose authority is that God has raised him from the dead. When they heard of the resurrection of the dead some mocked, others said we will hear thee again of this matter; an idle compliment to Paul and an ointment to their own conscience, such as we often meet in our day, who fear to hear more lest they should be constrained to believe unwelcome truths. So Paul departed from among them. Not long after he writes of the gospel that to the Greeks it was foolishness.

The Origin of the Baptist Church.

BY J. A. PARKER, OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The reason why we are so often surprised at the utterances of certain men in certain places may possibly be found in the fact that we, as peace-loving people, suffer such statements to go unrebuked, or, if rebuked at all, it too often happens in the way of a sneer at what seems to us too absurd to talk about, but which, nevertheless, is not so absurd to those who know no better than who have tried to learn that way. Dr. Graves makes a quotation, not relevant, however, and then adds: "This carries the succession of Baptists back to the year A. D. 225," but does not tell us where the Baptists were during that two hundred and twenty-five years. To bolster up his assertions as to the apostolic origin of his church, he quotes again: "The Donatists of the fourth and seventh centuries. Baptists do claim them as their ecclesiastical ancestors." Still he does not tell us who were the "ecclesiastical ancestors" of those Donatists. However, in the absence of some better proofs, he asserts that "the Donatists of the fourth century were the true church of Christ." But where were they during this two hundred and twenty-five years he does not tell us. Besides, if "the Donatists of the fourth century were the true church of Christ" it is certain that the Baptists were not "the true church of Christ," even if there were any Baptists then. This defect, however, he attempts to supply by saying "the English Baptists were the Donatists new dipped." This logic is seriously absurd. The "new" dip obliged the "Donatists" into "Baptists." But how did the Donatists come into existence, and when? A controversy between the African and Numidian Bishops as to whether Cerebus or Majorinus should be made a Bishop after the death of Mearius resulted in the Numidian Bishops electing Majorinus. This was not till "the fourth century," i. e., A. D. 311. This is the how and the when of the origin of the "Donatists of the fourth century." Mr. Graves says "the English Baptists were the Donatists new dipped." So Mr. Graves being the Judge, the Baptists never had an existence till the fourth century. This is a little nearer the truth than we usually get through Dr. Graves.

One more quotation made by Dr. Graves: "We have now seen that the Baptists, who were formerly called Anabaptists, and in later times Mennonites, were the original Waldenses." The Mennonites originated about the first of the sixteenth century, under the leadership of Menno. Schyn, the Mennonite historian, and many other writers, deny that the Mennonites descended from the Anabaptists. As for the Waldenses, Peter Waldo started that sect in the twelfth century—A. D. 1130. So if all the facts were as stated by Dr. Graves, his church can not get in three hundred years of the apostolic age.

The true genealogy of the Baptist Church is better traced on another line. Dr. Graves says Roger Williams, the Rhode Island Baptist, "was not a Baptist." He was never connected with any Baptist Church, nor any Baptist Church connected with him." Dr. Graves says also that Smyth, the German Baptist, "was not a Baptist." He was a Mennonite.

If Dr. Graves were to tell the Mennonites that "in later times" they were the vanishing fanatics called "Anabaptists in the fourth century" the reply would be that given by Cootie in his Mennonite, viz.: "The Mennonite people with all their might the account of their descent from the ancient Anabaptists, which we find in so many writers," page 493. That the reader may see for himself, and make his own comparisons, I quote a paragraph which shows conclusively that the doctrine and practices of the Baptist Church are quite different from those of the Mennonites.

"That species of Anabaptism with which we are charged exists no longer, nor has it happened during the space of many years that any person professing Christianity, of whatever church or sect he may have been, add who had been previously baptized according to the commandment of Christ, has been rebaptized upon his entering into our communion."—Mennonite, revised by Cootie, page 490.

The words, "according to the commandment of Christ," are explained to mean not in infancy. This fully appears from the words "of whatever church or sect he may have been." For, according to Dr. Graves, none are baptized "according to the commandment of Christ" except such as are baptized into his church.

In the fourth century we find a sect called Anabaptists. The Mennonites began to exist as an organized sect under Simon Menno in the fifteenth century. At the same time, in the same country, and up to the seventeenth century, the Anabaptists and Mennonites existed side by side, and in determined conflict. The Waldenses never had an existence till the latter part of the twelfth century, say about A. D. 1130. So we see Anabaptists, Mennonites and Waldenses existing all at the same time, in the same country, as late as the seventeenth century. Where was Dr. Graves' church in the seventeenth century? It was in its down, just hatched out of a Mennonite egg under the Waldenses, and here is the table of descent:

ECCELESIASTICAL CHRONOLOGY.

ADAM.

The Church of God.

Pharisees.

Saducees.

Essenes.

The Church of God A. D.

The Apostles.

Roman Hierarchy.

Roman Church.

Grecian Church.

Anabaptist.

Presbyterians.

Mennonites.

Cumb. Presbyterians.

Waldensians.

Etc.

Baptists, etc.

Church of England.

Methodists (many sects).

Methodist Church in America, etc.

Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

(Collected from Mennonite Church History.)

There may be some novelty in the above table, but we submit it to every candid and well-read historian to be criticized, and, as must be in all such cases, endorsed. The table might be extended to embrace over three hundred religious organizations, but this is enough for our present purpose. If other duties permit, we may, at some time in the near future, take this subject in hand again, and give not only the ecclesiastical parentage of the different churches, but the date of their organization and the ratio of their success. This table shows well enough that the church has been handed down directly from Adam through the apostles, and through the corrupting influence of Greece and Rome, to the Protestants of the present day.

M. M. EDITOR: In answer to Katie Kennard's question, "Who caused ruin to swim?" I answer, Eliza. You will find it in II Kings vi. We have a juvenile missionary meeting once a month, and I attend regularly. Well, I will close for this time.

Yours truly,

MATTIE THURMOND.

Rivers, Miss., Feb. 1, 1884.

The Scylla of Pelagianism.

M. M. EDITOR: The doctrine that the nature which we receive by natural generation must receive into it a nature or life that is divinely generated is very rarely called into question by the teacher of orthodox Christianity of the present day. Yet the clear, concise and unequivocal terms in which "Gilderoy," in your last issue, under the head of "Caution and Exhortation," presents this great truth is well calculated to confirm even the doubtful. But in regard to the direct or close issue between him and certain delinquent teachers, who do not urge this necessity sufficiently upon little children whom they receive into the church, I can not say that he is so successful. On the contrary, it appears to me, after some reflection, to be an open question whether the "muddle" he with him or the parties whose opinion and practice he so vigorously opposes. That this necessity, which he emphasizes so well, has been met in the case of little children, through the gracious results of the atonement, is a belief not confined to a "certain class of teachers," but is very general in the church. This, in my opinion, is the only solid ground for infant salvation. I am aware there are those who teach, upon what ground I can not see, that if it is with those only who die in infancy that this great work is accomplished. But, it seems to me, this is too narrow and uncertain a basis for so great an interest to rest upon. If the living infant has not the principle and power of the divine life what assurance have we from Scripture or nature that it is received in death? An assumption so weighty requires proof, and I have not seen or heard of even an attempt to prove it.

But let us notice this subject as presented by "Gilderoy." He says: "Certain teachers are in a 'muddle' as to whether there has been a general justification from original guilt or a general regeneration of human nature, and in shunning the Charybdis of Calvinism they have gone clear over into Pelagianism." Surely he does not mean that a belief in a general regeneration of human nature is Pelagianism or anything like it. Pelagius, I properly represented, believed that man is good by nature, rejected the doctrine of divine aid, or, if such aid is given, he held that it is external, or, at most, reaches only the understanding and never the will or affections. But this view not only recognizes the need of divine grace, or the reintroduction of spiritual life into the human heart but regards this necessity as so absolute, so pressing upon every age, state and condition of life, that it can be met only in the general, unconditional effects of the atonement. An absolute want is met by an absolute remedy. In regard to the alternative, which he thinks puzzles these misguided teachers, he accepts the first part, as is evident from the following: "The guilt of original sin has, of course, been forgiven, and a way has been provided whereby the vile nature may be changed." Let us briefly, if we can, analyze this position. Can it be the one has been fully accomplished and the other only provided for? I have been taught that justification and regeneration in the divine economy naturally and invariably go together. That where there is no guilt there is nothing to deprive the work of the Holy Spirit. Again, does the atonement affect man only externally, doing a work for him, and not internally; that is, nothing within him? Or, in other words, is his legal relation to his God unconditionally changed and his state or character untouched? If he said that grace is secured by the atonement, I ask what avail this unless the grace is imparted? And if he said again that grace is imparted, but not unto regeneration, I inquire again, what advantage is favor or virtue to the dead, spiritually, if it falls short of giving life? And if this grace gives spiritual life what is this but regeneration? If this is wrong term give us another that will answer. I care not. All I insist upon is that life, spiritual as well as temporal, is primarily not an offer, but a gift. This is what the book says, and I abide its teaching: "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ, our Lord." "This is the record, God hath given us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." In this connection I must quote a remark accredited to the discriminating mind of Bishop Keener: "A man is born but once naturally so he is born but once spiritually." And I think the analogy can justly be carried a little farther. As the voluntary activities and responsibilities of natural life can not proceed but must succeed birth, so it is with spiritual life. There is no basis for spiritual action until there is spiritual life—a spiritual man. I can never forget the reply of a blind man to an exhortation "to be born again." He said: "It was hard enough to obey after one was born, to do so before was a little too early." I know there is a period in the history of most Christians, usually after repentance and earnest seeking, when they become more fully conscious than ever before, and it may be with some the first time they realize it, of a state of favor and fellowship with God, but it occurs to me, this is a revelation rather than an introduction into the Christian life, a return of the "principle" to his "father's house" rather than the time of his birth. The return is as important as the birth, but they ought not to be confounded. I can not conclude better than by using a syllogism, deducible directly from the "written word," the major and minor premises being almost the exact words of the Saviour, changed only to conform to the formula, known in our text-books on logic as "Aristotle's dictum." Major Premise—"None can enter the kingdom of God unless they are born of the Spirit."—John iii, 5. Minor Premise—"Children are in the kingdom of God."—Luke xviii, 15. Conclusion—"Therefore children are born of the Spirit." If there is a fallacy here I can not detect it.

JOHN W. HALL.

Opaheona, Mississippi.

M. M. EDITOR: As I see the boys and girls are writing to the ADVOCATE, I thought I would write too. I am a little boy ten years old. My father is a farmer. Bro. H. P. Lewis is our pastor this year, and we all like him very much. We have no Sunday-school now, and I am very sorry, for I love to go to Sunday-school. I will ask a question: How old was Abram when he left Haran, where his father died, and where is it found? This is the first letter I have written to any paper, and I hope it will not find its way to the waste-basket. Your little friend,

CHARLES STAFF.

Hallehurst, Mississippi.

M. M. EDITOR: I see some nice letters from the children, and why not one from me? I love to read the ADVOCATE very much. My uncle has an AYOCA for two years. I will answer Willie W. Simmons' question. "Wasn't" is found in I Samuel ix, 8. I will close by asking a question: On what mount was Noah's ark built, and where is it found? Yours truly, BERTHA E. SKANS.

Ghana Bay, Ala., Feb. 17, 1884.

Marriages.

LESLIE-MANNING.—At the residence of T. R. Leese, on Thursday, February 7, 1884, by T. R. Leese, Mr. James A. Leslie and Miss Mary Manning, all of West Carroll parish, La.

ENFINGER-BURN.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Jefferson county, Miss., January 2, 1884, by Rev. E. A. Flowers, Mr. Ed. Enfinger, of Franklin county, to Miss Ocell Dunn.

DORCY-LEGGET.—At the home of the bride, in Franklin county, Miss., by Rev. E. A. Flowers, Mr. Thomas H. Dorcy, of Jefferson county, to Mrs. Lizzie Legget.

HALOVS-MCINTYRE.—At the home of the bride, in Jefferson county, by Rev. E. A. Flowers, Mr. Ford Halovs, of Adams county, to Miss Annie L. McIntyre, of Jefferson county, Miss.

SEYMOUR-BASWELL.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Walnut Grove, Ala., February 10, 1884, by Rev. Irvin Miller, Mr. J. H. Seymour to Miss Charlotte Baswell.

MAHON-MCCANDLESS.—At the residence of the bride's father, February 7, 1884, by T. R. Leese, Mr. D. F. Mahon to Miss M. McCandless, all of West Carroll parish, La.

NICHOLSON-LEWIS.—At the residence of the bride's father, February 7, 1884, by Rev. G. Hawkins, Rev. J. T. Nicholson, of the Mississippi Conference, to Miss Dora Lewis, of Jasper county, Miss.

PIPPES-MCKIE.—At the residence of Dr. Stigley, near Pelican parish, La., February 12, 1884, by Rev. M. B. Bush, Mr. Thomas Pippes to Miss Anne McKie.

WEISSINGER-MCKINNEY.—At the residence of the bride's brother, February 8, 1884, by Rev. H. H. Scroggs, Mr. D. W. Weissinger to Miss Ella McKinney, all of Washington county, Miss.

JOHNS-ROPER.—At the residence of Mr. N. C. Johns, of Covington county, Miss., February 7, 1884, by Rev. J. W. McLaurin, Mr. W. J. Johns, high sheriff of Marion county, Miss., to Miss J. D. Cooper, of Covington county, Miss.

VORDEBAUMEN-MATO.—At the Methodist Church, in Lake Charles, La., February 13, 1884, by Rev. S. S. Keener, Mr. Edward H. Vordebaumen to Miss Lucy E. Mato, all of Lake Charles, La.

BAILLO-NEELY.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Alexandria, La., February 12, 1884, by Rev. J. M. Beard, Mr. Lynn Baillo to Miss Leona Neely, both of Rapides parish, La.

FORD-THOMPSON.—Near Irving, Miss., January 24, 1884, by Rev. E. S. Gale, Mr. J. W. Ford to Miss Mattie A. Thompson, both of South county, Miss.

THOMPSON-MCKNIGHT.—Near Sylvan, Miss., February 7, 1884, by Rev. H. S. Gale, Mr. H. W. Thompson to Miss Rachel G. McKnight, both of South county, Miss.

BRIDE-STONE.—In the Methodist Church, in Columbus, Miss., January 19, 1884, by Rev. J. H. Stone, assisted by Rev. J. H. Scroggs, Miss May O. Stone to Mr. E. L. Stone, all of Columbus, Miss.

Obituaries.

WARD-WASHINGTON, G. Ward, son of Bro. John and Sister Mary C. Ward, was born in Franklin parish, La., on September 10, 1801; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1828; married Miss Lottie Parker, of same parish and State, September 4, 1831, and died, of consumption, at his home in Franklin parish, La., November 9, 1883.

Bro. Ward, as he was called by all who were intimately acquainted with him, left a wife, one child, an affectionate mother, one devoted sister and brother, to mourn his early departure. The brother whose obituary notice I now write, so far as known to the writer, lived a consistent Christian life, and was a devoted husband, kind father and an affectionate son and brother, a true friend and a peaceable, law-abiding citizen. I knew him from the tenth year of his life, and loved him almost with the love of a father. He seemed to coincide in me, and often came to me for counsel, which was given cheerfully, believing that the counsel given would largely influence his conduct for good. I know well how much solace was felt for him by the dear mother who has been called upon to surrender him to God who gave him. Dear mother, your son and my brother have passed over the river. It may be just before us. Let us lament his absence nor grieve because he is not. Your family, are by one, is passing over the river. You may be poorer on earth now than when Bro. Ward died; but you are far richer in heaven. May this sad dispensation of divine Providence be sanctified to the eternal good of wife, child, mother, relatives and the numerous friends of the deceased.

ROBSON-JOHN A. Robson was born at Greenwood, Adams county, Miss., December 27, 1858. In 1879 he joined the Methodist Church at King County, Miss., and died at Moravia, Georgia parish, La., December 25, 1883.

These words, in substance, were very comforting to him in his last illness: "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out."

D. E. LEWIS.

DOWLING-ROBERT S. DOWLING was born in Darrington district, S. C., March 18, 1827. When three years old he moved to the State of Alabama. In September, 1832, he was happily married to Miss Mary Mallett, who survived to mourn her loss. In January, 1840, he moved to Attala county, Miss., and soon after settled near New Port, where he lived until January 2, 1884, when God took him from this world of labor and sorrow to the rest prepared for his children.

Bro. Dowling was a kindly, conversant, when quite young, and became a candidate for membership in the Methodist Church; but owing to some neglect he never was received into full connection. In 1854 he connected himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which he lived a useful, active and most of the time, an official member until the Master said: "It is enough come up higher." As a Christian he adorned the doctrine of his Saviour in all things. He loved the church. He was a devoted husband, a kind father, a true friend, and bore his part in the means of grace, and always ready in supporting institutions of the church. He was a man of clear judgment and much information, and while he could not allow others to dictate his acts, yet he conscientiously followed the convictions of his own conscience of right both with his tongue and purse. A quiet man, he never boasted his charities before the world; but his distressed and needy who have been relieved by his bounty will be his witnesses in the day of final rewards. What he believed was just and right he was bold to do. A true friend to his pastor, he gladly welcomed them to his home and contributed to them comfortable support. He was a faithful steward—always at his place in the Quarterly Conference. The Sunday-school was the special object of his care, and he always gave his class the benefit of his liberal knowledge. When he came to die he said his was a clear—he was ready. He died without fear. Thus the good man has passed away. Our loss is his gain. May God bless his companion, and give her grace to meet him in heaven! May this sad event be sanctified to the good of the church that now feels that its leader has gone before!

W. W. WILLIAMS.

MITCHELL-REBECCA E. MITCHELL was born in Somerset county, Md

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. C. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY FEBRUARY 28, 1884.

Centenary Watchword.—No. 3.

A Centenary Missionary Society in every Sabbath-school, and the girls giving to the girls' college in Brazil, and the boys giving to the mission house and church building in the City of Mexico. Let every child in the church be enlisted in the Centenary celebration.

E. F. HENDRICK,
Chm. Cen. Com.

The Chronicle states that nearly eight hundred churches—an average of about eight per month—have been destroyed by fire in the United States in the past nine years. One hundred and nineteen were destroyed during 1882 at a loss of $672,170. These figures are a danger signal. Congregations should build with more care against defective flues, and not neglect insurance. This carelessness has brought sorrow and poverty to many a flourishing society. Insure your churches and parsonages.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Crummell, of Washington, D. C., rector of the Colored Episcopal Church, in that city, writes a vigorous letter to the New York Independent, protesting against that journal's doctrine of amalgamation. He thinks it unsafe, if not sinful counsel, to urge negroes to go out, after the example of Fred Douglass, in search of white wives. The Independent rises to further explain, and disclaims any such purpose. We must submit, however, that such was a fair inference from the editorial so ably criticised. The repeated, and sometimes offensive, discussion of that question will only result in painful agitation and no good. Better let social equality take care of itself.

Occasionally when Methodists conclude to withdraw from a Union Sunday-School and organize one of their own a "little breeze" is created, and the cry of sectarian bigotry is raised. That is, when we are in the majority. That such a charge is made against Methodists is the sheerest folly. Our catholicity is proverbial—known and read of all men. We wish all evangelical Christians God-speed, but prefer to work according to our own methods. Some years ago the Methodists and Presbyterians, in a thriving town, owned a church in common, and had a Union Sunday-School. The Methodists concluded to set up house-keeping for themselves. No sooner was the announcement made than a half dozen busy-bodies turned loose their nimble tongues. But the separation took place at length, peaceably and fraternally. Result: The Methodists built a handsome church, their membership was doubled, the place was made a station, a parsonage has been bought and furnished and each Sunday-school is larger than the union school. Better follow the discipline in this matter, but with the Spirit of the Master.

The Morning Star makes a very lame response to our article on the question of Romish administration of public education. Indeed, we are surprised at "the dim religious light" our Papal luminary sheds on the subject. Its mildness of statement is rather remarkable in view of its rabid history wherever Romish dominance or interference is concerned. He says: "No Romanist, so far as we know, has religious scruples about 'State education' except as applied to Romanist children." And further affirms that he might be "anxious to see the schools maintained for the benefit of heathen, infidel or heretical pupils." Just how "godless schools," "pits of destruction," etc., as they are fondly characterized by the Romish faithful, can benefit the "heathen, infidel or heretical," we leave the Star to determine. And how can a conscientious Christian be anxious to maintain a "godless" institution? Only the India-rubber conscience of a Romanist is competent to such a case of casuistry. Why not come out like a man, and fly your flag of eternal enmity to the public school system? The Freeman's Journal echoed Romish doctrine when it said: "Let the public school system go where it came from—the devil." With such "religious scruples" we repeat that no Romanist has any business aspiring to a place in a board of administration of any public school.

Ransy Sniffle.

Those who have read the "Georgia Scenes," by Dr. A. B. Longstreet, will never forget the character of Ransy Sniffle. He is the most conspicuous figure in that rare volume, although never the leading and responsible hero in any contest. His mission and delight was to foment trouble and then to keep far from all danger. Omitting the amusing description of his personal appearance, which is in the finest vein of the distinguished humorist, we give simply the picture of his mental and moral characteristics: "There was nothing on this earth which delighted Ransy so much as a fight. He never seemed fairly alive except when he was witnessing, fomenting or talking about a fight. Then, indeed, his deep-sunken grey eye assumed something of a living fire, and his tongue acquired a volubility bordering upon eloquence." And when at length he succeeded in bringing on the famous fight between Bob Durham and Bill Stallions, the champions of the two local battalions, he was in an agony of delight. While each battalion gathered around its hero Ransy kept himself busy in a most honest endeavor to hear and see all that transpired in both groups at the same time. He ran from one to the other in quick succession; peeped here and looked there; talked to this one, then to that one, and then to himself; squatted under one's legs and another's arms, and managed to get himself trod on by half of both battalions." Such was Ransy Sniffle the type and representative of a numerous generation. He figures in every community, whether civil, political or ecclesiastical, and finds fiendish pleasure in witnessing the troubles he foment. His character, as sketched above, is by a master-hand, and as accurately presents him to-day as amid the early scenes of Georgia. We will observe his career in several relations for the purpose of pointing a moral.

Ransy Sniffle is a well-known character in the social life of every community. It requires no long and intimate acquaintance to place him. He knows everything and everybody—the latest arrivals and departures—and is always full to overflowing with "small talk." When his health is good, he dispenses with any necessity for the local page of a town newspaper. He understands just where to publish news for speediest and surest circulation. He is ever ready with dark insinuations and intimations. By these skillfully related, so as really never to say anything but to hint a great deal, he makes bitter enemies out of the best friends, and keeps all the gossips in a community delightfully busy. That such a social pest should find toleration is only explainable on the theory of the almost universal fondness for news good or bad, but the latter preferred.

Ransy Sniffle is never absent from political circles. He has no political principles, knows nothing of the issues that divide parties or wings of the same party, but his exhaustless stock of personalities always win a hearing and give him an opportunity. With all candidates he holds confidential intimacy. On convention occasions, when nominations are to be made, he is well-nigh ubiquitous. Catches a few words here and rushes eagerly to the other side with an important piece of news. He has estranged strong political friends until party disruption and disintegration have ensued. When such a result has been achieved, and he sees the party giants grappling each other in deadly struggle, he has reached the highest heaven of his little imagination.

Ransy Sniffle is a prominent church member, and displays his peculiar activity in ecclesiastical affairs to fine advantage. He knows perfectly the social life and antecedents of every member. If by possibility he can create a division in the church, to that end he works with rare delight. He bears messages from one side to the other, until finally the estrangement is irreconcilable. He rushes to the pastor with the story of some member's wrongdoing, and urges an immediate church trial. Then he flies back to the offending party, and tells him that the pastor had reference to him in his last Sunday's sermon, and if he was in his place he would resent such uncharitable and unchristian conduct. And so he moves among the members, playing an ecclesiastical hornet, to the destruction of all church harmony.

Ransy Sniffle even gets into Conference, either as both as preacher and lay delegate. He is intimate with the presiding elders, knows the inner workings of their minds, and on the first day of Conference can almost give the Bishop's entire list of appointments. Then he understands one brother's scheme and another's ambition, and tells them to a third with all sorts of pious exclamations of regret. He gives one brother his spreading alder's opinion of his preaching ability or pastoral efficiency, and thereby cools the ardor of true friendship. If there happen to be two prominent Conference leaders, alike influential, he is sure to run from one to the other with insinuations and magnified messages, until bad blood is excited. Now, from all this history of Ransy Sniffle, let us learn a few lessons.

1. Always withhold your opinions from one who deals and delights in personalities. If he knows little but personal affairs, he is a dangerous companion.
2. Beware of a bearer of unpleasant news. His heart is set on mischief. To every such person and message silence is doubly golden.
3. Never allow a tale-bearer to disturb friendship. Go yourself, and in a Christly spirit have a conference with your friend.

Landmark Logic Again.

In the Baptist Record, for some weeks past, quite a controversy has been conducted by Rev. Dr. John Hunter, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Jackson, Miss., and the editor of the Record. We are glad that the Presbyterian doctor has found his way into those columns; and is giving the immersionists some wholesome reading on the Scriptural side of the question. In an effort to bolster up the exclusive immersion theory, the Baptist brother summoned to his aid the practice and teaching of the Romish Church, as announced by Archbishop Kenrick. This Dr. Hunter turned upon him with telling effect, as witness the following:

Let us repair to the fountain-head for the facts in the case. These we find in the catechism of the Council of Trent, which was published by Pope Pius V., and translated into English by the Rev. J. Donovan, professor, etc., Royal College, Maynooth.

As the editor of the Record has appealed unto Cæsar, unto Cæsar he shall go. I refer you to page 117, Baltimore edition. I quote as follows: "He, the pastor, will briefly inform the faithful that, according to the common practice of the church, baptism may be administered by immersion, infusion or aspersion, and that, administered in either of these forms, it is equally valid. In baptism water is used to signify the spiritual ablution which it accomplishes, and on this account baptism is called by the apostle 'a laver.' This ablution takes place as effectually as by immersion, which was for a considerable time the practice of the early ages of the church, as by infusion, which is now the general practice, or by aspersion, which was the manner in which Peter baptized when he converted and gave baptism to about three thousand souls."

This, Mr. Editor, is your own witness, which, on cross-examination, testifies that Peter baptized the three thousand by aspersion. As you undoubtedly placed some considerable value on the testimony of the Romish Church when you supposed it was in your favor, might I ask you what value you assign to it, should it be in favor of Pedobaptists, and flat-footed against you? Might not what is sauce for the goose be also sauce for the gander? According to this statement it was immersion that was invented.

Now, Mr. Editor, we baptize in the manner your witness says Peter did, not because your witness says it, but because it is the Scriptural mode of baptism.

A Want and a Why Not?

In a letter to Rev. Dr. Withrow, editor of the Canadian Methodist Magazine, among other pleasant things, Bishop McIntyre says:

"We elected you down here to continue at the head of the Magazine before the ballot was cast in Canada, and are not displeased at the confirmation of our choice. We may ask you for a bill of particulars some day. How is it that Canadian Methodists can maintain a Monthly Magazine, when Northern Methodists and Southern Methodists, with larger membership, and at least equal means, have both failed?"

The Bishop starts an inquiry that ought to be answered. Such a periodical is needed, and has been occasionally entered, only to result in failure. After a brilliant and successful career of many years the Ladies' Repository of the Northern Methodists suffered decline, and then passed on to its death. When Bishop Wiley retired from its editorship there was a subscription list of over thirty thousand, with a handsome net profit. While magazine literature is at a premium, and the great monthlies are increasing their circulation by tens of thousands and among our church members, a denominational periodical of like grade and character finds neither friends nor favor. Just why, it is difficult to explain. And the success of the Canadian Methodist Magazine only complicates the difficulty. If with their smaller membership and more limited resources such a monthly is liberally sustained, why may not a similar result more largely and easily obtain with us?

Stanley, the Explorer, a New Orleans Boy.

Next to David Livingstone stands the name of Henry M. Stanley as the greatest of modern explorers. And it is a striking coincidence that each had an humble origin—one was a factory boy in Scotland and the other a homeless lad in a Welsh poor-house. The story of Stanley's career reads more like romance than real history. From an unpromising residence of ten years in a poor-house he has risen to fame and fortune. Though yet a young man, his name is spoken with reverence by all civilized people, and his brilliant adventures related around every fireside. But we doubt if many of our young readers, especially, know that we in the South have a special interest in the great African explorer. New Orleans was once his residence, and here he was adopted as a son into an excellent home. From a charming sketch of his life, published in Wide Awake for February, we gather some interesting details. He was born in Wales, in 1810, and at three years of age was sent to the poor-house. There he spent ten years, when he took passage as a cabin boy on a vessel for America. He landed in New Orleans and soon found employment. So promising was he, and attractive, that he was adopted by a merchant named Stanley. After a while he went to Arkansas, and there displayed his irrepressible love for adventure. At length, on returning to New Orleans, he found that his adopted father had died. He next sought his fortune in California, among the miners and Indians. When war was declared he entered the Confederate army, and rendered valiant service until he was taken prisoner. Then he connected himself with the Federal navy, and rose to the rank of ensign.

The war over, he went abroad and joined the Cretans in their struggle to throw off the Turkish yoke. It was at this point of his career that he connected himself with the New York Herald as its correspondent. Returning from that campaign and extensive Eastern travels, he visited the poor-house in Wales, where he spent his dreary boyhood, and gave the children a good dinner and a happy little speech. The next year he accompanied the English army against Theodore, King of Abyssinia, and wrote graphic letters for the columns of the New York Herald. It was the next year that Mr. James Gordon Bennett employed him to explore Africa in search of Dr. Livingstone. With the thrilling details of that memorable march through the "Dark Continent," and his floundering the venerable, gray-haired, half-starved Livingstone, our readers are familiar. It adds interest to his history to know that he once walked the streets of our Crescent City.

The Religious Question of To-Day.

Under this caption the New York Observer says some practical and pertinent things on the attitude of the Rev. R. Heber Newton. So heretofore have been his utterances that Bishop Potter urged him to discontinue his Sunday even lectures. His book, entitled the Right and Wrong Uses of the Bible, contains extraordinary statements from one claiming to be an evangelical minister of the gospel. No doubt the question of to-day is the integrity and authority of the Word. Men can not treat it lightly and handle it deceitfully, and still claim unchallenged standing in the church. It has been a singular and significant fact in Methodist history that, while defections and divisions have occurred here and there on questions of polity and policy, her doctrinal integrity has never been disturbed. We have jealous regard for the grand Scriptural doctrines that have given such marvelous success to the church. The following, of general interest and wide application, is reproduced from the Observer:

"The Comedy of Convocation" appeared in England not many years ago, and made no small stir. It was in the midst of a convulsive struggle between the great parties in the Established Church. The writer gravely argued the question: 'Is belief in the existence of God necessary to good standing in the Church of England?' The question of this day in this country is very like it: 'Is belief in the Bible as the word of God essential to good standing in the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church?' From the amount of space and time bestowed upon the question by the secular as well as the religious press, we may justly infer that the subject is one of general and commanding interest. Nearly every day the newspapers have reports of interviews with clergymen and laymen on the duty and expediency of bringing the question to a test by the application of discipline which every church provides for the maintenance of its own peace and purity. This is the drift of opinion. But it is not likely that anything more will be done about it. The time for action, if any were to be taken, was when the opponents of the old faith first opened fire from their feeble batteries upon the integrity of the Bible. The matter has now been allowed to rest so long without action that it is fair to infer, and we do infer, that it is consistent with good standing in the Protestant Episcopal pulpit for her ministers to impugn the divine authority of large parts of the Holy Scriptures. This carries the matter into the heart of the church, and involves the whole theory of the Christian religion. It enthrones rationalism in the citadel of faith, and prostrates the oracles of God at the feet of unbelieving priests. Let it be understood as a settled principle in the church that her ministers may reject what they please of those Scriptures defined as canonical in the law of the church, and by the establishment of that principle you have made it plain that the church itself is of no authority, and the Bible still less if less were possible. This is worse than the Roman Catholic doctrine, which sets the church above the Bible and claims the right of interpreting it to the people. Here, in the case before us, the church has defined what is the Bible, and when her priests denounce large parts of it as unworthy of belief, the church sits still, as if afraid or unable to say whether or not it has a faith of its own. The moral effect of such hesitancy and inaction is disastrous to the church and the world. The church is the pillar and ground of the truth. If the church does not know what it believes, or, knowing, dares not maintain and defend it against all comers, it lacks the courage of righteousness, and is already falling a prey to the enemy. And, more than this, if the church is afraid to take hold of the small fry now disturbing the waters, what will become of it when the monsters of the deep attack the ship which is freighted with the hopes of mankind? If these very moderate footmen are too fleet for pursuit, what will be done when the horsemen are to be overtaken? And if the little ripple on the surface of the church is too much for her safety, what will be done in the swelling of Jordan?

Watch!

The Christian duties may be classified into the doing, the bearing and the preparatory. Watching is, perhaps, the most important of the three. Sometimes these separate duties are urged in such a way as to induce the belief that there is one set of faculties exerted and the others dormant in doing, another set in bearing and another in preparing. But this is untrue. All the senses are alive in watching, and all the faculties of mind and qualities of heart. We do not want a blind or deaf watcher. We would not select an idiot or crank for a watcher. Above all, we would not have a coward, a liar or a thief as a watcher. Thus it appears that a watcher must be a man with superior powers and virtues, and it would appear further that the exercise of watching is calculated to sharpen these faculties and strengthen these virtues.

1. Watching is designed to furnish information. It is a very noticeable fact that there are as many uninformed people now as when the means of information were so much poorer. The reason is not in any system of education being a failure, but the uninformed are the failures. There never was a time when there was half the Sunday-school literature, and yet there never was a time when the average Sunday-school scholar knew less. The fault is in the inattention of the scholars.

2. Watching is designed as a guard. The Saviour says, "Lest ye enter into temptation." Mark how strict the guard. Many of us do not put ourselves on guard until we have entered into the temptation. Jesus would have us on our guard before. Did we follow his injunction we should have fewer sins to repent. Entering voluntarily into temptation is itself a sin.

3. Watching is frequently a duty in times of uncertainty. We do not know when the thief is to come. Eternal vigilance is the price which we must pay not only for liberty, but for our souls' eternal interests.

4. Watching is often but an expression of sympathy. No relief is expected. It is impossible, but the duty is the more imperative for that very reason. A friend—it may be wife or husband—is dying. All hope of life is gone; but we watch all the more. Who then could or would close his eyes has sold, like Esau, his birthright to the divinity of humanity. It is no longer to help or guard, but now becomes the expression of immortal union of souls in agony. Death severs every other tie; but this one clings. It furnishes telephonic communication with the skies, and angels whisper down, "Sister spirit, come away," and weeping mortals whisper up, "By the grace of God I'll meet you."

It was this last office which Jesus intended the watching of Peter, James and John to fill in Gethsemane; and the deep dregs of bitterness in the cup which he drank there were drained in the demonstration of the utter lack of sympathy which the highest types of mortal virtue could express. Peter represents the ardor of devotion; James the justice which renders back good for good whether in kind, equivalent or gratitude; John the tenderest affection possible. But Jesus comes and finds these asleep; and who can wonder that he sweats drops of blood when he finds himself entirely beyond the sympathy of earth's best models? "Could ye not watch with me one hour?" T. A. S. A.

"The Old Man Eloquent."

Under this title the Rev. Dr. Markham, pastor of the Lafayette Presbyterian Church, of this city, pays a beautiful tribute to Bishop Kavanaugh in last week's issue of the Southwestern Presbyterian. The Bishop preached for the doctor the Sunday before leaving the city. We make the following choice extract:

The Methodist Church is to be congratulated in that, through the thirty years of his itinerancy and the thirty of his episcopate—his labors covering her extended territory, from the Atlantic to the Pacific (including five episcopal visits to California)—her people have had the benefit and blessing of the teachings of one so manifestly "apostolic and set apart," to whom the Spirit has revealed the deep things, opening his understanding and warming his heart to set forth with power the mysteries of the kingdom of grace and the anticipations of the kingdom of glory.

In appearance and action, twenty years younger than the age which time has "set to his score," his bow "abides in strength." And save in a slowness of step, due, doubtless, in no small measure to an unusual weight of body, scarce a trace of the "labor and sorrow of the fourscore" can be seen. So that he "still brings forth fruit in old age."

Ministering three Sabbaths in churches of his own "faith and order," and speaking on a week evening for Dr. Witherspoon in the Bethel, his last Sabbath was with us in this morning service, followed by a participation, in the evening, in the First Presbyterian Church (Dr. Palmer's). In the services held by the Sunday League of Louisiana.

Leaving our city last week, he bears with him to his home, in Anchorage, Ky., the thanks of a sister church for "a feast of fat things, of wines on the lees well refined." His message, so fitly spoken, will be held in grateful remembrance. A message set in words that were "as nails fastened by a master of assemblies," that proved to them "a word in season," strengthening their faith and brightening their hope.

—We acknowledge the pleasure of a call at our office, on Tuesday, from Rev. T. B. Holloman, of Yazoo City.

—The largest donation yet made in Canada to education is $1,000,000 by Mr. Gooderham, of Toronto, for a Methodist University.

—St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal Church, of New York, on a recent Sabbath contributed an average of $20 per member for missions.

—The Rev. Dr. H. M. Field, editor of the New York Evangelist, with his family, spent a few days in the city last week en route to California.

—A conference on literature is in session this week at Plainfield, N. J., under the direction of Dr. J. H. Vincent. Prominent authors and ministers are present.

—Joseph Cook has resumed his Boston Monday lectures in Tremont Temple, and they maintain the marvelous vigor and versatility characteristic of every previous course.

—Rev. Isaac P. Cook, D. D., of Baltimore, a distinguished local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church is dead. He was a notable man, and his works do follow him.

—Dr. Olin, a distinguished member of the Wyoming Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, is also a member of the New York Legislature, and is leading the prohibition forces in that body.

—We heretofore return thanks to Rev. Dr. Phillip Schaff, of New York, for an official and cordial letter of notification that the editor has been appointed one of the delegates of the American Evangelical Alliance to the General Conference of the Alliance to be held in Stockholm, Sweden, August 31 to September 8, 1884.

—Our brethren at Jackson, Miss., had a field day last Sunday. They "cleared the decks" amid great rejoicing. In a little while the assessments for foreign and domestic missions, and church extension were fully met. With these connectional claims out of the way they are now ready to finish and furnish their handsome new church and enterprise a good centenary offering. Great is the liberality and loyalty of that excellent congregation.

—While we write, Tuesday, the city is full of overflowing with visitors from far and near. The carnival attracts many, but many more take advantage of the reduced rates of travel to visit the city on business or get a short respite from labor. New Orleans is fond of the spectacular. Though these displays and processions are an annual institution and have been witnessed many times, at Mardi Gras the whole city turns out of doors. 'Tis strange that such gilded folly commands the perpetual homage of a great city.

HOUSEHOLD.

RICE AND BEANS.—Half the people of the world live almost exclusively on rice. It contains eighty-eight per cent. of nutriment, while wheat contains but twenty-six. There are countries where the almost exclusive diet of the masses is beans; these contain eighty-seven per cent. of nutriment. The best and cheapest food for the dense population of Asiatic countries is therefore rice and beans, from the general poverty of the people, varieties of food are out of the question, but the rice and beans given them most freely that kind which is among the most nutritious of all foods. With the rest of the world rice is more of a staple dish, and is most frequently served in the form of a pudding. We venture to affirm that when the cost, the percentage of nutriment and the wholesomeness of bean and rice considered there is not in the world a single article of food that can compare with them. There is no other vegetable food that answers so well as a substitute for meat. While they have so much to recommend them in other respects they have no rival in point of economy. A quart of beans, costing ten cents, will furnish a family of five persons with food for a day. Much of the value of beans as food depends on the manner of cooking. It would be difficult to cook them too much. They should first be boiled until soft, and then put them into a baking-dish and baked until they are brown. A little salt pork or lard, but not enough to make them taste greasy, should be put in the baking pan and cooked with them. If beans are not thoroughly cooked they are difficult of digestion; still there is not one hotel or restaurant in a thousand that serves them satisfactorily; and, as a rule, it is not well to call for them in such places; but at home, when prepared under the supervision of a good cook, they make a dish that is wholesome and palatable. Hall's Journal of Health.

TAPIoca CREAM.—Take a teaspoon even full of tapioca, put it in a pint bowl, fill it full of water and set it on the back of the stove to swell for an hour before baking. Stir it frequently to break up the kernels. Then put it in a baking dish, pour over it a quart of fresh milk, the yolks of four well beaten eggs, sugar and flavoring to taste. When done set it will be when the custard is "set," take out and spread over the top the whites of three eggs beaten to stiff froth, and with a tablespoonful of sugar to each egg, stirred in. Set it back in the oven to brown. Eat cold. The same pudding may be made plain by using two eggs, beating whites and yolks together, and leaving off the nutmeg for being from the top.

COATED CREAM, ENGLISH STYLE.—Set the afternoon's milk in a large tin or earthenware pan, leave it till eleven o'clock the next morning, then with great care and steadiness so as not to disturb the cream, place it on a large saucer or stewpan two-thirds full of water; let the water boil until it, simmering for more than half the day, till the first cream is thick, yellow and wrinkled like leather, and has receded from the edges of the pan all around, showing the second cream. When the latter looks thoroughly thick and set, remove the pan very carefully to a cool place till the following day, then skim, allowing no milk to come with it, as that would inevitably ruin the cream.

CORNER RABBIT.—Place three-quarters of a pound of butter in a slowpan on the fire, allow it to get good sized onion or two small ones, and fry till they become a golden brown (being very careful not to let them burn); add one tablespoonful of curry powder, mix and fry lightly; then put the rabbit (which ought to be previously cooked and cut in pieces) in the pan; keep stirring a few minutes; throw in gently a little salt, and add slowly a teaspoonful of milk; stir it all well together on the fire, being covered for a quarter of an hour, and when it looks thick squeeze the juice of a lemon into it. It appears too rich skin the better off and add a little more milk.

Sliced PEPPER PICKLE.—Remove the seeds from large, green peppers, slice them, and lay them in a jar alternating each layer of pepper with sliced cabbage, then cover with salt and let them stand over night. In the morning drain off the water. In sufficient vinegar to cover the pickle, put an ounce each of black and white mustard seed, whole cloves and allspice, one-half ounce of celery seed and a head of garlic. Let this come to a boil and pour it over the peppers. Pack tightly in a jar cover with horse-radish leaves, and close up tightly. If you do not like much garlic skin it out before pouring the vinegar over the pickle, or use a large onion instead.

MOCK TURTLE SOUP.—Take the liver and head of a sheep, cut the former in small pieces, add four quarts water, half a pound of barley, two onions, one carrot, some whole pepper and allspice, a blade of mace, twelve cloves, a little thyme and a bay leaf, and the green parts cut off the head. All to simmer together before the head is added, then boil it until the meat will shake off the bones. Take up the head and strain off the soup. Next day remove the fat and thicken with a little flour and butter and brown; add two tablespoonfuls of catsup; cut part of the tongue and jaws into small pieces, and put them into the soup before dishing up the soup.

INDIAN CAKES.—To make perfect Indian cakes use one pint of sour milk, one beaten egg, one small tablespoonful of light brown sugar, and a teaspoonful of salt. Stir in this a mixture of two parts Indian meal and one part wheat flour, until you have a stiff batter. Add a small teaspoon of baking soda dissolved in a little hot water, and thin to the proper consistency with sweet milk. This will make about twenty large pancakes.

BOILED CORNED BEEF.—Soak over night if very salt, but if beef is young and properly corned this is not necessary; pour over it cold water enough to cover it well, after washing out the salt. The rate for boiling is twenty minutes to a pound, but corned beef should be placed on a part of the stove or range where it will simmer, not boil hard, from four to six hours, according to the size of the piece.

MIXED MEAT.—Four pounds of beef boiled tender, one pound of suet, two pounds of raisins, two pounds of currants, one pound of citron cut fine, six pounds of apples, one pound of sugar, rind of four lemons and the juice added; cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg to taste, with cider to moisten them. Some use brandy to flavor, but others prefer to do without this.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Prominent Minister Writes.

A. M. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South, No. 28 Tenth Street, Atlanta, Ga.

From The Prominent Ladies.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. R. H. BROWN, Atlanta, Ga.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW JOB OFFICE

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

LETTER, NOTE and BILL HEADS,

VISITING CARDS,

BLANKS!

Blank for Clerks of Court, blanks for Masonic Lodges, blanks for Granges, &c., blanks for Co-operative Stores.

—AND—

All Kinds of Job Work,

Executed in the best style and prices as low as any city in the North or West.

Send your order to

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street.

(Continued from last week.)

How Watch Cases are Made.

Imitation always follows a successful style, and imitation is one of the best proofs of real home merit; and thus it is that the James Ross Gold Watch Case has its imitations. Buyers can always tell the genuine by the trade-mark of a crown, from which is suspended a pair of scales. Be sure you get a half pint crown and scales are stamped in the cap of the watch case. Jewelers are very cautious about endorsing an article unless they not only know that it is good, but that the character of the manufacturer is such that the quality of the goods will be kept fully up to standard.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Feb. 12, 1883.

The James Ross Gold Watch Case is like hot cakes. Each one I sell sends another. I don't need to recommend them; they sell themselves. One of my customers has told me that he has sold one for two years, and it was good as ever. Will you send me a half pint crown and scales, and I will send you a pair of scales.

Yours truly,

JAMES ROSS, Watch Case Maker.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

James Ross' and Keyhole Watch Cases are made.

(To be continued.)

Send 2 cent stamp to Keyhole Watch Case Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOS. J. CARVER,

Cotton Factor

—AND—

COMMISSION MERCHANT,

44 Perdido Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

W. G. WHEELER,

Clothing and Furnishing

GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to

WHEELER & PIERSON,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight

Christian Advocate.

Making Girls a "Success."

Feeding His Lambs.

BY REV. DR. CHAS. F. BREMS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Rev. Dr. Dix, of New York, in a lecture on the "Sins of Woman Against Her Vocation," published in the N. Y. Sun, says:—

"There are words in no man's tongue which rasp the nerves and fill men with despair, and one is that word, 'Success.' It is said of some young maiden who has just been married, 'She came out last month; she is a success.' It is said of another: 'She is not a success.' I know not what deeper degradation could overtake a young woman on her first emergence into the general view than to be noticed in that connection. It is said of some young maiden who has just been married, 'She came out last month; she is a success.' It is said of another: 'She is not a success.' I know not what deeper degradation could overtake a young woman on her first emergence into the general view than to be noticed in that connection.

She reaches 18. It is the very time when that higher education which, rightly understood, we believe in, and which would give her, should begin. Two or three years more would make her a woman that would be a success. But no; the mother comes to take her away. Outside of that strange, wild maelstrom which they call society. The mother, herself, perhaps, a weather-beaten wreck, such as that whirlpool has left her, comes; she takes her and takes away, introduced into society, launched on the tide, made if possible a 'success.' She must, and she does. And with that, in many a case, the door into a noble life is shut. And what will society do for this poor child of God? What will she learn there amid the madcap devotees, the jaded leaders, the hardened men and women? This it will do for her; it will toss her about like a shuttlecock; it will drag her up and down from show to show; it will fill her ears and eyes with things which she had better never have seen and heard. This shall she learn there—the art of leading a false and empty life; the art of blowing bubbles, gleaming with prismatic hues outside, and with mere breath and shiny gossamer within; she shall learn to be a success, but in a year or two after look and see what we have. Here, surely, is another person, old, haggard, unmade, as it were, and made over again. She can no longer, just and make repairs; she listens without flinching to talk which but a year ago would have brought light blushes to her maiden cheeks. She will be prepared for her graduation into the higher forms of pleasure and enjoyment. She has no more simple tastes; she laughs at her old virtues; she has no aspiration beyond the charmed circle in which she is held enchanted; all her conversation is about men; she is frivolous, all friends are wearying; God and religion are very far away."

Pastoral life is full of picturesque and poetic suggestions. By "pastoral life" we mean literal shepherd life. From the days of the earliest sacred and classic poets down to our own day, from the earliest hymns of David down to our most modern Gospel hymns, the shepherd idea has prevailed. It suggests quietude, innocence, occupation, repose of life. It pictures the superior human intellect combined with affection to exert a protective influence over the lower animals.

Sheep are such innocent things, lambs are such winsome things, that anything connected with them seems to be pretty and sweet, and suggestive of loveliness and gentleness and goodness. Even the Divine Teacher took upon himself the name of "The Good Shepherd" to endear himself to the world forever.

It is, however, to be remembered that the pictures that are painted and the poems that are written about lambs are one thing, and sheep and shepherds and the real shepherd-life are another. In no way was this difference shown more clearly than when, a century or so ago, our sentimental ancestors across the water would go into the fields and down in meadows and rich pastures, and in their hands crooks belted with ribbons, in silk stockings and high-heeled shoes, to play shepherds and shepherdesses, attempting to reproduce in real life what the poets had described in their rhymes.

That was all very pretty, but it was not real shepherd life. That is rough and hard and wearisome. The sheep are not always tractable. A flock is frequently very difficult to manage. There is not so much time as is supposed for the shepherd to sit on a bank of flowers, and wake the music of his flute. In some countries the heat is terrible, and in some the cold. The Oriental shepherd does not feel that life is all poetry when he is compelled to take his flock from place to place over burning sands to find water and pasture. The shepherd of Scotland leads his flock through snow-storms, facing terrible winds, cut in the face with snow and hail, must now and then think of what he has read of shepherd life in poetry, and his words must sound to him like a sarcasm.

It is so in spiritual pastoral life. "Feed my lambs," said Jesus to Peter: "Feed my lambs," the Spirit says to the pastors of the churches. "Feed my lambs," the Lord is supposed to say to Sunday-school teachers and other Christian workers.

Lambs? His lambs. It must be beautiful and sweet work to feed his lambs. It is pleasant to hold them to the mouth of my gentle lamb, but to take the provisions of the Gospel, and feed it to the lambs of Christ, what a sweet and beautiful work. —Episcopal Methodist.

DANZIGER'S, 131 CANAL ST., Extraordinary Bargains! Prior to their Semi-Annual Inventory. Positive Bargains in EVERY DEPARTMENT.

BARGAINS IN DRESS GOODS.

Fancy Dress Fabrics marked down from 25 to 35 cents.

Donkey Width Cashmeres marked down from 35 to 50 cents.

All Wool Plaided Serges marked down to 40 and 50 cents.

All Wool Cashmeres marked down from 50 to 75 cents.

All Wool Plaids marked down from 40 to 50 cents.

Handsome Wool Shepherd Plaids at 25c.

POSITIVE BARGAINS IN SILKS.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 50c, marked down from 80c.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 75c, marked down from 1.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 90c, marked down from 1.25.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 1.00, marked down from 1.50.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 1.25, marked down from 2.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 1.50, marked down from 2.50.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 2.00, marked down from 3.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 2.50, marked down from 4.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 3.00, marked down from 5.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 4.00, marked down from 6.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 5.00, marked down from 7.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 6.00, marked down from 8.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 7.00, marked down from 9.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 8.00, marked down from 10.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 9.00, marked down from 11.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 10.00, marked down from 12.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 11.00, marked down from 13.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 12.00, marked down from 14.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 13.00, marked down from 15.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 14.00, marked down from 16.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 15.00, marked down from 17.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 16.00, marked down from 18.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 17.00, marked down from 19.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 18.00, marked down from 20.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 19.00, marked down from 21.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 20.00, marked down from 22.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 21.00, marked down from 23.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 22.00, marked down from 24.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 23.00, marked down from 25.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 24.00, marked down from 26.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 25.00, marked down from 27.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 26.00, marked down from 28.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 27.00, marked down from 29.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 28.00, marked down from 30.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 29.00, marked down from 31.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 30.00, marked down from 32.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 31.00, marked down from 33.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 32.00, marked down from 34.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 33.00, marked down from 35.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 34.00, marked down from 36.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 35.00, marked down from 37.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 36.00, marked down from 38.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 37.00, marked down from 39.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 38.00, marked down from 40.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 39.00, marked down from 41.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 40.00, marked down from 42.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 41.00, marked down from 43.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 42.00, marked down from 44.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 43.00, marked down from 45.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 44.00, marked down from 46.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 45.00, marked down from 47.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 46.00, marked down from 48.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 47.00, marked down from 49.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 48.00, marked down from 50.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 49.00, marked down from 51.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 50.00, marked down from 52.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 51.00, marked down from 53.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 52.00, marked down from 54.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 53.00, marked down from 55.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 54.00, marked down from 56.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 55.00, marked down from 57.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 56.00, marked down from 58.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 57.00, marked down from 59.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 58.00, marked down from 60.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 59.00, marked down from 61.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 60.00, marked down from 62.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 61.00, marked down from 63.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 62.00, marked down from 64.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 63.00, marked down from 65.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 64.00, marked down from 66.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 65.00, marked down from 67.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 66.00, marked down from 68.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 67.00, marked down from 69.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 68.00, marked down from 70.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 69.00, marked down from 71.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 70.00, marked down from 72.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 71.00, marked down from 73.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 72.00, marked down from 74.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 73.00, marked down from 75.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 74.00, marked down from 76.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 75.00, marked down from 77.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 76.00, marked down from 78.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 77.00, marked down from 79.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 78.00, marked down from 80.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 79.00, marked down from 81.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 80.00, marked down from 82.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 81.00, marked down from 83.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 82.00, marked down from 84.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 83.00, marked down from 85.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 84.00, marked down from 86.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 85.00, marked down from 87.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 86.00, marked down from 88.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 87.00, marked down from 89.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 88.00, marked down from 90.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 89.00, marked down from 91.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 90.00, marked down from 92.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 91.00, marked down from 93.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 92.00, marked down from 94.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 93.00, marked down from 95.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 94.00, marked down from 96.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 95.00, marked down from 97.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 96.00, marked down from 98.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 97.00, marked down from 99.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 98.00, marked down from 100.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 99.00, marked down from 101.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 100.00, marked down from 102.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 101.00, marked down from 103.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 102.00, marked down from 104.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 103.00, marked down from 105.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 104.00, marked down from 106.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 105.00, marked down from 107.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 106.00, marked down from 108.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 107.00, marked down from 109.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 108.00, marked down from 110.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 109.00, marked down from 111.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 110.00, marked down from 112.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 111.00, marked down from 113.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 112.00, marked down from 114.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 113.00, marked down from 115.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 114.00, marked down from 116.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 115.00, marked down from 117.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 116.00, marked down from 118.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 117.00, marked down from 119.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 118.00, marked down from 120.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 119.00, marked down from 121.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 120.00, marked down from 122.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 121.00, marked down from 123.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 122.00, marked down from 124.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 123.00, marked down from 125.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 124.00, marked down from 126.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 125.00, marked down from 127.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 126.00, marked down from 128.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 127.00, marked down from 129.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 128.00, marked down from 130.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 129.00, marked down from 131.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 130.00, marked down from 132.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 131.00, marked down from 133.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 132.00, marked down from 134.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 133.00, marked down from 135.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 134.00, marked down from 136.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 135.00, marked down from 137.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 136.00, marked down from 138.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 137.00, marked down from 139.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 138.00, marked down from 140.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 139.00, marked down from 141.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 140.00, marked down from 142.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 141.00, marked down from 143.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 142.00, marked down from 144.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 143.00, marked down from 145.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 144.00, marked down from 146.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 145.00, marked down from 147.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 146.00, marked down from 148.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 147.00, marked down from 149.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 148.00, marked down from 150.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 149.00, marked down from 151.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 150.00, marked down from 152.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 151.00, marked down from 153.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 152.00, marked down from 154.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 153.00, marked down from 155.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 154.00, marked down from 156.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 155.00, marked down from 157.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 156.00, marked down from 158.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 157.00, marked down from 159.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 158.00, marked down from 160.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 159.00, marked down from 161.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 160.00, marked down from 162.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 161.00, marked down from 163.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 162.00, marked down from 164.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 163.00, marked down from 165.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 164.00, marked down from 166.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 165.00, marked down from 167.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 166.00, marked down from 168.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 167.00, marked down from 169.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 168.00, marked down from 170.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 169.00, marked down from 171.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 170.00, marked down from 172.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 171.00, marked down from 173.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 172.00, marked down from 174.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 173.00, marked down from 175.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 174.00, marked down from 176.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 175.00, marked down from 177.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 176.00, marked down from 178.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 177.00, marked down from 179.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 178.00, marked down from 180.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 179.00, marked down from 181.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 180.00, marked down from 182.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 181.00, marked down from 183.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 182.00, marked down from 184.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 183.00, marked down from 185.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 184.00, marked down from 186.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 185.00, marked down from 187.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 186.00, marked down from 188.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 187.00, marked down from 189.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 188.00, marked down from 190.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 189.00, marked down from 191.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 190.00, marked down from 192.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 191.00, marked down from 193.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 192.00, marked down from 194.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 193.00, marked down from 195.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 194.00, marked down from 196.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 195.00, marked down from 197.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 196.00, marked down from 198.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 197.00, marked down from 199.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 198.00, marked down from 200.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 199.00, marked down from 201.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 200.00, marked down from 202.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 201.00, marked down from 203.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 202.00, marked down from 204.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 203.00, marked down from 205.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 204.00, marked down from 206.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 205.00, marked down from 207.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 206.00, marked down from 208.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 207.00, marked down from 209.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 208.00, marked down from 210.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 209.00, marked down from 211.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 210.00, marked down from 212.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 211.00, marked down from 213.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 212.00, marked down from 214.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 213.00, marked down from 215.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 214.00, marked down from 216.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 215.00, marked down from 217.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 216.00, marked down from 218.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 217.00, marked down from 219.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 218.00, marked down from 220.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 219.00, marked down from 221.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 220.00, marked down from 222.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 221.00, marked down from 223.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 222.00, marked down from 224.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 223.00, marked down from 225.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 224.00, marked down from 226.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 225.00, marked down from 227.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 226.00, marked down from 228.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 227.00, marked down from 229.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 228.00, marked down from 230.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 229.00, marked down from 231.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 230.00, marked down from 232.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 231.00, marked down from 233.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 232.00, marked down from 234.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 233.00, marked down from 235.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 234.00, marked down from 236.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 235.00, marked down from 237.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 236.00, marked down from 238.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 237.00, marked down from 239.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 238.00, marked down from 240.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 239.00, marked down from 241.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 240.00, marked down from 242.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 241.00, marked down from 243.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 242.00, marked down from 244.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 243.00, marked down from 245.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 244.00, marked down from 246.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 245.00, marked down from 247.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 246.00, marked down from 248.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 247.00, marked down from 249.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 248.00, marked down from 250.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 249.00, marked down from 251.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 250.00, marked down from 252.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 251.00, marked down from 253.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 252.00, marked down from 254.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 253.00, marked down from 255.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 254.00, marked down from 256.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 255.00, marked down from 257.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 256.00, marked down from 258.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 257.00, marked down from 259.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 258.00, marked down from 260.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 259.00, marked down from 261.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 260.00, marked down from 262.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 261.00, marked down from 263.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 262.00, marked down from 264.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 263.00, marked down from 265.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 264.00, marked down from 266.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 265.00, marked down from 267.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 266.00, marked down from 268.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 267.00, marked down from 269.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 268.00, marked down from 270.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 269.00, marked down from 271.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 270.00, marked down from 272.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 271.00, marked down from 273.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 272.00, marked down from 274.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 273.00, marked down from 275.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 274.00, marked down from 276.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 275.00, marked down from 277.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 276.00, marked down from 278.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 277.00, marked down from 279.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 278.00, marked down from 280.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 279.00, marked down from 281.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 280.00, marked down from 282.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 281.00, marked down from 283.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 282.00, marked down from 284.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 283.00, marked down from 285.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 284.00, marked down from 286.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 285.00, marked down from 287.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 286.00, marked down from 288.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 287.00, marked down from 289.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 288.00, marked down from 290.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 289.00, marked down from 291.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 290.00, marked down from 292.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 291.00, marked down from 293.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 292.00, marked down from 294.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 293.00, marked down from 295.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 294.00, marked down from 296.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 295.00, marked down from 297.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 296.00, marked down from 298.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 297.00, marked down from 299.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 298.00, marked down from 300.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 299.00, marked down from 301.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 300.00, marked down from 302.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 301.00, marked down from 303.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 302.00, marked down from 304.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 303.00, marked down from 305.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 304.00, marked down from 306.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 305.00, marked down from 307.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 306.00, marked down from 308.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 307.00, marked down from 309.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 308.00, marked down from 310.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 309.00, marked down from 311.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 310.00, marked down from 312.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 311.00, marked down from 313.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 312.00, marked down from 314.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 313.00, marked down from 315.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 314.00, marked down from 316.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 315.00, marked down from 317.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 316.00, marked down from 318.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 317.00, marked down from 319.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 318.00, marked down from 320.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 319.00, marked down from 321.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 320.00, marked down from 322.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 321.00, marked down from 323.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 322.00, marked down from 324.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 323.00, marked down from 325.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 324.00, marked down from 326.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 325.00, marked down from 327.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 326.00, marked down from 328.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 327.00, marked down from 329.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 328.00, marked down from 330.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 329.00, marked down from 331.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 330.00, marked down from 332.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 331.00, marked down from 333.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 332.00, marked down from 334.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 333.00, marked down from 335.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 334.00, marked down from 336.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 335.00, marked down from 337.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 336.00, marked down from 338.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 337.00, marked down from 339.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 338.00, marked down from 340.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 339.00, marked down from 341.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 340.00, marked down from 342.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 341.00, marked down from 343.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 342.00, marked down from 344.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 343.00, marked down from 345.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 344.00, marked down from 346.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 345.00, marked down from 347.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 346.00, marked down from 348.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 347.00, marked down from 349.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 348.00, marked down from 350.00.

Black Gros Grain Silks at 349.00, marked down from 351.00.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 10.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1410.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. E. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Single copies, 10 cents.
Advertisements, as ordered.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HYNNICUTT,
REV. C. E. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Men send their ships, the eager things,
To try their luck at sea.
But none can tell, by note or count,
How many there are in
One torch east, another south—
They never come again.
And then we know they must have sunk
But neither how nor when.

John the Baptist Murdered.

In the tragical murder of John the Baptist we have an exhibition of fidelity to duty met by a combination of evil and corrupt characters. The unswerving devotion of John to the high functions of his calling would not allow him to let such even as Herod Antipas, the ruler, pass unrebuked, because living in open defiance of the law of God. The reproach caused Herod and his adulterous wife, both desired and both sought to kill him. As both had fears and doubts about the wicked undertaking they found some satisfaction in arresting and casting the "preacher" into prison. While John lay in jail these wicked persons were still full of rage and malice toward him. At a "convenient" time, however, they gave full vent to their hellish feelings and purposes. The "convenient" time was Herod's birthday. On that day he gave a feast "to his lords, high captains and chief estates of Galilee." The joy of the occasion was crowned by the head of John the Baptist discolored in blood.

The combination of wicked characters in this atrocious deed is found in the lives and habits of "Herod, the king." Herodias, his brother Philip's wife, whom he married, and "the daughter of the said Herodias"—Salome, the dancer. Herod's wicked life is seen in a corrupt ancestry as well as the wickedness of his own principles and deeds. This Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great, was born of Cleopatra, of Jerusalem, his fifth wife. Herod the Great had no less than ten wives. In the number and murder of wives Herod the Great surpassed the famed Henry the Eighth, of England. The conduct of the murderous and corrupt father influenced the conduct of his son, Antipas. Herod Antipas married the wife of his living half-brother, Philip—his niece, Herodias was the daughter of Aristobolus, son of Herod the Great by Marianne, his second wife. Thus Herod Antipas, king of Galilee, married his niece, the wife of his living brother, Philip. This was wicked indeed. But he was wicked by drinking to drunkenness, as well as by abuse of power in the oppression and destruction of his subjects. Herodias, his incestuous wife, shared largely in all the feelings even to drinking and drunkenness we are not informed. This may be inferred from the prominent traits of her character as given. Her life is seen also in the training and life of her daughter, the famous dancer. The character of the dancing woman in those times may be seen in facts furnished in authentic history, especially Grecian history. In the social festivities of Grecian times the dance ing girl, or woman, was called "hetaira, female friend—usually translated, courtesan." (Dew.) "She was taught to sing, dance, play upon the lyre, blow the single and double flute. One or two of these were generally present at the entertainments, and amused and delighted company by their performances." (Dew.) This class of women wielded boundless power over governments, sometimes completely controlling victorious generals and distinguished statesmen.

In the combined act of these three persons and characters in taking the life of John the Baptist is clearly exhibited the specific effect of moral acts upon the heart of the actor. Drunkenness destroys will power and self-control. Herod "was sorry; nevertheless" he commanded the head to be given her. Adultery generates fierceness of spirit and deadly malice and murder. "At once Herodias said to her daughter, 'Ask for the head of John the Baptist.'" Dancing destroys the tender sensibilities of the young. "And she (the daughter) came straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, 'I will that thou give me by-and-by, in a charger, the head of John the Baptist.'" And it was given. Thus this devoted servant of the Most High fell in the front rank in the thickest of the fight by the united and combined attack of three of the most powerful foes of Christianity and the church. These entrenched and mighty foes of human salvation are adultery, drunkenness and dancing.

Since the fall of the first preachers and last of the prophets by these deadly foes how can any man or woman of church decency plead for the one without pleading for all? They are allies. The character of each is seen in the company it keeps and the deeds performed. Together they stand or fall. By them many a gospel preacher has fallen in battle and many souls sent to hell. Let us arise and arm for victory.

AMNES DOWLING,
ROMEO, ALA., FEBRUARY 1884.

A Model School.

It is now universally recognized by all thoughtful educators that the foundations for true university work is laid in preparatory schools. These, whether high schools or academies, determine the culture and civilization of a country. Some have recently said that broad, general culture is in the United States in inverse ratio to the number of colleges. In Massachusetts there are 15,000 high school pupils and a few colleges and universities; in Ohio there are thirty-five colleges and universities and a few high school pupils.

In education the universities generally get the praise. The eye of the populace sees only what is above ground. A traveler in Paris must need admire the New Opera House, a building covering three acres of ground and costing $8,000,000. But his confidence in the perpetuity of so much artistic beauty is assured only after he has learned that the foundation is on solid rock fifty feet under ground, and that months were spent in pumping subterranean rivers dry in order to gain this firm basis. In this way must university work be examined. The first question about a university is whether it has laid broad and deep foundations resting on numerous well-appointed and well-taught preparatory schools. The universities of Berlin, Paris, Oxford and Cambridge could never have gained lasting celebrity but for the Gymnasium of Germany, the Lycee of France and the public schools (Eton, Harrow, Rugby, etc.) of England.

Before the war, we are told, there were all over the South excellent academies. We hear how a certain teacher in Virginia, or another in South Carolina, or another in Georgia, prepared students for college, who were eagerly welcomed at Yale, or at the South Carolina College or at the University of Virginia. But for many years since the war these schools have been the exception, and not the rule; and yet our people are more in earnest about education than ever before. Of this we are all aware. At no former time has so much money been spent on education; so much talking and writing been done about education. But the interest has been confined to the one or the other of the two extremes in education—common schools and universities. And just here we find the fatal defect in our system of instruction. Between the best high schools of our common schools' system, and the university there is a gulf of several years which is not likely soon to be bridged over. The public school men are under the control of a popular vote and are, therefore, not allowed to teach in the graded schools certain studies that are absolutely essential to a liberal education. Nor can a change for the better be expected at an early date. Our people are more in love just now with requirement than with culture. In requirement marks can be given, results noted, a wooden machine made or a kind of a parrot turned out, a glib, shallow, ready talker produced who rejoices alike the heart of teacher and of parent. In culture, however, no marks can be given, no results can be noted, the process itself is almost imperceptible, and a nation's advance therein can be measured only by a half-century yardstick.

But all our academies are not dead; nor do we believe they are dying. On the contrary, there seems to be new life in this part of our educational system. We can now point with pride to many schools in Kentucky and Tennessee, as well as in other States, which are yearly sending well-trained young men to this university. Among the best of these is the Webb's School, at Collioka, Tenn. A few days ago I received an invitation from these excellent teachers to visit their school and examine their work. Two brothers about twelve years ago, graduates of the University of North Carolina, settled at a small station, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, and started a school. Within a few years by untiring energy, excellent discipline and skillful teaching they filled their classrooms to overflowing and gave to the Southwest a model preparatory, or training-school. Their reputation has so extended itself that younger teachers are accustomed to visit them to take lessons in managing and teaching a school. Some of their friends advised them to charter a college and to confer degrees; but they had the cause of sound scholarship too much at heart and were too wise to listen to such advice.

I was prepared to admire their work, for ever since I have been at Vanderbilt the Collioka boys have always stood in the front ranks. This year of my largest class they constitute one-twelfth; but of the distinctions given they get one-fourth. After spending a morning with them in the class-room, listening to classes recite, varying in number from five to sixty, and ranging in study from a beginner's class in Latin to Handel, Homer and Ovid, I was enabled to get the secret of their pupils' success. The instruction was thorough; but that I have seen in other schools. But I have never seen any teachers succeed so completely in making even the dullest boy take an untiring interest in whatever he studies. Another cause of their success is this: Of one hundred and twenty-five pupils there are not more than six who are not pursuing a classical course. Greek, Latin, English and mathematics are justly recognized by them as the basis of all thorough scholarship.

Now, as these teachers are doing, so can others do if they will only follow their example. And, indeed, at no distant day I hope to see such schools dotting the Southern country, for when that time comes three inestimable blessings will assuredly follow as results. We shall have profound scholars, able statesmen and wise churchmen.

W. M. BASKERVILLE,
VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

Letter from Mansfield.

MR. EDITOR: Mansfield has been the scene of two of the longest murder trials that ever took place in the State. Court began on January 9, and has continued ever since with but one of the cases decided as yet. Probably the other will be next week. I believe the Giltan trial lasted six weeks. These protracted cases are very expensive, and grow out of the immense difficulty of getting jurors, and of getting precisely the right evidence before them. It is presumed a juror does not know anything of the case he is to sit upon, which disqualifies a majority of intelligent citizens who read the newspaper reports of crimes and the facts concerning them stated by the press. Hence more than three hundred men have been examined to furnish material for a couple of juries. Then three or more lawyers on each side are required to get up the evidence and to prepare it for the jury. Much time is spent in discussing the admissibility of certain evidence, the form of asking the questions, and to keep the jury from hearing any evidence which might be irrelevant. Add to this the examination of expert questions of insanity, etc., and you have material for a long and expensive trial. Usually by the time the investigation has ended the jury are too much exhausted to endure further confinement, and they bring in a verdict of acquittal as the shortest way of getting release. Either some simpler mode of investigation must be adopted or society will have to go back to the old fashion of mob law, and hang men without law on presumptive evidence of their having committed great crimes.

Our new pastor, Bro. Harp, has been with us several weeks, and has been working hard. We very much hope for a revival under his ministry, for our church sadly needs it. The events of the past year were almost revolutionary in their character, and the faith of the church has received a severe shock. Still there are many pious Christians here who are more for the cause of Christ than they do for themselves, and who will, I am persuaded, show their faith by their works this good Centennial year. What we need is a baptism of the Holy Spirit to wash away our sins and to prepare us for work. Let our brethren pray for Mansfield this year.

We have several important affairs on hand of interest to the whole church. There is first the Sunday-school convention to be held here on June 11 and 12. It is designed for the entire Conference—a general convention, in which we want one delegate from each pastoral charge to consider this great interest. We have had for a long time a good Sunday-school here. We want to see many brethren at that time assemble here for work. A suitable programme will be made out and published in due season. It is hoped that all who wish information on Sunday-school work will read the "Sunday-School and Its Methods," by Rev. James A. Lyons, at Nashville. This is a condensed view of the entire field of Sunday-school labor, and will enable those who have read it to act intelligently in their efforts to promote the Sunday-school cause.

Another great interest we have on hand this year is the partial endowment of our female college. The Conference very wisely decided to raise the sum of ten thousand dollars this year for this purpose. The college needs it, and we believe, is worthy of it. The condition of our people does not permit many of them to send abroad for education. They have the means, however, to sustain noble institutions at home. Last year the patronage indicated a determination to build up their own institutions; but the short crop and troubles growing out of Bro. Borden's lamentable death have thrown us back almost to the point at which the college stood at the beginning of his administration. His good name has now been vindicated in the courts of the country, and thus the college is relieved of any sinful stain. It remains for its friends to rally to its help, and to show their love for the church by putting its affairs on a high plane of usefulness. It is the property of the church, is out of debt, and only wants a moderate degree of expansion to concentrate the patronage of an extensive territory destitute of Methodist female education. Its past work speaks trumpet-tongued for its endowment, for its graduates adorn the highest social positions in many of the best communities of our own and other States.

Salvation by Christ through Sacraments.

We had our say last week about the difference between ourselves and the Church of Rome in regard to the method in which God pardons or justifies a sinful man. Both churches say God pardons only through the merits of Christ; but Rome teaches that these merits can only be bestowed by sacraments, by which we become just, and in proportion as we become just through them; to that degree we are justified. This is what Trent says: "As we are ushered into spiritual life by means of the sacraments, so the same means are by which we are preserved." The Bible teaches, and this Protestant Church of ours teaches, that we are justified completely, not by sacraments or by outward moral deeds, but only by faith; that while Christ is the meritorious cause of pardon, faith is the alone instrumental cause, the hand stretched out to receive the gift. And when the gift of pardon is received, it is a complete pardon, not a thousand sins forgiven and two thousand left unforgiven; but all are forgiven by the merits of Christ received by simple faith, and only by simple faith. There is hope in this; men thereby may live in the brightness of God; men thereby may die without a fear, knowing that if their earthly home be destroyed they have a building of God which is eternal.

Let us look into this justification taught by Rome, and by the Romanizers as well, and which is received through sacraments and see what it can do for us. Nothing ever spoke so bold and did so little as these sacraments. To the end, all is peace and power and goodness; for the life here and hereafter, nothing but failure and sorrow.

Rome teaches we get our first justification in baptism. And to know what wonderful things baptism does for us we have only to listen to Trent: "Infants unless baptized can not enter heaven." "The remission of all sin is the peculiar effect of baptism." "All the punishment due to sin is remitted." In baptism "sin is entirely removed," "totally eradicated," "cut away so as to leave no roots truly fixed in the soul." These are most extraordinary gifts; and now one would think the baptized and little to do in order to get to the kingdom of the blessed. Gently! The baptized, if they live, always lose these wonderful gifts, which are bestowed only to be lost! Sin "totally eradicated" by baptism; but sin always comes back, and pardon and goodness lost.

Yet there is hope. Baptismal graces gone, there is another sacrament—confirmation. The man goes to confirmation, and by it "becomes," says Trent—"a perfect soldier of Christ." Well, now he is safe, this perfect soldier. Alas! for our perfect soldier; he goes out into the fight, and the first thing he does is to fight and fall, and lose this perfection. Amazing perfection this, to be lost in the first battle!

But despair not. The church has another sacrament for her perfect soldier that always falls—"the sacrament of the eucharist"—in which the baptized and confirmed partake of the very flesh and blood of soul and divinity of Christ, and are hereby nurtured into eternal life. He goes and partakes of these tremendous blessings—but, alas! he loses them; partakes again, and again loses. He eats Christ, and the eaten Christ can not help him; loses as fast or faster than he gains.

But let him not be cast down; there is another sacrament for him—"the sacrament of penance." You have fallen into sin after baptism; so "the sacrament of penance is as necessary to salvation as baptism," "penance washes away all sins of thought or deed committed after baptism;" "the voice of the priest is to be heard as that of Christ himself." So, he of good cheer, thy sins are forgiven thee. Surely this is wonderful sacrament; surely now, after all his past experience, the man can live acceptably to God. Not at all; he must go again and again and yet again to penance, and again and again and yet again to have his sins pardoned; but the pardon does not last; gets it to-day, gone to-morrow. What shall he do? He is about to die. Once more he gets priest's pardon. Surely now he will sin no more. This being doubtful, there is another sacrament for him—"extreme unction"—to afford us, says Trent, who are departing this mortal life "an easier access to heaven." Well, he gets that. Now surely it is easy for him to get into the blessedness. Fortified by all these sacraments he departs, is about to enter heaven so easily; but, alas! he is stopped; no entrance here; you must go to purgatory. Yes, the fire of purgatory, in which the souls of just men are cleansed by a temporary punishment in order to be admitted into their eternal country. This is the end; and after ten years, or a thousand years, or a million years—nobody can tell—after being roasted in these fires, you may get out and enter heaven!

Such is the theology of Rome and virtually that of the Romanizers. Such is the justification which Rome teaches. Such is justification received through Christ's merits by sacraments. And yet Rome never seems to consider, nor Romanizers, that if the reception of these sacraments by the sinner can not save from purgatory, how much less can these sacraments offered for the man in purgatory get him out! The good Pope, or Bishop, or priest dies; goes to purgatory; they want to get him out; so pray for him, offer the "holy sacrifice" for him. But if these failed when offered by himself, much more will they fail when offered by another. And if there be any such place as purgatory, of which the word of God knows not a word, we fear he will continue there as long as this imaginary place has being.

"There is no condemnation to him who is in Christ Jesus." So says the Book. No condemnation. Oh! that these words might make such impression upon the church that it would turn from all things to Christ; read the Bible to get to Christ; go to prayers and church to get to Christ; go to sacraments, not as charms, but as helps to get to Christ and to be more like Christ. But for the man in Christ there is no condemnation. And every human being is either in Christ or out of Christ. Out of Christ, nothing but condemnation; in Christ, no condemnation—no condemnation to the man in Christ by faith.

We are justified by the merits of Christ, which justification is received only by faith in Christ. And this justification is complete; pardon is complete; every sin is pardoned; and there is no condemnation to that man; none here, none there; no condemnation to the man who is in Christ Jesus. Now, if we believe this, let us neither be Romanizers nor Romanizers; but hopeful, healthy, faithful Christian men, making thereby daily protest against the Pope and the devil—Southern Churchmen.

Central Mexican Mission.

February 28, 1884. Bishop J. C. Keener, presiding; W. M. Patterson, superintendent.

APPOINTMENTS.

MEXICO DISTRICT.—E. Aguilera, P. E. Mexico—Mesas Church—J. Calles; Texaco Church—J. Morales; Nochiang Church—J. to be supplied; Aguilera circuit, D. Romero; Amecameca circuit, M. Cuevas; Tapotlixpa circuit, P. Rodriguez; Tula circuit, Jose Oliva; Chapultepec circuit, to be supplied; Toluca circuit, Higinio Lozada.

LOS ANGELES DISTRICT.—R. W. McDaniel, P. E. Leon, D. Paz; Lagos, to be supplied; Aguascalientes, S. Juarez.

TOLUCA DISTRICT.—J. Naranjo, P. E. Toluca, S. Gallegos; Metepec, P. Prieto; Rincon, J. M. Martinez; Chimaltepec circuit, A. Rios; Morelia, B. Guerrero; Tenango circuit, S. Reyes; Chucaman circuit, P. Martinez; Jucita circuit, D. G. Montalvo; Yantepec circuit, J. B. Alarcon; Chimaltepec circuit, to be supplied.

PUEBLA DISTRICT.—W. M. Patterson, P. E. Puebla, E. D. Herrera; Acapulco circuit, A. Lopez; Matamoros circuit, F. Gonzalez; Tehuacan circuit, to be supplied; Orizaba circuit, F. Anguiano.

SAN LUIS POTOSI DISTRICT.—J. H. Gignas, P. E. San Luis Potosi, T. Valle; Mezquiteros circuit, to be supplied.

OAXACA DISTRICT.—D. W. Carl, P. E. Oaxaca, Luis Potosi; Eguala circuit, to be supplied.

GUADALAJARA DISTRICT.—D. P. Watkins, P. E. Guadalajara, D. F. Watkins; Guadalajara, A. Blum; Tlalpuigula circuit, A. Zepeda; Cuyacapan circuit, Simon Bonilla; Tepic, S. Hernandez; Ateguco circuit, J. B. Colman; A. Portugal; Ahualulco, to be supplied; Zapotlan, to be supplied; Baramor, to be supplied; Tequila, to be supplied.

Good Words.

Lord, all thy works are lessons. Each contains some emblem of man's all-containing soul. Shall he make for these all thy glorious paths? Seeking within thy grace, an eyesole mole. Make me the best of thy holiest grove. Cause me some message of the truth to bring. Speak but a word through me, nor let thy love. Among my thoughts all-true to perch and song. —W. L. Lewis

—The sunlight always seems to be watching for a chance to get through the smallest opening in the clouds. Love which forgives because it is love, and which waits for every opportunity to manifest kindness, is not going to wait to be asked to forgive.

—If thou seek rest in this life, how wilt thou then attain to the everlasting rest? Dispose not thyself for much rest, but for great patience. Seek true peace—not in earth, but in heaven; not in men, nor in any other creature, but in God alone.—Thomas a Kempis

—Believers are not dependent upon circumstances. Their joy comes not from what they have, but from what they are; not from what they enjoy, but from that which has been sown in them by their Lord. It is a singular joy, then, because it often buds, blooms and ripens in winter time; and when the big tree does not blossom, and there is no herb in the stall, God's habakukus rejoice in salvation.—Christian Neighbor

FEBRUARY 24, 1884.

F. M. GRACE.

Christian Advocate.

CHURCH OF THE LUTHERANS, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CEAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors: REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. HAWLEY, REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1884.

Centenary Watchword.—No. 4.

More preachers for our growing work at home and in foreign lands. "Pray, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

R. B. HENDRIN, Chm. Cen. Com.

Prof. Baskerville hits the nail squarely on the head in his excellent article on our first page. He says, and truly, that our educational interest is confined to the two extremes—common schools and universities. That "gulf of several years" needs to be bridged with good high schools and academies.

The troubles in Dr. Newman's Church, in New York, do not abate. There was a stormy meeting on Monday night of this week, and the telegrams state there were threats of adjournment to the streets in order to fight it out. It is far better to have authority lodged somewhere to make prompt removals and prevent such disgraceful scenes. Methodist Churches never have like experiences. Conferences are only one year apart, and if an emergency arises a Bishop is ever near.

Bishop Keener, Dr. Kelley and Mrs. Freeman, widow of the late Rev. R. N. Freeman, reached the city from Mexico last Friday night. Dr. Kelley and Sister Freeman hurried homeward by the early train on Saturday morning, and Bishop Keener went to bed with a slight attack of erysipelas. A letter from the Bishop appears in this issue. The annual meeting of the mission was a delightful and inspiring occasion. Great prosperity has attended the heroic labors of our brethren in that harvest field. As we studied the faces of the missionaries in a handsome photograph of the Conference, kindly shown us by Sister Keener, we felt that our Zion was in able, faithful, devoted hands. The success of our Mexican mission has been a marvel.

Use the Christian Press.

The importance of this exhortation is not generally appreciated. For editors and publishers to urge and argue is expected as necessary to their personal success. And their urgency is often attributed to that unworthy motive. But the matter is important and imminent. We can not neglect this mighty arm of our service and enjoy large prosperity. Not the least of the providential agencies that gave almost miraculous success to the Methodist movement was the printing press. Mr. Wesley and many of his co-laborers were voluminous and skillful writers. They sowed down the land with tracts and pamphlets. At every chapel door there was a Methodist agent with his cheap publications to sell. The age of the pamphlet has been succeeded by that of the weekly newspaper. And if we are to meet the responsibilities of Christ's cause, the religious weekly must find its way into every home. We appeal to pastors to consider these things, not as a favor to any Advocate or organ, but as an obligation to the people. They must have the gospel in this form, or else suffer uncorrected and unarrested the poison of infidelity. We invite attention to the following from the Irish Christian Advocate:

It is said that the present circulation of skeptical and immoral publications, from one half-penny to three half-pence each, is upward of four hundred thousand weekly. Christian literature has been, and still is, a mighty agency in the spread of the Christian religion. It may be, and we venture to think, ought to be immensely increased. And it will be. The pulpit has the attention of multitudes for two or three hours on the Sabbath; and the platform occasionally commands the same during the year, but the press is at work in its monthly and weekly and dailies every day of the week. Its readers are found among every class and creed. Millions that never hear a sermon read tracts and other religious publications. The newspaper press should be taken more into this work. The late James Smith, of Cheltenham, said: Tracts and religious journals can go everywhere; they know no fear; never grow weary; cost little; go up and down like the angels of God; talk to a multitude as well as to one; require no public room to tell their story; they can tell it in the shop, the kitchen, parlor or drawing-room, in the railway carriage or the train-car, on the highway, on the footpath or the fields. They may be made the vehicle of all truth—the teachers of all classes and creeds. The present postal arrangements make provision for their circulation in hundreds of thousands.

Wesleyan Methodist Chapel Fund.

We eagerly study the methods and progress of Methodism in England. And that it seems to have put on a more vigorous life must give inspiration to her every branch in every part of the world. Last year reported extensive revivals and large gatherings. The net numerical increase exceeded any year for a decade or more. But the numbers added do not indicate the full measure of development and enlarged prosperity. A late number of the Watchman contains a skillful analysis of the recent Chapel Fund Report, which gives the large amounts expended in church extension. We are really amazed at the vast amounts gathered from the congregations for the several connectional funds. They must have a marvelous system of finance, and work it with a business-like vigilance and vigor unknown to any church on this side thesea.

Some of the facts in the report alluded to ought to thrill with a new purpose our young Church Extension Board. And let it be remembered that English Methodism began a new era with the generous gift of Sir Francis Lytton and the founding of this chapel fund. By this helping agency unhoused congregations have been fitted up in comfortable chapels and have doubled their membership. The chapel fund has two great objects—to aid in new erections and the reduction of debts on existing buildings. According to the above report debts were reduced last year at the rate of £1,000 a week—a total of debts discharged of £53,674. In the matter of new buildings, and these include some schools and enlargements of chapels, there were 265 "cases"—an average of five per week. And the entire cost of these operations aggregated the large sum of £332,000. These provided additional accommodations to the number of 25,000 sittings. And of the number of new chapels erected, 57, or more than one a week, were erected in places where there was no Wesleyan Methodist house of worship. This surely is a grand achievement. May Centenary year speedily fill our church extension treasury with needed supplies, and especially gather for active service the contemplated Loan Fund of $500,000.

Card-Playing at Home.

We are quite surprised to see the good Christian at work twitting the Independent on its "new deca-logue" against sinful amusements. The following is an excerpt: "It says that a game of whist at home leads to betting, gambling and the frequenting of gambling halls. Following the same brilliant line of argument, we may say that mince-pie leads to indigestion, indigestion to melancholia, melancholia to insanity and insanity to suicide; so that whist and mince-pie must be both avoided by all readers of the Independent." Now, that is really miffing and ridiculing a very serious matter. And it is in the same vein and spirit of those journals who advocate free whisky, and wink at all immorality. Now, does the Christian at Work pretend to say that card-playing and eating mince-pie have the same moral significance and effect? Does mince-pie lead to insanity as often and readily as card-playing does to gambling? If not, he is caricaturing a timely and Christian caution.

There is no question but that expertness at whist or euchre at home has led many to venture their hand with the professionals. As cards are so generally used by gamblers, a "pack" always suggests evil. It is not good religious education to have them in the house, and always hazardous for parents to join with their children in a social game. An evening otherwise spent in the family will be more elevating and ennobling to the children. A deck of cards is not an attractive piece of furniture in any religious home. And deep down in the conscience of every one who indulges, even in a social game, is a feeling that it is wrong—that it is in no wise commendable to the favor of Heaven. Just on that point we reproduce the following illustrative little incident from the Evangelical Messenger. No man wants to go into eternity direct from the card-table, or even with a "pack" in his pocket:

Mr. F. H. Tibbets, one of the survivors of the City of Columbus disaster, relates the following incident of a "stout man" near him in the rigging who was terribly afraid to die: "I told him to pray, but he said he couldn't. I told him that there was little chance for life, and he should take the opportunity to make his peace with God. I prayed with him, and he did so and said he felt better. A young man near me was in a great deal of distress. He told me he didn't know how to pray, and before my Maker with a pack of cards in my pocket, and he threw his cards overboard, but he perished with the wreck."

Letter from the Central Mexican Mission. Death of Rev. Richard N. Freeman, One of Our Missionaries.

BY BISHOP KEENER.

MR. EDITOR: On the first of the month, in company with Dr. Kelley, I found myself on the Whitney steamer heading for Mexico. We had good weather and a safe voyage. But just as we left a letter was handed me announcing the death of Bro. Freeman on the twenty-sixth of January. He and his bride had passed through New Orleans only three weeks ago on their way to the City of Mexico. On arriving there he went to one of the hotels, where he remained but two days, when he moved to a new house, newly furnished. In the course of ten days he was taken down with a fever, which developed into the small-pox, of which, in some eight days, he died. The room occupied by him in the hotel was next one in which there had been, but a few days previous, a case of small-pox. As soon as Bro. Norwood heard of his sickness he came up from Toluca, and nursed him until death came to his relief. Bro. Norwood had never had the disease, but waited upon the patient sufferer, and caught the precious words and messages which fell from his dying lips. So, too, Sister Freeman, as a faithful, loving wife, waited upon her husband, until she was stricken with the same contagion. In addition to this attention, a Mrs. Blackmore, a wealthy lady, and her daughter, neither of whom had had the small-pox, remained with their beloved pastor and wife until the arrival of Bro. Norwood. In a word, he had every assistance which the best medical skill and the most tender love could bring to a dying man. The subjoined account of Bro. Norwood will introduce our church to the death-chamber of the first missionary who has died in her foreign field while in actual service. Maybe the time had come when the attending shadow should be thrown upon these bright fields, when death as well as integrity and devotion of life should be used to illustrate the service demanded of a missionary. Bro. Freeman had won the love and respect of all to whom he ministered the word of life, and all that remained to be done he accomplished in the clear triumph of his dying hour. His sure trust in Christ, his firm hope, his gratitude to God for the providence which had guided him all his days down to the margin of heaven, his thoughtful messages to relatives, brethren and his flock, all assure us of the victory of faith. Our people will not leave their dead upon the field of battle; and these precious bones insure the ultimate triumph of our missions in Mexico.

So much of this issue was in type before the Bishop's letter was received no room was left for Bro. Norwood's beautiful tribute to Bro. Freeman. It will appear next week. And we hope for much more from Bishop Keener. The appointments are on our first page.

Prohibition in Mississippi.

From a lifelong residence in Mississippi, and a more or less careful observation of its current thought and political history, we record with gratitude the fact that never before has there been such a pronounced and growing sentiment in the State in favor of the legal suppression of the liquor traffic. A decade ago the question was laughed down in the Legislature. Its few advocates and friends were everywhere derided as fanatics and sentimentalists. But a change has been wrought. The present Legislature is largely prohibition in sentiment, albeit the local option measure did not pass. Its friends were not sufficiently agreed about some minor provisions, and it was thought best not to urge its passage. But a number of entire counties have secured prohibitory laws, together with scores of municipalities and supervisors' districts. Twenty-two prohibitory bills were introduced one day. And yet in face of this advanced moral sentiment, one little political newspaper brought out its roster to crow a victory over prohibition, and another inserted the ent of a coffin to caricature its death. They are very suggestive and appropriate substitutes for argument. Whisky advocates are either as foolishly noisy as a rooster or as significantly silent as a coffin. But the friends of morality can well afford such ridicule. Every great reform has driven on opposition and insult. We are battling for the home against the saloon, for good morals against drunkenness and all immorality. With the consciousness of being inspired by righteous motives, we need not falter at any character of opposition.

But our cause is moving forward with a steady and stately step. Friends are multiplying, arguments accumulate and enemies are giving away. We hail with joy every agitation of the question, for it brings us nearer the glad morning of triumph. Our enemies have no argument, and ridicule is a booming that sooner or later will recoil with terrible effect upon their own heads.

Character of Gen. Gordon.

Just now the most conspicuous figure before the reading world is Gen. Gordon and his connection with the war in Egypt. His career has been singularly brilliant. He is described as being about fifty years old, slightly built, a little under the average height, quite youthful in appearance, light in his step and lithe as a leopard in his movements. His exceptional characteristic is a child-like simplicity of spirit and manners. Much has been written about him and his strange mission in the East, but nothing have we seen more discriminating and appreciative than an editorial article in the Irish Christian Advocate. We make a liberal extract:

The key to the character of Gordon is his unflinching confidence in God. This is the principle that has dominated his whole life; the assured and unwavering conviction that an Almighty will directs and an Almighty arm protects him. It is the old story of the power of faith in God. He believes that nothing is accidental. In his view men are only the instruments of a higher power, who is uttering in his decisions and infinite in his might. No man, however rich, intellectual, influential, or experienced in his own special position, is in his view indispensable to the State or the church or the community at large. In the midst of tremendous difficulties and perils, he writes: "I can not tell you how happy and composed I feel in my sure refuge. No comfort is equal to that which he has who has God for his stay." The burden of the cares of his governorship, as a feather upon him, because he relied it upon his God. Often left to his own personal resources, in the midst of great perplexities and dangers, but with Providence to direct and uphold him, he trusted in the Almighty, so as to fear nothing, and to feel assured of success in his most arduous undertakings.

Faith was the root from which sprung the distinguished traits of the general's character. It was this which inspired the almost superhuman courage which he so conspicuously displayed on so many perilous occasions. Witness his bravery in China, his terrific onslaught on the leaders of the slave trade, the slave hunter and the slave army in the heart of Africa, the suppression of six thousand fierce Turks and Bashil-Bazouks, his scaling two tremendous mountains, reaching the lofty plateau, where the terrible Waled el Michael, the Abyssinian brigand chief, was entrenched with seven thousand freebooters, all armed with muskets, and persuading the robber chieftain to ask for pardon from the King of Abyssinia, against whom he had rebelled, and the utter overthrow of the brutal son of Sebeher and his army of incarnate fiends. And add to all these illustrations of his courage, and many others which we have not noticed, his present extremely adventurous and hazardous journey across the desert to Berber, and from thence to Khartoum, on an errand of mercy, and you see a Christian man, who may without exaggeration be designated the bravest of the brave, in the best sense of the phrase.

There are times when a nation depends for its safety and progress not upon its institutions only, but upon its servants also. At such times the individual man is more powerful than the perfect machinery of the government. The United Kingdom in its world-wide interests has had many such periods, and it will have many such in the future. We are confident that there is in this empire still unused physical, mental and moral wealth, which in the hour of need will be forthcoming for the promotion and preservation of the best interests of our populations, both in temporal and spiritual matters.

To the church of Christ the character of such a man as Gordon is a joyfulness. His virtues are the result of her teaching, and his faith and love are centered in her founder. The church can point to him as an illustration of what ought to take place in her children—the union of faith and practice, tenderness and strength, pity and righteous wrath, pity and majesty. No longer will men feel that the cloister is indispensable to an extraordinary moral and spiritual elevation. There are saints now as in primitive times, "in Caesar's household," doing Caesar's work with Caesar's weapons, though not in Caesar's spirit, and is not this a gain worth the notice of the Christian church?

A Note from China.

MR. EDITOR: I write only a few words to say our annual meeting has just closed. We have had a most pleasant session. The Lord was with us, and the Spirit of God seemed to rest upon us all, and we felt greatly blessed. We thank God for such a glorious manifestation of his goodness to us on this occasion. We have just returned home, and I have been very busy to-day getting my preachers ready and off for their work the coming year. I will write you a longer letter by the next mail, and tell you something of the work of the past year. Pray for us, and believe me ever your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBETH, SHANGHAI, CHINA, Jan. 22, 1884.

Centenary Caution.

Bishop Parker contributes to the Texas Advocate a most timely article on the proper improvement of Centenary year. What he says on the danger of deconnectionalizing the occasion is worthy of careful consideration. Unless that point is guarded the spirit and blessing of the movement will be dissipated, and result in no permanent good. We have space left only for the following:

The collections directed to be taken for the three great objects, foreign missions, education and church extension, should be obligatory upon all our preachers. These are to be the contributory especially on the Centenary day as fixed by each Conference, and they are to be distinct from the regular collection, and to be, as far as practicable, divested of a local character. The purpose is to raise a large general fund for these several objects, to be controlled and appropriated in a connectional way, and on a scale worthy of the occasion and of the whole church. The right of donors to give specific directions to these contributions is conceded, but it is not expected that all will be thus applied to merely local enterprises. At the end of the centenary year there should be in the hands of the Central Committee a great connectional fund, to be appropriated to foreign missions, education and church extension. Amid the many pressing local demands this feature of the Centenary collections is likely to be overlooked.

There is also danger of starting too many new enterprises in the way of schools and colleges. Many new churches and parsonages should be built during the Centenary year as memorial of the epoch we have reached. These are much needed, especially in Texas, and in no better way could our gratitude and liberality find a fitting expression. But, in doing this important work, we must not neglect the connectional church extension fund. And, in the way of education, the endowment and de-liverance from financial straits of the institutions, we have especially emphasized. To attempt new and local enterprises, while those we have on hand are languishing or not securely established and endorsed, will lead to comparatively barren results. While nearly every section and town in the State would be glad to have a college or university, it is manifest that to undertake them would end in universal failure. The endowment of the Southwestern University, and the firm establishment of the schools already existing, should be the present limit of effort in this direction. There is danger, indeed, in dividing our strength and means so much on these that none will be adequately aided. The enthusiasm and excitement of our Centenary year, for lack of concentration, may be utterly lost; and the means that would have given one or two institutions of high grade and commanding influence will be frittered away and squandered on many. The history of education in our church in all sections, not more in Texas than in Alabama, Louisiana, Kentucky and elsewhere, enforces this lesson. Merely local and sectional interests must be surrendered, or nothing of moment will be achieved.

"No More Place."

Paul was at Corinth. But his mission there was at an end, and there was no more place for him. We may conjecture other reasons than the end of his mission. As in almost every place he was forced to have a retreat from espionage and violence, so doubtless at Corinth; and, as his persecutors closed upon him, he went from one hiding-place to another, until the last one was discovered, and he must now take his departure. Or we may suppose that the proud, aristocratic, self-indulgent Corinthians grew tired of his constant lashings of their immoralities, and sought teachers more pliant and complaisant. Perhaps, as at other places, he preached too long, and a man of short sermons and faultless linen was more in demand than he. These are some of the possible reasons why there was no more place for him. On the other hand, it may have been none of these, but a call to a more important work. But in any case Paul showed no elation nor depression. He neither grumbled nor exulted. So full of the exalted nature of his mission and the communion of it to the world that the idea of grieving at leaving a fine appointment or going to a poor one did not occur to him as an episode in preacher life. Yet Paul had sorrowful partings and joyful greetings. We have enough of his itinerancy to long for a fuller recital—a story angels might love to hear.

Some valuable lessons are contained or suggested in the words, "No more place." 1. Preachers often wear out and places often become unwilling to the preacher. This is not a matter of grief to either party necessarily. That a preacher is "worn sick," as a brother termed it, is not necessarily evidence that he is a "gum-log," to use a McFerrinism. Nor because a place does not suit the preacher, is it proof that it will not exactly suit some one else? The truth in each case is that the phraseology shows on the part of both preacher and people a sad misconception. It would be a poor thing if Christianity aimed at nothing higher than to furnish men with places or places with men. May God help both those preachers and those circuits and stations.

2. But suppose that one feels that he is not appreciated—his sermons tedious, his teaching unwelcome. Let him not conclude that his call to preach is invalidated or that he is not owned of his Master. The preacher most honored of God is not necessarily the man who wins most converts. Witness Elijah and Jonah. Suppose the church has asked your removal. Remove. That is prudent and Christian. Don't go lurching the wrath of God or shaking the dust from your feet. If you discharged your duty while there leave the rest to your Master. He will see to it. Remember that sooner or later the place had to be surrendered. There are larger stations before than behind. Don't fear that you will be turned out to grass. Never.

3. Paul never had a first-class paying church. His salary was something less than ten thousand a year. His choir sometimes consisted of himself and his friend. But he magnified his office. When his place grew too large for him he went on, and when his great heart saw work beyond he left his place. But he reached heaven.

T. A. S. A.

From Bastrop, La.

Yesterday we organized the Dr. Starn's Woman's Missionary Society with a goodly number of members and subscribers. The following are the officers elected for 1884: Mrs. Dr. A. S. Helmick, president; Mrs. A. L. Smith, first vice-president; Mrs. R. E. Guthrie, second vice-president; Mrs. A. E. Guthrie, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. E. Calhoun, recording secretary; Miss Tenie Noble, treasurer; Miss Emma Calhoun, solicitor for the Woman's Missionary Advocate. We are expecting of this island society that it will do a grand work for missions and, judging by the character and spirit of those who compose it, we believe we shall not be disappointed. A Sabbath-school will be organized on the island next Sunday with W. W. Guthrie and A. S. Helmick as superintendents. Dr. Helmick and Bro. Guthrie will be our class-leaders and will also hold the prayer meetings. The Sunday-school, the prayer meeting and the class meeting are part and parcel of real Methodism.

FEBRUARY 25, 1884.

By Morrison Heady, Nashville, Tenn.: Southern Methodist Publishing House, 1884.

This is from the title-page of a book just received by me from our Publishing House. A neater bound, better printed book is seldom seen. The paper is heavy, and of superior quality. Indeed, the "make up" of the book would do credit to any Publishing House in these United States, and is in keeping with the other excellent work done under the present management.

But as to the book itself. It is a remarkable book, and one all the boys will want and their fathers should get for them. The scene is laid in Kentucky, except in the closing chapters, in which the reader is conducted with the American army in pursuit of the British army under Gen. Proctor, to the battle of the Thames. The book closes with the death of Tecumseh. The hero is a faithful slave, named Burlman Reynolds, or "Big Black Burl," and the character is so well drawn that one is led to believe that he was a veritable personage, although possessed of rare courage for one of his race. The descriptions of frontier life, the dangers and hardships bravely met and borne, the hand to hand combats with the savage foes are drawn with a graphic pen and in a charming manner. There are touches of great pathos, and some passages are strikingly beautiful examples of "prose in poetry." There are some exaggerated incidents and some peculiar, very peculiar, expressions and sentences to be met here and there, but they are like the discords which the musician deftly inserts in his composition so that the beauty of the chords may be the more striking by way of contrast. There is not an impure word or suggestion in the book.

And now, a brief mention of the author of this little book (8 vo., 185 pp.) He is the blind poet of Kentucky, whose fugitive poems we have been reading for so many years. Not only is he blind, but he is also deaf. Yet one would never discover these facts from the book, for the description of scenery would indicate one whose eyes are wide open to see, and whose heart is open to feel the beauties of nature.

T. L. MELLENS.

The Holston Methodist says, and we entirely approve it: "Southern Methodism can not afford to let down on the danclog question. If your young members will 'hop,' let them hop out of the church."

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo., under selling our fine Hooks and Bibles. Write to J. C. McFurdy & Co., St. Louis, Missouri.

MISCELLANEOUS

Weekly Market Review.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

FOREIGN.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A Home Production.

YEAST POWDER.

THE NEW MUSICAL QUIVER.

JOHN CHURCH & CO.

NEW YORK OFFICE: 100 N. Y. ST.

Mrs. POTT'S GOLD HANDLE SAE IRON

ADVANTAGES

The Great Church LIGHT.

BARNES'

DIAMOND DYES

SEEDS

COTTON.

Low ordinary	7 1/2	64
Good ordinary	8 1/2	64
Good middling	10 1/2	64
Good middling	10 1/2	64
Good middling	10 1/2	64
Good middling	10 1/2	64
Good middling	10 1/2	64
Good middling	10 1/2	64
Good middling	10 1/2	64
Good middling	10 1/2	64

SUGAR.

Low ordinary	34	44
Good ordinary	34	51
Good ordinary	34	51
Good ordinary	34	51
Good ordinary	34	51
Good ordinary	34	51
Good ordinary	34	51
Good ordinary	34	51
Good ordinary	34	51
Good ordinary	34	51

GRAIN, ETC.

White	61	61
Yellow	61	61
Mixed	61	61
White	61	61
Yellow	61	61
Mixed	61	61
White	61	61
Yellow	61	61
Mixed	61	61
White	61	61

GROCERIES.

Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141
Coffee	111	141

VEGETABLES.

Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00
Cabbage	4 50	5 00

SUNDRIES.

Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50
Chicken	5 50	6 50

TOLEDO, Ohio, Feb. 27.—The case of Robt. Bailey, colored, on trial for murdering a white girl, contrary to the law of 1841, which imposes a fine of $100 and three months' imprisonment for a white person marrying one of negro blood, or vice versa, was tried today. Bailey was found guilty and given the full penalty of the law.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—The St. Paul, Minn., Evening Journal's special adviser reports light snow and high wind, with drifting on the Milwaukee line. The storm from the Minneapolis and St. Louis road which set in last night developed to-day into the worst blizzard of the season. There was a light snow and heavy drifting, particularly west of Albert Lea. Freight trains have been temporarily abandoned, but passenger trains are running on slow time.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Gen. Grant has so far recovered from the effects of the fall received last Christmas eve that he has held aside his crutches and goes about the house with a cane. He has been out driving several times recently, and expects to go to Norfolk, Va., soon.

CANBERRA, N.S.W., Feb. 28.—A terrible hurricane visited this section of the country yesterday, doing considerable damage to property. The new Catholic church here, having been completed, was blown entirely down. There were two men in the church at the time, but fortunately they escaped unhurt.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The House passed the pleuro-pneumonia bill today by a vote of 155 to 127. The Republican vote was 100, and the Democratic vote 27. The bill provides for a Commissioner of Agriculture, who shall organize a bureau of animal industry and appoint a chief thereof, whose duty shall be to investigate and report upon the number, value and condition of the herds of animals of the United States, and also the means for the prevention and cure of the same. He is authorized to appoint two competent agents, whose duty shall be to report upon the best methods of treating, transporting and caring for animals and the means to be adopted for the suppression and extirpation of contagious pleuro-pneumonia.

NASHVILLE, Feb. 29.—Marshall T. Polk, ex-Governor of the State, who was convicted last July and sentenced to thirteen years' imprisonment for embezzling $100,000 from the State, and whose case was to be taken up in the Supreme Court next Tuesday, died at 8:30 o'clock to-night at his residence in East Nashville.

BOSTON, March 2.—At the First Baptist Church on Columbus Avenue, the pastor, Rev. C. B. Carter, announced that he would omit the rogation sermon as there was a more important duty. He called Deacon Lansing Mills to the platform. Mr. Mills said there was a debt of $55,000 resting upon the church, and it was his greatest desire that it should be wiped out. Years ago he had resolved to set aside a sum each year to purchase a farm to which he could retire in his old age, and this amount he would now give towards the cancellation of the church's indebtedness. He then called for further gifts, and in less than an hour the entire $55,000 was subscribed. The doxology was sung and benediction was dismissed with the benediction.

JACKSON, March 3.—The bill providing for the removal of the site of government from Jackson to Meridian was lost by a vote of 35 to 19 days.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 27.—W. H. Hays, United States Minister, died this morning at 7:30 o'clock.

THINKPAT, Feb. 27.—The beach presents a lively appearance. The Blue Jackets, up to their necks in the water, are hauling stores and carrying soldiers ashore through the surf. The Gordon Highlanders and Irish Fusiliers are advancing to occupy the beach. They have brought the mortars which lie between the harbor and the main land. The distance to the fort is about four miles. It was built Feb. 2 to protect the gulf while crossing the morasses. The rebels regard with excitement the landing. They are convinced that Allah has set all as a prey for them.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 2.—The march to Tokar was accomplished in four hours from Tokar. The Arabs lost 1,110 men dead on the field at Tokar, besides the guns and other munitions. The camp, including 35 tents and many camels, was taken. The condition of the camp showed that the Arabs rolled upon being victorious. Gen. Graham sends a part of the Tokar garrison to Trinkital, and destroys the fortifications.

AFTER WAR, PESTILENCE AND INTERFERENCE, Colds lead to the greatest destruction of human life, mainly in consequence of their being systematically neglected. A simple cold, as they come, is converted into a serious and generally fatal disease. It is better to take a cold or cough or cold from its inception, by using promptly Dr. J. C. Jackson's Remedy, a remedy thoroughly adapted to remove these common ailments, and equally effective in the primary stage of consumption, asthma and bronchitis.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.	Jan. 27
Agitation, at New Orleans	27
La. Avenue	27
Plaquemine and Bayou Lafourche	27
Bayou Lafourche	27
Bayou Lafourche	27
Bayou Lafourche	27
Bayou Lafourche	27
Bayou Lafourche	27
Bayou Lafourche	27
Bayou Lafourche	27

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Columbia circuit, at Alexandria	Jan. 27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27
St. George's circuit, at Alexandria	27

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

South Shreveport, at Shreveport	Jan. 27
Shreveport	27
Shreveport	27
Shreveport	27
Shreveport	27
Shreveport	27
Shreveport	27
Shreveport	27
Shreveport	27
Shreveport	27

DELLI DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Develi circuit, at Develi	Jan. 27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27
Develi circuit, at Develi	27

ROMER DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Roma circuit, at Roma	Jan. 27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27
Roma circuit, at Roma	27

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Washington	Jan. 27
Washington	27
Washington	27
Washington	27
Washington	27
Washington	27
Washington	27
Washington	27
Washington	27
Washington	27

J. W. Billington's LIGHTNING LINIMENT

GOOD FOR ALL Aches & Pains.

JNO. I. ADAMS & CO.

Wholesale Grocers

WACKERBARTH & JOSEPH

MANUFACTURERS

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

NEW CHOICE SEEDS! FRUITS!

BARGAINS

PIANOS!

KNABE

PIANOFORTES.

FREE

Send to BROWN'S BUSINESS UNIVERSITY.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 11.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1441.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HYNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE REFINER.

It is sweet to know that he who tries
The silver, takes his part
To do the work which purifies,
Lest too intense a heat—
It is to consume the dross away
The precious metals, too, destroy.
It is sweet to think how well he knows
The silver's power to bear
The ordeal through which it goes
And that, with skill and care,
He'll take it from the fire when fit,
With his own hand to polish it.
He is blessed to know that he
The work he has begun
Will not forsake all he can do
The work itself well done;
An image by its brightness shown,
The perfect likeness of his own.
But oh! how much of earthly mold
Dark relics of the outer,
Left from the one which he behold
How long must he refine,
See in the silver he can true
The first faint semblance of his face.
Ugh, Great Refiner, sit thou by,
Thy purpose to fulfill;
Moved by thy hand, beneath thine eye
And melted at thy will,
Oh may thy work forever shine,
Reflecting beauty pure as thine.

Last Hours of Richard N. Freeman.
BY REV. JOSEPH SHERWOOD.

DEAR BISHOP KEENER: It is with pleasure that I comply with your request to write you a brief account of the last illness, dying words and death of our noble and beloved Freeman. On January 10, as I passed through the City of Mexico for my home in Toluca, I left him well, hearty and happy, fixing up his new home with the brightest prospects of a long and happy life; but on January 23 I received a letter from Dr. Patterson, saying: "Bro. Freeman is in bed with small-pox, and has been for several days; and this evening Sister Freeman told me she was going to bed with it, as she has all the symptoms. But she said she was not at all alarmed. She is a calm and brave little woman."

When I received the doctor's letter I was so unwell myself that I could not go to him at once; but so soon as I was able to travel, which was two days later, I went to his assistance. When I reached the house his womanly wife came to the door, and said: "Bro. Norwood, I advise you not to come in." To which I replied: "I have come for that purpose, my sister." The brightening of her countenance, the expression of gratitude that gushed out from her eyes, and the exclamation, "Oh, I am so glad!" made me feel glad, too, that I was where I was needed. But, oh! how my heart sank within me as I walked into the room and saw his swollen and disfigured face. That most awful of all diseases had assumed the most horrible form, and had closed his eyes and so completely changed his appearance that he was unrecognizable. It was characteristic of this man to say, among his first words: "My brother, are you not afraid of this disease?" When I assured him that I was not he reached up and embraced me most affectionately, and said: "My brother, I am so glad you have come for my dear Lucy is completely broken down with anxiety and fatigue, and now she can rest a little and feel that I am not neglected."

From that time to his death, about forty-five hours after, his thoughts seemed to run on religious subjects all the time, whether delirious or in his right mind. On the previous Sabbath he had gotten up from bed, dressed himself with great difficulty on account of sleekness and extreme weakness, gone to church and preached one of the best sermons of his life on "The Day Spring;" and frequently during his last days, he said, with a great degree of satisfaction: "I am so glad I preached last Sunday. It is a satisfaction to me to know that I delivered the gospel message once more." About twelve o'clock, Saturday night, he called for his wife, and when I informed him that she had just lain down to rest a little he replied: "I wanted one thing that I did not get. I wanted you and Lucy to have prayers with me before either of you retired." At this time he was suffering intensely and tossing himself from side to side of the bed, and a little later he called me to him, and said, about in these words: "My dear brother, I know it seems childish in me to be so restless; but I have tried in vain for six days and nights to sleep, and now my nervous system is so completely wrecked that I can't be quiet. Please kneel down here by me and ask God to help me to bear this as a Christian man ought to. While I held his hand in mine, kneeling by his bedside, and prayed he would heartily respond, "Amen! amen!" and immediately afterward seemed to go to sleep and rest quietly for awhile.

On Sunday morning, so soon as all were up, he said to his wife: "Lucy, get the Bible, and let's all have prayers together." Thus he spent the Sabbath in a spiritual frame of mind, though perceptibly growing worse. That night, while apparently delirious, he seemed to be making a missionary speech before an American audience, in which he said many fine things. He then commenced to preach a sermon in Spanish, but soon changed again to his talk on the Mexican Mission. A few moments later he called me, saying he wanted to have one of our good talks on the mission work in Mexico; but by this time his voice had become so weak that I could not catch all his words. I could hear enough, however, to get the general tenor of them. Some of his audible words were, as nearly verbatim as I can give them, the following: "What! the Mexican Mission work a failure? Not a word of it. Say it not to me. The work is of God, sealed by the blood of Christ, and it must succeed—it will succeed. He will make the rough places smooth and the crooked places straight. He will correct all errors from whatever cause." This was only about five hours before his death. Still later he called to his wife, and asked her to repent from memory the Psalm which begins, "God is my refuge and strength," and repeatedly responded: "Amen!" to the verses that seemed to apply most directly to him. About three o'clock, Monday morning, he commenced to talk to me again about mission work, for that was his all-absorbing theme, and, among other things, he said: "There is a tendency at home which I would gladly like to correct. Some persons in their zeal for the missions of their own church seem to forget the American Bible Society and its glorious work of evangelization and true charity. After all, that society is the chief corner-stone of the great missionary movement. What could we have done in Mexico without it? I wish you to carry my love and best wishes for success to Bro. Hamilton, its representative in Mexico, and through him to the society at home. Also remember me kindly to Dr. Patterson, our beloved superintendent, and to all our co-laborers."

About an hour later he called me, and when I inquired what he wanted he replied: "I only wanted to talk to you a little; but I am too weak and it hurts me to talk." So saying, he turned over and seemed to go to sleep. During the next hour I was busy giving the medicines and applying the remedies prescribed by the physician, and when I had finished he again turned over and took an easy position. At 5:15 o'clock, on Monday morning, January 23, which was only fifteen minutes later, my attention was attracted by an unusual quietness. I sprang to his side and found that his gentle spirit had taken its heavenly flight.

You will pardon me for adding that such Christian fortitude, abiding trust and meek submission as were manifested from first to last by his wife I have never before witnessed. She was quite sick for two days, and when the physician informed her that she, too, had the small-pox she got clean towels, cloths, etc., and placed them at hand. Then she arranged clothes for both to be buried in, and laid her down to die. When she got better she thanked God that she was again able to wait upon her husband.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 24, 1884.
Methodism.—Faith—Works.

Methodism is clearly the outcome of careful Bible reading. Therefore the Wesleys could say they were thrust out "to spread scriptural holiness over these lands."

In reading the word of God critically John Wesley saw that the Church of England was "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," and that the Bible taught doctrines which the Church of England was not teaching. By this reading he saw himself a sinner unsaved. Such was the knowledge of himself unsaved that he realized many hours, and even days, of sore conflict. In this state of mind he left England as a sort of missionary to America. While on the Atlantic Ocean he saw in the lives of the Moravian Christians a practical illustration of the truths he had learned from the Bible. Then he became a pupil of theirs to learn experimental godliness. Returning to England he was "converted" on Wednesday night, "about a quarter before nine," May 21, 1738. Then he felt his "heart strangely warmed," and that he was "saved from the law of sin and death." Having realized salvation from sin and death, and enjoying the love and peace of God in the soul, he became deeply concerned for the salvation of all men. Then "the world was his parish."

Now we see the belief and salvation which John Wesley enjoyed in the faith and works thereof. These may be mentioned in part: First, faith; second, works.

The faith referred to embraces Bible doctrines: 1. The fullness and completeness of redemption. By this is meant that Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man; that he died equally and sufficiently for every man; that not one was left out of the Divine plan of salvation. Upon this foundation-principle he believed.

2. That the gospel was to be preached to every creature as taught by Christ in the commission, saying, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," and that the gospel was "good news" of salvation to every man. This belief thrilled his heart and filled him with a consuming desire "to spread scriptural holiness over all lands."

3. He believed and preached that man became the active and personal beneficiary of this provision of redemption by love by "faith only" in the eternal Son of God. This is "a most wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort."

4. That conversion, or regeneration, was the work of the Holy Ghost, creating us anew in Christ Jesus. This work of the divine Spirit changes us from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, gives a new heart, new spirit and new love and hope, and puts not only a new song in our mouths, but puts the Spirit of God within us.

5. That the Holy Ghost, not only renews, or renovates, us in the spirit of our minds, but bears no testimony to the fact. Thus Methodism taught, as her most distinguished belief, the great Pauline doctrine of the direct witness of the Spirit with our spirits that we are the children of God. The realization of this over-spreading and all-embracing truth has given equal comfort to the learned and unlearned, to the high and low, to the rich and poor, to the old and young, to white and black, in health, in sickness and in death. By this grace and power the "Methodists die well."

In the works of Methodism only part can be now enumerated. These may be called results as well as works of Methodism. Of these the following may be named: 1. The publication of current religious literature. This took shape in the form of tracts. These were cheap, and thereby adapted to the poor. They were scattered broadcast and brought forth abundant fruit. They also took form in the shape of the church magazines and other publications. Thus Methodism, under God, produced this agency of power in the work of the church. Now Christian Advocates in the Methodist Church and similar publications in all the churches characterize the gospel movement of the nineteenth century. Even the Primitive Baptists have their Watchman and Primitive Pathway. So that even this church is drawing benefit out of Methodism. All the churches are benefitted by Methodism.

2. The Bible Society of Great Britain was the fruit of Methodist labor. As early as 1779 the Naval and Military Bible Society was organized by the Wesleyan Methodists. Out of this and other Methodist influences came the British and Foreign Bible Society in 1801. Out of this came the American and Foreign Bible Society, and out of these more than fifty Bible societies have sprung. From these the word of God is being sent into all lands by tons of weight, translated into nearly two hundred and fifty languages and dialects. Thus the Bible societies are helping to carry out John Wesley's mission—"Spread scriptural holiness over these lands."

3. Sunday-schools are usually recognized as the work of one Robert Raikes. However, John Wesley held Sunday-schools in this country forty-five years before the school in Gloucester under Robert Raikes. But even Raikes obtained his idea of the Sunday-school from a member of the Methodist Church—the wife of a local preacher. This was in the year 1781. Now this arm of church power is felt in all lands.

4. Missionary work was the cause of the Wesleys coming over the "broad waters" and preaching, suffering and toiling in Georgia. The same spirit nerved the faith and fired the heart of Dr. Coke. Aided by several warm and true-hearted Irish preachers, and pledging himself for the necessary means, Coke sailed for the East Indies. But on May 3, 1814, he breathed his soul to God and was buried in the deep Indian Sea just after the cloudless sun apparently sank into the deep blue waters, while the ship bell was tolling the soft and solemn tones of farewell. The work, however, went on, and is going on till scriptural holiness covers all lands.

These are but points in the faith and works of our beloved Methodism. "Methodism is Christianity in earnest."

ANGUS DOWLING.
RUMER, ALA., Feb. 25, 1884.

Revive the Class Meeting.

Bishop Parker, in his late article, headed "After a Hundred Years," says: "A spiritual ministry, converted preachers, imbued with the spirit of self-denial, and having an experience to tell as well as a doctrine to expound, is of first importance. And, next to this, we must be careful to keep up those great nurseries of spirituality, the love-feast, the class meeting and family prayer."

We would like to have our Southern Methodists raise millions of money for missions, church extension and education, and we will do what we can to that end; but, as the Bishop puts it in that same article, we are not without "anxious thought" concerning "our church life." In our commendable zeal to forward God's cause, so far as committed to our branch of the Christian Church, there will almost certainly be a tendency to neglect the praying and efforts necessary to the increase of spirituality among us. More and more it is becoming a habit with certain Methodists to be content with hearing an occasional sermon on a bright Sabbath; official members, by their example leading others to do the same, live an entire year without attending the weekly prayer meeting; multitudes of members have never been in a class room, and as to family worship in very many homes, called Christian homes, there is no attempt made in that direction by father or mother.

The means of grace must be used in order to a growth in grace, and none who think upon the subject in the light of God's word and of the experience of his eminent saints will deny that to ignore or neglect them is to surely backslide and forever imperil the soul. Of course, all our ministry from the College of Bishops down to the humblest preacher on the poorest circuit, together with all the truly pious throughout our membership, are devoutly praying and zealously laboring not only for more money for God, but also for more grace for themselves. If, then, this centennial year is to witness any great advance in their spiritual power as a church, the "people called Methodists" must be vastly more in love with the class meeting than has been the case with them during the last few decades of their history. While all the means of grace are for the glory of God and the good of souls, and while all should be diligently used, yet, judging by the late past, there is more danger of the class meeting being neglected than of most anything else belonging to us as a church. We particularly urge its re-establishment in the hearts and usage of Southern Methodists. The experiences given in her class-rooms, as well as her faithful preaching and glorious singing, has had very much to do with the growth of Methodism. "Christianity in earnest," she will not continue to be the mighty power for God she has been if the class meeting is left out of her church life. The peculiar institution is enshrined in her very heart, and to take it from her is not only to rob her of a priceless jewel, but to go far toward accomplishing her destruction. We read of John Wesley that he "visited Bristol repeatedly and formed there the first Methodist class meeting, and, on returning to London, introduced the same improvement into the metropolitan societies." Speaking of this, Mr. Wesley said: "This was the origin of our classes in London, for which I can never sufficiently praise God. The unspeakable usefulness of the institution has ever been more and more manifest."

The editor of the Nashville Advocate, in his work on the class meeting, says: "More than once during my ministerial life have I known church societies strong in numbers almost disintegrate from the temporary loss of a pastor. These people call themselves soldiers of Jesus Christ! They belong to the army of the Lord! A million of such would not conquer a village for Christ in a million of years. Where did they get such a conception of the duties of Christian discipleship? What sort of conversion did they undergo? Where are their Bibles? Who are their religious instructors? The writer served temporarily a Baptist Church in San Francisco, whose members, in the absence of a pastor, kept up during several months all the social meetings of the church without any flagging of zeal or loss of interest. They followed the New Testament, and from it they had learned what were the privileges and duties of the living members of Christ's living church. The right view and the right practice were recovered by Methodists under the lead of John and his associates and successors. The church recovered its lost freedom and regained its lost power. The seal of silence was broken in its assemblies. The living stream of renewed spiritual life broke forth in the desert, and the wilderness blossomed as the rose. It was a resurrection. It was a resurrection of a buried gift, and the living, glowing, growing, rejoicing, witnessing church sprang into life, and New Testament Christianity again walked the earth in its original beauty and wrought its wonders as at the first. The Methodists did not originate the class meeting. They only revived it. It was born with the Christian Church. It was born of the instincts, necessities and aspirations of human nature, hungering for heavenly truth and holy human fellowship. The Methodists gave it a name; but the thing itself was the inevitable revival of an apostolic institution where a mighty work of God had brought back again the essential doctrine, polity and usages of the uncorrupted church of our Lord Jesus Christ. It was not an invention, but the normal outgrowth of a living Christianity. Its elements were in the conditions developed by the great revival, and they crystallized into the form it took by the operation of the law that New Testament Christianity will and must express itself in New Testament forms. The recovery of the primitive spirit brought with it the recovery of the primitive usages of the church of Christ."

Emphatically promotive of the piety of our people, abundantly blessed of God wherever held, making up much of our very successful past as a church, it would be the height of folly not to seek the revival in its early power of this blessed means of grace. This year Methodists should become familiar with the literature of their church, and it is in order to put into their hands Dr. Fitzgerald's book, entitled, "The Class Meeting," and the "Memoir of William Carver," sixty years a class leader in the Wesleyan Methodist connection. If all of us who love the class meeting will this year do our duty by it in attending it, inducing others to attend and circulating such books as we have mentioned, it will greatly enhance the spiritual power of the church and promote the consistent and godly living of the membership. Surely it is worth our constant prayers and best labors to accomplish a result so much to be desired and so sorely needed. Many are to be found among us who, though long members of the church, have never been in a class meeting, and there are also those who are so ignorant of its true nature as to class it with the Roman confession! May the Spirit so baptize us after the olden manner that this God-owned means of grace may again be taken to our hearts and made part and parcel of our church life! The Methodism of the future should eclipse all that Methodism has done in the past, and, if so, the class meeting will be found, as of yore, a prime factor in the working out of our glorious future of spirituality and power.

BOSTON, Feb. 25, 1884.

Another Notice.

Remember, Brethren, the time is at hand when the treasurer must put his annual report in press. Send your collections for foreign missions forward so as to reach him on or before March 25, or this report must go to press with you left out.

H. A. YOUNG, Secy.
NASHVILLE, TENN., March 7, 1884.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.
REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.
REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.
JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

General Minutes of 1883.

We give below a summary of the statistics contained in the general minutes of 1883:

	1882.	1883.	Increase.
Traveling preachers	3,358	3,500	142
Local preachers	5,899	6,100	201
White members	1,100	1,150	50
Indian members	1,100	1,150	50
Colored members	2,200	2,300	100
Female members	2,200	2,300	100
Adults baptized	2,200	2,300	100
Children baptized	2,200	2,300	100
Sunday-school teachers	2,200	2,300	100
Sunday-school scholars	2,200	2,300	100
Collected for missions	2,200	2,300	100

The total increase of preachers and members was at the rate of 3.07 per cent. per annum. This is a slight gain upon the increase of population in the Southern States, the rate of which is 2.90 per cent. per annum compound.

The minutes show the loss of 38 preachers discontinued, 78 located, and 78 died: total loss to the traveling connection, 184. There were admitted on trial, 249; readmitted, 39—total, 288: net increase 94.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1884.

TO CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

Christian workers! pause and listen.
Christ is seeking thee to-day.
Crave thy labor for one moment.
Solemn words he hath to say.

He is standing close beside thee,
And behind his face is hid,
As he gazeth on thy service,
Which methought would make him glad.

Such unwearyed self-sacrifice,
Such unflinching earnest zeal,
Such rich eloquence and pathos,
Turning words that would be heard.

Still the Lord is sadly pining,
Mark! he now doth question thee—
Listen well, his words are precious,
Dost thou work with love to me?

Alas! how often, fellow laborers,
Do we need this question still,
Are we now from pure affection Working out our Savior's will?

If our secret spring of action
Were exposed to mortal view,
Would it bear examination?
Could it be pronounced quite true?

Dear God! conscience sometimes tells us
That the motive power is wrong,
Of what seems our fairest action,
Of what seems our truest song.

Jesus, Savior, O! forgive us,
As with shame we see our faults,
May our love to thee grow stronger,
May our love of self grow less.

O! reveal thyself to plainly,
That our own desires may be
Not to let ourselves be hindered,
In love of pleasing thee.

Sunday-School Lesson.

TAUGHT BY REV. CHRISTIAN LEWIS.

First Quarter—Lesson XI.

SUNDAY, MARCH 10, 1884.—1 THESSALONIANS IV,
1-18; V, 1-2.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"For ye are called to stand fast, and to keep the commandments which ye have heard, that ye may receive the promise of the Father, which is life everlasting."—1 Thessalonians IV, 11.

THE COMING OF THE LORD.

In our lesson this week two events, the most mysterious and appalling, are brought to our view—our going to the Lord—that is, our death—and the coming of the Lord—that is, the judgment. The veil which separates us from the unseen world is for a moment lifted, and we catch a glimpse of its august realities. Our Lord, during his earthly ministry, spoke but few words of the world to come, and Paul speaks again by the word of the same Lord. These two events are so intimately associated for the individual soul that they cannot be separated, "for whether we live, we live unto the Lord, and whether we die, we die unto the Lord;" for this end Christ died and lived again that he might be Lord both of the dead and of the living. The grand object of his death was to acquire absolute Lordship over the whole redeemed race, whether dead or living. The apostle exhorts the Thessalonians against undue sorrow for departed friends. He desired them not to be ignorant concerning their dead friends, to whose bodies—not their souls—death was but a calm and holy sleep, from which the resurrection would awake them to glory. Natural mourning for the dead is not forbidden, but only that which is without faith and without hope—a sorrow which loses sight of belief in the power which raised Christ from the dead, and which can also quicken our mortal bodies. How unseemly for a Christian who in his own experience has witnessed a greater resurrection, to mourn so hopelessly over the bodies of those whom Jesus has laid to sleep in the grave. The removal of this unbelieving ignorance concerning the dead in Christ would remove all undue grief. To mourn without hope is to mourn with faith in a risen Lord. Our hope rests upon our faith, "for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Our God is the author of the resurrection.

Believers are laid to sleep by Jesus, and so will be brought back from sleep with Jesus in his train when he comes; not their disembodied spirits, but their sleeping bodies. The fact of Christ's experience in the grave, when he laid his body down and took it up again, is repeated in each believer. He died and then rose, and so every believer dies and rises with him. But in his case the term death is used but in believers' sleep, because his death has taken for them away the sting from death. The same hand that laid him to sleep shall awake them. He assured them by the word of the Lord a direct revelation to himself, that their departed brethren so far from losing or missing any part of the blessings of the Lord's advent, that those who remain alive to the coming of the Lord shall not anticipate their sleeping brethren in a single joy. The disembodied spirits whose bodies are laid to sleep in Jesus shall respond as quickly and joyfully as the living to the triumphant shout of his approach.

In what contrast is this Christian hope to the "sorrow of others who have no hope"—all the rest of the unbelieving world, without Christ and without hope. The sepulchral inscriptions on their tombs tell us. Whatever dim glimpses of the existence of the soul after death the heathen may have had there was none of the body whatever; for there was only the unrelieved darkness and decay of the tomb. From this joyful view of death the apostle passes to consider the coming of the Lord. The death of the saints and the coming of the Lord were intermingled in his soul as one blessed hope, for while he was ever looking for the coming of the Lord to clothe him with his body from heaven, the peasant while he was joyfully looking to be going to meet his Lord. To the individual this going to be with the Lord is equivalent to the coming of the Lord. True, we know that the chief glory and hope of the church is not to be realized at death. Death affects the mere individual. Then our souls are invisibly and individually with the Lord; but at the coming of the Lord the whole church, with all its members, in soul and body, shall be visibly and collectively with the Lord; and as this is offered in consolation to mourning relatives, the mutual recognition of the saved at Christ's coming is at least implied.

Our Lord, in the Sermon on the Mount, gives us to understand that we will meet him at our death. When requital is made for our souls, and the inexorable messenger comes to conduct the soul to its final account, the first to meet us on the threshold of the eternal world is the Judge, that man whom God appointed to judge the world in righteousness. No man dies alone. The Lord is never more present than in the hour and article of death. Let the dying saints who have been permitted to be intelligent and triumphant witnesses of the separation of their souls and bodies, who died in their senses, with minds and spirits calm as the peace of God, testify as to his presence in that hour. Let the despairing cry and look of horror on the dying sinner's face testify as to who met him at the door as he stepped out this life. Shall not he who died for us be near at hand when he dies? Shall he who tasted death for every man be away when one for whom he died is in the power of death?

It is appointed unto man once to die, and after that the judgment. These two events as to time are separated by a space which none but God knows; but as to individual souls the difference is but that which lies between the announcement of an unalterable verdict and the execution of it. If the sentence of the Judge be one of approval, that is heaven; if it be one of disapproval, that is hell. Oh! that hour; that hour of our death. It may be long years before his coming that you and I shall, from his own mouth, receive our destiny—either the title of an inheritance to a home in heaven, made sure forever, or the sentence of everlasting destruction. One will spring the high noon of heaven in our souls, the other will light the fire of an unending torment, and, condemned or blessed of God, we will wait till Jesus comes and the judgment throne is set, to suffer or rejoice, a curse the heavy weight of which we have already felt, or in a bliss the glory of which we have tried in vain to conceive. The judgment will proceed with awful haste. Every man passing through the portals of death will be weighed along with the Son of man. Jesus in himself constitutes the principle upon which the whole judicial procedure will go on—himself the Judge, the Advocate for defense and Attorney for prosecution, and he the only witness. Every indictment for which requisition for a soul was issued shall be proved up with awful and unerring exactness. The haste of this transaction will be increased by whole platoons of departing criminals who take up their line of march, dismissed and convicted under some first sinner's crime, like Ananias and Sapphira, whose conviction set the precedent under which all the liars of their kind in that vast host go down. How the host melts under this unerring Judge. He will reach you soon. But where are the righteous? Yonder, caught up with the Lord in the air.

From Lexington.

RESTORING THE CLASS MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: On yesterday about twenty-five persons assembled at the Methodist Church in Lexington, Miss., at three o'clock P. M., for class meeting. Such a meeting had not been held here before for years. Its novelty may have drawn a few young persons to the church, but the majority came to carry home a blessing. A few words from the writer partially explained the object of the meeting, and an opportunity was given to others to express their religious feelings and tell how their souls prospered. Several rose up one by one and testified to the goodness and mercy of God, but acknowledged their neglect of duty and coldness of religious feeling. Then the class leader and I went around and talked to every one, and there was a general acknowledgment of coldness and indifference to religious duties. Some few felt that they were growing in grace—better Christians now than ever before. But why should there be so much coldness? Why so much indifference? Why so frequent neglect of duty? In the opinion of this writer in most cases it arises from a lack of home religion. Too frequently the home circle is left without any special religious instruction, and its inmates become negligent, careless and cold. The class meeting proposes to supply a great and long-felt want. There are many reasons why the class meeting should be restored to its former place of usefulness and popularity. First, by relating the struggles and triumphs of the Christian life, the means by which to let in the light, will be suggested to the down-hearted, the troubled or doubtful. The similarity of our trials, difficulties and temptations, and the best means to overcome them, furnish a suitable programme for the service. Second, We obey the command of our Saviour to confess him before men. The warmth, the fervor, the glow of the class meeting furnish help to the Christian for every duty. The load is lifted, the cloud dispelled, the storm hushed, the sea calmed. But let us turn away from this scene to those who do not visit the class meeting. Our larger boys very conspicuously stay away from this service. The majority of our boys do not attend any service in the day, and frequently none at night. Where are the boys who used to sit on these benches and learn of Jesus? Their parents and younger brothers are here. The cause and cure of this prevalent disease is enough to engage the attention of any philosopher. Would it not be a good idea for the parents to invite and urge them to attend the Sunday-school and class meeting, to take part in the singing, and to impress upon them the beauty of godliness? Our boys get grown too quick. A true boy never gets too big or too old, to be talked to about his soul and saying his prayers by his mother. Let us revive the class meeting, and work, with the co-operation of the parents, to save the big boys.

T. W. LEWIS.

MARCH 3, 1884.

Letter from Caseyville Parsonage.

MR. EDITOR: I know you will excuse this obtrusion when you remember that this is our Centenary of Methodism, and when I tell you that this is also the beginning of housekeeping with me. As two such important events transpire in the same year, I have a strong propensity for speaking. I would just like to tell you about the awful trip we had coming to the parsonage, and how nicely and comfortably we are domiciled here.

After several weeks of weary waiting we have at last reached our parsonage on Scotland circuit. The bad weather detained us for some time, but that time was used by our dear people in furnishing the parsonage for us. What a great "invention" a parsonage is, anyway! The ladies were ready to receive us the day we expected to arrive, but we regret very much that unavoidable circumstances prevented our getting here on that day. We reached the home of one of our oldest members on Monday evening, January 27, who, on the following morning, accompanied us to the parsonage with a buggy loaded down with "good things." After a tiresome trip of two days' steady riding through mud, water and quicksand, often retarded by the rugged hills and mud holes, whose ugly appearance was only exceeded by their fearful depths, we reached our home in safety. Truly, we came up through great trials and tribulations. My heart almost failed me several times, but I thought each revolution of the wheels takes us nearer our destination. How thankful we were, on reaching here, to find everything in readiness for us. Our neighbors and friends from different parts of the circuit have vied with each other in their attentions to us, and I feel that this will be a good year for us. This is our third year on this work, but we can not tell whether another year will find us so pleasantly situated or not. We are desirous of doing much for our dear Lord this year, more than ever before. Our churches are prospering, and we feel that God is with our people. To-day I have literally "devoured" the last number of our own ADVOCATE, and your excellent judgment was exhibited in the selection of articles in the issue of the fourteenth instant. I was especially struck with the article of F. R. H., and your leader on "The Duties of a Preacher to His Predecessor." May the Lord abundantly bless you in your work this year. Hope all my sisters in the ministry are as happily situated as Yours respectfully,

KATIE L. JONES.

CASEYVILLE, MISS., FEB. 21, 1884.

From the Work.

OAK GROVE AND MACONA CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: After spending a few days with loved ones, on our return from Conference, we committed them to the care of the good Lord, and left for our work assigned to us by the Conference. Like Abraham we went, not knowing a soul on our new field of labor, had no horse, no money, nor any prospect for either six days before we left home, but we were sent here, and here we were coming if we had to adopt the apostolic plan of itinerating on foot. But unexpectedly a brother minister loaned us his horse and five or six dollars in cash, and we mounted and started. So here we are on our first circuit as an itinerant Methodist preacher. I sent out and let the people know I was here and would preach the following Sunday. The day came, and a number came to hear and see the new preacher, and, sir, all gave us such a hearty welcome that we felt no longer like we were all alone and no friends. All in the church and out gave me a pressing invitation to make their houses my home. Well, our brother's horse must go to him; so here was another knot; but it was soon untied by a good brother, who gave us a horse to ride. The stewards have secured a home for my family, and so soon as I can get them across the water we will be all right side up for this year, as the people say that we shall have something to eat as well. We have preached three times to attentive congregations, and at every place the people have given us a warm reception. I am pleased with this people. They seem to hold the preacher in esteem, and are glad for him to visit them, which I find has been neglected somehow on this work; that is, pastoral visiting. There is a need of good churches here on this work, but we hope to report at least one new church this year built by this circuit. There are about three hundred members on the church books on this circuit. The pastor will be supported, and I think all claims from the Conference will be promptly met. There never has been much of a report from this circuit for foreign missions, but I do not think the people are to blame for it, as they are a liberal people. There are some Baptists here, but believe they are all good Christian people, and will be a help to our church as well as their own. There are a goodly number of the Christadelphians above here. The greater part of my people are an intelligent, enterprising people, out of debt and able to live. So, on the whole, I am greatly encouraged to go forward and do all I can in my feeble way for the Master. I expect to have every member of my charge to take the ADVOCATE this year so soon as I can see them all. May God give the preacher wisdom and understanding to go in and out before this people, and may the time soon come when every house shall be a house of prayer and every heart a fit temple for the indwelling of his holy Spirit, is the prayer of your poor writer.

GEORGE F. HILL, P. C.

FEBRUARY 21, 1884.

ENTERPRISE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Perhaps a note from the field of Enterprise may not be uninteresting to the many who rejoice to hear of good deeds and pleasant homes. The latter we have been most cordially welcomed and kindly cared for. The good works our active members are promptly performing. Notwithstanding the bad weather we had for a month, and that two months of the year has scarcely passed, our church has expended $400 in improvements on church and parsonage, and are planning others. We have good congregations, and have received seven members during the past month. We have good prayer meetings, a large Sabbath-school, which is increasing in interest and in numbers. And last, though by no means the least, we have organized a Juvenile Missionary Society with about forty members. On last Sabbath we held the first meeting, which was one of great interest to us. A bright, manly little boy recited a missionary poem with fine effect, and four little girls a dialogue. Their bright, eager faces, as they engaged in this work of love, were very attractive. We have organized a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, which the ladies enter into with zeal worthy the cause. A more intelligent, refined and kind people we have not met. We feel that the "lines have fallen to us in pleasant places," and are greatly encouraged in our work and hopeful of its future.

S. G. W.

RAYVILLE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: At the last session of the Louisiana Conference we were moved more than half across the State. Taking our appointment as from the Lord, we came directly to our new field of labor. Like many an itinerant preacher, we reached our new home penniless, but, thank God, not friendless.

The good people on the Rayville circuit received us kindly, and already we are beginning to feel at home among them.

The ladies at Girard, where the parsonage is situated, had everything ready for our reception, and gave us a hearty welcome. They are doing all they can to administer to us in temporal things. May the Lord help me to administer to their spiritual wants. We are now threatened by the floods of the Father of Waters to be overflooded. The people are hoping the levees will be able to roll back the destructive tide. I am trying to persuade them "it is better to trust the Lord than to put confidence in princes." Pray for us, and that the Lord may roll back the flood-tide of sin from our midst, and the gospel may prove the power of God unto salvation on the Rayville circuit this centennial year.

C. T. MUNDHOLLAND, P. C.

GIRARD, LA., FEB. 27, 1884.

Marriages.

WALKER-HART.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mansfield, La., February 21, 1884, by Rev. Robert J. Hart, Mr. David Walker, of St. Mary parish, La., to Miss Fannie Hart, of Mansfield.

DALY-MORGAN.—At the residence of the bride's father, February 2, 1884, by Rev. H. O. White, Mr. Oliver P. Daly, of Opelousas, La., to Miss Emma E. Morgan, of East Baton Rouge, La. Officiated by Rev. J. H. Brown.

PRICE-HOWMAN.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mrs. A. T. Davidson, New Orleans, by Rev. S. H. Werlein, Mr. L. P. Price, of Galveston, Texas, to Miss Julia Bowman.

MCKINNEY-GRADY.—At the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. E. Grady, January 21, 1884, by Rev. J. H. Brooks, Mr. N. David McKinney to Miss Lula Grady, of Tate county, Miss.

Obituaries.

BRITT.—MRS. SARIE BRITT, wife of P. M. Britt, and daughter of Alexander McClanahan and Emmeline Collins, was born at Millmore, Bossier parish, La., August 2, 1854, and died at her home, at Filimore, January 22, 1884. She was married to Mr. Britt, December 18, 1878. God blessed them in giving them great spiritual prosperity wherever their lot was cast. Her Cal-ever lived, and whose obituary appeared in this paper, and now we are called on to pay a tribute to the memory of her only sister. The painful separation was not long. Only a little while, and they met "in the home, the place of God"—met to part no more, and meet with other loved ones who watch for her. O! blessed meeting, as they together walk the golden streets and behold forever the face of him who said, "In my Father's house there are many mansions."

Mrs. Britt's death was no great surprise. Though always delicate, she had been in declining health for about a year, and when on a visit to the home of the writer last summer she spoke as if she thought her days were numbered; but she always spoke of death calmly and composedly, declaring that her trust was firm in him who could not die. Little did we think when she bade us adieu—each promising to visit the other again at an early date—that the future holds in store for us! But, hard as it is for us to realize that she has gone from us, yet we would not have her back. We would not disturb that peace, full rest that is promised to the good; we would not call her from "those fields of light away on the other shore." She joined the Methodist Church, in 1873, under the ministry of Rev. John A. Millor. She leaves mother, father, husband, two children and three brothers, and a great many relatives and friends; but they all, though her form is empty, life has been in the church militant, she is now numbered among the redeemed in the church triumphant.

S. HATTIE COLLINS.

WALDEN.—Died, near Evergreen, La., January 15, 1884, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. A. D. Barron, from a stroke of paralysis, Mrs. REBECCA WALDEN, aged seventy-eight years. Her maiden name was Rebecca Bordeaux, and she was born in Brunswick county, N. C., September 24, 1805. She united herself with the Methodist Episcopal Church when about twelve years of age, and was a devoted servant of the Lord from then to the day of her death. She was married, February 1, 1821, to Malcolm Burr, with whom she lived happily for about thirty years. In 1850 she was left a widow. She then moved to Mississippi, settled in Copiah county with her children, and raised a highly respected family. She lived a widow about fifteen years, and then married Samuel Walden, who preceded her in death by several years. The last few years of her life were spent with her daughter, Mrs. E. A. Fleming, in Crystal Springs, Miss. A few months ago she came over to Louisiana to see the rest of her children, as her heart's desire seemed to be to see them. That end being accomplished, she was ready to go. Accordingly, she was twenty-five hours after seeing the last one she yielded up the ghost, breathing her last peacefully. She died triumphant over hell and the grave, as if to say: Death, where is thy sting? Grave, where is thy victory?

She was a loving companion, a kind and devoted mother, and a zealous Christian through life. She leaves two sons, two daughters and a host of grand and great-grandchildren, also many warm friends, to mourn her death.

Crystal Springs Meteor, New York Sun and Wilmington Journal please copy.

BURWELL.—MRS. ELIZABETH B. BURWELL was born in Kentucky, Va., March 8, 1818, and died in Landeater county, Miss., February 2, 1884. At the age of eighteen she was married to Henry T. Walshaw, who lived but a few years, leaving her with two little boys. In November, 1841, she was united in marriage to Abram L. Burwell, from which union there were seven children born—two of whom preceded their mother to the world beyond.

Our departed sister became a member of the Methodist Church when she was thirteen years of age, and, while she could not recollect when she was converted, she knew that she was a Christian and loved the Lord. She never doubted that she was a child of God. Her daughter says, in a note to the writer, "She was always noted for her piety," and "on her last bed of sickness exhorted each of her children to meet her in heaven." Her children rise up and call her blessed. To say that up and call her blessed, a kind, tender, loving wife and mother had passed away would not be enough to say. She was a woman felt for good not only in these relations in life, but by all who were associated with her. She was loved by her neighbors, who testified to her worth by their sorrowful presence when she was buried to the grave.

The church, too, has lost a true, tried and valuable member. In her dark days Sister Burwell was one among a few to stand by the church, and by her presence and prayers aided in the cause of her loved Lord and Master. But her place is now vacant in the family circle, in the world and the church, and who has ceased to labor, suffer and toil, and rest. Sweet rest!

H. D. NORWORTHY.

GUICE.—Died, February 5, 1884, on the Ouachita river, of pneumonia, B. C. S. GUICE, aged seventy-five years, two months and fourteen days. The subject of the above notice was born in Franklin county, Miss., November 22, 1809. He was the oldest son of Daniel and Dehla Guice. He was married to Miss Elizabeth McEharn, December 2, 1832, who died in 1850. He was again married, to Miss Eve Crowder, who still remains behind. He moved from Mississippi to Louisiana, in which State he resided until his death. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1846, and continued a consistent member of the same until the Master called him up higher. He was a good and loving husband, a kind father, a faithful friend, and pleasant in all the relations of life. At the beginning of the war he was in easy and prosperous circumstances, but, being on the side of the South, he lost all. His hand was always open to the poor, the sick and the distressed, and he can be truly said of him that he "laid the latch hung on the outside. He was sick only six days; was conscious most of the time to the last, and sung and prayed up to the end, and died in triumph, saying: "Lord, thy will be done."

W. W. N.

CALHOUN.—LAURA ANN CALHOUN, wife of Rev. C. W. Calhoun, of the Mississippi Conference, was born April 20, 1817, and died January 22, 1884. She was taught to love God in early life. She joined the church, in 1838, under the ministry of Rev. C. W. Carter, and was soon after happily converted; and her life from this time on was that of most devoted and consecrated Christian. She was happily married to Rev. C. W. Calhoun, September 25, 1838. God blessed them in giving them great spiritual prosperity wherever their lot was cast. Her Calhoun died last year in the full triumph of faith.

Soon after Sister Calhoun was taken with the dreadful disease, consumption, and, naturally, her decline was very rapid. She leaves six helpless children. May God open up some way by which they might be taken care of! I visited Sister Calhoun about two weeks before she died. She was strong in faith and seemed to be only waiting by the river. Just before she breathed her last she asked that some one sing, "Jesus, lover of my soul." This being done, she exclaimed, "Almost home almost home!" and thus she went sleeping through the gates of the new Jerusalem.

J. S. LOVETT.

LEWIS.—MISS SARIE A. LEWIS, daughter of Rev. J. E. and Sarah Lewis, was born in Steward county, Ga., February 23, 1856, and died in Rankin county, Miss., January 29, 1884, in the twenty-eighth year of her age. Her parents moved to Leuko county, Miss., in 1867, where, in 1869, Sarie was converted, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She, with her parents, removed to Rankin county, Miss., in 1878. Sister Sarie was a kind and affectionate child, sister and friend. More, she was a devoted Christian. She suffered long and severely, but without murmuring or complaint. She rested in the paradise of God. Look up through tears and sorrows, loved parents, brothers and sisters; the separation will not be long.

R. A. SIMLEY.

BRANDON.—Died, February 1, 1884, with meningitis, near Port Vincent, La., PELLIE GATES, wife of Dabridge Brandon, and daughter of James and Louisa F. Gates (deceased).

Death has visited our midst again, taken from our presence the beloved wife, sister and friend. A bride scarcely three weeks when her pure spirit was called to our Father's home. He knows what is best for us all. Her beautiful life evinced the true nobility of her soul, and we are assured that "the pure in heart shall see God." Dear lone brother, have comfort, and bereaved husband, calm your grief, for she believed one is safely gathered into the eternal home, where all is love and peace.

FEELDER.—EMMA, daughter of Emma K. and Sarah Feelder, was born May 2, 1838, and died with meningitis, near Port Vincent, La., January 26, 1884. It is sad to consign one so young and full of promise to the grave. Closed the short, sweet life that never knew sorrow! Brought up religiously, she made her profession of faith when but a child. She regularly attended the Sunday-school, and in the morning home, the other at Port Vincent. Her happy, cheerful face will be missed among us. The amiable qualities she possessed endeared her to all. She is taken in her innocence and love to the heavenly home where sin and sorrow can not enter.

HER TEACHER.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

You have no doubt found it difficult to find a satisfactory soap. This is because so many contain free fatty matter or caustic alkali, giving them a greasy, acid or irritating character. No such experience can occur with the Ivory Soap, its purity (99 1/4% pure) vouches for that.

PHOTOGRAPHS.

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WASHBURNS

Photographic Parlors

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal hotel and almost directly opposite the City Square.

You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY.

There will be no obligation whatever.

We make every kind of portrait known to art, from the miniature for the pocket to the full size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon or

Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged to the likeness faithfully preserved.

LIVERPOOL

AND LONDON

AND GLOBE

INSURANCE COMPANY.

Office, Cor. Carondelet and Gravier Streets.

DIRECTORS IN NEW ORLEANS.

J. F. SCHROEDER, Chairman.

Newton Tucker, A. Delvalle, H. Delvalle, W. Delvalle.

Assets in the United States, $1,000,000.

Surplus over all liabilities, $1,000,000.

HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.

JULIE B. BODD, Assistant Resident Secretary.

CLARENCE F. LOW, Deputy Asst. Resident Secretary.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1884.

THE WAY.

BY SIDNEY D. LAW.

Father, thou leddest by a darkness way
The children of thy love;
"A way they know not," tho' it leads to-day,
And to thy home above—
A way best with trials, swept with storms,
And with the blinding tears;
Tangled with thorns, haunted by fearful forms
Of woe and doubt and fears.
But O, dear Lord, may I but always know
Thou art not ever near,
Sweet and patient thro' the gloom I'll go,
And smile at doubt and fear.
Help me, O help me, to receive thy word:
And in thy love to trust;
Assured, dear Jesus, thou, my Guide, my Lord,
Art nearer, true and just.
Thou wouldst not choose for me a path too rough,
A path that would not tread;
No! let me hush my murmurs—'tis enough
That thy dear feet have led!

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Mollie L. Phillips, wife of Rev. U. B. Phillips, pastor of the Methodist Church at Palestine, Texas, departed this life on the twenty-ninth day of January, 1884. She was the daughter of W. B. and Rachael Graves, and was born in Harrison county, Texas, on the twenty-sixth day of January, 1850. While she was an infant her mother died, and at the age of seven years she became the adopted daughter of Rev. S. W. and Mrs. M. E. Etheridge, of Monroe county, Ala. She was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in July, 1873. On the twenty-sixth day November, 1875, she was married to Rev. U. B. Phillips, and since that time she has been regularly in the itinerancy—the faithful Christian wife of a Methodist minister. She accompanied her husband in his journeyings through the bounds of the Alabama, Mississippi and East Texas Conferences, sometimes into missionary fields and upon hard circuits, as well as into pleasant stations.

Such is the brief outline of some of the principal events in the life of a gifted woman; but the labors which she performed, and the relations which she bore to the church and the traveling ministry, demands a more extended notice of her life and death. It was my privilege to know her well; and I am glad of the opportunity which her dying request affords me, to bear some humble tribute to her pure life and her Christian virtues.

She performed well the duties devolving upon her as the wife of a traveling Methodist preacher; and these duties, the trials and heart-burnings, are often unknown to the world. No word of complaint ever escaped her lips as to the particular field of labor, to which her husband was assigned; but with a deep piety, an earnest devotion to the church, and a singleness of purpose, she encouraged him to press onward diligently in the life and work he had chosen.

How often has the proud spirit of a Methodist preacher, when tempted to rebel at an unsatisfactory appointment, been chastened and subdued by the loving smile and gentle word of encouragement from his wife? Sister Phillips was true to the responsibilities of her position, and under all circumstances she threw around the work assigned to her husband that earnest encouragement and assistance so essential to the efficient prosecution of his ministerial labors. She was a woman of fine mental endowments and excellent musical attainments, coupled with a sweet simplicity of manners, which endeared her to the people among whom she lived. The announcement of her death will produce heartfelt sorrow in many Methodist families in Alabama, Mississippi and Texas.

She was the leader of the choir at Palestine station, and did much to improve the service of song there and elsewhere. She met the choir regularly once a week for practice, and at one of these meetings, on the first Thursday night in May, 1883, she contracted the disease which finally involved her lungs and throat and culminated in her death. She was confined to her room many months, and that voice which had so often stirred our hearts with sweetest song was hushed to a whisper for three months before her death. During all these months of pain and suffering she exhibited a very high degree of patient submission to the will of God. We remember the pure life of this gentle, sweet spirited woman with great pleasure, but over linger with a higher rapture upon the recollection of her triumphant death. To a young and gifted woman, surrounded by all the endowments of home and loved ones, and a large circle of friends, life is indeed sweet. Such was her position in life, and for many months after she was taken ill. She looked hopefully forward to the day of her recovery. None but those who have experienced it can tell the anguish a man feels, under such circumstances, when duty impels him to announce to the wife of his bosom that she can not recover. This sad announcement was made to her several weeks before she died. She received it, not with terror, but with calm, and without a tremor. She remarked: "To live is Christ; to die is gain."

During the remainder of her days she talked about her death with as much composure as though the exchange of worlds was but the passing from one room of a house into another. After all it was to her but a passage from the church militant below to the church triumphant above.

She was a close student of the Bible. She was taught to read it religiously in her childhood, and it was the last book upon which her eyes rested.

She read it for the last time the Sabbath before she died, and marked with pencil many precious passages of Psalm 119. What hallowed memories cluster around the deathbed scenes and dying words of our sainted dead! And who dare measure the bonds of their influence? Through those memories the spirit of God often moves us to strive for a higher and holier plane of Christian experience. None who witnessed the expiring flame of this good woman's life will ever forget the bright evidences she gave of a blessed immortality after death.

The loss of voice to Sister Phillips was a great deprivation. Two days before she died she called her husband to her bedside, and whispered: "It will not be long before my immortal spirit will soar far beyond the burning sun and shining stars, then I will suffer no more, and my lost voice will be restored." At her request he then sang a hymn, not now in print, called the "Eternal Home," and under the sweet influence of the song and the sentiment, and the more ecstatic power of the holy Spirit, she became very happy, and said: "Oh! I would shout, but I am now too weak; but very soon I shall have celestial strength." She then told Bro. Phillips that he must sing this same song to her when she was dying. This was done, and she frequently responded to the sentiment, and clapped her hands with joy. She also told him to watch her closely while she was dying, for said she: "When my right foot is planted firmly upon the other shore, and my left foot leaves the boat that carries me over, I will wave back to you a signal with my hands." Two days afterwards, when she was dying, he reminded her of her promise to give him a signal. She remembered it, and told him to watch her closely. Ten minutes before she breathed her last she raised her emaciated hands, and three waved them to the circle of weeping friends who stood around her bedside and whispered the dying words: "Farewell, all; I am there!"

God, in his wisdom, has closed our eyes at this point, and hid from our gaze the glories which opened to the enraptured vision of this dying Christian sister; but I imagine that the resplendent beauties, which she saw when her foot was firmly planted upon the beautiful shore, far exceeded all the glories which mortal eyes ever beheld.

She sent dying messages of love to friends far away, and to the members of the East Texas Conference she sent this message: "Tell my brethren and sisters 'all hail and farewell,' tell them that I loved them, and to labor on and afterwards reward will come." Precious messages! Precious legacy!

Her life was as pure and spotless as her death was glorious and triumphant! Ordinarily, the strongest man contemplates death with a shudder. The hero whose deeds of daring and renown have won the admiration of the world, and who, amid the wild furor and excitement of the battlefield, has often fearlessly exposed his life, will start back in terror when brought singly and alone to face the grim monster, death. There is a heroism that rises far above man, physical courage; and it was gloriously illustrated in the death of this gentle, timid Christian woman who, amid the throes of death, could calmly wave her hands to her loved ones as a preconcerted signal of victory, and whisper words of triumph from the very mouth of the tomb.

The will of God has been accomplished. Earth has lost one of its purest and best women. Bro. Phillips is sadly bereft; his beloved wife is no more. Words are meaningless when employed to bring consolation, while the memory of the loved dead wife is so freshly engraved upon the heart. We can not restore her; it is useless to repine; we can but remind him of her pure character and bear tribute to her priceless virtues. We bid him press on nobly in life, fight the good fight of faith, trust in God. To him she was a guiding star, a loving companion, a noble wife. May the memories of her pure life, her exalted character, and her triumphant death, sweetly linger along his pathway, cheer him still in his ministry and nerve him with renewed energy to press onward in his labors; and may the reflection of the light which she shed upon his life guide him forward in the path of ministerial duty and direct him at last to a reunion with her in that land where farewell words are spoken never more, where lost voices will be fully restored, and where God, who moves in a mysterious way, will plainly interpret those providences which so often fall like a dark cloud along our pathway here and teach us more fully to comprehend the force of that declaration: "God doeth all things well."

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev. Geo. Shaeffer.

(Continued.)

December 14, 1875, I have lived to see the fourth quarterly meeting for this year, which we held yesterday at Mohegan. Our Conference year will soon close, and its labors and triumphs be wound up for eternity.

have great reason to be thankful to God that my health and that of my family have been preserved, generally, during the year. I have not lost an appointment, by sickness, and have been much blessed of the Lord temporally and spiritually.

"We have had some refreshing seasons of revival, and a goodly number have been added to the church. I feel grateful to God for all his mercies and blessings to me and the people of my charge. I feel that we are a highly favored people, we have peace and plenty, while other nations are suffering through scarcity and threatened with famine. I have often felt that the citizens of the United States are the most heaven favored people on earth; blessed with a free and enlightened government, a rich and productive soil, a salubrious climate, the blessings of wealth and education not monopolized by a few, but diffused among the many, the gospel in its greatest purity, disseminated through every city, town, hamlet and neighborhood, at peace with all nations and prospering beyond measure. How grateful should we be to the great Dispenser of all good. Anthems of praise should ascend from every family altar, and every heart should bound with love and gratitude to God. I do thank God for all his mercies—I feel that he is good and worthy to be praised by all creatures in all places of his dominion.

"As regards my soul, notwithstanding I feel a spirit of gratitude and love to God, yet there is a lack of spirituality about me, and a great deal of unbelief, not enough of Christ in my heart. I am not sufficiently devoted, my prayers are too formal. I feel a backwardness to duty, especially prayer and fasting, a too great desire of ease, and self-indulgence, a shrinking from the cross, seeking happiness too much in the creature, and too little in the Creator. I feel that I need more religion, and sincerely desire it. Lord, help me to seek more diligently; and may Christ dwell in my heart, by faith, continually.

"I find abuses in the church, which I am trying to correct. I am frequently pained and mortified at the inconsistencies of professors of religion and their grievous and shameful falls. But these things do not, at all, lessen my confidence in religion, or dispose me to forsake the cause of my divine Master. May the language of my heart ever be: 'Let others do as they will, as for me and my house we will serve the Lord.'"

"December 31: This is the last day of the year 1884, and calls for gratitude to God, who has prolonged my days and preserved my life and health through another various year. I am now at Cookeville on my circuit, and have to preach to-day; and I rejoice that the close of the year finds me in the harness, and at my post, and without any wavering in my purpose to live for God and labor in his vineyard.

"I feel that I am an unprofitable servant, a poor Christian, and a very unfaithful minister; but I desire to love God with all my heart and serve him all my days. May his grace sustain me. I feel great anxiety for my children as they grow up and begin to form character. I want them all to be pious Christians and useful members of society. I dread the influence of evil examples, seconded by a depraved nature. God, forbid that I should raise a wicked child; rather let them be taken away in their infancy. Lord, help me to train up my children for thee, and save them from sin and the power of adversity."

"January 15, 1886: I have entered upon the duties and labors of a new year, and feel like living for God and devoting all my time to his service. I feel happy in the Lord, and can praise him for all that is to come. Glory be to his holy name forever! God is worthy to be praised by all creatures in all places of his dominion, and I will praise him with joyful lips. I will call upon all that is within me to rejoice and bless his name. 'O, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men.'"

"I feel like conforming my life to the disciplinary standard of our church which I believe to be well calculated to promote holiness and usefulness, and these are my objects in this world. May the Lord help me to be a Bible Christian and an apostolic minister."

The Annual Conference met in Mobile, February 25, 1886. Bishop Andrew arrived on the second day of the session. There was a large attendance of ministers, both local and traveling. I heard Rev. Dr. Wightman preach on the night of the twenty-seventh a very impressive sermon from "And that man perished not alone in his iniquity." It was well calculated to awaken sinners in view of their responsibility for the influence they exert on the destinies of their fellows. We had a very harmonious session. We elected delegates to the first General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. They were Dr. J. Hamilton, Jr., Boring, Rev. E. V. Levert, Eliza Callaway, Thomas O. Summers, G. Garret and Thomas H. Capers.

I was appointed to the charge of a colored mission on the plantations west of Columbus, which I was to organize. March 26, I wrote in my journal as follows: "I commenced operations last Sabbath on my colored mission by preaching to a collection of blacks and catechizing them orally from Capers' Catechism. In the afternoon I collected about twenty black children from seven to sixteen years of age and catechized them. They seem quite interested, and manifested considerable intelligence. I am much interested in this work, and hope I may be useful to the colored people. I find the masters begin to feel interested in having their people instructed, and I hope this interesting field will be more extensively occupied by the ministers of the gospel. I think it is peculiarly the field of the Methodist itinerancy, and we may now, with great propriety, say, 'A great door and effectual is opened unto us,' though there are some adversaries."

"I trust I shall do more good this year than ever before, and get my own soul more benefited. I receive my appointment more especially from the Lord, this year, than usual, and believe he will be with me. I feel very sensibly my need of a deeper work of grace. I want more humility and self-abasement. I am disposed to think more highly of myself than I ought, and to mind high things. Lord, help me, keep me humble. May I constantly look to Jesus as my pattern, and both imitate and follow him."

"I do not live in the enjoyment of the witness of sanctification. I feel that I am the Lord's; wholly the Lord's; but I have not the fullness of the blessing of the gospel. I think pride is the cause of my want of the full and free intercourse of the Spirit. O, for perfect humility, perfect love, perfect faith, perfect holiness!"

Paine Institute.

In the year 1870, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, organized her colored members who had adhered to her through the vicissitudes of the times into the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America. This church, composed of the most conservative elements among the colored people, has had a good degree of success, but has been hindered for lack of facilities whereby to educate its preachers, so as they would be able to preach the gospel clearly and forcibly. In 1875, through their representatives at the General Conference in Atlanta, they asked us to help them to overcome this difficulty. At that time we did not feel that we were able to respond to the appeal. Again, at the Nashville General Conference, the request was repeated, and our Bishops said in the Episcopal address:

"The Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, organized by us a decade ago at the request of the remnant of our colored membership, has maintained its integrity and made some progress. They are in great need of facilities for providing themselves with suitable pastors and teachers of their own race. Whatever assistance we can render them, in this respect especially, will be well bestowed, and we invite to this subject your favorable consideration."

Pursuant of this recommendation, the General Conference adopted with great unanimity the following resolutions: "Resolved, That our Bishops be authorized and requested to appoint in consultation with the Bishops of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, a preacher or layman of our church, properly qualified for the work, who shall be a Commissioner of Education in aid of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, whose duty it shall be to solicit subscriptions, contributions, donations and bequests from whatever source he may find accessible, for the purpose of creating an educational fund for the benefit of said Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America."

"Resolved, That our Bishops be also authorized and requested to appoint three members of our church, who, together with the Commissioner of Education and three members of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, to be appointed by the Bishops, shall constitute a Board of Trustees, for the custody and control of this educational fund, when it shall have been raised."

In keeping with this action the Paine Institute has been begun—but in a hired house. The trustees desire to secure at once permanent quarters for it. To do so they have sought to reduce the expenses to the minimum, and increase through some economical method of collection the income of the Institution. At their recent meeting they determined to ask the church to give the institution an amount equal to three cents per member. This amount will procure grounds and buildings, and put the institution in position to secure help from other sources for its future maintenance. If the Commissioner of Education was charged with collecting this amount, it would be necessary to pay his salary and traveling expenses, which could reduce the amount received for the Institute. To ask the preachers in charge to collect it was adjudged not wise, seeing they have so many collections already. It was determined therefore to ask the presiding elders to undertake to raise an amount equal to three cents per member. Their superior judgment and discretion, and the fact that in the territory occupied by a district, there are always a number of broad-minded men to whom to appeal, are reasons why it was thought the presiding elders could, without great inconvenience, do this work. The Board leaves it to the wisdom of each brother to raise the amount by public or private appeal as he may judge best, and only asks that it be done early in the year.

Forward collections to Rev. J. E. Evans, D. D., Educational Commissioner, Macon, Ga. By order of the Board of Trustees, J. E. EVANS, Chairman.

Our Young People.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

LIFE.

Written on the death of Anna, eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Terry, born November 1, 1881, and died February 13, 1884.

BY M. M. L.

I saw a bud whose blushing cheek
Had graced the morning hour;
But when I came the bloom to seek,
Some hand had call'd the flower.
A headlong rainbow, bright and fair,
Glowed in the eastern sky
I look'd again, it was not there,
And sigh'd that aught so fair should die.

Next, child in beauty lovelier still—
A father's pride, a mother's joy
All that a parent's heart could will Appeared a cherub-boy.
Two little lives—lovely child:
With spirit light and free
His prattling voice and laughing laugh
Rang out in childish glee.

An hour passed, I looked again
An angel from the skies
That bore the spirit of the child
To live in paradise.
Like all that's best and brightest,
This lovely one was given To us the least from earth away
To purr joys in heaven.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl twelve years old. I love to read the child's corner in your good paper. I do love Uncle Jones, and think, maybe, I will know him up in heaven if ever I am good enough to get there. My papa is a preacher, and has to move often, which is very trying to his children, especially to me, as I am the oldest and have to help take care of the other four who are small. We started from our old home the last days of January. The road was very muddy and bad; but with a sturdy team we were fortunate enough to make our way to Alexandria, where we waited until nearly midnight. I know it would have made you feel sorry to see us sleepy, hurried up and tumbled into the bus. The little ones did not fret much, though the ride in the bus made us all so sick. We did not wait long until the iron horse came snorting down beside the depot; yet some of the least ones had fallen asleep again. Some good man helped papa with the baggage while we all scrambled in with mamma and the baby. Then we came rumbling down to Bunkie, and went to an unfinished hotel for the balance of the night. Next day we went to the house that we were to live in. A family had just left it, with rows of carpet micks all over the floor and dust and dirt which must be removed. Well, we were a little drowsy, and mamma had a very sore finger—the nail growing off; yet with all hands that could we got nearly straight that day, or, at least, so tired that we slept well that night. Well, we have got nearly straight; but the rent is so high, and other inconveniences have caused the stewards to talk of moving us again, oh, how I do wish this and all other children had good, comfortable parsonages on them! I did not tell you how sick we were, and I do not know but my moving would have been over but for the good nursing of my dear mamma and Mr. Allen, one of our neighbors. We have many good, kind people living here. I am going to try to get the people to build a good home for the preacher's tired and weary family, so when they come they will not have to work themselves sick at the start.

Your little friend,
N. VIRGINIA WHITLEY.

BUNKIE, LA., Feb. 25, 1884.

Mr. Editor: As I have not written to your good paper in a good while, I thought I would write now, as I want to answer some of the questions that the little cousins asked. The answer to Willie H. Dove's question is, Psalms cxvi, 14. The answer to Joseph E. Norwood's question is found in Jeremiah xxxi, 29. The answer to Milton C. Holt's question is found in Exodus xxxviii, 2. The answer to Katie Crum's question is found in Revelation xlii, 7. The answer to one of Lillian L. Beasley's questions is found in Exodus xxxviii, 2. Another answer to Katie Crum's questions is found in John xi, 35; and another is found in Esther viii, 14; also another one is found in Judges xiv, 14, where it says Samson's riddle was: "Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness." The answer to Willie L. Weems' question is: It was 6,000 years after the death of Adam until Moses was born. Now, I will ask some questions for the ADVOCATE's correspondents to answer: How many letters in the Old and New Testaments? How many times does the word "and" occur in the Old Testament? What verse in the Bible contains all the letters in the alphabet? Which two chapters in the Bible are alike? I am eleven years old. I am a member of the Baptist Church, and I joined last August. If you think this letter is not worth printing, please do not print it.

From your little friend,

KATIE L. COLEMAN.

P. S.—I got my Cousin Jennie to write this for me.

MADISON STATION, MISS., Feb. 21, 1884.

Mr. Editor: As my father takes your valuable paper, I thought I would write a short letter. I like your paper ever so much, especially the young folks' column. Now, I will ask a question: Who was greater than Solomon? I will close, hoping this will not reach the waste-basket.

From your friend,

MINNIE E. HAMILTON.

MISS., Feb. 13, 1884.

Mr. Editor: As the little folks from this part of the country never write to you, I thought I would drop you a few lines. I am not a child in age; but we are all God's children, and I feel at home with the children. I live in the little village of Steen's Creek—a pleasant little place seven miles east of the Illinois Central railroad. Our pastor this year is Bro. H. J. Harris—one among the ablest ministers I ever listened to. We all like him and his good family so much. I have just returned from prayer meeting to-night. Bro. Harris read and commented on Psalms li, which was excellent to listen to. I have been a member of the Methodist Church for thirteen years; my husband has also been a member for eight years. My husband has been a subscriber to your paper for two years. I do not feel that I could get along without the ADVOCATE. I read all the little folks' letters, and all of Bro. Lambuth's letters from China. They are such a peculiar people. The best wishes to you and your paper.

MRS. M. E. PRICE.

STEEN'S CREEK, MISS., Feb. 27, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I am a little boy five years old. My ma reads the children's corner of the ADVOCATE to me and brothers, and I want to send a letter so very bad, and have talked about it so much, ma has at last consented to write one for me. In the first place, we want to thank Grandpa Jones for his good letters to us boys. I, for one, am going to follow his good advice: I will never use whisky or tobacco. Ma says he tells us that in a much better way just what she has always tried to teach us. I have a great deal more I want to say, but will wait and send this good into that dreadful waste-basket the children seem so much afraid of. It does not, you will hear again from me.

Your little friend,

A. LINFIELD SMITH.

PEARLE RIVER, MISS., Feb. 18, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I see my first letter never found its way into the waste-basket. It has encouraged me to write again. I enjoy reading the boys and girls' letters very much. Bro. J. H. Windham is our preacher this year; Bro. Mathison is our presiding elder. I will answer Patty Lewis' question. It was Goliath's spear-staff that was like a weaver's beam. (1 Samuel xvi, 7.) Willie W. Simmons asks, "Where is 'washpot' found in the Bible?" In Psalms cviii. Thomas A. Feltwell wants to know how old Andrew Jackson was when the battle of New Orleans was fought. The battle was fought on January 8, and on March 15, following, he was forty-eight years old. I will close by wishing the ADVOCATE a prosperous year.

EDITH COFFEE.

DOKE DELLOS, Florida.

Mr. Editor: I am a little boy twelve years old. Aunt Mattie Thomas, who lives in Louisiana, sends us the ADVOCATE. I like it so much, especially the children's corner. I will answer some of the questions in the number of January 31. The Prophet Elisha caused iron to swim. It may be found in 11 Kings. Timothy's grandfather was named Lois; his mother, Eunice. It may be found in 11 Timothy i, 5. As this is the first letter I ever tried to write an editor, I hope it will not find its way to the waste-basket. I will ask, Where is the word "greyhound" mentioned in the Bible?

Your little friend,

RALPH HARDY.

LEWIS, TEXAS.

Mr. Editor: I thought I would write you a short letter, as I have seen nothing in your paper from here in a long time. Mamma takes your valuable paper, and I like so much to read it, especially the pieces in the boys and girls' column. Willie H. Dove asks what chapter in Psalms has two verses just alike. It is Psalms lxxvii, 3, 5. Now, I will ask a question: How many times do we find "Mary" mentioned in the Bible? As this is my first letter to the ADVOCATE, I will not write a very long one. I am,

Your little friend,

ANNIE N. THOMPSON.

SEMERFIELD, ALA., Feb. 17, 1884.

Mr. Editor: As I have been wanting to write to your paper for a long time, I will say a few words now. We have a real nice Sunday-school. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday, and my class has a nice teacher. We had another teacher: her name was Miss Maggie Chadwick. But she got married and moved away, and now Mrs. Nannie Eastland is our teacher; but we all love Miss Maggie yet, and we love Mrs. Eastland, too. I will also say we have a nice superintendent—Mr. L. P. Brown. We like him very much.

LOUIS CORNWORTHY.

MEERDEN, MISS., Feb. 21, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I have been reading the ADVOCATE, and I see my cousin, Milton Holt, asking, "Where in the Bible is 'above' found?" It is found in Exodus xxvii, 3—xxxviii, 3; Numbers iv, 14; 1 Kings vii, 49; 11 Kings xxv, 14; 11 Chronicles iv, 11, 16; Jeremiah lii, 18. Where in the Bible is "penknife" found?

Your little friend,

J. MILTON HOLT.

CAHART, TEXAS, Feb. 14, 1884.

Mr. Editor: Somebody asks where the word "washpot" is found in the Bible. It is found in Psalms lx, 5. Now, can any of the little boys and girls tell me where the word "loneycomb" is found in the Bible?

ERNEST O. SMITH.

TRAVIS, MISSISSIPPI.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. E. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. C. HUNTER.

THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1884.

Seventy-one churches have been aided by the Conference Boards of Church Extension in addition to what has been done by the General Board. That young organization promises great things to the church.

We agree with a recent utterance of Dr. Haygood that "no danger to our Methodism is more remote than the danger of an over-educated ministry." Let us educate. They should be liberally equipped who are to have "the care and cure of souls."

Those were rather hitting words of the old Methodist "mother in Israel" who, in comparing the present with former times in New England, said: "Then we had golden sermons in wooden pulpits; now we have wooden sermons in golden pulpits."

The revival at Centenary Church, St. Louis, (Rev. Dr. Todor, pastor,) under Rev. Thomas Harrison, has, up to last reports, resulted in several hundred conversions. Dr. Todor has received largely over one hundred names as candidates for church membership.

A note from the venerable Rev. George Shaffer, of Columbus, Miss., dated March 7, says: "Bishop Kavanaugh is here, and has been very sick since his arrival. He is somewhat relieved, but still confined to his bed." We hope our honored chief pastor will be able to attend the Bishops' meeting in Nashville.

Sydney Smith's definition of a curate is a not inaccurate description of a Southern preacher, viz.: "The poorest and most respectable man in the parish." In the North Georgia, one of the leading Conferences in Southern Methodism, the average salary of the preachers last year was $371.03. In the Mississippi it was only $442.57. An ordinary clerk without a family would consider that "starvation wages."

Pastoral attention to strangers is most important in our towns and cities. There are churches North that have a committee on "shaking hands" with visitors. A little attention of that sort won to Methodism in New York City a young man who became one of her most princely benefactors. Another incident nearer home was related to us a few days ago. A Methodist lady from abroad, after spending a few weeks in the city, dropped a pastor an appreciative, substantial note of thanks for kind attention.

"Dunbarton," the historic residence of the venerable historian and statesman, Col. J. F. H. Claiborne, situated about ten miles from Natchez, Miss., with all of its contents, was destroyed by fire on Monday of last week. His large collection of books, manuscripts, portraits, and relics of all sorts, were lost. Col. Claiborne was an invalid, and had to be carried from the burning building and look on at the destruction of the gathered treasures of many years. This is a public calamity. Dunbarton was settled in 1804, by Mr. Dunbar, the father of Mrs. Claiborne, and the log cabin in which he at first lived was replaced by a more elegant mansion about 1812 or 1814. Mrs. Claiborne was born in the old home, and it has been her lifelong residence.

A Modest Suggestion.

Our Bishops will be expected this Centenary year to give undue diligence in attending District Conferences. Their time and strength will be fully taxed in meeting these engagements. Programmes will be arranged for Centenary mass meetings, and they, of course, will have to bear the most prominent part. To reach these different and distant points will require much travel—and travel involves expense. Bishops attend Annual Conferences at their own charges. But this extra and expensive service they should not be expected to render without, at least, being furnished free transportation. We make this modest suggestion simply to prevent a possible oversight. Of course, where failure has occurred it was from mere neglect. But this neglect is not uncommon. We have known of our chief pastors going on extensive and expensive trips to District Conferences, making full proof of their laborious ministry, and all at their own cost. As much will be required of them, something should be given to them.

Periodical Piety.

Just now a part of the Christian world is in spiritual retreat. They have entered upon a period of retirement from worldly gaieties and the practice of special religious duties. There is to be a denial of the flesh—an abstinence from society follies and high living—and a more rigid observance of spiritual obligations. For forty days the world is to be shut out, and the life is to be hid with Christ. Upon what Scriptural injunction or religious philosophy the period of forty days should have been selected, rather than a longer or shorter time, does not appear. The instances of forty-day fasts in the Bible were not written for examples to us. Nor are they observed either in letter or spirit by the modern practice of a mere change of lenten diet. There is very little real self-denial or failure to fully satisfy the appetite. The courses may be fewer and less variety of vials, but the average daily consumption is maintained. Now be it known we are not objecting to the lenten idea, but to its misuse and abuse. That some good may result from this special period of exercise we do not doubt. Some devout spirits will catch its hidden meaning, wisely employ its appointed seasons for public and private prayer, and enter into larger and sweeter experiences of divine grace. But observation forces us to the regretful conclusion that these are the rare exceptions, while the vast multitude misconceive its significance and make it the occasion of spiritual hurt. They starve "the bin but not the sin," and hence pervert its observance into a fatal religiousness without true piety. A few general observations upon lenten seasons may be helpful to Methodist readers.

Fixed periods of special religious exercise are often occasions of spiritual peril. There is a constant temptation to pervert the true meaning of all divine appointments and enactments. The thing is exalted for the thing signified—the type for that which is typified. This is a common weakness and experience. The spirit is hidden or poisoned, in the observance of a mere form. Especially is this true of Lent. It often becomes a stone of stumbling. Forty days of withdrawal from gaieties, that should never be practiced or encouraged, is regarded as a marked evidence of rare piety. There may be value, but no virtue, in a rule. It is well to have religious habits—times and places for prayer, meditation and introspection—but, when esteemed as a virtue, they become hurtful. We should pray, but prayer itself is no ground of acceptance with God. Romanists often appeal for specified occasions so many "Our Fathers" and "Hail Marys," as if there was merit in the number of prayers. Counting the rosary is not breathing the praying spirit. And so of all other religious duties and exercises. There is no merit in the mere performance of the doing of anything.

Again, these occasions are temptations to make religion intermittent or periodical. They are sometimes regarded as a license to worldliness—a free discharge from spiritual austerity for the balance of the year. Lent is ushered in generally by the wild excesses of "Shrove Tuesday," and is succeeded by any amount of worldly folly. And these are considered allowable in consideration of the full forty days of spiritual liberation. This liability to license lures in the undue magnifying of any duty or season. In our Methodist Churches, especially in the rural districts, we make this mistake with reference to "protracted meetings." With not a few a "good revival" will atone for a year of spiritual deadness and destitution.

What we plead for is constancy of spiritual life and activity, without remission, intermission or abatement. Periodical piety is not healthful. In religious character it is not for us to know times and seasons. Every day should be consecrated to God, and the lenten period should know no end.

If any one of our readers is ambitious for distinction in authorship let him not be discouraged, as witnessed the following:
Disraeli, it is stated, made by his pen £30,000; Byron, £23,000; Lord Macaulay received £20,000 on account of three-fourths net profits for his history. Thiers and Lamartine received nearly £20,000 each for their respective histories. Thackeray is said never to have received £5,000 for any of his novels. Sir Walter Scott was paid £110,000 for eleven volumes of "Tales of my Landlord." But one novel he received £10,000, and between November, 1825, and June, 1827, he received £23,000 for literary work. Lord Lytton is said to have made £80,000 by his novels; Dickens, it has been computed, ought to have been making £10,000 a year for three years prior to the publication of "Nicholas Nickleby"; and Trollope in twenty years made £70,000.

"Lawlessness, North and South."

This was the subject of Joseph Cook's "prelude" to his one hundred and sixty-fifth lecture in Tremont Temple last week. With most of it we cordially agree. A better public sentiment must be aroused in favor of the rigid enforcement of law. In support of his argument Mr. Cook made some startling and humiliating statements. It humbles our national pride to be told that, with the exception of Italy and Spain, the proportion of murders to deaths in this country is not exceeded anywhere on earth where statistics are taken. "Out of every 10,000 deaths in England seven are murders. Out of every 10,000 in the United States twenty-one are murders." After a thrilling description of the lawless spirit and record of some sections, he suggests as a remedy to eradicate this evil the organization of Law and Order Leagues in States and in municipalities.

As might be expected, Mr. Cook makes some very reckless statements. His characterization of the South is a little too partisan and overdrawn. We make no apology for the cheapness of human life and the spirit of lawlessness that disgrace our communities. This Advocate has a clear record on that subject. But it serves no good purpose to hold this section up as the hot-bed of all villainy and the asylum of murderers. We doubt if there are as many homicides in the South as in the North. And, if so, there should be no reference to sectional lines. Condemn wrong, but never in the spirit and with the purpose of a partisan. Mr. Cook says there is "a shot-gun aristocracy in the South, haughty, domineering, barbaric, cowardly, murderers." We know of no such thing. There have been shocking and too frequent murders here and there, and some of these may have had more or less complicity with politics, but the great body of the people condemn them. They do not indicate or represent the spirit of our section.

Again, Mr. Cook says: "The Northern States are almost wholly free from moderate drinking in the pulpit, and the Southern States, thank God, become more temperate every year." Now, that is an invidious and unfair statement. We know no Southern minister who is not a pronounced apostle of temperance, and almost to a man they are teetotallers. The above implication of the Boston Monday lecturer is purely gratuitous, based upon gross ignorance of the facts. The following, from the New York Evening Post, confirms the statement that the homicidal record of the South is no worse than the North:

We all know how the murderer is protected against the gallows in this State by points of practice. In other States it is just as bad. In Ohio there are thirty murderers, taken red-handed, lying in jail, who have thus far foiled the efforts of the district attorney to carry them through the maze of technicalities deliberately created by the Legislature, and no murderer has been executed in the State since 1869. The victims of the knife and pistol are so numerous every week as to cover the whole land with blood guiltiness.

Healing the Hurt Slightly—Toy Pistols.

A law has just been enacted in Mississippi to prohibit the sale of toy pistols in this State. By the provisions of the act it is unlawful for any person, company or corporation to sell or offer to sell any toy pistol, cartridges, caps or other contrivances by which said pistols are fired within the limits of the State. For each violation of the law, and conviction thereof, there is imposed a fine of from twenty to fifty dollars. We have no objection to the bill. It is a nice little law, designed to restrain the average small boy and abate an annoying and dangerous nuisance. Toy pistols have caused several deaths in this city, besides the loss of eyes and the suffering of other injuries.

But what amuses and amazes is, why did the legislative solons rise in indignant majesty against the toy pistol, and utter no word of protest or prohibition against the real, fighting pistol—the "lightning" Colt's and "self-cocking" Tranter? Boys must not have dangerous playthings, but any person, company or corporation may sell at liberty the deadly real pistol to any purchaser, child, man or woman. If the purpose was protection of life and limb, the latter should have been prohibited by a law so rigid that the second offense would never be committed. The homicidal records of our courts will only be abolished with the prohibition of the pistol. But so long as it is a legitimate article of merchandise, and whiskey selling is legalized, we may expect street tragedies. Pistols were made to take human life. They have no other value. Huntsmen have no use for them. Their mission is human destruction. And the man who makes an arsenal of his hip-pocket contemplates a possible difficulty and homicide. He carries a concealed pistol for the purpose of taking life if the occasion should arise. Nine-tenths of the manslaughters and murders of the land are the bloody work of the pistol. So common is the use of this weapon of street war that brainless bullies pride themselves on their expertness in its use. They know how "to get the drop" on an antagonist.

In the light of these humiliating facts the above measure seems supremely farcical. It is healing the hurt of our people very slightly. It is toying with a momentous question.

A Field Day at Senatobia.

We had the pleasure of spending Sunday last in the thriving town of Senatobia, on the Mississippi and Tennessee road, about thirty miles south of Memphis. It was an occasion of many delightful episodes and long to be remembered. Rev. T. B. Malone, our genial and laborious pastor of that station, had exacted the promise of a visit some weeks before, and appointed the time for "clearing the decks." We purposed spending a day en route at Sardis, but the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. D. Cameron, and a phenomenal rain-storm prevailing at the time of arrival, making all out-door work impossible, determined us to journey on to Senatobia. Friday and Saturday were exceedingly inclement, but Sunday morning was radiant and glorious, with scarcely a fleck of cloud on the sky. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather an excellent congregation assembled on Saturday night for preaching. On the Sabbath the beautiful little church—a very gem of its kind—was quite filled with an interesting congregation as any town in the State can boast. After the morning sermon the decks were not only cleared of the five Conference assessments, but a handsome little surplus was realized as the nucleus of a Centenary fund. It was a time of rejoicing. The old doxology was sung with exultant voices. And a cheerful smile was never seen than that which illumined the face of the Senatobia pastor. He now strides the Centenary deck of our old ship with an unfavorable omen for a prosperous and happy voyage.

Senatobia has a live church, with elements capable of large development. There has been a steady growth for some years past, until now it is one of the most delightful and enterprising stations in the Conference. It has religion, wealth, liberality and unexceptional loyalty. A few years past our brethren were joint proprietors in a union church, and were connected with a large circuit, with preaching once or twice a month. Now they have a neat brick edifice, tastefully furnished and admirable in all its appointments; built at a cost of about five thousand dollars. They have a nice little parsonage—the gift mostly of one generous brother—and a well organized station. Several things impressed us most favorably:

1. The handsome, intelligent, active sisterhood of the church. If the brethren will only obey the apostolic injunction and "help those women" yet greater prosperity will attend them.
2. The hearty congregational singing. In the service of song there were few "unemployed or idly employed."
3. The larger attendance of children upon the preaching service.

Methodism is moving forward healthfully and hopefully in all that beautiful country. Presiding Elder Terry is magnifying his office and demonstrating his fitness for leadership. Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Cold Water, and his wife came down on Saturday afternoon and spent some hours with us pleasantly. He is living in a new parsonage as well as all the other pastors along that road from Memphis to Grenada.

Senatobia is a solid town, with a large and increasing business. Tate county has a prohibitory law which goes into effect in July, and in anticipation of the fatal day two saloons have already closed out. But for the lateness of the hour before going to press we would like to write of many things seen and heard. For kind attentions we are grateful to Pastor Malone and his flock. We regretted the absence on official duties of our special friend, Lieut.-Gov. Shands.

The Executive Committee of the Western Exporters' Association—the decent name for a whiskey pool—which controls all the distilleries of the West, held a meeting in Cincinnati on Thursday, of last week, and determined on a reduction of ten per cent. below the present production of whiskey. That indicates the success of the temperance agitation. Production is graduated according to demand. The decrease in alcohol distilled is to meet a falling off in amount consumed. Agitate! Agitate! Agitate!

Mexican Central Mission—Conference Meeting—The Native Preachers—Spiritual State.

BY BISHOP KERNER.

MR. EDITOR: You will please imagine yourself transported by the gentle steam over gulf and gorge, sleeping valley and bold mountain, past plains fertile and cultivated, on, on, by foot-hills, towns, villages and interminable rows of the magney plant, until you are set down at the depot of Mexico, about ten o'clock at night, whence a hack soon brings you to the warm precincts of the Mission House, bright with the presence of American ladies, American children and Dr. Patterson. It was, indeed, to us not unlike a wonderful dream in its panoramic variety and rapidity of change.

To me everything the next morning after our arrival was familiar enough; not so, I imagine, was it with Dr. Kelley. His eyes had evidently seen wondrous things as we passed the heights of the Cordilleras, and now, as the daylight fell on the Alameda, the cathedrals, the street, and on its ceaseless stream of donkeys, they doubtless still continued to see. Considerable changes had been made in buildings, and much rubbish had disappeared since my last visit. Lines of street railroads had been lengthened, and there was evidently more activity in the commercial thoroughfares.

On Sabbath, February 11, the doctor preached to the English congregation, of which Bro. Freeman had been pastor. I went out to America, a town very near the snow mountain Nixtaximatl. There we have a good property, a school, a church-house and a good society. I preached, Dr. Patterson translating. After the morning service we had Sabbath-school, some singing, catechizing and several talks to the children. One of the principal families in this village is the leading one in our church. After dining at this house we started back toward the city, and on the way passed two other large villages, in each of which we have a Southern Methodist Church and a school, and regular preaching. The congregations are much larger at night than in the day time in all these country places. Many Catholics stand about the door and hear, who could not be persuaded to sit under Protestant preaching. At night Dr. Kelley preached at Toluca, where Bro. Norwood resides, of which, and one school there, doubtless he will give an account.

By the Wednesday following this Sabbath all the preachers had arrived, both foreign and native, and nearly all met on Tuesday evening in the parlor of Dr. Patterson. It was a delightful reunion of friends. The improvement in the personnel of the mission was marked, especially in its native element. The mission had received a valuable accession also in the Rev. D. F. Watkins and wife, and in the four or five Mexican preachers connected with his work in Guadalupe. He had come out with Mr. Stevens, who was killed in 1874, at Ahualulco. They were both Welshmen by birth, members of the Congregational Church; under its auspices, moved by the missionary impulses of the Holy Ghost, they had gone from San Francisco down to Mexico. After the martyrdom of his friend, Mr. Watkins held his ground, and began to publish a paper in the interest of Protestantism. Presently he had cleaned away enough ground to stand on, which he presently made impregnable against his assailants, and they were many. From causes too many and complicate to here state, he has for the last two and a half years been entirely disconnected with his Congregational supporters, and has been struggling alone and making headway in and about Guadalupe. In this condition he on last June turned his attention toward Bro. Patterson, and after full correspondence he determined to unservedly join the Southern Methodist Church, and place himself under the auspices of its Mission Board. His congregation being in full and free harmony with his purpose cast in its fortunes almost unanimously with ours. Since that time all have moved on in the same order as the other parts of our work. Mr. Watkins brings some five hundred members and five preachers, besides several excellent Sabbath-schools, and one day school, taught by Mrs. Watkins. His preachers have seen service in a hard, not to say dangerous, field. One or two of them are men of extraordinary force and spirituality. Mr. Watkins himself is a Spanish speaker and writer of much cultivation, and one of the most eloquent preachers in the Republic. He preached for us twice during the Conference. It was not essential to know Spanish to see the power of the preacher. The grace and force of his action reminded me of that of George Cookman, whom I well knew in my youth, and have often heard.

On Thursday morning the annual meeting of the mission convened in our Templo de Measlas, on San Andres street. Thirty native and seven foreign preachers connected with the mission were present. Two secretaries were appointed, one English and one Spanish. Bro. Norwood was retained by the presiding Bishop as translator in chief, and, by the by, most admirably did he discharge this laborious part of the Conference work. On all sides he is regarded as a superior Spanish speaker, and he excels in all the qualities of a good translator. Everything, of course, had to be done twice, once in Spanish and once in English. Oh how those syllables rang in one's ears by the time the day had closed. Yes, and far in the night, through the brain, as the awing vibrations of a bell after it has stopped ringing. The Mexicans are apt at all kinds of conclave work. They like the speech-making parts of a Conference, the making a motion, the exordium, the measured sentence, the putting the vote. It all chimes in with their genius for fine art, their sense of indefinite leisure and their constitutional politeness.

So, too, they greatly enjoy its devotional parts—its preaching, its lessons, hymns and prayers. They have but little idea of short metre at any point of the service.

The order of business was upon our own home model in the main. They were introduced to the statistical yoke at once, and henceforth will never know any better. They had blanks, which were filled out and read by each preacher in charge, so that presently each one came to have a very intelligent view of the whole work. It was easy to see who had accomplished valuable results during the year's labor. Committees were appointed upon memoirs, education, books and periodicals, Sabbath-schools, church property and the spiritual condition of the mission, the last consisting of all the presiding elders and the superintendent of the mission. Their reports were beautifully written, and, indeed, will compare favorably with those of any home Conference. One or two of these I will add. In fact, at all points the body is full orb, waiting only the development of experience. Committees of examination and classes of undergraduates are now duly arranged, and will appear and report at its next session. I adjourn the report of the Committee on the Spiritual State of the Mission, which will lengthen this letter to its full limit.

Your committee, appointed to consider the spiritual condition of the church in the central Mexican mission, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, after hearing reports from every portion of the work and prayerful consideration of all the facts, beg leave to report: That, considering the early training, the many difficulties and temptations arising from the prevalent customs in the country so opposed to Christian purity, and missing the support of mature Christians that new converts enjoy in Christian countries, the short time they have been acquainted with the gospel, the shortcomings of some who have labored to divide the body of Christ and imbue in the natives animosity against the American missionaries, and a lack of knowledge on the part of foreign workers of the Mexican character, considering we say all these things, we feel that they have stood well, and have steadily grown in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. Even to the most despondent the spiritual state of our church, as a whole, is promising, while to others it is beyond their most sanguine hope. Marked conversions, examples of constancy and fidelity, of rare courage and Christian fortitude, of great faith, entire consecration and blessed experiences are indeed numerous among the believers.

We also feel that the imperfections of workers and of the church at large incident to a new work are becoming things of the past, and that, judging from the rapid growth of the work and of the people in purity, and the purpose of the great Head of the church to finish the work he has already begun in this land, we can reasonably hope to see very soon a grand Christian work, second to none in the history of modern missions, a church that will do credit to those who have consecrated their means, time and talent to its upbuilding.

D. F. WATKINS,
FRANCISCO F. AGUILAR,
W. M. PATTERSON,
JOSEPH NORWOOD,
JOHN W. MACDONELL,
J. W. GRIMES,
DAVID W. CARTEL,
CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 19, 1884.

A fast mail train is now run from New York to Chicago, making the entire distance in twenty-seven hours. This is, indeed, a fast age.

Rev. S. H. Werlein said in a recent sermon that one saloon in New Orleans on Mardi Gras day sold three barrels of whiskey and thirty kegs of beer.

Mrs. Mathews, the wife of Rev. Dr. John Mathews, of Kansas City, has been spending some pleasant days among old friends in New Orleans. She left on Tuesday for home.

Rev. Dr. R. B. Crawford, of Franklin Street Church, Mobile, has received fourteen new members since Conference.

The mother of the evangelist, D. L. Moody, celebrated recently her seventy-ninth birthday. Her son was forty-seven the same day.

Bishop Parker's residence was burglariously entered on Sunday morning and robbed of valuables to the amount of fifty dollars.

We sympathize with Rev. W. D. Dominick, of the Mississippi Conference, in the sudden death of his venerable father. He was a devoted man, and went to his reward after a long and useful career.

Rev. Dr. C. G. Andrews delivered a lecture last week before the Natchez Library Association on his "Travels in Europe." The Democrat of next morning spoke of it in terms of high praise. We would like to have been a member of that favored auditory.

Dr. J. B. Walker is still confined to his bed from a long attack of typhoid fever. He will not be able to attend any of his first-round quarterly meetings. Pastors holding Quarterly Conferences are requested to see that delegates to the District Conference are elected.

A dispatch from London reports that Mr. Spurgeon has fallen heir to a large fortune left him by Joseph Paul, of Leicester. The wealthy and great never lack friends. But in this instance the great preacher will use his fortune wisely. His benevolence is already proverbial.

Bro. Edward Nottley, an old New Orleans Methodist, came in the office last week to renew his subscription to the Advocate for the thirtieth time. He received the specimen number which appeared July 10, 1850, and has taken the paper regularly from the first issue, February 9, 1851.

On a recent Sabbath Miss Rankin, our brave young missionary in China, presented eight of her pupils for baptism and one for membership. Others are desirous of being received into the church, but in China they have to try the spirits, so Miss Rankin thinks it wise to keep them longer under instruction. But this indicates that the time of harvest has come.

The National Woman's Suffrage Convention was in session in Washington, D. C., last week. The suffragist craze went to such an extent that one sister defended the Mormon Church in her wild hostility to the Edmunds bill for disfranchising the women of Utah. Rather than a Mormon woman should be deprived of the ballot, she would prefer the infamy of polygamy. Alas! for the wild excesses of a one-headed man or woman.

There was a practical and generous expression of sympathy for the flood-sufferers during the musical festival in Cincinnati. On account of the prevalent distress some thought the festival should be postponed. But the plans were carried out, and an immense audience assembled one evening. A great singer was secured to the choir, and in response she sang the little song, "Give me a penny." Then she descended the platform, with a collection basket in hand, announcing that she would receive contributions in aid of the sufferers. The collection aggregated $1,500.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Louisiana, met in second annual convention, in this city, on Thursday and Friday of last week. There was a large attendance, and the meeting most interesting and important. Mrs. Hannah Whitehall Smith, the distinguished authoress; Mrs. Chapin, of South Carolina; Mrs. Davis, of Cincinnati; and other ladies from abroad were present. The addresses of welcome were delivered by Mrs. Dr. J. J. Lyons in behalf of the ladies, and by Rev. S. H. Werlein as a representative of the clergy. The beautiful response of Mrs. W. H. Goodale, of Baton Rouge, was published in full in the Times-Democrat, and is worthy of wide circulation. At the St. Charles Avenue Church, in the evening, Mrs. Judge Merrick, the president, delivered the annual address full of thought and practical suggestion on the great work of reform. All the sessions were characterized by a positive religious spirit. Those noble women feel the constraint of Christ's love.

An Explanation.

At the late session of the Mississippi Conference it fell to my lot, by appointment of the board, to write the report on education. By a mere oversight, occasioned by the discussion and action of the preceding Conference, no mention was made in the report of the assessment for ministerial education. I understood the action of the Conference at Crystal Springs to fix, until specifically altered, ministerial education at one of the regular collections, with an amount upon each district equal to the Bishop's fund. Proceeding upon that idea some district stewards have made the apportionment to the several charges, and the presiding elders are at work collecting the same. I hope all the presiding elders will do likewise, so that the fund will suffer no embarrassment. This is a matter of vital importance. Our young men called to preach need scholastic preparation, and the church should gladly respond to every such opportunity. I look with pleasure upon what is being done by sister churches, and pray for like and larger results in our own Conference. The above statement was suggested and is endorsed by Dr. C. G. Andrews, President of the Conference Board of Education, and he unites in the appeal that a chance omission may not unfavorably affect the collection.

CHAS. H. GALLOWAY.

North Mississippi Conference, Minutes.

In the Advocate of March 6 the Rev. H. C. Morehead complains that his last year's charge is not properly represented in the statistical table of the Minutes, and calls upon that much abused individual, the editor of the Conference Minutes, for an explanation. I have no explanation to offer. I have just examined the table, and the printed report is an exact copy of the manuscript furnished me by the statistical secretary.

J. S. OAKLEY.

Editor of Conference Minutes.

SPRINGVILLE, Miss., March 7, 1884.

Mr. Editor: Bro. Morehead's rather silly article needs an answer, and I suppose I am the one to do it. I have examined my record-book, and it shows that Prior's Point and Austin held nothing on the items about which he makes complaint. I carefully preserve all of the reports furnished by the preachers, and on examination I do not find his among them. Bro. Morehead rendered a report at Oxford, with the items mentioned left blank, and stated that he would fill them out when he received an expected letter from his charge. I recorded what he gave me, and handed back to him his report. He failed to fill it out and return it to me. He still has in his possession the report that he should have given me. Hence the trouble.

T. V. RAMSEY, JR.

Statistical Sec., North Miss. Conf.

GIBBSBURG, Miss., March 7, 1884.

Mr. Editor: It may be some gratification to Bro. Morehead, for me to say, that his missionary collections are properly credited in the treasurer's book—$33.50 for foreign and $18.65 for domestic missions, which figures exactly tally with his statement in the Advocate of last week.

T. H. MALONE.

Treas., Conf. Board of Missions.

SHENANDOAH, Miss., March 8, 1884.

Woman's Missionary Society Notice.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, of the Mississippi Conference, will meet in Madison, Miss., April 17 and 18, 1884. Each auxiliary is earnestly requested to send a delegate with a full report. Let me beg that every society in the bounds of our Conference will be represented. Our beloved president, Mrs. Julianna Hayes, will be with us if not providentially hindered. We are praying for and expecting much good to result from this meeting; therefore, a full attendance is earnestly desired. Will be glad to have those of our ministerial brethren to meet with us who can conveniently do so.

JENNIE E. PETTY,

Pres. Miss. Conf. Society.

MEMPHIS, Miss., March 8, 1884.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the Advocate. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the Advocate.

BARVER & JAMIESON,

Publishers.

MILK WANTED.—See advertisement on this page. This is a fine opportunity for a steady, industrious man.

An Ice Thing.—A skate.

LUDDEN & BATES.—We advertise in this issue, this great Southern music house, located at Savannah, Ga. The goods advertised by this old established firm, will be found as represented. Write to them for Catalogue of music and musical instruments.

At a town meeting in Ireland it was recently voted that "all persons in the town owning dogs shall be muzzled."

Every traveling preacher can have the St. Louis Christian Advocate, containing stands at all our meetings. Ministers, Educators and Laymen, from all parts of the country, by sending fifty cents in postal currency or stamps to cover cost of mailing and postage until January 1, 1885. Address: Loran D. Amerson, Manager, 415 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo. Amerson also has a New Year card for $1.00 per annum to all except preachers.

In Boston they pronounce New England, according to the New York Herald, "New-found-land," with great stress on the "found," and the natives of the island say "New-found-land," coming out strong on the land. We don't know how the dog calls it himself.

A. Brousseau's Son, No. 23 and 25 Charles street, New Orleans furniture will find every style of carpets, matting, lace curtains, shades, rugs, crumby cloths, etc., in great variety, plenty of room and polite attention to show goods. No dark corners, every part of the building bright and cheerful. Goods guaranteed as represented, and prices that will satisfy purchasers.

The Philadelphia News thinks it strange that the man who first invented steel did not extend the invention to babies.

For china matting and all varieties of carpetings, curtains, etc., no better home can be found than that of L. B. & Co. Our city readers hardly need a recommendation to a home so well and favorably known, but we wish to call their attention to the new advertisement of fresh goods in this issue, and to urge all buyers, from either city or country, to take a peep at this well filled and handsome store, 100 Canal street.

Atmospheric knowledge is not thoroughly distributed in our schools. A boy, being asked "What is mist?" vaguely responded, "An umbrella."

The St. Louis Christian Advocate is announced as the grand special organ of the church during this, the "Centennial year of American Methodism," and fifty of the leading men of the church, embracing all the principal branches, together with some from other churches, have consented to write standard articles for its columns during the year. This, with the able editorials and other matter specially prepared for it, will make it indeed a valuable paper for those in or out of church.

When the clergyman remarked there would be a new church the society was building, an old lady who lived there for many years to whom he referred.

No family, especially where there are children, should be without the New Life Remedy. It saves sickness, time, suffering and money. Ask your druggist for it.

President Lincoln, when told on a certain occasion that Gen. So-and-so and forty miles had been captured, said, "Well, I can make another brigadier in five minutes, but those miles cost $2.50 apiece."

All poisonous matter is carried off from the system by Serravallo's "Elixir."

"For nine years my daughter had epileptic fits," writes J. N. Marshall, of Glasgow, Mo., "Serravallo's Elixir cured her." At Druggists.

An honest old farmer once addressing a school house audience on temperance, confessed that he had been a drinker. "But, my friends," said he, in conclusion, "I never drank in this school house."

GOOD NEWS TO PLANTERS.—Cotton Seed reduced to $1 per bushel.

Off the coast.—The steedless.

THE POWER OF ELECTRICITY.—We refer our readers to the very large and handsome advertisement of Dr. Geo. A. Scott in this issue. The history of the new selling Electric Corsets and Belts is at the usual price of the same articles without the Electric Corsets, which alone is worth the price asked. Modestly it acts as a powerful relief, relieving suffering without their being cognizant of its working. See advertisement for further details.

Telephone transmitters should be painted "yellow."

GOLDEN LIQUID BEEF TONIC is best calculated to cure indigestion and to perpetuate healthy vigor and regularity. Take no other, of druggists.

A worthless check—the rein that hitches a horse's head too high.

FOR CONSUMPTION USE HALE'S HONEY OF HORSERADISH AND TAR.

PIKE'S TOBACCO CIGARETTES cure a cold in the nose.

Nothing is gained by finding a man out. That is why you want to collect a bill.

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP for diseases of the skin.

The toothblack shines while he works, but the lazy man shines while he thinks.

CONSUMPTION CURED.—An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and reliable cure for Nervous Debility and all Chronic Complaints, after having tested the wonderful curative powers of this medicine in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send no money, but by enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, mail by A. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner, tea and breakfast sets, $4.00. Household linen sets, $1.50. Dress chamber sets, $1.50.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal Street, New Orleans, is prepared to supply plans and organs on the most liberal terms. Write to him for his prices and catalogue. You need not send off North for instructions of a questionable character when you can get a good article nearer home at a fair price. Mr. Werlein's house is well known to all for its fair and honest dealing. Plans of the most celebrated factories kept. Chickering, Weber, Mathusleh, Hale, Hanham, Werlein and every instrument maker, led to last a great number of years. Organs: Mason & Hamlin, Day State, Sterling and others very low. If you will send your order to Philip Werlein you will be satisfied and pleased with your trade. Made or any musical article to be had.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the Advocate or no.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate please keep this in remembrance.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the Advocate.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails has adopted the standard gauge and a well laid track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Send the Advocate to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S GOD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary consumption, scurvy and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which God Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRUES, New York.

Notice.—Commencing Tuesday, the 11th, and till further notice, Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company will have boats leaving Rysan Field street ferry at 4 o'clock a. m., taking all passengers for local landings and through for Texas to Victoria's plantation, where they will take cars for destination.

J. C. SCHNEIDER, Traffic Manager.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST.

MONEY SAVED

By BUYING The

HARDMAN PIANO.

THE most complete upright piano made, and equal to any "superior" brand in all points of tone, quality and action.

OVER 30,000 Hardman Pianos now in use, and a vast number of others sold, and every one acknowledged to be unsurpassed in every respect, and the only piano that will stand in all climates.

ONLY the very finest and best materials and workmanship in used, and every piano fully and carefully guaranteed.

PRICES of Hardman Pianos just below those of all other styles. First Class Piano Company will make it to be in every way, and in every respect, the only piano that will stand in all climates.

For Catalogue, Circular and Manufacturers' Book, address: LUDEN & BATES, Southern Music House, Savannah, Ga.

ELKIN & CO.

100 CANAL STREET-100

Invitation to buy their large stock of fresh imported goods of fine, extra quality and low prices.

CHINA MATTINGS.

All sorts of CARPETING at very low prices.

Oil Cloths,

Window Shades,

Curtains, &c.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF

PURE COD LIVER

OIL AND LIME.

Cod Liver Oil and Lime.—That pleasant and safe agent in the cure of all consumptive symptoms, pulmonary disease, of all kinds, etc. It is the only medicine that is really and truly a medical practice. Sold to the proprietor, A. B. Wilbor, Chemist, N. Y. on, and all druggists.

A. Brousseau's Son

23 and 25 Charles Street 23 and 25

MOQUETTES

$1.60 and 1.70 per Yard.

TAPESTRY BRUSSELS

70 Cents a Yard up to $1.00.

Wiltons, Axminster, Velvets, Moquette, Brussels, Ingrains, Three Plys, Window Shades, Lace Curtains, Cords, Napier and China Mattings, Turkish Rugs, Persian Carpets, Rugs and Mats.

In Great Variety, All Latest Styles and Novelties. Call and see. Telephone in use.

DR. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC CORSETS AND BELTS.

NEW PRICES

A GREAT

SUCCESS.

EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, WELL OR ILL, SHOULD DAILY WEAR EITHER THE CORSET OR THE BELT.

Why? Because the invention of Corsets, has so long been a subject of interest to the people, that it is now a well known fact, that if you wear a corset, you will be healthy and strong, and if you wear a belt, you will be healthy and strong.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

There is no doubt that the use of Corsets and Belts, is a great benefit to the human race, and that the use of them, is a great benefit to the human race.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CRESCENT INSURANCE COMPANY

Incorporated as a Mutual Company in 1879—Guaranteed as a Stock Company in 1880.

CASH CAPITAL, $1,000,000.

Has paid nearly $100,000,000 in losses since 1880.

Annual and Term Policies issued on favorable terms.

W. E. LYMAN, President.

CHAS. H. DOLAN, Vice President.

OHAR. E. RICE, Secretary.

JOHN H. KENNEDY, Treasurer.

JOHN H. KENNEDY, Treasurer.</

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Home Production.

YEAST POWDER.

This yeast powder is a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from alum. It has been analyzed by a chemist, and is found to be pure. It is a regular article of the household, and is sold in every grocery store. It is a home production, and is sold in every grocery store. It is a home production, and is sold in every grocery store.

NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE
Is More Perfect, Quicker, and makes of finer material than any other machine.
SOLD FOR LESS MONEY.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: If you do not wish to buy the New Home, I advise you to wait until other machine companies make a machine equal to it. After twenty-one years experience in the sewing machine business, I find the poorest machines receive the highest praise from their manufacturers. But words are not enough when it comes to merit. Therefore, we will not accept an accurate description of the superior qualities of the NEW HOME.
HEADQUARTERS, 170 CANAL ST., GUSTAV SEEGER,
Sole Agent.

THE OZIER LONG STAPLE SILEX COTTON. The best now known. Write for pamphlet, giving particulars of yield per acre, and to account sales. Premium taken at Louisville Exposition, St. Louis, Little Rock, Monticello, Ark., etc. Four thousand dollars in premiums offered by proprietor on yield and staple for 1884. J. D. OZIER, Corinth, Miss. Name this paper. Seed for sale. Price $1.00 per bushel.

FREE
Send to MOORE'S BUSINESS UNIVERSITY,
For Illustrated Circular 35th year.

WARNER BROS.
353 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending March 11, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/2
Ordinary	8 1/2
Good ordinary	9 1/2
Low middling	10 1/2
Middling	11 1/2
Good middling	12 1/2
Middling fair	13 1/2
Fair	14 1/2
Galveston middling	10 1/2
Mobile middling	10 1/2
St. Louis middling	10 1/2

SUGAR.
Interior	31
Common	41
Good common	51
Fair	61
Good fair	71
Fully fair	81
Prime	91
Strictly Prime	101
Choice	111
Seconds	121
Yellow clarified	131
Gray clarified	141
Choice whites	151
Granulated	161

MOLASSES.
Syrup	26
Prime	30
Choice	34
Papey	38

RICE.
Choice	51
Prime	61
Good	71
Fair	81
Ordinary	91
Common	101
No. 2	111

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 00
Minnesota patents	7 00
Extra fancy	6 25
Winter wheat patents	7 00
Choice	5 80
Fancy	6 05

CORN PRODUCTS.
Corn meal	3 50
Corn meal	3 15
Grits	3 40
Hemulay	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
Corn:
White	63
Yellow	67
Mixed	61
Oats:
Western	47
Texas rust-proof	48
Barley:
2 row	1 15
Hay:
Choice	24 00
Prime	18 00

PROVISIONS.
Pork:
Mess.	18 40
Prime mess	17 50
Ramps	16 50
Bacon:
Choice breakfast	42
Shoulders	81
Sides, clear	102
Sides, clear rib	102
Lard:
Sugar-cured	131
Dry salt meat:
Shoulders	71
Sides, clear	91
Sides, clear rib	91

FISH.
Mackerel:
No. 1, in bbls.	11 25
Half bbls.	7 75
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75
Half bbls.	8 25
No. 3, in bbls., large	13 25
Half bbls.	7 00

GROCERIES.
Coffee:
Rio, choice	114
Cordova, choice	123
Java, choice	15
Butter:
Western dairy	25
New York dairy	25
Country	17
Lard:
Choice	94
Tea:
Choice	50
Fair	25
Oils:
Coal, cases	18
Coal, hhls	13
Cotton seed	43
Lard	78

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western	—
Country	4 50
POTATOES:
New York	1 75
Western	1 75
Seed, New York	1 75
Seed, Western	1 75
KROUT:
2 bbl.	12 00
1 bbl.	6 00
ONIONS:
2 bbl.	2 75
1 bbl.	3 25

BALING STUFFS.
BALING:
12 lb.	104
2 lb.	114
BALING TWINE:
1 lb.	134
1 bundle	1 30

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	5 50
Young	4 00
Chickens, South'n	3 00
Young	4 00
Turkeys, Southern	8 00
Eggs:
Western	16
Southern	15
WOOL:
Lake	22
Louisiana	22
Burly	9
HIDES:
Green salted	6
Dry salted	10
STAVES:
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, casks	100 00
Oak, hogheads	80 00
HOG POLES:
Hoghead	40 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	12 00
Meal (country)	25 25
Meal (city)	25 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3
Sulphuric acid	24
Bone black	34

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 6.—The prohibition State Convention assembled with a moderate attendance, and appointed thirty-four delegates to the National Convention at Pittsburg, May 21. J. W. Sharp was chairman of the convention, and L. B. Logan secretary. The convention denounced the Scott law and all amputatory measures except prohibition. The usual committee were appointed this forenoon, and a number of speeches were made.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The Senate committee on Territories has agreed to give the name of Lincoln to the new Territory which it is proposed to make out of the northern portion of Dakota. In response to Mr. King's representation, on behalf of the citizens of Natchez, that the Natchez was not properly conducted, the Postoffice Department inquired into the matter, and to-day a telegram from Postmaster McCarty, at Natchez, informed the department that the contractor would resign the service and perform his duty properly without any further interference from the department.

ASHLEY PARK, N. J., March 7.—Rev. John S. Lusk, editor of the Christian Standard, died this afternoon.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—John T. Caine, Delegate from Utah, made an argument before the House committee on Territories to-day, in which he criticized the Edmunds bill and the proposed Utah bill to polygamy as unconstitutional. He admitted the right of the government to punish polygamy as a crime if it desired to do so, but nevertheless the Mormons believed it was right. He cited the example of the patriots in support of their belief. Utah was a land converted until the Mormons came and converted it to their present state of fertility. They had helped to hold California during the Mexican war, and deserved consideration from the government.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 8.—A cyclone passed through Whiteside, Tenn., on the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad last night, and did a great deal of damage. The house of Lawrence Morgan was blown down, and a little boy was killed. His family narrowly escaped being crushed to death. A Miss Ramsey was badly injured by falling timbers.

GALESTON, March 8.—The meeting of the members of the Cotton Exchange was unanimously attended and a resolution unanimously adopted. That the proper financial policy of the government should stop in further exchange of silver dollars, and that our Representatives and Senators in Congress be and are hereby respectfully and earnestly urged to oppose the further coinage of the silver dollars on the present basis of valuation—eighty-two and a half cents.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Hall, rain, snow, thunder and lightning made up the weather here today. Ice sidewalks made walking perilous. Trees and telegraph wires are heavily weighted with ice. In Hartford heavy ice has broken down the wires, and even the trees. Telegraphing is badly interrupted. Virginia had its rain, hail and thunder today. The Approximate is very high and rising rapidly. A broken change precipitated the local train on the Harlem Railroad into the Harlem river to-night. The few passengers and train hands were rescued by a boat. Maggie McGuire, of Hunter's Point, had her skull fractured.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 8.—There was a more general observance of the Sunday law to-day and up to 9 o'clock to-night but three arrests had been made by the police, two keepers of small groceries, and a butcher. All the saloons have been hermetically sealed and also the bars on all the local packets.

JACKSON, Miss., March 10.—Hon. Jefferson Davis was received to-day in the hall of the House of Representatives, in the presence of the joint convention of the two houses, the Governor, State officers and judges of the Supreme Court and an immense throng of citizens and ladies.

TRENTON, La., March 10.—John Rogers and his wife, two very old and respected people, who have lived in our parish since 1851, were murdered at their residence, some fourteen miles west of this place, on last Thursday night.

CHICAGO, March 10.—The Daily News' Omaha (Neb.) special says: Bishop Robert Clarkson died at one o'clock this morning.

MONTPELIER, Vt., March 10.—The worst snowstorm of the season has been prevailing since Saturday. Trains are blocked and highways closed.

FOREIGN.
PARIS, March 6.—The committee of the Chamber of Deputies will report in favor of Paul Bert's proposal to settle the trichine question by the appointment of a French board of inspection of pork imported into France.

LONDON, March 7.—Another suicide, due to gambling losses, has occurred at Monte Carlo, making the nineteenth since the first of January. Newspapers are demanding that France suppress the scandal.

break. He has already pushed cavalry forward on Kandor. Many Arab deserters from Tanniah are arriving at Suakin. There is a report that Osman's forces are breaking up, the tribes being unwilling to fight the English. Scouts report the country clear as far as Tanniah. Osman Digma is massing all remaining faithful to him at Suakin, where he will make a final stand.

The grand success of the St. Louis Christian Advocate is another illustration of what energy and push will accomplish. When Mr. Demore took the management of the Advocate its circulation was less than three thousand. Since then it has reached nearly twenty thousand copies.

Can a planter sell his own cotton in New Orleans by paying license? Does he have to become a member of the Cotton Exchange before he can sell? What is the amount of the license? A Times-Herald reporter called upon H. C. Hester, secretary of the Cotton Exchange, and got the following answers to the questions: 1. Any one can sell cotton or any other produce in New Orleans as a merchant by procuring a proper license therefor. Licenses are graded in their case according to the business done and the amount of capital invested. Two per cent. on receipts is the rule. 2. It is not absolutely necessary for a party selling cotton to be a member of the Cotton Exchange, but a membership thereof gives such advantages in the way of news and information and such protection under its laws that no party wishing to do a respectable business could afford to remain outside of the institution.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate is the great "Central Advertiser." Subscribers for it without delay. It will contain fifty standard articles from fifty different writers, besides the regular letters, editorials, church news, etc.

MISCELLANEOUS.

YALE & BOWLING,
WHOLESALE
DRY GOODS
AND NOTIONS
17, 19 & 21 Magazine and 35 Common Streets,
NEW ORLEANS

H. P. BUCKLEY,
8 - - Camp Street - - 8
COLD AND SILVER.
Stern-Windup Watches.
American, English and Swiss.
First Quality and Lowest Prices.

DIAMONDS
Jewelry and Sterling Silverware.
At a Great Reduction.
Special attention to Watch Repairing, Diamond setting and jewelry repairing.
ESTABLISHED IN 1839.
F. BELDEN,
WHOLESALE DEALER IN HATS, TRUNKS,
FLOWERS,
UMBRELLAS,
ETC.

No. 14 MAGAZINE, and
75, 77, 79, and 79 COMMON STREETS,
NEW ORLEANS.

Reductions.

To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock, though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season. To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from figures that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

W. G. TEBALD,
Wholesale and Retail Furniture,
37, 39 and 41 Royal Street,
New Orleans, La.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.
MANSFIELD, DECATUR PARISH, LOUISIANA.
The twenty-ninth Annual Session will begin on the 1st of September, 1884.
Mansfield is situated on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, forty miles south of Shreveport in a beautiful and healthy country, and is centrally located from almost every portion of Texas and Louisiana. The College is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is managed by the Louisiana Conference. The buildings and grounds are extensive and all the facilities for instruction are provided. The College last year had nearly a hundred boarders and sixty pupils in Music, thirty in Art and one hundred and twenty in all. Board and tuition, per term: $30.00. Music and use of instrument $30.00. Annual charges in Art Department and Modern Languages. F. M. GRACE, President.

CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE.

One thousand acres cypress timber lands. Situated in the parish of Iberville, Louisiana, about 10 miles east, south-western land District of Louisiana. For information, Apply to N. O. Christian Advocate, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.
McHANE BELL FOUNDRY manufactures brass and iron castings and all kinds of machinery. Price list and Circulars sent on application.
HENRY McHANE & CO.,
Baltimore, Md.

Quarterly Conferences.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

HOMER DIST.—FIRST ROUND.
Trinity circuit, at Athens	Jan. 26, 27
Trinity circuit, at Arcadia	Feb. 3, 4
Trinity circuit, at Sparta	Feb. 10, 11
Trinity circuit, at Bell	Feb. 17, 18
Trinity circuit, at Breaux	Feb. 24, 25
Trinity circuit, at Baton Rouge	Mar. 2, 3
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Mar. 9, 10
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Mar. 16, 17
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Mar. 23, 24
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Mar. 30, 31
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Apr. 6, 7
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Apr. 13, 14
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Apr. 20, 21
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Apr. 27, 28
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	May 4, 5
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	May 11, 12
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	May 18, 19
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	May 25, 26
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	June 1, 2
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	June 8, 9
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	June 15, 16
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	June 22, 23
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	June 29, 30
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	July 6, 7
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	July 13, 14
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	July 20, 21
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	July 27, 28
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Aug. 3, 4
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Aug. 10, 11
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Aug. 17, 18
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Aug. 24, 25
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Aug. 31, 1
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Sept. 7, 8
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Sept. 14, 15
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Sept. 21, 22
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Sept. 28, 29
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Oct. 5, 6
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Oct. 12, 13
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Oct. 19, 20
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Oct. 26, 27
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Nov. 2, 3
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Nov. 9, 10
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Nov. 16, 17
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Nov. 23, 24
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Nov. 30, 1
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Dec. 7, 8
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Dec. 14, 15
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Dec. 21, 22
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Dec. 28, 29
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Jan. 4, 5
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Jan. 11, 12
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Jan. 18, 19
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Jan. 25, 26
Trinity circuit, at Bogalusa	Jan. 31, 1

OPELUSAS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Jan. 26, 27
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Feb. 3, 4
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Feb. 10, 11
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Feb. 17, 18
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Feb. 24, 25
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Mar. 2, 3
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Mar. 9, 10
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Mar. 16, 17
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Mar. 23, 24
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Mar. 30, 31
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Apr. 6, 7
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Apr. 13, 14
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Apr. 20, 21
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Apr. 27, 28
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	May 4, 5
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	May 11, 12
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	May 18, 19
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	May 25, 26
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	May 31, 1
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	June 7, 8
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	June 14, 15
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	June 21, 22
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	June 28, 29
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	July 5, 6
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	July 12, 13
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	July 19, 20
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	July 26, 27
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Aug. 2, 3
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Aug. 9, 10
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Aug. 16, 17
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Aug. 23, 24
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Aug. 30, 31
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Sept. 6, 7
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Sept. 13, 14
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Sept. 20, 21
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Sept. 27, 28
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Oct. 4, 5
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Oct. 11, 12
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Oct. 18, 19
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Oct. 25, 26
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Oct. 31, 1
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Nov. 7, 8
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Nov. 14, 15
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Nov. 21, 22
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Nov. 28, 29
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Dec. 5, 6
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Dec. 12, 13
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Dec. 19, 20
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Dec. 26, 27
Washington circuit, at New Orleans	Dec. 31, 1

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

WOCHVILLE DIST.—SECOND ROUND.
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	Apr. 6, 7
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	Apr. 13, 14
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	Apr. 20, 21
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	Apr. 27, 28
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	May 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	May 11, 12
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	May 18, 19
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	May 25, 26
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	May 31, 1
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	June 7, 8
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	June 14, 15
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	June 21, 22
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	June 28, 29
Wilkinson circuit, at Percy Creek	July 5, 6

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 12.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MARCH 20, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1442.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

JHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FAIRBANKS, Editor.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HENNINGTON,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE STILL COUNTRY.

From the German of "Sally."
To the still land:
Ah! who shall lead us over:
Through o'er the evening hower,
And e'er more new wrecks drift to the strand,
Who leadeth us, with gentle hand,
Safe over, ah! safe over,
To the still land!
To the still land:
To you, ye larger places
Of boundless growth: congenial spaces
For youth's high dreams, fulfillment grant!
Who faithful in life's battle stand,
Hope's blossoming laurel grace
In the still land!
Ah, land! Ah, land!
To all earth's tempest-driven
At its kindest moment is given,
With torch leveled, beckoning light,
Who leadeth us, with gentle hand,
To the great land in heaven!
To the still land!
—Christian at Work.

Prohibition in Copiah Co., Miss.—Report of Woman's Missionary Society.—A Correction, etc.

The prohibition bill for Copiah county, Miss., has passed both Houses of the Legislature. It goes into effect May 1, 1885—the time agreed upon in the compromise between the whiskey dealers and the Prohibition Committee. We had a large majority of the legal voters of the county on the petition for prohibition, and these, in the most part, were our best citizens and largest property holders. A few good citizens, however, have not thought best to give their influence to this movement. Some fear it will lead to political trouble; others, that it will deplete the school fund, and others, again, that it will injure business. Every good cause is beset with difficulties because the whole world leeth in the wicked one. Satan has so wrapt himself around all the great interests of life as to preclude the possibility of effecting a reformation in anything without friction somewhere. Even the kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force; but it must be taken.

I am told that there was an excitement over this matter on the streets of one of our towns when the bill passed the House some days ago. No doubt there was an excitement in hell at that time, for whiskey is one of Satan's strongest allies; but that excitement should have reached our shores and found a response in the breasts of human beings is something over which to wonder and to weep.

Miss Annie Linfield, in the Advocate, of March 6, calls for explanations in regard to reports of the Woman's Missionary Society from several charges in our (Mississippi) Conference. I will explain for Crystal Springs. First, I included the amount raised by our juvenile society, as it was a creature of the Woman's Missionary Society, and operates under its supervision. Secondly, I included the entire Conference year—from December, 1882, to December, 1883—without regard to the time of the annual meeting of the Conference society, which is in April. I was making report not to the Conference society, but to the Annual Conference of the Conference year's work in my charge. Thirdly, I included the amounts on hand as reported to me, as well as the amounts that had been remitted, so as to give my church due credit for all she had done during the year for the cause of missions.

Bro. Harris will allow me to correct two errors in his "Reminiscences" of Coles Creek (now Fayette) circuit, Mississippi Conference, in the Advocate, of March 6. Speaking of his first visit to Coles Ridge Church, in 1845, he mentions Thomas Leighton, the class leader, and says, "If I remember rightly, Bro. Leighton had no sons." His name was George, and not Thomas, and he had four sons—two of whom, George and Charles, are still living; the other two, William and Samuel, are dead. When I went to that circuit as junior preacher, in 1860, Bro. George Leighton had gone to his reward; but his virtues were fresh in the memories of the living, and his name was like oil poured forth. His son, Samuel, was at that time superintendent of the Sunday-school at Coles Ridge, and a most excellent young man. He died in the army during the late war. B. F. Jones—to whom he also refers—died in February, 1860, and his place in that church has not yet been filled.

W. B. LEWIS.

CHURCH OF SPAIN, Mississippi.

Some Reasons for a Stock Law.

By a stock law I mean a law requiring every owner of live stock to keep them on his own land. There are several good reasons for the existence of such a law, especially in agricultural countries.

1. With such a law the expense of fencing would be greatly diminished. Fences in the United States have been estimated to cost more than all the stock in the country is worth. A small portion of each man's land being fenced would furnish pasture for all his stock. It is cheaper to fence stock in than to fence them out.

2. Cultivated land would thus be saved from the great injury of being trampled by stock in winter. The loss of the grazing of the fields would be more than compensated by their fertilization from the decay of all unharvested vegetation.

3. A considerable portion of each crop, now eaten up annually by stock breaking in upon the unharvested fields, would be saved. The annual loss from this source alone under the present system of fencing is, perhaps, one-tenth of the entire crop.

4. Much more land would be cultivated. Thousands of acres are now lying idle for lack of fencing. Timber is too scarce and plank and wire, as well as rails, are too costly for these lands ever to be brought into cultivation under the system now generally prevalent. The annual crop in many parts of the country would, perhaps, be increased by one-fourth or even one-third by a stock law.

5. Much more small grain would be sown. The loss to the farmers of Mississippi from the non-raising of crops of oats, millet, barley, wheat, and other small grain, is immense. In large portions of the State almost no small grain is sown solely for lack of fences to protect it from stock during winter.

6. Stock of all kinds would be greatly improved. Even in the great stock-raising regions of Kentucky, Texas, and other States, stock of all kinds is almost always kept in fenced pastures or in herds. We might have less stock, but we would have better. The promiscuous mingling of herds and general lack of shelter during winter are sources of great deterioration and loss. Even the law forbidding hogs to run at large in several counties in this State, for the last four years, has caused manifest improvement in the number and quality of hogs in these counties. Jersey and other improved breeds of cattle can not be successfully kept under our present system.

7. Without assigning further reasons, a fundamental and all-embracing reason for a stock law is, that right and justice require that every man should keep his stock on his own land. A deed to land embraces all its products and appurtenances. Growing crops are never aggressors. Roaming, jumping and devouring stock ought to be fenced or controlled by their owners. Only on the public domain may stock graze at liberty.

To these reasons there are some apparent objections:

1. Such a law deprives a poor man of pasture. Not at all. His stock may graze upon his landlord's pasture then as it now grazes upon his neighbor's commons. (How can land be common that is owned by individuals?) The poor man's lack of land stands upon the same reason with his lack of a house to live in, or animals to plow, or a full corn crib or a full purse. Society is under no more obligation to furnish the poor man pasture than anything else he needs.

2. The only real objection is the difficulty of abandoning a practical error. Having been long accustomed to treat all unfenced land as public property, and to compel every man at immense cost to fence against the stock of his neighbor, it is really not very easy to adopt the practice of justice and right. Both reason and Scripture plainly teach that it is every man's duty to restrain the animals he owns from injuring others. Right principles properly applied always produce good results. So soon as we become practically adjusted to the application of such a law, the whole country, landlords and tenants, will rejoice in its results, being surprised that they were so slow to seek them. Fence building is the Herculean task of American labor. It is the ever returning stone of Sisyphus, rolled to the mountain top, only to roll down that it may be rolled up again. Fences are being forever built and rebuilt to tumble down or be washed away. Friendly will that legislation be which shall permanently deliver the planting world from the enormous expense and intolerable labor of fence building except for inclosing stock. Such a law, too, would be decidedly in the interests of peace. Many a quarrel between neighbors arises about mischievous stock. Hard thoughts, personal enmities and even family feuds of many years' duration have not unfrequently owed their origin to the essential injustice of requiring one man to fence against another's stock. Once, in the days of old, it is said that devils were permitted to go from men into swine; in our times they sometimes seem to pass the other way, and cause the owners of the swine to say and do the hardest sort of things. If we are not prepared for such a law now, let us be looking toward it, for to it we must come ere long.

W. B. LEWIS.

CHURCH OF SPAIN, Mississippi.

Letter from California.

MR. EDITOR: Since writing you last we have been having floods of rain. For five years past but little rain had fallen and the seasons had been unusually dry even for California, and the times were becoming distressing. It is said that one more dry season would have bankrupted this country. The benefit from the recent rains is estimated at $1,000,000 to this country alone. The rains did much damage also. The Southern Pacific railroad was washed up in many places between San Francisco and Los Angeles, and the great tunnel caved in at both ends; trains were stopped for several days. This, the Sacramento Valley, was partially inundated. The town of Fresno, in Fresno county, north of here, was flooded, in some parts of it, five feet deep. All this was caused from the warm rains melting the snow in the mountains. Our little city lacked only two or three feet of being flooded. We are now having delightful, balmy spring weather; the fruit trees are in bloom and the ground is covered with a carpet of rich green grass. The rain and mud interfered with and broke up our union meeting before we had time to accomplish anything. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. R. P. Price, was with us recently and gave us a week's preaching. He is a native of California, and his disposition is as genial as his climate. He is without any undue affectation of style or manner—an excellent preacher.

The ladies have organized a Woman's Missionary Society in this place, auxiliary to the Pacific Conference Society, making the fourth auxiliary society only in the entire Conference. The people are very indifferent concerning the missionary cause, and some are openly opposed to it, and especially to mission work in China. They say that the Chinese here have disgusted them with the race. They do not take into consideration the fact that the Chinese who come to this country are of the lowest class of Celestials, and that we should not judge the whole Chinese race by those who are among us. It is generally the worse class of any nation who emigrate. What are the first impressions that are made on heathen nations concerning us as a people? We form an intercourse with them first usually through a commercial treaty, which allows our trading vessels to enter their ports and our merchants to establish themselves in their centers of trade. The sailors are usually a drunken, wicked class, too mean to live and not fit to die. The merchants engaged in foreign trade are generally ungodly men. What kind of impression is made, I repeat, on the mind of the heathen concerning us and our boasted civilization? Suppose they were governed by these first impressions, then would their homes be closed against our missionaries and their hearts against that Christ whom we profess to follow. Doubtless these first impressions have had their evil influences on the heathen world; but, thank God! they have had the good judgment to yield to better influences and teachings, and multiplied thousands of them are annually converted to the Christian faith.

There is, perhaps, only about ten per cent. of the citizens of this State (including children over ten years of age) who are professed Christians. Ninety-nine out of every hundred of the children and youth under twenty-one years are out of any church. They seem to regard the church as an institution designed solely for the benefit of old people. It is nothing uncommon for boys to go hunting on Sundays while their parents go to church, and the parents seem to think it is all right.

We have no Sunday law in this State, be it said to its shame. I am told that a Sunday law existed on the statute books until the meeting of the last Legislature, which had a Democratic majority, when it was repealed. It was never enforced, and they claimed that it was inoperative; but why they repealed it and made no other in its place is a question for grave reflection. Last Sunday, in this town, some were fence building; others were spading up their yards and others playing croquet; while off in the distance could be heard the sportsman's gun, and up on Main street bar rooms, billiard saloons, candy shops and gambling halls were open all day. It is a living disgrace to any State for such things to exist. Candor compels me to say these things. This is a rich country and these a prosperous people, but immeasurably poor toward God. I will write again by-and-by.

J. W. FOLSON.

VIRGINIA, CAL., Feb. 28, 1884.

Paine Institute.

By the joint action of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America the "Paine Institute" has been begun, but in a hired house. The trustees desire to secure at once permanent quarters for it. To do so they have sought to reduce expenses to the minimum, and increase through some economical method of collection the income of the institution. At their recent meeting they determined to ask the church to give the institution an amount equal to three cents per member. This amount will procure grounds and buildings, and put the institution in position to secure help from other sources for its future maintenance. If the commissioner of education was charged with collecting this amount it would be necessary to pay his salary and traveling expenses, which would reduce the amount received for the institute. To ask the preachers in charge to collect it was adjudged not wise, seeing they have so many collections already. It was determined, therefore, to ask the presiding elders to undertake to raise an amount equal to three cents per member. Their superior judgment and discretion, and the fact that in the territory occupied by a district there are always a number of broad-minded men to whom to appeal, are reasons why it was thought the presiding elders could, without great inconvenience, do this work. The board leaves it to the wisdom of each brother to raise the amount by public or private appeal, as he may judge best, and only asks that it be done early in the year.

Now, this long quotation from the appeal of the Board of Trustees for Paine Institute sets this matter in a clear light. The request is reasonable. Surely one or two generous, broad-minded men can be found in each presiding elder's district who will give an amount equal to three cents per member for this good cause. The appeal is made in the name of Christ, for the glory of God and for the good of our fellow-men.

The aggregate amount from the several districts of the North Mississippi Conference would be only $913. What a small sum this for so great and so noble a work, and how appropriate that we give this amount during this centennial year of American Methodism. Send the money to Rev. J. E. Evans, D. D., Macon, Ga. GILDEROY.

Prosperous Mission Work.

MR. EDITOR: Never before did our German mission work give me such pleasure as during the first round of Quarterly Conferences which closed with that of Buetoiville, East Feliciana parish, on last Sunday. Prosperity is noticeable all along the line. Visiting the various fields in the country, the immigrants heed not large distance or bad roads, but gladly come to hear the word of God in their mother tongue. The familiar accents awaken reminiscences of former days, of life in the fatherland, of religious vows made to God and sacred promises made to parents, and tears thick and oftentimes penitential pour down the cheeks of the brawny hearers. I am grateful to our church that it affords me and my colleagues to carry on this blessed mission-work. From Texas, too, reports assure that our work there is healthily progressing. During the first Quarterly Conference of Llano circuit two young men were licensed to preach. Pray for us.

Yours truly,

J. H. A. ADAMS.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

CHAIRMAN, REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D.,

SECRETARY, REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.,

TREASURER, JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH,

Centenary Spirit and Methods.

"This year, 1884, has been set apart for special exertions in behalf of church extension, education and foreign missions. Every element of future Methodism is recognized herein, while they are precisely those forms of enterprise most in accordance with her past historic development."

The very fact that this is our Centenary should elevate our thoughts to a higher plane and enlarge the sphere of our activities. Methodism is on trial this year. Her polity, doctrines, history—all are passing under review. Her place amid the factors in our Christian civilization is being closely scanned. Shall thoughtful minds of other churches alone be turned to these questions? Self-knowledge has ever been commended as the greatest wisdom. Each individual Methodist should be on trial before himself to see how fully he understands and appreciates our Methodist history, how largely he has experienced the great truths set forth in her doctrines. The measure of that knowledge and experience will be the measure of his interest and of his liberality during Centenary year. Nothing can be expected of those who are ignorant of our history or wanting in Christian experience. The monumental offerings of Centenary year will be made by the enlightened and the spiritual. What is this year more than any other to the Methodist who knows nothing of the wonderful century just closing, and whose religious life is too weak to keep any birthdays with holy gratitude? In many quarters the fondest hopes for Centenary year are being realized, in the great spiritual quickening of our people. The revival notices are read with eagerness. Already several thousand conversions have been reported since the fall Conference adjourned. Many a preacher has sung and prayed with flowing tears:

Lord, I hear of showers of blessings
Thou art scattering, full and free
Showers of the thirsty land refreshing,
Let some droppings fall on me
Even me; even me;
Let thy blessing fall on me.

His prayer has become the passion of his life. His desire for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit shows itself in his very tones of voice in the pulpit and in private. Others catch his spirit. Soon "two or three are agreed as touching the thing that they shall ask," while importunate and untold prayer rends the heavens, and showers of blessings fall on many a thirsty heart. Shall there be a single pastor, in our connection to report a barren ministry this year of abounding grace, 1884? Nay, let us expect large things of God this year. Our numerical strength, including ministers and laymen, according to the showing soon to be printed, is over nine hundred thousand souls. Who does not see that we ought to make it a million before the close of our Centenary year? One hundred thousand souls converted to God this year is not too large a blessing to crave and labor for in faith. There were times, particularly about the year 1800, when, under the ministry of the fathers, the increase was proportionately much larger than that in one year. With like faith and singleness of purpose we will have our heart's desire. Many pastors are writing for information about methods. The methods are easily suggested if the spirit be not lacking; but methods can not take the place of the spirit. We are called Methodists because the spirit that was in our fathers fashioned channels of activity hitherto unknown. So it will be again, with our hearts and hands ready for the Master's work. The greatest need of Centenary year is a people prepared for the Lord. Then will Jesus again see the rich casting their gifts into the treasury, and the poor widow bringing her mites, even all her living.

The spiritual preparation opens the way for the great mass meetings in our cities and towns, and at our District Conferences and college commencements, when the key-note of a large liberality shall be sounded that shall be followed up not only on Centenary day, but throughout the year. Let nothing exhaust our liberality that could be attended to as well any other year. Improve your churches, remove all indebtedness, build parsonages, if this can be done over and above your gifts to the great national objects set forth for your Centenary thank-offering. But leave anything undone rather than neglect those great interests. Think of them until the mind expands to take them in, and your share of the two million dollars asked for in their behalf. Can any one think of less than one-tenth of his capital as at all meeting his obligation to God this Centenary year? Is that too much to give to Christ, to whom you profess that yourself, as well as all that you have, belongs? On such a basis of giving as that, would we have any difficulty in securing the two millions needed? Let us educate ourselves "in larger ideas, in broader sympathies, in wider ranges of exertion," so that when we fill the subscription cards for church extension, education and missions on Centenary day, it may indeed be as the Lord hath prospered us.

E. R. HENDRIX.

Another Notice.

Remember, brethren, the time is at hand when the treasurer must put his annual report in press. Send your collections for foreign missions forward so as to reach him on or before March 20, or this report must go to press with you left out.

H. A. YOUNG, Secy.

NASHVILLE, TENN., March 7, 1884.

"I have a belief of my own and it comforts me, that by desiring what is perfectly good, even when we don't quite know what it is, and can not do what we would, we are part of a divine power against evil, widening the skirts of light, and making the struggle with darkness narrower."—George Eliot.

—Never was there a time when there was a more urgent necessity for preaching God's holy law in all its scope of righteous demand and just penalty. Never was there a time when the popular conscience needed a more thorough tuning up.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MARCH 20, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

Oh! beautiful world, in which we live,
Please tell us who did you bring here?
And tell us who gave the sun-bright light
And tell us who gave the stars by night?

And tell us who gave the morning gray,
Who painted the sunset's golden ray,
Who makes their anguish all rejoice,
And tunes our hearts to devotion's voice?

And tell us who gave your cloak of green,
Who gave us eyes to gaze on the scene,
Who made it all bloom to please our sight,
Thus adding devotion's keen delight?

THE ANSWER.
This world, sir, is but a beautiful cloud,
Fashioned, as made by the hand of God;
Let worship, then, all to him be given,
And far brighter scenes will be in heaven.

Sunday-School Lesson.

PREPARED BY REV. CHRISTIAN KRAMER.

First Quarter—Lesson XII.

SUNDAY, MARCH 17, 1884.—11 THESSALONIANS III.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Be not weary in well doing;"—11 Thessalonians III, 13.

CHRISTIAN DILIGENCE.

Our lesson is the closing chapter of Paul's second letter to the Thessalonians. In his first he wrote concerning the Lord's advent, with the purpose of correcting certain erroneous opinions in regard to the effect of that coming upon those who were asleep in Christ; but his deliverances upon the subject, so far from correcting these errors, gave rise to new ones, more damaging than the old. There should be great contentment in any attempt to correct a false opinion, which has become popular by the measure of truth it contains. If you can not separate the truth from the error so distinctly that the minds of the people can keep them separate you had better reject the whole without attempting any explanation whatever.

The result of Paul's teaching upon the Lord's coming set every mind to pondering upon this mysterious subject, and there sprang up in the church of Thessalonica a numerous band of Adventists, who did nothing but look for the Lord's coming. The church of all ages has been troubled by these unreasonable fanatics. They are the work of Satan, perverting in their unfaithful souls that grace of patient and persevering endurance which is connected with the hope of Christ's coming, and constituting the chief hope and inspiring impulse of the church militant. The characteristics of these lookers for the Lord are always the same. They cease working; their presence paralyzes all missionary effort; a sudden halt is called upon all aggressive movement, whether in the church or in personal growth in grace. The day of his coming is so near that there is no time nor opportunity for conversion of the world. Nothing must be entertained; and, besides in ominous tones, they tell you that the sun of the world's iniquity is full, the saints have suffered and toiled enough, and under the shade of their own quick grown piety they sit down to await the judgment. At this juncture of affairs we are not surprised to hear Paul say, Brethren, pray for us—for Silas, Timothy and himself—that the word of the Lord, which we preach, may have free course and be glorified as it is in you. As opposed to the retraction which these Adventists were putting upon the gospels, he would have them offer prayer that the word of the Lord, as they preached it, might run and spread speedily, with no drag upon the wheels of its progress. That the new creating word may run as swiftly as the creative word at first. "The word of God is not bound; it prospers in the thing whereto I sent it." In spite of unreasonable men and the stony barriers which raise their impregnable front about the frontiers of unbelief. This awful power to keep out of the heart this mighty word does not arrest the free course of the gospel of the Son of God.

Now his prayer changes in its object from himself to them. That may be delivered from unreasonable and wicked men, for all men have not faith, but the Lord is faithful, who will establish you. He turns away from asking prayer for his deliverance to assuring them. He tells them the only antidote to what is unreasonable and wicked is the Christian's faith. That the answer to their faith was the Lord's faithfulness. Though many have not faith, yet the Lord abideth faithful; he can not deny himself. Oh! what could we place against the organized forces of the world's unbelief had we not the assurance that "he is just and faithful to forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness." He tells them that his confidence in them was in the Lord not leaving them. We may well have confidence in no man left to himself; nay, we can not trust our own hearts; but in the Lord we may have confidence in the final perseverance of the weakest saint. Now the prayer rises. The Lord direct your hearts unto the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ. We prefer the text just as we find it here—awaiting for the Lord, which is full of loving service, which wears not in well doing, but endures as seeing him that is invisible—a grace to work and serve while we look and hope for his coming. This Lord is the Holy Ghost. The three persons of the Trinity are wonderfully grouped in this portion. How appropriate his appeal to this guiding Spirit, whose office is to lead us into all truth, and by way of the Son, who can only reveal the Father.

In the name of the Lord Jesus he commands them, of all that walk disorderly "to steer clear," to give them over to their own company, that they may come to a sense of their own shame, and repent. The disorder seemed to grow out of a sort of fanatical religious laziness. The day of the Lord was at hand, and they would not work, like a set of children demoralized and disorderly on the verge of a holiday. These Adventists assumed the air of an angel, and worked not, as if they needed no food. Paul ordered their rations cut off, and commanded the church to foster this laziness no longer by feeding them. If they would not work they should not eat.

The mendicant friars, that order who have reduced such a disorderly and lazy life into their system, would not have been countenanced by this apostle. Maybe Paul's laboring with his own hands for his support, and valuing his right to wages, was his way of preaching against the laziness of that age, and a rebuke to the teachers of that time. No man could accuse him of preaching for filthy lucre or for his bread and board, a charge, by the way, not unheard of in the mouth of the world, nor altogether unfounded. There are professional whose highest conception of the ministry is that it furnishes a "living." The apostle shows a little quarter to the busy-bodies as to idlers, doing none of their own business, and overloading every one's business but their own. Nature abhors a vacuum; one must do something; if not his own, his neighbor's business. Idleness is the parent of busybodies. Among the intermeddling officiousness of these dissenters how timely his prayer. The Lord of peace give you peace always and by all means, inward and outward, in all places, here and hereafter.

A Remarkable Robbery.

Mr. Editor: Havana, a quiet village in Hale county, Ala., was startled on the morning of February 22, 1884, by the news of a remarkable robbery, which took place the previous night. W. L. Martin, one of our merchants, having business in Mobile, was absent. Mr. J. M. Brown, an efficient clerk, who had charge of his store and the postoffice, having closed up at the usual hour on the evening of the twenty-first, retired to his room for the night. The next morning, on returning to his business, he was paralyzed to find the house had been broken into by thieves. They entered by making a hole in the wall large enough for the hand, by the use of an auger, just opposite the bolt which secured the shutter of the window, and removing the bar. Goods and papers were scattered promiscuously over the floor, and the iron safe lying with face up, on bolts of cloth, with the lock and door bursted to pieces by powder. The powder was evidently inserted through the key hole, and the bolts of goods used to draw, as far as possible, the sound of the explosion. The report was heard by several persons in the community, but no one suspected it was anything more than the report of a gun or pistol. Mr. Martin estimates his loss at about three hundred dollars. In addition to a few hats, a pair of shoes, a suit of cloth, a pistol, various articles of light goods, all the jewelry, razors and cutlery in the store, they secured about sixty dollars in cash and fifty dollars' worth of postage stamps. Fortunately for Mr. Martin, he took with him to Mobile most all the money on hand. Up to this writing no discovery has been made as to the perpetrators of the crime. The only evidence that there were two or more is one man could not have handled the iron safe, which weighs at least a thousand pounds. Suspicion strongly rests upon a man signing his name Morton, who passed through here on January 15, pretending to represent an oil company in Baltimore, Md. He was affable, well dressed, rode in a splendid buggy, drawn by two elegant horses. On entering the store he introduced himself to Mr. Martin, and presented the following card:

STANDARD TANK LINE CO., REFINERS OF OIL,
—And Dealers in—Lamps, Burners, Chimneys, Wicks, etc.,
Baltimore, Md.

He stated that he was here for the purpose of building up a trade in Alabama, and proposed to sell oil lower than the usual price. His manner was so courteous, his proposition so fair, and terms so low, that he soon succeeded in selling Mr. Martin five barrels of oil, to be delivered at his depot and paid for at his next visit, which was to be in ninety days. Having succeeded in this trade, he then represented his company as being the exclusive dealers in an article which they guaranteed to prevent the explosion of lamps. As a test, he called for a lamp, had it filled, put something in it, set the wick on fire, turned it down into the oil, and let it burn for some minutes. As further evidence that it was a sure preventive, he held the lamp over a hot fire, and gradually let the contents run out in a small stream within a few inches of the blaze. This was a demonstration sufficient to convince the most incredulous, and he sold Mr. Martin a number of packages for $30 each. The contents of these packages seem to be nothing more than coal dust and utterly worthless. After the lapse of six weeks, and the five barrels of oil did not come, Mr. Martin began to suspect that he had been deceived, and addressed a letter to "the Standard Tank Line Co., Baltimore, Md.," which letter was turned over by the postoffice authorities to the "United Oil Co., of Baltimore," who replied that they had received twelve or fifteen such communications from Alabama within the last few weeks, and that there was no such firm in Baltimore, and in their opinion is entirely fictitious.

I have written at length in order that others may be protected from such swindles, and that Morton, if that be his name, may be detected in his illicit traffic. As a protection to Society, secular papers would do well to copy this communication.

A. M. JONES.

HAVANA, ALA., Feb. 29, 1884.
P. S.—Since writing the above I understand that the same Morton went on to Achron, a small place, about ten miles distant, and effected a similar trade to that with Mr. Martin, and at same point on the railroad told the driver that urgent business called him to Selma, and that he would meet him at Centerville the next day. The driver made his way to the appointed place, but only to learn, after waiting a few days, that the oil dealer did not put in his appearance. The report is that the buggy and team were hired from a livery stable in Birmingham, Ala., and that they have long since been restored to the disappointed owner.

A. M. J.

Retrospective.

FIFTH PAPER.

In my last I wrote about the Hope-well appointment, on the Wilkinson circuit. I have a few other incidents to narrate. If "variety is the spice of life," may it not sometimes occur that the itinerant's life is over-spiced? This writer thought so one well-remembered night he awoke near Buffalo creek. An invitation was accepted to spend a night with a man who informed me that the preacher rarely came to his house, and he hoped not to be slighted by his new preacher. On reaching his place I found the surroundings neither pleasant nor tasteful. If he excelled in any one characteristic it was in talking. After prayers I was shown to a room, a shed-room, which was used as a convenient place to store away all sorts of useless trumpery. In one corner was a rude home-made bed scaffold, with bedding to correspond; the floor was made of split pinecones, by no means closely jointed; laying beneath was an old cow with young pigs. It was at a time of the year when frogs croak, mosquitoes awar, and search for supper, and flies are active. Superadded to these luxuries (7) varieties, the bedstead was alive with night-travelers. It required only a moment's reflection to take in the situation. Intending to leave my close quarters as soon as the family retired, and spend the night in walking exercise, meditation and prayer, in the adjacent plinery, I inquired of mine host, as he was taking leave, if in the event I had occasion to go out with your dogs interrupt me? "Yes, sir," he replied; "don't you leave the room without first calling me; my dogs are very severe." Bidding me good-night (anything else to me but good), he left me in miserable solitude. My readers can better imagine than I describe my feelings, for surely the sense of feeling was most acute to many touches during this memorable night. The sow and pigs would not lay still, the fine dust would rise, the flies hopped, while the bugs did the best for themselves, and the mosquitoes the worst for me. I will only add that through the night I sat on the bed railing, having sufficient employment for hands, head and heart. Like the anchored mariners we read about, I "wished for the day" to come to pursue my journey under more comfortable auspices. On leaving next morning I was "invited to visit them often, with assurance that I would always be welcome."

I have never admired a preacher who is over-squeamish, but such fare as the above indicates should be given in broken doses, or not at all.

A few reflections. I have observed that a tidy, industrious wife greatly improves the uncouth manners and habits of a careless and unpropitious husband, while a striking, palpitating husband, adjusting things convenient and tasty in appearance, about home premises, the wife will be encouraged to cleanliness and frugality.

Somewhere not distant from the place described above I spent a pleasant night with a clever man, who "lived off of the road and took no papers." It was soon after the telegraph wires connected Woodville with distant points. This man had just returned from Woodville, where he was informed that messages were being received from New York in Woodville in a few seconds. He went home wondering how this could be. Said he: "I want you to tell me how it is possible for a letter to start on the wire at New York and come whizzing all the way to Woodville without testing it all to hindert?" A little explanation greatly relieved his mind.

I had an appointment not far from the Homochitto river, where there had been a marked improvement in the morals of the people since Bro. Thomas Griffin preached to them in the early settlement of that country. I will relate an incident as told to me by one of the early settlers, well posted in the history of that country, and was acquainted with Bro. Griffin in his palmy days. This gentleman informed me that when that country was first settled the people, generally, were in the habit of hunting, fishing, horse-racing and grinding corn, etc., on the Sabbath; only a few inclined to religion of any sort. About this time a camp meeting was held, at which a large concourse of people were in attendance. Griffin preached at eleven o'clock on Sunday morning. In his sermon he portrayed in striking colors (as few could) the wickedness of the people, giving them to understand that they had sold themselves to the devil. Said the preacher: "We read of a time when the Saviour was tempted by the devil, who took him up into an exceeding high mountain and showed him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, and promised all these things if he would fall down and worship him."

"But," said the preacher, "I imagine the devil clapped his thumb over all this Homochitto country, kept it concealed, never offered this part of his domain, but reserved it for himself." Such had been the improvement in the morals of the people, when included in the Wilkinson circuit, that churches were erected, the Sabbath observed, with a respectable membership in the churches, and law-abiding citizens. I remember to have taken occasion at one of my week day appointments, before taking up a missionary collection, to refer to their former condition, as above related, and compare it with their improved state of affairs, attributing the improvement to the influence of the gospel, and that they should show their appreciation by contributing to their means to send the gospel to others needing its benign influence. I remember the collection amounted to twenty dollars. Snayra and Friendship were good appointments where we had a pious and intelligent membership. Many of those good brethren I still cherish in fondest memory. In my next I may speak of my pastoral charge at Bethel, Midway and Perry's creek.

D. M.

MARSHALL, TEXAS, Feb. 15, 1884.

Letter from Inka.

Mr. Editor: You will please pardon my digression which I may cause you to make in your regular routine by this correspondence. But it is my nature to understand things as I come across them in my readings, and I hope that any effort I may make to gain light and information on subjects of importance will not be construed into censoriousness or impertinence on my part; far from it. I love to seek knowledge from my superiors, both in age and experience.

In a certain work we find the following language: "All substances of this material class (speaking of the works of nature) are said to be governed by the laws of nature, and these laws are considered unchangeable." Again: "A law in itself can exert no independent causative influence on any substance whatever." Again: "To assert that material things are governed by the laws of nature independently of any immediate influence from God is the same as to say that they are not governed at all."

The argument here is intended against fatalism. But to assert that the laws of nature are unchangeable, the argument against fatalism is not strengthened at all by arguing that God holds a grasp on the laws of nature. And the argument that the same agency of God which gave these laws their being and influence must still be perpetuated at every step in the processes of nature and throughout every instant of duration, or those laws become extinct, and their influence is lost, does not militate against fatalism if the laws are unchangeable.

The theory itself seems to me very much akin to fatalism in that nature's laws are unchangeable and that God executes these laws. If, as is alleged, the laws adapted to every species of creation were in the beginning foreordained to be unalterable or unchangeable, then any interpolation of God would be of no avail. According to the argument, God is only the executor of the laws promulgated in the beginning, which is a very narrow view of God's office as related to us. In the instance that the laws of nature are unchangeable, how can God, moved by sympathy for us, in his infinite love for his people, interpose the foreordained course of law to make it transpire otherwise than in the beginning decreed. Hence stumbled just at this point in his opposition to miracles. He held that miracles were contrary to the course of nature. His argument, however, that it was contrary to experience was just the reverse of what was true. It was contrary to ignorance in regard to miracles. It was inexperience rather than experience. The very fact of miracles teaches either the revelation of some new law, hitherto unknown to us, or unnoticed by us, or else teaches the alterableness of the laws of nature.

The idea that God does interpose changes in his laws is neither impossible nor inconsistent. It does not rob God of any wisdom nor foreknowledge. He may do these things to meet the exigencies of human life, and completely harmonize present and yet perfectly comport with his foreknowledge. It is neither contrary to the justice of God nor to his potentiality. He would interpose in behalf of his loyal subjects or to subvert some calamity from them, or also for the punishment of the wicked. It could have no other object in view since man is the delegated lord of creation. For he created man for his own glory, and in order to make man the most capable of glorifying, he made every other order of creation subservient to him, in order to develop him to the highest order of created being. As for his capabilities no one will deny that he has the power to do whatever he wishes with the machine which he has made. And unless it is possible for God to change the course of nature miracles are an impossibility—prayer and its concomitants would be in vain. Hence taught that the course of nature is unaltered, but not unalterable. It would be no more inconsistent with the Divine permissions for God to alter laws of nature than to retract one of his decrees; "yet forty days and Ninveh shall be destroyed." Yet God did not execute that decree, which is but one of many co-ordinate instances in the Bible.

What are your views upon this subject? By answering the above question you will oblige.

Yours fraternally,

C. H. G.

Marriages.

BAIRD-SMITH.—At the residence of the bride's uncle, Dr. C. M. Adams in Sanford, Fla., on Thursday evening, February 21, 1884, Rev. H. K. Kellum officiating. Mr. C. E. Baird, of Interlochen, Fla., and Miss Lena Smith, of Canton, Miss.

MCCLESKEY GARY.—At the residence of the bride's step-father, November 21, 1883, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, Mr. James McCleskey and Miss Lassa Gary, all of Marshall county, Miss.

HENDERSON-MCNALLY.—At the residence of the bride's brother-in-law, December 13, 1883, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, Mr. H. B. Henderson and Miss Susie McNally, all of Holly Springs, Miss.

TIPLER-PREWITT.—In the Baptist Church, Grand Junction, Tenn., December 19, 1883, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, Mr. Thomas Tipler and Miss Sallie Prewitt, all of Grand Junction.

PREWITT-TIPLER.—In the Baptist Church, Grand Junction, Tenn., December 19, 1883, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, Mr. Joseph Prewitt and Miss Mary Tipler, all of Grand Junction.

ATERY-MELTON.—At the residence of Rev. R. Young, Corinth, Miss., December 29, 1883, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, Mr. John Avery and Miss Fannie Melton.

DAVIS-MERREL.—At the residence of the bride's father, January 15, 1884, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, Mr. G. L. Davis, of Corinth, Miss., and Miss Helen Merrel, of Inka, Miss.

MARTIN-EMMONS.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Corinth, Miss., March 4, 1884, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, Mr. S. B. Martin, and Miss M. T. Emons, a native of Alabama county, Miss.

MCCRARY-MARTEN.—At the residence of the bride's father in Holmes county, Miss., February 20, 1884, by Rev. R. T. Davis, Mr. G. Henderson McCrary and Miss Fannie W. Marten, granddaughter of Rev. J. A. Bird.

SMITH-BURNELL.—At the residence of Mr. Thomas Mangum, in Yazoo county, Miss., February 24, 1884, by Rev. R. T. Davis, Mr. John E. Smith, of Galveston, Texas, to Miss Maggie Burnell, of Yazoo county, Miss.

ELLIOTT-BOWMAN.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Haden, Yazoo county, Miss., February 29, 1884, by Rev. Thomas W. Adams, Mr. Leo and C. Elliott to Miss Rickie Bowman, all of Yazoo county, Miss.

COLLINS-PERKINS.—At the residence of Mr. John Garry, of Yazoo county, Miss., January 24, 1884, by Rev. Thomas W. Adams, Mr. J. C. Collins to Miss Virginia Perkins, all of Yazoo county, Miss.

Obituaries.

LUFER—Miss SALLIE FLORENCE LUFER, eldest daughter of Rev. J. W. and M. A. Lufer, was born at Ripley, Miss., November 15, 1867 and died at Grenada, Miss., January 19, 1884.

In her day she was a devoted Christian, and a faithful member of the Methodist church. She was a faithful member until her death. With her Christianity was a reality, and her religion was genuine; therefore, her life was consistent, her influence good and her example worthy of imitation. Being a positive Christian, she was active in the performance of such work as would tend to advance the interests of the church, and was ever ready to follow the path of duty whether it led through pleasant fields and pleasing scenes or through toils and cares, sacrifices and self-denials. She was prayerful, and it was her habit after participating in the regular family worship to retire to her room for the purpose of reading her Bible, with meditation and prayer, ere she closed her eyes in sleep. But hitherto as was her Christian life while she was in the enjoyment of youthful health and vigor, it was in the time of a great calamity and terrible physical suffering that it burst forth in all of its brightness.

On December 28, 1883, while at school in Grenada, her clothes caught fire from a grate and she was terribly burned. We can not conceive the intense suffering she endured through the burning weeks, but we know that at times the pain was excruciating; yet under it all she was patient and submissive, and with smiles and words thanked those around for their sympathetic looks and kindly acts. In all her suffering she thought of others, and on one occasion when a beloved sister came to the bedside and stooped to kiss her she said, "Pray for me!" and, on being then asked by that sister if she was suffering much, answered in a whisper, so that her mother who was near might not hear: "Yes, yes, so much; but I do not wish mother to know because it will only cause her more sorrow."

Her trust was in God. He gave her sustaining grace, and she left this "everlasting arms" beneath her. Thus she lived and suffered until the day of her deliverance came, when peacefully she passed away. Her life on earth was short, but it has left an impress for good on the hearts of her associates. As she lived, so she died a Christian, so she must have a Christian's home in glory, where by the grace of God we can all after a little while meet her to live and live forever.

C. N. T.

COOPER—R. E. COOPER was born in the State of Georgia, April, 1831; moved to Marion county, Miss., with a wife and mother, about the year 1850; then to Lawrence county, 1859; was married to Mrs. P. Williams, in January, 1861, with whom he lived happily until his death, which occurred on the night of December 31, 1883.

He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, several years ago. I do not know the exact time, and am not informed as to the exact time of his conversion; but that he was converted I have no doubt. Bro. Cooper, though a man of delicate health, was an euer-getic and persevering man, a good citizen, a true friend, a loving husband, a Christian gentleman—one that will be sadly missed in the community in which he lived. He was a sort of leading spirit in his neighborhood, and those who knew him best loved him most. He loved the church, and his house was always a welcome place for the preaching. He contributed largely to the building of a Methodist Church, last year, and was the leader in that enterprise, assisted by the willing hands of his neighbors. He only lived to enjoy a very few services in his new church, but long enough to see a church organized in it, and now his body sleeps near it—the first one laid there.

We all miss Bro. Cooper, but none so sadly as his beloved companion. May the Lord comfort and sustain her by his grace in this her sad bereavement, and enable her to bear up under it. Bro. Cooper is gone, but has left a good name, which is rather to be chosen than great riches. While he resided from his labors he works may follow him. Though he is not permitted to occupy a seat in his new church, we feel confident that he has a place in one of those mansions prepared for the faithful in our Father's house.

H. A. H.

BUTLER—Mrs. P. P. BUTLER was born in Georgia, May 25, 1814, and died near Spring Ridge, La., March 1, 1884. Her maiden name was Butler, and she was married to P. P. Butler, her cousin, in 1839.

Thus the union of nearly fifty-five years is at last severed by the decree of him in whose name it was consummated. Many children were the result of this union; some of whom have preceded their mother to the grave, and some now mourn her loss. Her husband and several of her children years ago joined the Baptist Church; but she until a few years ago, while having great respect for all Christians, withheld application to any body for admission, but, finally, cast her lot with the Methodists.

Even before her profession of faith her life was exemplary and consistent, and afterward she simply kept on in her unobtrusive way until her weary feet carried her to the gates of rest. She left no "dying words," but she left behind a life of enviable record as wife and mother. She was not widely known; but she sought no distinction except the favor of her Maker. I have known her intimately all my life, and can bear testimony to her true worth and sincerity of purpose. She has gone, like Rachel, to her rest amid the mourning of her people, leaving the priceless heritage of a noble life.

P. E. BUTLER.

GREEN—Died, in Saintville, Sumter county, Fla., December 11, 1883, EUGENE, infant son of Dr. J. S. and M. A. Green, aged three months. He was frail and delicate, and God saw fit to take him to himself. Although we mourn for him, we know that he is better off.

M. A. G.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Positively the most economical soap to use for the toilet is the Ivory Soap. The cakes are so large that you really get twenty cents worth of soap for a dime.

PHOTOGRAPHS!

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WA' HBURNS

Photographic Parlors.

109 CANAL STREET.

Are attended within a block of the principal hotels and almost directly opposite the City Square. You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever. We make every kind of portrait known to the art from the miniature for the locket to the life-size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon or Oil. Skilled and talented photographers and engravers and the likeness faithfully preserved.

W. G. WHEELER,

Clothing and Furnishing

GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to

WHEELER & PIERSON,

86 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS

FOLDED EVEN.

Folded eyes, from which the sunlit
 Faded, leaving us in shade :
 In the light which fadesb never,
 Is it true, as poet said,
 Still beholding in unfolding,
 Glories that are never knew,
 Folded eyes see brighter colors
 Than the open ever do."

Let it here be added that he speaks truth, not merely as lodged in head, but lodged and living in the heart. The effective preacher has simply clear, theoretic knowledge, but especially a deep experiential knowledge of the grand system of doctrines. It has all been authenticated in the conflicts and triumphs of his own breast. He speaks what he does know. He testifies what he has suffered. Nothing can be more fatal to a preacher's influence and success than through ignorance or narrow and contracted views of doctrine, to have of the same discomfited or different courses in the same vicinity, stand to each other in a belligerent attitude. One paragraph undoes the impression his materials, but who gloms from every exterior quarter, of co takes them on trust, and will them often devoid of interest or cacy. If he picks up arrows wa others have thrown they will prove to be blunt arrows. But makes his own breast a labora and then casts and shapes his p and burnishes his weapons, he he far more likely to have those are likely to do the work (Inte Heart answers to heart, swallow the product of heart. It feels comes from this fountain of fee hence the power of experience, the necessity that the preacher, will have power, be a man o perience; one who has not merely otherwise he will reason without understanding any conviction, and in his fervid appeals he will awaken no particle of emotion, all well enough may be, for another order of being, but not in the least suited to the hearer the preacher has before him. The whole elaborate and masterly production goes completely over the head of the enlightened, and the hearts to be affected. In order to any practical effect on common minds the preacher must consent to keep down where the minds live, move and have their being. He must consent to think and feel as they do. They are men of this world on probation for another, and so is it very unfortunate for him to forget that he is a sublimity being, some forget this most egregiously. They ment they begin to move they aloft. They leave the region of business and real life and mount to the domains of halloons, and sometimes we are compelled to infer it is for the same reason, because they are. Influ When men, living, active, temperate, are understood and aimed at ent to sin just to get on the But through the process of generation God saved proper to introduce perfect savior who took away the sin engendered by generation, Gilderoy

"Man is of his own nature inclined evil." The fact of little sin, or missin, or no actual sin, has nothing to the world to do with, the question being born again. The noble being all sinners, it is innate ingrati-the very worst and warp of our belief
From this Gilderoy would have believe that conversion, regeneration or the new birth would change evil passion, temperament and natural inclination so that a man never feels again that he is a sinner. But, I read the Bible. I find the conver-man having just the same nature had before, but most gloriously in subjection to the spirit, or new which has formed in his soul the of glory. And the sword of the placed in his hands to cut off of clay is to be handed to cruci-lusts of the flesh. Not only so was taught that these evil, which are tailed upon us by generation, of w Gilderoy says the shack of sin, are transformed as we enter the pro-rise from its lonely slumber.
The apostle Paul is quoted as pro-calvinists say when one falls grace that he never was conve
David's language, as quoted by G

LITTLE FOALS.

-Children

Mr. Editor: As I see so many little girls and boys writing to your interesting paper, and as I have never written but once, I write again, hoping to be the first published soon. My paper is the pastor of the church at this place. We have a flourishing Sunday-school and I love to go very much. I mean as your excellent superintendent. We all like him very much. I will answer Gerlie Roane's question. No man has ever discovered the secrets of Moses. As this is our Centennial year, I will ask your little reader question in American Methodist story: Who was Barbara Heck? I will close for the present, for fear my letter will be tiresome. With many wishes for you and your interesting paper, I am, Your little friend,
MAMIE WOOD

He her heart a brimming chalice,
 Full of love and free of malice.
 Through life's journey, glad or weeping,
 Tolling, resting, waking, sleeping,
 God still have her in his keeping.

* Jesus, bless my little daughter!
 Wash her in the blood which bought her.
 Give her drink of living water.

With the bread eternal feed her,
 In the way of duty speed her.
 For thy name's sake guide her, lead her.

—Alice A.

Christian Advocate.

OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. E. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. DUNNITT.

THURSDAY, MARCH 20, 1884.

Death of Bishop Kavanaugh.

A telegram from Rev. J. H. Scruggs, of Columbus, Miss., sent to-day (Tuesday), at noon, brings the sad intelligence that Bishop Kavanaugh is passing away. He says: "The Bishop is dying; he may last a couple of hours." But a few weeks ago he left this city, after a delightful sojourn with us of a month, in robust health that promised many more years of vigorous service. His strength of voice and limb was indeed remarkable when we consider his length of days. But in the ripe, rich fullness of an honored, glorious life he has fallen on sleep.

Thus passes to his reward one of the purest and noblest of God's heroes. Guileless, transparent, generous, gentle, large-hearted and saintly, he illustrated the graces of our holy religion, going in and out among his brethren for over four-score years without a blur on his name or a stain on his shield, and at last has gone up to the rich reward of a dauntless, tireless apostolic chieftain. No knightlier soul ever wielded with braver arm

He seemed to court and covet hard places—deserted and untrodden fields—where only phenomenal faith and courage would dare to go. Every nook and corner of a pioneer Methodist preacher's experience he had explored, from the poorest mission to the high office of a Bishop. And into each work he carried the same spirit of self-forgetfulness. It was not with the mere words of feigned modesty, but genuine humility, that he shrank from the responsibilities of the Episcopacy. He had a passion for preaching, not for its applause or stipend, but as a means of saving souls. And the pulpit was his throne of power. There he reigned and reigned, at times, without scarcely a peer in the entire church. Even within the past few weeks he has preached twice in a Sabbath, exhibiting the greater power in the second service. Thus he has ceased at once to work and live.

We have only time and space before going to press for this brief notice of our beloved personal friend and revered chief pastor.

Our Romish exchanges are exercised on the subject of "mixed marriages." This is a perplexing question to them. They are powerless to prevent their young people falling in love with our Protestant boys and girls, and are in a rage over it. One Bishop declares positively that he will grant no more "dispensations." If any one of his flock wants to wed a heretic application must be made to the Pope for the privilege. What nonsense! The idea of asking an old bachelor over in Rome, who knows nothing about the parties and their adaptability, whether or not they can marry!

On Monday evening, the seventeenth instant, there was a delightful episode at the residence of Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter, pastor of Felicity Street Church. It was the occasion of his silver wedding. His congregation having, by accident, learned the fact, signaled it by invading his home with handsome silver souvenirs and delicious refreshments. A terrible storm prevented many from attending, but quite a pleasant company assembled and passed an enjoyable evening. On account of the absence of the chosen speaker this editor had to make the little presentation address on the part of the congregation, and the "Felicity Workers" who brought a special offering—a beautiful silver butter dish. The doctor's response was felicitous, and at times pathetic. Twenty-five years ago, that day he was married to Miss Carrie Pentecost, in the parish of Tensas, not far from the town of Waterproof. And we question if the fair bride of that day looked handsomer than the queenly matron of twenty-five years on the evening of her silver wedding. The husband's tribute to his faithful companion, of half a jubilee of years, was as modest as beautiful. He closed by saying, "If I have accomplished anything in the work of the ministry, I owe it, under God, to my church and to this woman by my side." We wish our excellent friends many more years of happiness and enlarged usefulness in the Master's service.

Religion as an Investment.

The temporal profit of godliness is an unworthy motive, but an inevitable result. Worldly advantage should never prompt or occasion our espousal to Christ and his church, but can not be overlooked, and is not to be despised, in an estimate of a life of righteousness. The scriptural statement is, that "godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come." It not only fits one for heaven—makes him meet for the inheritance of the saints in light—but brightens and beautifies, gladdens and glorifies, this earthly life. Nothing pays better than religion. It is a profitable and permanent investment, with large and unfailing dividends. According to the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come. It not only fits one for heaven—makes him meet for the inheritance of the saints in light—but brightens and beautifies, gladdens and glorifies, this earthly life. Nothing pays better than religion. It is a profitable and permanent investment, with large and unfailing dividends. According to the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come.

Men are honorable and memorable as they emulate the principles of Christianity. While the memory of the wicked shall "rot," the righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance. However peerless the genius of any one if he outrages the virtues of our religion, his name will be remembered only to be execrated. This is the voiceful verdict of history. Adherence to manly principle is never disesteemed. Even a wicked world is compelled to acknowledge and applaud it. Righteousness exalts and canonizes. Fidelity and integrity never fail of their rich reward. Take the example of Joseph. Fidelity to duty was a marked characteristic of his life. When a slave in Potiphar's house he labored as faithfully as when he occupied a chair of state and felt the burdens of great public responsibility. Everywhere success rewarded industry and integrity. In the home of his Egyptian master he soon found favor, and became the ruler of his servants. When cast into prison his upright demeanor and obedience to authority won the friendly regard of keeper and fellow-prisoners. And his virtues alone at length released him and gave him a throne of power. Success may not and does not in all cases follow immediately, but inevitably. "Honesty is the best policy." We make nothing by compromise. Daniel's fidelity and unchangeable purpose cast him into a den of lions; but the same grand virtues wrought his miraculous deliverance. Luther's stern integrity and dauntless faith subjected him to keen reproach and bitter opposition, but by their omnipotent power he achieved success and fame that will swell the hallelujahs of eternity. A merchant friend remarked to us some time ago that while there were a number of daily applicants for employment, in many cases when a young man had secured a position he studied to see how little he could do and yet retain his place. This unreadiness to meet obligation—this lack of manly devotion to duty—will never attain success. The way to higher position is marked efficiency and conspicuous fidelity in a subordinate.

If, therefore, we had no judgment to meet and no eternity to face, the Christian religion would be a good investment. It would give the largest usefulness and greatest pleasure to life and exalt one into the highest estimate of history. If all men incarnated the sterling virtues of the gospel in their social, civil and business relations, this earth would become a paradise. There would be no courts nor prisons, no larcenies nor manslaughters, no feuds nor famines, no bankruptcies nor broken friendships, but peace and plenty would fill and thrill the land with songs of gladness. But as such a dream will not be realized, each of our readers is urged to conform his own life to the gospel rule. He will enjoy the fruitage of such a course, even in a world of sin and death. Godliness is all profit without a possible loss.

From a narrow investigation this may seem improbable. We have known some good men to lament the fact that honesty could not compete successfully with fraud. They mourned over their comparative failure, while the cunning schemer accumulated speedily a great fortune. But such gains are never permanent nor satisfactory. While on the other hand the man of honor enjoys the fruit of his toil, the consciousness of integrity and the respect of his fellow-men, which is worth more than colts or exchange.

The following, from the Holston Methodist, some one appropriately observes, has both rhyme and reason:

Snub your bright men, discount your strong men; run after light men, and honor the wrong men, and the dross will increase, and the gold will decrease, and the strong men will leave you, and the weak men will grieve you.

Our Ministerial Supply.

BY BISHOP PARKER.

The Conference sessions have disclosed the fact that there is a lack almost everywhere. In some fields where, in other years, there was plethora, there is straitsness now. I may mention Holston, Tennessee, Missouri. I do not recall a Conference that is quite full, though such there may be. How the supply averages as compared with ten, twenty or thirty years ago must be determined accurately by statistical comparison; but, in a general way, I venture to assume that it would reveal a greater destitution at the present time. In regard to the old, and formerly crowded, Conferences it may be said that many preachers have been transferred to the new and rapidly developing regions of the West, and to meet the demands of foreign missions. So far as shortness indicates expansion and progress, it is not altogether a bad sign. But the question comes in here, whether our fields are opening more widely and rapidly than in former years, in proportion to our membership and financial resources. I am not prepared to affirm that they are, though this may be true.

Multiplying stations and reducing the size of circuits may have more to do with the problem than the rapid extension of the work in new territory. Perhaps in many instances one preacher preached to more people than three or four do now. The supply of preachers has not kept pace with this process of making small stations and dividing circuits. In comparison with the membership more preachers are needed now. Places are left to be supplied that formerly would have been included in the work to which a pastor is sent. If this be a cause, it may be said that the changed condition of society, and the circumstances of the people, have made it necessary. We may have gone too fast and too far, but the process was inevitable, and, within proper bounds, advantageous.

It has been thought by some that the higher standard of qualifications required for admission into the traveling connection tends to keep back many young men who would otherwise knock at the doors of the Annual Conferences. And, further, that the importance of a collegiate course for candidates for the ministry has been so emphasized and avowed as to overcome the convictions of a call to the ministry in many instances. Mere coincidence may be mistaken for cause, and it must be remembered that, while the standard of qualifications is somewhat higher than formerly, the education of young men generally is much better. If the standard is higher and more exacting there is a greater corresponding ability to meet it. As a matter of fact, however, no young man of limited education, otherwise well endowed, is turned away. There may be something in this reference to higher literary attainments, but there is not enough in it to account for the lack of preachers. Its influence, as yet, is scarcely appreciable, if it be felt at all.

The ministerial call, while distinctive and peculiar, may be treated very much as calls to other duties. It may be resisted, and effaced measurably, so that, where many are called, few are chosen. In these times of great material prosperity young men are tempted to choose pursuits more lucrative than the Methodist itinerancy, and many whom God calls turn aside to the more alluring paths of secular gain. Some also, under the same influences, retire from the traveling ministry.

It may be inferred from the Lord's words that our ministerial supply depends largely upon the faith and prayer of the church: "The harvest truly is plentiful, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore, the Lord to send forth more laborers into his harvest." This is a startling, and almost mysterious, dependence. We might conclude that God would call the needed laborers, with sole reference to the plentiful harvest. But not so. The laborers have not been sent, because the church has failed to pray. Overlooking considerations which, whatever their force, lie upon the surface, here is one that touches the vital point. God is sovereign, and calls and sends, and yet he moves in answer to prayer. Is there in the closets of our people prayer, persistent, earnest and habitual, on this subject? It is not often that we hear it mentioned in the prayer meeting, and but seldom in the prayers of the pulpit. A day is sometimes set apart for the purpose, and good comes of it; but prayer for more laborers should be woven into the warp and woof of all our supplications. It should be the habitual attitude of our daily devotions, the burden of all our prayers. The supply of ministers is suspended upon our prayers, and weak, languid, perfunctory and intermittent prayer will not meet the condition. Both as to number, and quality our ministerial supply is conditioned on prayer. And herein has the church been remiss. It is needless to say that colleges and seminaries and collections will avail little if the church be not on her knees, and beseeching the throne of grace. If preachers can be had without prayer, the sort that God sends can not be. For the lack is as to quality as well as to quantity. The need is for laborers, men of self-denying toil, zealous, heroic, and burning with the love of souls and missionary zeal. God alone can give us these men; men of deep spirituality, not self-seeking, ambitious, covetous, but endowed with faith and power. When we come to quality, effectiveness, spiritual force, character, the need is greater than mere numbers indicate.

Our ministerial supply depends also upon the spiritual state of the church. This supply, indeed, may be taken as the gauge of our spirituality. Where a lively state of religion exists, God's call to the ministry is heard. There is a response, as flowers and fruits respond to the spring and summer sun. A cold and worldly church is not likely to give us preachers. They rather spring up in the path of revivals, and under the breath of social, spiritual life. In an atmosphere of fashion, gaiety and religious-formality a call to a devoted, self-sacrificing life of ministerial labor is nearly inconceivable.

Our inadequate ministerial supply reflects almost accurately the state of the church. A deeper work of grace, a wide and sweeping revival would do more than anything else, in connection with special prayer, to fill our itinerant ranks. The need of a great awakening and revival presses us at this point. Our ministerial supply must be looked for in this direction. Such a revival would qualify and call out the young men whose work is ready for them. The type of character, experience and piety which a revival gives is the true type of ministerial character. How can a church with a dying prayer meeting, neglected class meeting, and full of worldliness, produce preachers? It is a matter of gratitude that the church, as a whole, grows, that there is much spirituality, and gracious manifestations of the Divine presence. There may, however, be such a decadence of spiritual life, and such a neglect of nursing instrumentalities, as to partially explain the lack of preachers. The class meeting, the prayer meeting and the Sunday-school are the institutions in which the call to the ministry has had its healthiest development. But these can flourish, and be vigorously fruitful only in a deeply spiritual atmosphere.

There is occasion in this connection to look carefully into our Sunday-school methods and their results. It would seem that the Sunday-schools alone should guarantee a plentiful supply of preachers. Their work is with the young, and the training of our young men is largely in their hands. Young preachers going out from a Sunday-school are its living epistles. The ministers and missionaries that it graduates are its noblest credentials. Never was the Sunday-school work so imposing in literature, organization and popular favor. But coincident with this is our lack of preachers. Without space for comment, here is food for reflection.

The subject might lead also to consider how our schools and colleges can contribute to our ministerial supply. Our young men are in these institutions at a time when a call to the ministry is most likely to be felt. Our religious educators have not overlooked this circumstance, and through their influence many useful preachers have been given to the church. I can only impress upon them the responsibility of their position, and, if possible, incite them to continued vigilance and care in clearing up and confirming the convictions of young men under their charge, and in helping them forward in the work to which God has called them.

Pastoral wisdom is displayed in discerning the capacity and adaptability of young converts and assigning them proper work. They need labor more than attention—to serve rather than be served. Many lapse into indifference and spiritual deadness for lack of something to do. In a church recently visited we were delighted to see a modest, handsome lad of thirteen or fourteen years acting as one of the collectors. He will make a model steward, if not called to the work of the ministry. Engaging young men to serve as ushers, collectors, etc., will bind them to the church, and lead them to intelligent activity in all spiritual enterprises. The best religious training is real, valuable work—not church recreation and dress parade.

Adjournment "De Junta Anual"—Sabbath of Conference—The Position of Protestantism in Mexico—Our Work.

BY BISHOP KEENER.

MR. EDITOR: Two days ago, the annual meeting of the Central Mexican Mission adjourned. It was no small matter to collect our forces from Colima, Oaxaca, Puebla, San Luis Potosi, Orizaba, Guadalajara, Leon and Aguascalientes, besides those from the districts of Mexico and Toluca, a surface embracing a large part of the Republic itself. This was not only accomplished, but they were all provided for by our own members in the City of Mexico. The superintendent had everything admirably and quietly arranged for the Conference. The centers of the work, prospective as well as present, have been wisely chosen. At this "Junta Anual" the members of the mission all met for the first time. It had in it, therefore, the true elements of a Conference occasion; the power of new faces, the inspiration of the Spirit's unity, the sublime harmony of a New Testament church. The calling the roll was in itself, as is all roll-calls, full of meaning; name after name was responded to, Mexican, American or Indian, which gave forth the key-note of a gospel mission, and which, I am sure, thrilled more than one heart. I do not think the interest lagged from this initial moment to the reading out of the appointments. Dr. Kelley contributed much to the occasion. In the eyes of the preachers he was the representative of the concrete expression of Southern Methodism—the Foreign Missionary Board. His speeches and suggestions were weighty and timely. His sermons supplied my lack, for I started from home in poor health, and was in bed during the Sabbath morning of the Conference, greatly to my own disappointment, though able to be out in the afternoon, and during all its business sessions. On the first day, at the adjournment, a remarkable event gave its tone to all the days after. Two of the preachers who were present at the martyrdom of Mr. Stevens in Ahualulco, ten years ago, now met for the first time since that event. One of them was the hand that carried the torch and led the mob against the missionary; the other was the friend who prayed with Mr. Stevens just a few moments before he was shot; they then separated, and Gallegos escaped through the garden. Crisanto Zepeda fled to the mountains, and remained away for four years. He came back to Guadalajara filled with wrath against Protestantism. A friend sent him a Testament. This he read, shutting himself up for two weeks that he might, without disturbance, see whether Protestantism was of God. Upon his first visit to a Protestant Church, after this reading, while at the door, he was powerfully converted, and ever since he has been a fearless and humble minister of the gospel. I saw the two men standing together, the tears coursing down their faces, their arms about each other, Bro. Grimes with a hand on each. Bro. Watkins and others gathered about, silent and weeping. When the scene was explained my own heart was filled and subdued with this wonder of the Holy Ghost.

There were in the Conference several excellent performers on the melodion, and all of the preachers sang well. There were distributed throughout the room copies of our "Himnario Evangelico," containing some one hundred and forty-six hymns. So we had excellent Conference singing at all the sessions and services. The memorial services and sacrament was on Saturday night. The ordination of Rev. James W. Grimes and the recognition of Rev. David F. Watkins from the Congregational Church to the office of elder took place on Sabbath afternoon. After these services the Conference love-feast was held—a memorable time. The speaking was characterized by clear statements of transitions from Roman Catholicism to the Protestant faith, of conviction and conversion, of gratitude and love to God, of devotion to the work of the ministry and of the power of the Holy Ghost. "Many tongues, but one Spirit." It was not necessary to know either English or Spanish to feel the presence of that Spirit who can fill the ecclesia with tongues and the soul with life. At its close we all had a Tennessee hand-shaking, but we had what was fully equal to it as a means of grace, a general Mexican hug.

The boys' and girls' schools of the mission added not a little to the interest of the Conference. The boys number some thirty-four, and are well instructed in singing and instrumental music. It was delightful to see them managing cornet, French-horn, bassoon and melodion, the rest singing lustily and in excellent time. Miss Callie Hallaran usually leads the music, vocal and instrumental, at the services of the chapel, and there is no better performer in Mexico. The night before the Conference we were all welcomed by the children with a concert, which could not have been surpassed by any school at home. On Monday, at half-past eleven o'clock, we received a visit from the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal, the Presbyterian and the Baptist missions, and also from the agent of the American Bible Society now working in Mexico. Speeches in Spanish were made by each of the brethren; four were Americans and two were natives. It was remarkable that all spoke of the Holy Ghost as the one impulse which stirred their hearts and crowned their labors. It was inspiring to our own spirits to know that we were in unison with these great churches of God in the work of spreading the kingdom and truth of Christ throughout Mexico. The more there are of such noble workmen in this field the better. A great deal has been accomplished in this Republic in a few years by Protestantism. The Mexican revolution opened the way by its enlightened views of religious and civil liberty, as not contrary, but as mutually supporting each other. Our better acquaintance has contributed not a little to the result, and the commercial treaty just passed between the United States and the Republic will, I have no doubt, prove mutually advantageous, economically and spiritually.

The statistics of the Central Mission will be published in the Advocate of Missions minutely. The general sum is: Number of weekly preaching places, 79; number of towns visited, 178; infants baptized, 157; adults, 149; new members, 323; actual membership, 1,614; Sabbath-schools, 49; Sabbath-school scholars, 1,542; day schools, 19; scholars in day schools, 467; periodicals distributed, 15,441; tracts, 20,221; Bibles, 392; average attendance on preaching, 2,255. For property, see Advocate of Missions.

We have an excellent printing press and good supply of type, and all else necessary to turning off good work. The Evangelista, the Messenger and the Amigo de la Ninera are well printed and very creditable to the mission. The binding of books is also well done. The Industrial School is domiciled in a part of the same house with the printing establishment, and some of the boys are employed in type-setting. The girls' school is now taught by Miss Callie Hallaran, and a Mexican young lady who was trained by Miss Charlotte Hallaran. At the beginning of the session it numbered forty-five scholars. This school has been a part of the mission ever since 1874. The ladies of New Orleans have contributed only in part to its expense, but rendered us great service the past four years by their sending out and supporting Miss Charlotte Hallaran.

When we add these items of the Central Mexican Mission to those of the Border Mexican Mission, as reported at the last session of the West Texas Conference, the reader may have some idea of the work which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is accomplishing among the Spanish-speaking people of North America. Let us thank God and take courage.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 20, 1884.

Short Articles.

BY T. A. N. A.

Many readers of papers now want short articles. They are generally short people. This article is written for their benefit.

THE GUN LOG.

The gun log needs revision. Since it was first discovered by the pioneer as being hard to burn it has been found out that that was not what the Lord made it for anyhow. It is now good for furniture and Nicholson pavement. So there are many gun logs among the preachers who take a fine polish and are adapted to making parlor furniture. The only difficulty is to keep them from warping. If sawn into fence-boards and nailed to a southern exposure they are the best things to draw nails from oak posts I know of.

"HER CANDLE GOETH NOT OUT BY NIGHT." And yet she is not at a ball. She is not "entertaining" company. She is not reading dime novels. She is not crocheting. But she is busy. She doesn't keep the lamp burning because she is afraid of ghosts. She has not time to be afraid. Her life is purpose rather than motive, and lies in the actual rather than the contemplative. She lives for others. She lives for the world. Her empire is not in dreamland nor in the "irrevocable past." Each day reveals it in the active present. "Her candle goeth not out by night." Her influ-

10

The Progress of Disease.

We so unwilling to admit the presence of disease, fall a ready prey to the grim destroyer whose insidious approach, subtle progress and unseen workings, develops such fatal results. Let us be warned in time, lest it be "too late."

Are You Sure It Is Consumption?

Many thousands fully believe they or their friends are being hurried toward the grave by that terrible disease Consumption, and are being treated for that disease, when they have only CATARRH in some of its many types—the symptoms in many forms of these diseases are quite similar and can easily be mistaken. Catarrh, unattended in its character and beginning, neglected, develops and spreads, and in time poisons the vital organs, until it finally is no longer "ONLY CATARRH," but some disease that gives but little hope of health or life. We do not claim to cure Consumption, but are fully convinced from the results of our daily practice that we can save and restore to health many who now feel their case to be hopeless.

Danger Signals.

Do you take cold easily? Have you a cold in the head that does not get better? Have you a hacking cough? Is your throat affected? Are you troubled with hoarseness? Soreness of the throat? Difficulty in breathing? Have you pain in the head between and above the eyes? A sense of fullness in the head? Are the passages of the nose stopped up? Is your breath foul? Have you lost all sense of smell? Are you troubled by hawking? Spitting? Weak, inflamed eyes? Dizziness or drowsiness of the head? Dryness or heat of the nose? Is your voice harsh or rough? Have you any difficulty in talking? Have you an excessive secretion of mucus or matter in the nasal passages, which must either be blown from the nose, or drop back behind the palate, or hawked or snuffed backward to the throat? Ringing or roaring or other noises in the ears, more or less impairment of the hearing?

If so, you have Catarrh.

Some have all these symptoms, others only a part. Some of these symptoms indicate that the disease has passed from the head and attacked the throat and bronchial tubes, and is affecting the lungs and other vital organs of the body, and unless the disease is stopped, its ravages will extend and endanger the life. In most cases Catarrh is only a local disease, and requires only local treatment. But in case of neglected cases the whole system becomes poisoned by the disease and then constitutional treatment is necessary to assist in expelling it from the organization.

Some Bad Symptoms.

The long continued corruption of the air that is breathed passing over the soul matter in the nasal passages, poisons the lungs and from thence the blood. The morbid matter that is swallowed during sleep, passes into the stomach, enfeebles the digestion, vitiates the secretions and pollutes the very fountains of life. The patient becomes feverish occasionally, there is less buoyancy of spirit, the appetite is often tickle, the head less clear, it is difficult to keep the energies up to the old standard, and often without knowing why, he is conscious that he is not as well all the time as he used to be. These symptoms indicate that the vital organs are becoming impaired so that they can not perform their natural healthy functions. Our constitutional treatment is devised to assist nature in removing all poisonous material from the system and to neutralize and counteract its baneful effects on the vital organs and on the blood.

Do Not Trifle With Disease.

We have the only known certain and reliable method for the cure of Nasal Catarrh, Throat and Lung disease; it is regarded by the best of judges as being the most complete treatment ever devised. Indeed, there does not appear to be anything lacking in its perfect adaptation to these diseases in all their loathsome, painful and dangerous developments. Each case is examined into carefully and critically and the whole treatment compounded to meet the wants of each individual. To this fact alone, much of our success is due, and we think no case is incurable when our questions are properly answered. Fifteen years of constant practice with thousands of patients all over the country have enabled us to bring the application of our Remedies to the highest point of perfection. Do not trifle then with some cheap so-called "Cure" which at best can afford but temporary relief, while the roots of the vile disease are left to strike deeper and deeper, but be in earnest and be thorough or do nothing? You have been years in contracting the disease; you can not be rid of it in a day, or with one application of any medicine.

The Experience of Others.

The record is a guarantee that Child's Treatment for Catarrh and all diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs is not new and untried, but a positive and certain remedy. We have shown all things, desire to establish confidence in our treatment, so that every sufferer from Catarrh, Bronchitis and their effects on the Lungs and other Vital Organs, may feel certain of success in its use.

ONLY FAIR. We deem it only fair that every one who wishes should have the opportunity for this purpose we send a few of the many thousands of uncollected certificates which have been sent us by grateful patients—almost all of whom will doubtless respond to any inquiry by letter, if accompanied by a stamp to pay postage. Have been cured themselves, they will be willing to let the afflicted know where they can find certain relief. We have thousands of these certificates from all classes—physicians, clergymen, lawyers, judges, merchants, bankers, business men, farmers, young women and old children and adults.

Mr. Z. Z. LEE, of Graingerville, St. Helena Parish, La., writes: "I can not speak too highly in praise of your valuable remedies which act like a charm in relieving the loathsome disease for which they are recommended."

I have been permanently cured of Catarrh in the head by the use of your Catarrh Specific. I will send you the letter addressed to me, in regard to this subject."

F. POWELL, Health, Burke Co., N. C. You may use my name as a reference, as I have been cured by your treatment. I shall be pleased to answer any inquiries in regard to your remedies."

HARRY TREDELL, Rock Hill, S. C. I am a sufferer from Catarrh in the head and throat, but this cured me of my disease."

B. D. SKIN, Carroll, Ind. I was cured by your treatment. I shall be pleased to answer any inquiries in regard to your remedies."

L. W. BATH, Colorado Springs, Col. I was cured by your treatment. I shall be pleased to answer any inquiries in regard to your remedies."

I was thought to have had consumption, and had suffered many years with what was really Catarrh, before I procured your treatment. I have had no return of the disease."

MISS LOUISE JAMES, Crab Orchard, Ky. I was cured by your treatment. I shall be pleased to answer any inquiries in regard to your remedies."

Home Treatment. Child's Treatment for Catarrh, and all diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs, can be taken at home, with perfect ease and safety, by the patient. We especially desire to treat those who have tried other remedies without success. A full statement of method of home treatment and cost will be sent on application.

Address, Rev. T. P. CHILDS, Troy, Ohio.

May you saw this in New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Household.

ABOUT COUGHS AND COLDS.—Coughs and colds are prevalent now, especially among children, too often from the ignorance or carelessness of their elder guardians. Many mothers appear to accept with resignation the repeated and violent colds from which their children suffer as providential and unavoidable. A child is by no means always due to exposure. Indigestion, constipation, a lack of scrupulous cleanliness, the unwise habit of sleeping in the open air, the use of cold water, the use of cold chambers—all or any of these things may have far more to do with your child's tendency to cold than the keenest breath of the bracing winter air. And in great measure these things are under your control. Mothers should understand that it is a fact, whether they correct it or not, that the numerous colds and sore throats are directly traceable to indigestion and dietetic errors. Quantities of greasy food, fried meats, pastry and the like, ill-ventilated rooms and continued constipation, have to answer for many cases of croup and pertussis or whooping cough. All these things weaken the system and render it far less able to resist changes of temperature. Give every bedroom a thorough airing every day, more especially if several children are obliged to sleep together or with their parents. This is to be avoided if possible; if not, always lower a window slightly in the top—or if this can not be done raise it from below. There is frequently had air enough generated and breathed in the sleeping apartment of a family with small children to supply them all not only colds, but with a number of so-called "infectious" diseases to which they are liable. Neglect of bathing is another prolific source of colds. A child from three to ten years old should certainly receive an entire bath twice a week in winter. A warm bath at night, taking special care to avoid any chill after it, will frequently break up a cold, and keep children from playing in chilly, unheated rooms in autumn and winter weather. Let them play out of doors as much as possible, taking care to have their feet warm and dry. A flannel suit and rubber overshoes will often save much enough medicine and doctors' bills. See that they wear clean, but not too content with thick coats and worsted hoods, while short skirts, barely cover their knees, leaving the limbs chilled. —American Agriculturist.

TAPIOCA CREAM SOUP.—One quart of white stock; one pint of cream or milk; one ounce of butter; one-half cup of cold water; one cup of tapioca; two cups of cold water; one tablespoonful of butter; a piece of mace; salt, pepper. Wash the tapioca and soak over night in cold water. Cook it and the stock together very gently for one hour. Cut the onion and celery into small pieces, and put on to cook for twenty minutes with the milk and mace. Strain on the tapioca and stock. Season with salt and pepper, add butter, and serve.—Farmer's Friend.

BEEF CROQUETTES.—One cup of lean beef; half a cup of cold butter or fried ham; a piece of onion as large as a silver dollar; one teaspoonful of salt; half a teaspoonful of pepper; a pinch of sage, and a little grated lemon-peel. Chop all as fine as possible, or put through a mincing-machine. Heat, with half a cup of stock or cold soup, and add one egg well beaten; form into croquettes, roll in egg or bread crumbs, and fry in boiling lard.

RASPBERRY BLANCMANGE.—Stew fresh raspberries, strain off the juice and sweeten to taste; put over the fire, and when it boils stir in cornstarch wet in cold water, allowing two tablespoonfuls to each pint of juice; stir until cooked and pour into molds to cool. Strawberries and cherries are very nice. Eat with sweetened cream or boiled custard.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Prominent Minister Writes. Dr. Moxley—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from indigestion or dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and debility, and kidneys and constipation, I have been cured by your LEMON ELIXIR, and am now a well man. REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 25 Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Mr. Moxley's LEMON ELIXIR, I feel like a new woman without suffering the least inconvenience. Mrs. R. H. BLOOMING, Griffin, Ga.

Dr. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with the usual female irregularities and derangements, accompanied by such a condition of a woman's health I have been permanently relieved by the use of your LEMON ELIXIR. No. 48 Chapel St., Atlanta, Ga.

S. Pratt, druggist, Wright City, Missouri, writes: LEMON ELIXIR gives the greatest satisfaction. It has cured a case of chills and fever of four years standing.

Dr. Moxley's LEMON ELIXIR, prepared at his Dispensary, 114 Whitehall street, Atlanta, Ga., is a cure for all ailments, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, neuralgia, debility, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased Liver and Kidneys.

Only cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and O. H. Finlay, Wholesale Druggists, New Orleans.

121, 123, 125 Common St.

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN BOOTS, SHOES, HATS AND TRUNKS.

ACHANE BELL FOUNDRY manufactures and repairs all kinds of machinery, including steam engines, pumps, and other mechanical devices. Address: 121, 123, 125 Common St., New Orleans.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEVER FAILS. Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Falling Sickness, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Syphilis, Scrophula, and all Nervous and Blood Diseases.

To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all whose sedentary employment causes Nervous Prostration, Irrregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or Kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, SANMARTIN'S NERVE is invaluable.

Try it and you will be cured. The DR. S. A. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo. Sold by all Druggists.

Lord, Stoughton & Co., Agents, Chicago, Illinois.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE! The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight to All Points NORTH EAST AND WEST. The ONLY LINE running PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MEMPHIS AND CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS. ONLY ONE CHANGE IN NEW YORK AND EASTERN CITIES. The ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO AND ALL POINTS NORTH AND WEST. Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line. STANDARD GAUGE, ALL STEEL RAILS, ELBOW COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, AND QUICK TIME. SPEED, COMFORT, SAFETY. RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST. On and after Sunday, May 27, 1883—DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calumet Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE ARRIVE. Exp. No. 2, 8:15 A. M. Exp. No. 1, 7:00 A. M. Exp. No. 4, 5:30 P. M. Exp. No. 5, 10:45 A. M. No. 1, 2, 3 and 4 run daily. Ticket office, 22 Camp street corner Common.

MATT. KENNEDY, Ticket Agent.

W. M. MURRAY, Gen. Southern Passenger Agt.

A. H. HANSON, Gen. Passenger Agt., Chicago.

J. W. COLEMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., New Orleans.

C. M. SHEPPE, Superintendent.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Texas and Pacific Railway.

NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

In the direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN and CENTRAL TEXAS, and all points in Arizona, Old and New Mexico and California.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from depot foot of Tchoupchee street, at 12:15 noon. This train stops only at St. Charles, Vacherie, Roundwoodville and Plaquemine, between New Orleans and Baton Rouge Junction.

Baton Rouge Accommodation leaves New Orleans at 1:40 A. M., foot of Tchoupchee street. Stops at all Plantations.

California Express arrives at New Orleans depot, foot of Tchoupchee street, at 5 A. M. Full Pullman Palace sleeping cars on this train from New Orleans to San Francisco.

Baton Rouge Accommodation arrives at New Orleans at 5:30 P. M.

For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot, foot of Tchoupchee street.

A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent.

B. W. MCTTLOUGH, Asst. Gen. Passenger Agent, Marshall, Texas.

H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

H. M. HODGE, Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Shortest and Quickest Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO Pensacola, Savannah, Montgomery, Nashville, Louisville, Lynchburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Atlanta and Washington, D. C. IN PULLMAN CARS.

ENTIRE TRAINS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

LEAVE ARRIVE. Express—... 8:30 A. M. 8:30 P. M. Accommodation—... 10:30 P. M. 10:30 A. M. Fast Mail—... 10:30 P. M. 10:30 A. M.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

Drawing-Room Cars attached to Coast Trains. Fare 50c each way. Ticket office corner St. Charles and Common st., where sleeping car accommodations can be secured.

C. P. ARMOUR, General Pass. Agent. JOHN KILBENY, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agent. J. H. SMITH, Ticket Agent. J. T. HARRIS, Superintendent.

The Great Invention, FOR EASY WASHING.

IN HAND OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER. WITHOUT HARM TO FABRIC OR HANDS, and particularly adapted to Warm Waters. No family, rich or poor, should be without it. Sold by all druggists, but beware of imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

Before buying an expensive Harrow, send for Illustrated Pamphlet of the Thomas Harrow and Pulverizer, in Oak or Iron Frame. It is used by 150,000 best farmers, and has been manufactured for 15 years. It combines effectiveness with cheapness and durability. It rapidly and cheaply cultivates growing crops, particularly Cotton. It will positively save one hocking and two plowings in cultivating (young) Cotton, and a proportionate amount in Corn and Wheat. Full illustrated pamphlets sent on application. For sale by over 1,000 dealers in all parts of the U. S. Agents wanted in uncultivated territory. Address The Thomas Harrow Co., Geneva, N. Y.

BLYMYER MFG CO'S BELLS. Catalogue, Fire alarm, Fine toned, low priced, warranted. Catalogue with 100 illustrations, prices, etc., sent free. Blymyer Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, O.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY. Belts of pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Parades, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent free. VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY. Office, Cor. Carondelet and Gravier Streets. DIRECTORS IN NEW ORLEANS: J. F. SCHROEDER, Chairman. Rev. J. H. BUCKNER, A. Delville, Rodolph Weale, Agents in the United States. $5,000,000 Capital. Surplus over all liabilities. $2,500,000. HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary. JULIUS F. BOURG, Secretary. CLARENCE F. LOW, Deputy Asst. Resident Secy.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE! The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight to All Points NORTH EAST AND WEST. The ONLY LINE running PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MEMPHIS AND CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS. ONLY ONE CHANGE IN NEW YORK AND EASTERN CITIES. The ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO AND ALL POINTS NORTH AND WEST. Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line. STANDARD GAUGE, ALL STEEL RAILS, ELBOW COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, AND QUICK TIME. SPEED, COMFORT, SAFETY. RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST. On and after Sunday, May 27, 1883—DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calumet Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE ARRIVE. Exp. No. 2, 8:15 A. M. Exp. No. 1, 7:00 A. M. Exp. No. 4, 5:30 P. M. Exp. No. 5, 10:45 A. M. No. 1, 2, 3 and 4 run daily. Ticket office, 22 Camp street corner Common.

MATT. KENNEDY, Ticket Agent.

W. M. MURRAY, Gen. Southern Passenger Agt.

A. H. HANSON, Gen. Passenger Agt., Chicago.

J. W. COLEMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., New Orleans.

C. M. SHEPPE, Superintendent.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Texas and Pacific Railway.

NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

In the direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN and CENTRAL TEXAS, and all points in Arizona, Old and New Mexico and California.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from depot foot of Tchoupchee street, at 12:15 noon. This train stops only at St. Charles, Vacherie, Roundwoodville and Plaquemine, between New Orleans and Baton Rouge Junction.

Baton Rouge Accommodation leaves New Orleans at 1:40 A. M., foot of Tchoupchee street. Stops at all Plantations.

California Express arrives at New Orleans depot, foot of Tchoupchee street, at 5 A. M. Full Pullman Palace sleeping cars on this train from New Orleans to San Francisco.

Baton Rouge Accommodation arrives at New Orleans at 5:30 P. M.

For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot, foot of Tchoupchee street.

A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent.

B. W. MCTTLOUGH, Asst. Gen. Passenger Agent, Marshall, Texas.

H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

H. M. HODGE, Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Shortest and Quickest Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO Pensacola, Savannah, Montgomery, Nashville, Louisville, Lynchburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Atlanta and Washington, D. C. IN PULLMAN CARS.

ENTIRE TRAINS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

LEAVE ARRIVE. Express—... 8:30 A. M. 8:30 P. M. Accommodation—... 10:30 P. M. 10:30 A. M. Fast Mail—... 10:30 P. M. 10:30 A. M.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

Drawing-Room Cars attached to Coast Trains. Fare 50c each way. Ticket office corner St. Charles and Common st., where sleeping car accommodations can be secured.

C. P. ARMOUR, General Pass. Agent. JOHN KILBENY, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agent. J. H. SMITH, Ticket Agent. J. T. HARRIS, Superintendent.

The Great Invention, FOR EASY WASHING.

IN HAND OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER. WITHOUT HARM TO FABRIC OR HANDS, and particularly adapted to Warm Waters. No family, rich or poor, should be without it. Sold by all druggists, but beware of imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

Before buying an expensive Harrow, send for Illustrated Pamphlet of the Thomas Harrow and Pulverizer, in Oak or Iron Frame. It is used by 150,000 best farmers, and has been manufactured for 15 years. It combines effectiveness with cheapness and durability. It rapidly and cheaply cultivates growing crops, particularly Cotton. It will positively save one hocking and two plowings in cultivating (young) Cotton, and a proportionate amount in Corn and Wheat. Full illustrated pamphlets sent on application. For sale by over 1,000 dealers in all parts of the U. S. Agents wanted in uncultivated territory. Address The Thomas Harrow Co., Geneva, N. Y.

BLYMYER MFG CO'S BELLS. Catalogue, Fire alarm, Fine toned, low priced, warranted. Catalogue with 100 illustrations, prices, etc., sent free. Blymyer Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, O.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY. Belts of pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Parades, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent free. VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY. Office, Cor. Carondelet and Gravier Streets. DIRECTORS IN NEW ORLEANS: J. F. SCHROEDER, Chairman. Rev. J. H. BUCKNER, A. Delville, Rodolph Weale, Agents in the United States. $5,000,000 Capital. Surplus over all liabilities. $2,500,000. HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary. JULIUS F. BOURG, Secretary. CLARENCE F. LOW, Deputy Asst. Resident Secy.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Great New Southern Route—TO SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO and Other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Ports.

Through Sleeping-Cars from New Orleans to San Francisco. VIA—Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System, and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from head of Elysian Fields street as follows: Alexandria, 7:15 A. M. Houston, 12:15 P. M. Alexandria, 4:45 P. M. Houston, 8:30 A. M.

For further information apply to W. J. O'BRIEN, Ticket Agent. J. O. SCHRIEVER, Traffic Manager. Office corner Magazine and Natchez Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

CANTRELL & COCHRANE'S DUBLIN & BELFAST E. & J. BURKE, General Agents, NEW YORK.

GINGER CLUB SODA.

PILES. Ankle's Piles, a new and reliable remedy for Piles, Hemorrhoids, and all diseases of the rectum. Price $1.00 per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

OPIMUM. Ankle's Opium, a new and reliable remedy for Opium addiction. Price $1.00 per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

BARNES. Barnes' Patent Foot and Hand-Machineries, for cutting and sewing. Price $1.00 per pair. Sold by all druggists.

SEEDS. Our Annual Catalogue, containing lists of seeds, fruits, and vegetables. Price $1.00 per copy. Sold by all druggists.

SABY-MAIL. Sabby-Mail, a new and reliable remedy for Sabby-Mail. Price $1.00 per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

E. M. SARGENT & CO., Seed Growers, Macon, Georgia.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST." Threshers, Mills, Engines, Horse Power, and all agricultural machinery. Price $1.00 per unit. Sold by all druggists.

PATENTS. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attys., Washington, D. C.

WARNER BROS. Celebrated Corset, a new and reliable corset. Price $1.00 per pair. Sold by all druggists.

THE DINGER & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EYE-LOOKING ROSES.

The only establishment making SPECIAL ROSES for all occasions. Price $1.00 per dozen. Sold by all druggists.

THE DINGER & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EYE-LOOKING ROSES.

The only establishment making SPECIAL ROSES for all occasions. Price $1.00 per dozen. Sold by all druggists.

THE DINGER & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EYE-LOOKING ROSES.

The only establishment making SPECIAL ROSES for all occasions. Price $1.00 per dozen. Sold by all druggists.

THE DINGER & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EYE-LOOKING ROSES.

The only establishment making SPECIAL ROSES for all occasions. Price $1.00 per dozen. Sold by all druggists.

THE DINGER & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EYE-LOOKING ROSES.

The only establishment making SPECIAL ROSES for all occasions. Price $1.00 per dozen. Sold by all druggists.

THE DINGER & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EYE-LOOKING ROSES.

The only establishment making SPECIAL ROSES for all occasions. Price $1.00 per dozen. Sold by all druggists.

THE DINGER & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EYE-LOOKING ROSES.

The only establishment making SPECIAL ROSES for all occasions. Price $1.00 per dozen. Sold by all druggists.

THE DINGER & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EYE-LOOKING ROSES.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Home Production.

YEAST POWDER.

It is as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from alum. Has been analyzed by chemists, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure powder, it is a home production, and is certainly worthy the patronage of the public. Still manufactured at 129 Girod street, by Mrs. A. E. Goodwin, widow of the late P. M. Goodwin. It is handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in cask or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 129 Girod street, New Orleans, La.

KNIGHT'S ASTHMA CURE

Price, $1.00 per Bottle.
Sold by Druggists generally, or may be obtained direct of its proprietor.

TESTIMONIALS.
Prof. H. H. Holbrook, National University, Lebanon, Ohio, writes: "Your Asthma Cure has completely cured me of my Asthma. I have scarcely thought of it since I used it."
Rev. John C. H. H. Holbrook, Lebanon, Ohio, writes: "I have been much benefited by your Asthma Cure. I have been much benefited by your Asthma Cure. I have been much benefited by your Asthma Cure."
Knight's new book "ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER; THEIR CAUSE AND CURE," sent free to all requesting.

Address, L. A. KNIGHT,
No. 15 E. Third Street, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

MRS. POTT'S GOLD HANDLE SADDLE IRON

ADVANTAGES:
DO NOT BURN THE HAND.
DETACHABLE WALNUT HANDLE.
DOUBLE POINTED IRON BOTH WAYS.
BEST IN USE AND CHEAP.
ONE HANDLE AND A STAND TO A SET.
FOR SALE BY THE HARDWARE TRADE.

AUTOMATIC

OR "NO TENSION" SEWING MACHINE.
BEST AND STRONGEST SEAMS.
UNEQUALLED LIGHTNESS OF RUNNING.
AND DOES NOT INJURE HEALTH.
Full investigation afforded to all.
Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 656 Broadway, N. Y.

MONARCH HORSE HOE

AND CULTIVATOR COMBINED
For Hoeing & Planting Potatoes.
Cor. Orleans, Beas, Cabbage, Turnips, &c.
SENT ON 30 DAYS' TEST TRIAL

An immense saving of labor and money. We guarantee a hoe can cultivate and hoe hill potatoes, corn, etc. 15 times as easy and fast as any man can do the old way. Illustrated Catalogue FREE. Address: WILLIAMS & RICHARDSON CO., Burlington, Vt.

DIAMOND DYES

Are the Best Dyes Ever Made.
DRESSES, COATS, SCARVES, HOODS, YARNS, STOCKINGS, CARPET RAGS, RIBBONS, FEATHERS, or any fabric or fancy article easily and perfectly colored to any shade.
25 FAST AND DURABLE COLORS.
Each package will contain 100 to 1,000 of color, for the DIAMOND DYES, and take no other. None can compare with them for Brilliance, Durability, Simplicity and Economy. Sold by all druggists at moderate prices, and in 10 cents and any color wanted in small quantities. 25 colored samples and a book of directions sent free. Address: WILLIAMS & RICHARDSON CO., Burlington, Vt.

Gold Paint. Silver Paint.

Bronze Paint. Artists' Black.
For gilding fancy ornaments, frames, lamps, chandeliers, and for all kinds of decorative work. Equal to any of the high priced kinds and only 10 cents a package at the druggists, or post-paid by mail.
WILLIAMS & RICHARDSON CO., Burlington, Vt.

Weekly Market Review.

For Week Ending March 18, 1884.

COTTON.

Low ordinary	7 1/2 @	—
Good common	8 11-16	—
Good ordinary	9 11-16	—
Low middling	10 1/2	—
Middling	10 11-16	—
Good middling	11 1/2	—
Middling fair	11 11-16	—
Fair	11 1/2	—
Galveston middling	10 9-16	—
Mobile middling	10 1/2	—
St. Louis middling	10 1/2	—

SUGAR.

Superior	34	41
Common	42	49
Good common	51	58
Fair	54	61
Good fair	54	61
Fully fair	54	61
Prime	54	61
Strictly Prime	54	61
Choice	54	61
Second	42	49
Yellow clarified	63	64
Gray clarified	63	64
Choice whites	63	64
Granulated	73	74

MOLASSES.

Syrup	25	29
Prime	30	39
Choice	—	—
Fancy	—	—

RICE.

Choice	54	64
Prime	54	64
Fair	54	64
Ordinary	41	42
Common	41	42
No. 2	22	23

FLOUR.

Minnesota lakers	5 90	6 00
Minnesota patents	7 00	—
Extra fancy	6 25	6 37 1/2
Winter wheat patents	7 00	7 25
Choice	5 95	6 25
Fancy	5 75	6 00

CORN PRODUCTS.

Cream meal	3 40	3 50
Coat meal	2 90	3 05
Graham	3 35	3 40
Honiny	4 00	—

GRAIN, ETC.

Wheat	—	72
Mixed	—	69
OATS	—	47
Western	—	48
Texas rust-proof	—	—

BEAN.

Choice	21 00	24 00
Prime	19 50	22 00

PROVISIONS.

Pork	—	10 12 1/2
Mess.	—	17 25
Prime mess.	—	17 50
Rumps	—	10 75

BACON.

Choice breakfast	12	12 1/2
Shoulders	83	—
Sides, clear	103	11
Sides, clear rib	103	—

HAMS.

Sugar-cured	131	—
-------------	-----	---

DRY SALT MEAT.

Choice	71	—
Sides, clear	94	10
Sides, clear rib	94	10 1/2

FISH.

Mackerel	14 25	—
No. 1 in hbls.	7 75	—
No. 2 in hbls.	13 75	—
No. 3 in hbls.	6 25	—
No. 3 in hbls, large	13 25	—
Half hbls.	7 00	—

GROCERIES.

Coffee	—	13
Rio, choice	11	13
Cordova, choice	13	14
Java, choice	16	22

BUTTER.

Western dairy	25	—
New York dairy	25	—
Country	17	20

LARD.

Choice	94	10
Chulo	50	1 00
Fair	25	50

OILS.

Coal, cases	18	—
Coal, hbls	13	—
Cotton seed	42 1/2	45
Lard	78	—

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES:	—	—
Western	—	—
Country	4 50	5 00

POTATOES.

Eastern	2 00	2 25
Western	1 90	2 00
Seed, Eastern	2 00	2 25
Seed, Western	1 90	2 00

KNOUT.

3 hbl.	12 00	16 00
2 hbl.	2 50	3 50

BALING STUFFS.

BAGGING:	—	—
10 lb.	164	—
2 lb.	118	—

BALING TWINE.

10 lb.	134	—
2 lb.	134	—
10 lb.	136	—

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY:	—	—
Chickens, Western	4 50	5 25
Young	3 50	4 00
Chickens, Southern	3 50	4 50
Young	2 50	3 00
Turkeys, Southern	10 00	15 00

EGGS.

Western	20	—
Southern	20	22
Wool	—	—
Lake	21	22
Louisiana	10	20
Bury	10	15

HIDES.

Dry salted	6	7
Dry salted	10	11

STAVES.

Oak, kegs	50 00	55 00
Oak, barrels	75 00	80 00
Oak, clarets	50 00	105 00
Oak, hogheads	75 00	140 00

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 12.—William Spence, who yesterday shot and killed his son-in-law, Col. Edward S. Fisher, was today indicted by the grand jury.

DALLAS, March 12.—The dispatch this morning telling of the thrilling deaths of Ben Thompson and his wife, Fisher, was read with expressions of great satisfaction by every one, and particularly by delegates from Austin, San Antonio and along the Rio Grande, where these desperadoes have killed men by the score. Undoubtedly two of the worst men who ever lived in Texas or on earth, and who will no longer terrorize everybody who came near them.

STARKVILLE, Miss., March 12.—A terrible and very destructive storm passed through this county yesterday evening, between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock, doing great damage. Its course was from southwest to northeast, striking the line of the Canton, Aberdeen and Nashville Railroad about twelve miles west of this place, and following the line closely about eight miles, destroying timber and blowing down houses, barns, etc.

At Sleet's Mills, about six miles from here, everything is a complete wreck. No more grain is being blown down. At the Agricultural and Mechanical College the loss is estimated at $11,500. It being early in the evening the true cattle belonging to the college had not been driven from the pasture, or the loss would have been a great deal more. Thus, O. P. Rice, living a few miles east of here sustained a great loss. Mrs. Grier, an aged widow lady, was instantly killed, the timbers in the building falling across her body.

The full amount of damage can not be estimated at this writing, but as far as can be learned will not fall short of $100,000. A number of poor, hard-working people are destitute.

COLUMBUS, Miss., March 12.—News was received here this evening of a terrible tornado, which struck the north-eastern portion of this county on yesterday. No lives were lost, but the destruction of property was very great. It has been raining here for ten days. The river is very high and still rising, while all the low lands are submerged.

TUSKALOOSA, Ala., March 12.—About 10 o'clock last night a tornado passed four miles east of this place. The swath of the cyclone was only about 100 yards wide, but it swept everything in its path. Where it passed through woodlands the trees were blown down. No loss of life is reported, but the destruction of property is great at this place.

CHATTANOOGA, March 13.—A terrible cyclone passed through a portion of Cherokee county, Ala., near Abbottsville, Tuesday night, the first particulars of which are just in. It was about half a mile wide, and touched the earth only for six miles. Almost every dwelling in its path, and every house went down before it.

Mrs. Tidmore and Mr. Tildmore were instantly killed, and Mr. Tildmore, a farmer, was seriously injured. One man, name unknown, was blown from his wagon, and fell to the ground. From thirty to forty dwellings and stores were completely demolished. The crops were badly injured. Trees were torn up by their roots, and fencing, in some instances, was blown hundreds of yards.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—There is little to talk about to-night except the action of the Senate this evening in passing the bill relieving Fitz John Porter.

LYNCHBURG, Va., March 13.—A special from Pocahontas this morning says: There was an explosion in the coal mines here last night at 12:30 o'clock. Full particulars of the affair represent the work of destruction as horrible and complete. There were 150 men in the mine at the time of the explosion, not one of whom is believed to have escaped. Those not killed outright by the terrible force of the explosion most likely perished from the after damp. The cause of the explosion is not yet definitely ascertained. The work of destruction was not confined entirely to the interior of the mine, but houses 200 or 300 feet removed from the mine were overturned, and in several instances outlying demolished.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 14.—Two cotton blooms are now on exhibition at the Cotton Exchange. They are from the farm of Mr. John Meyer, near Cuero. Mr. Meyer has three acres of this cotton, three weeks earlier than any variety ever before introduced into the State.

ST. LOUIS, March 14.—A dispatch from Harrisburg, Ill., says: Details of the damage by the tornado which passed over a part of Saline county last Tuesday are just being learned. Six farm houses were entirely destroyed and several others unroofed or badly damaged, and a dozen or more barns and other outbuildings torn to pieces. There was also much damage to fences, cribs and other farm property.

CINCINNATI, March 15.—The labor of compiling a complete list of losses along the Ohio River from the recent flood has been too great to be attempted, but Bradstreet's Mercantile Agency has made a list showing only the losses to business men from Pomeroy, O., to Madison, Ind. This is confined to losses on merchandise and manufactures, and does not include any losses not directly affecting business standing. The work in Cincinnati and a few other points is not complete. The estimate for Cincinnati is $200,000. Other points put up as follows: Aberdeen, $1,000; Buena Vista, $1,900; Gonten, $75,000; Levan, $300; Leary Bottom, $1,000; Higginsville, $1,000; Manchester, $1,000; Minersville, $3,200; Moscow, $800; Neville, $1,000; New Richmond, $10,000; Middleport, $37,000; Pomeroy, $42,450; Portsmouth, $170,000; Rome, $800; Racine, $750; Scottsbluffs, $1,000; Scott's Landing, $1,000; Plant, $1,000; Portland, $2,000; Kentucky—Augusta, $35,000; Catlettsburg, $5,750; Maysville, $10,000; Newport, $3,000.

Indiana—Aurora, $18,450; Florence, $1,450; Lawrenceburg, $32,000; Markland, $3,000.

Miss., March 15.—During the last hour of the Legislature, a bill passed both Houses, and was approved by the Governor, consolidating the Eleventh and Twelfth Judicial Districts, with Sharkey added thereto, as District No. 11, assigning Judge North of Adams county, to District No. 13, and Judge Cowan of Warren county, as chancellor of the district. The Legislature adjourned sine die at 9 P. M.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The annual meeting of the American Tract Society was held at the Congressional Church this evening, and was largely attended. The report shows receipts for the year, $399,000; expenditures, $301,280; balance in the treasury, $7,785. The donations and legacies were $116,951, of which $31,300 were special, leaving $84,557 available for benevolent work. The benevolent expenditures were $83,137.

The 147 colporteurs employed made 130,468 Christian family visits. The gratuitous distribution included 51,000,000 pages of tracts. The total issues of the society for the year were 12,346,300 copies of books, tracts and papers. Fourteen of the colporteurs were colored men laboring in the South. The grants to immigrants were 3,000,000 pages.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, March 13.—A dispatch from Gen. Graham says: "The camp of the enemy has been taken after hard fighting since 8 o'clock this morning. Over seventy British have been killed and 100 wounded."

LONDON, March 14.—Gen. Graham telegraphs that five officers and eighty-six men were killed, and eight officers and 103 men wounded; 11,000 men are missing. The rebels numbered from 10,000 to 12,000. Three officers and seven men of the naval brigade were killed at the guns. Over 2,000 rebels were killed. The rebels charged regardless of their great loss. They left 600 dead at one point of the square.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—Admiral Hewette, Gen. Graham and the chief inhabitants held a meeting to-day, which resulted in the issue of a proclamation offering £1,000 for the capture of Osman Digma, whose lies and treachery have misled the Soudanese and caused great bloodshed.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The Meridian District Conference will be held in Waynesboro, June 26-29.

J. A. G. GOREY, P. E.

The Greenville District Conference will be held at Greenville, Miss., beginning at 9 o'clock A. M., on Friday before the second Sabbath in May. Bishop McTear will preside. J. W. PRICE, P. E.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The E. A. Seminary

This school, for boys and girls, is located at Arcadia, Blountville Parish, La., a town on the railroad that joins Monroe and Shreveport. The course of study is thorough and practical. The discipline is rigid, with mildness. For circulars, address

R. A. SMITH, Principal.

ESTABLISHED IN 1839.

F. BELDEN.

WHOLESALE DEALER IN

HATS,

TRUNKS,

FLOWERS,

UMBRELLAS,

ETC.

No. 14 MAGAZINE, and

73, 75, 77, and 79 COMMON STREETS,

NEW ORLEANS.

Reductions.

To those in want of FURNITURE

we would say that the PRICES HAVE

BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock, though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent.

Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked,

but our aim is to show our customers

an entirely new stock every season.

To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from figures that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST

FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

W. G. TEBAUT,

Wholesale and Retail Furniture,

37, 39 and 41 Royal Street,

New Orleans, La.

ARTHUR WACKERBARTH. L. H. JOSEPH

WACKERBARTH & JOSEPH.

MANUFACTURERS

—AND—

Wholesale Dealers in

Tobacco, Cigars, Snuff, Pipes, Etc.

45 MAGAZINE STREET,

New Orleans.

KNABE

PIANOFORTES.

None, Touch, Workmanship and Durability

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street

Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

WATCHES.

We are selling the watches of the American Watch

Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12.

Stem-winding Silver Watches at $15 to $25.

Stem-winding Gold Watches at $35 and upwards.

All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & Co.,

119 Canal street, New Orleans.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF

PURE COD LIVER

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 13.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1443.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

HAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
WEBER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Printers and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HENNINGTON,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE ANSWERED PRAYER.

I have a prayer upon the wall,
Within my room,
Concluded in these simple words—
God bless our home!

An answered prayer:
For God hath heard
His silent utterance,
And sent, in quick response,
What I most needed.
Not what I most wished for,
Nor what I most expected.

Blessings came daily, hourly,
Crowding on my path;
Some so disguised, I would not say:
"Surely a Father's hand Is not despising these!"
But as I shook, bewildered, Came the voice I knew—
"Was it not blessing that my child desired?"

And so he blessed me,
In his own sweet way,
Taking my treasures from me
Day by day.
Changed all my dreams and plans of life
Not wisely said:
Put thorns within my paths
Where willingly I strayed.
Continue my spirit rose
In stern rebellion:
Can it be, O Lord,
Such clouds and darkness come from thee?

Yes, wisely, kindly has the prayer
Been answered, and my will Now sweetly lost in his, and I am still
And restful:—As of yore
Blessings came in disguise,
Yet no more I wonder and rebel;
His ways are past the knowing,
Nor can we tell
What now he doeth, but shall know
And, knowing, say, "Thy will!"

Some Explanations.

An esteemed brother has written for light as regards the programme prepared and published by the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Centenary Committee. The Conference Committee elected Rev. Charles W. Carter, D. D., of New Orleans, to deliver the Centenary sermon before our next Annual Conference; fixed the amount to be raised at $50,000—$20,000 for church extension, $10,000 for Centenary College, $10,000 for Mansfield College, and $10,000 for domestic missions; settled upon the last Sabbath in May, and as many Sabbaths thereafter as may be necessary, to "be observed as days of special Centenary service" in all our stations, circuits and missions, and appointed an Executive Committee, consisting of Bros. C. F. Evans, B. F. Alexander and myself, to prepare and publish a Centenary programme for our Conference. Section 1 of that programme provides for mass meetings to be held at Carondelet Street Church, in New Orleans, Shreveport, New Iberia, Homer, Alexandria and Monroe. This was done in accordance with the third resolution of the General Centenary Committee, recommending that arrangements be made "for appropriate Centenary services at such points in the Conference as may be deemed best."

The fixing of time of meeting, appointment of speakers, designation of their fields of thought and all other necessary arrangements were put in the hands of the presiding elder. At these meetings special prominence is to be given to devotion exercises. It would, perhaps, be well, so far as that particular congregation is concerned, to take the special Centenary collection at the time of the mass meeting instead of the last Sunday in May. The presiding elders and pastors in charge at those points will doubtless do what is best in the premises.

Section 2, in accordance with the fifth resolution of the General Centenary Committee, provides for a children's day in June, the time to be fixed by the pastor. The exercises are to be by the children, and their contributions to the cause are then to be gathered.

Section 3 provides for a Centenary day at each District Conference. The sermon by the presiding elder, and the love-feast, are to be the chief features of the day. Of course, if the presiding elder and pastor shall think it best, the special collection for the charge where the Conference is held can be then taken care of instead of in May. The presiding elders are the uniting links between the Bishops and preachers in charge, and so Centenary sermons from them, as in the case and after the manner of Bishops, are likely to make strong impressions upon the people. Beginning the day with a real Methodist love-feast, crowded as it must be with precious, hallowed memories of God's loving kindnesses and rich blessings through the years ago; the interest deepened by one of the presiding elder's best efforts, brimful of gospel meat and Divine unction, and the whole occasion wound up with a thank-offering from all the people in the shape of a "big collection," seems to be just the way to spend one day at our District Conferences.

Section 4 provides for the appointment by each pastor of three men and women to "circulate centennial literature and secure subscribers for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, aiming to place said paper in every family." This committee is also to aid the pastor in all his Centenary operations.

Section 5 relates to the very necessary improvement of our spirituality as a church, and stresses especially the importance of the "establishment and maintenance of class meetings in every congregation." "Clearing the decks," as Bishop McTearle puts it, by getting in all our usual collections not later than May 15, each section of the programme ought to be carried out successfully and with ease. In addition to all this, our people are expected this year to pay all church debts and to repair and build churches wherever needed.

Brethren, clerical and lay, let us move steadily on in the line mapped out, and we Louisiana Methodists will have no occasion at the year's end to regret that we laid ourselves out unto this blessed work.

J. T. SAWYER,
BASTROP, LA., March 11, 1884.

Life of Bishop Kavanaugh.

MR. EDITOR: The death of Bishop Kavanaugh has produced a profound sorrow throughout Kentucky. Beloved as he was by the entire church, yet in his own State his death will be more lamented than anywhere besides. He entered the ministry when there were only 18,000 Methodists in the commonwealth of Kentucky, and lived to see the church grow up to its present gigantic proportions, while he contributed more largely than any other person to its success.

There is scarcely a community in the State to which he has not preached the gospel of Christ, and but few persons can be found who have not looked upon his benignant face and felt the grasp of his hand. To say that Bishop Kavanaugh was Kentucky's favorite preacher, continuing such through a period of more than sixty years, would not be too much to say. Catholic in spirit, all denominations of Christians loved him. Pure in his life, and wonderfully gifted, he has left to the church a legacy more precious than gold.

Several years before he committed to me the pleasant task of writing his life, and one year ago, while in Florida, in feeble health, wrote to me renewing the request. This labor of love has been in progress for years, and is nearly completed. In a few weeks the manuscript will be placed in the printer's hands.

I will be glad to receive from any of your readers any recollections of this great and good man. I am,
Yours in Christian love,

A. H. REDFORD,
BOWLING GREEN, KY., March 21, 1884.

Missouri Notes.

A presiding elder of one year's experience said to me at Conference, last fall: "I always had a sympathy for presiding elders, but now my sympathy is increased by experience. When I return to my pastorate the softest bed in my house and the best meal that my resources can afford shall always be ready for my presiding elder."

In many respects the presiding elder's berth is no easy one. Those who think the office a sinecure have never held it. To say nothing of protracted absences from home, the frequent changes of bells; the amount of traveling involved, and the other items of physical discomfort and labor, there is a constant strain upon the nervous powers and a weight of responsibility which makes the position anything but a pleasant one. True, the law of compensation obtains here as elsewhere, and there is much pleasure in the constant companionship of the preachers of the district and in the other social features of the work, while it opens to the earnest, diligent, wide-awake man a large field of usefulness and influence. If he be a man of insight and judgment, he can touch the church for good at vital points; and if he be a man of force and character, he will impress himself upon the entire district. He will project new enterprises, send his preachers into unoccupied territory, bring up the finances and, if he be such a preacher as the presiding elder ought to be, he will quicken the church at his quarterly visits into renewed spiritual vitality. Every presiding elder should be something of a revivalist, and every quarterly meeting ought to be an occasion of deep spiritual interest. Carlyle says that genius is an immense capacity for taking trouble, and, if this definition be a correct one, every presiding elder should unquestionably be a genius. But four years of faithful work in this office is all that the church should require of any man at one time. Justice to the office and justice to the man demands a change at the end of a quadriennium. A man who serves as presiding elder longer than four years is apt to grow stereotyped, and he will go through the round of his duties in merely a perfunctory manner. I know a few who have managed to be useful in the office longer than the time indicated; but they are the exceptions proving the rule. All the complaint against the office has arisen from keeping men in it until they had outgrown their usefulness. Then it is unjust to any man to keep him on a district longer than four years. His opportunities for study are necessarily very limited; his time must be largely occupied with the work of the district; he is apt to become discursive and diffusive in his sermonizing, and the longer he remains out of the pastorate the more difficult does it become for him to adapt himself to his work when he is again placed on a circuit or station. For these and other reasons, I believe the General Conference should limit a presiding elder's term to four years, and keep him in the pastorate for the same length of time before allowing him again to go on a district.

In our Conference none of the districts have over fourteen charges; but in the Missouri Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, each district has from twenty-three to twenty-seven charges. They have only four white districts, where we have nine.

This latter Conference met at St. Joseph, last week, Bishop Foss presiding. Their minutes of last year reported 17,802 members, and there was a slight increase this year. In the same territory we reported last year 20,837; and 2,235 of their members are colored, which brings their white membership to only a little over half of ours. The Hannibal and St. Joseph railroad cuts North Missouri almost in half. Their principal strength lies north of this road, while we occupy almost the entire field south of the road. Like most of the Southern Conferences, this is a mixed Conference, though a resolution was introduced looking to a division on the color line. Most of the darkies seemed to be in favor of being set off to themselves, and I saw one enthusiastic colored brother hold up both hands when the vote was taken. The fact is that the Northern Methodist preachers in this country are no more anxious for a mixed Conference than we would be; but they hold on to the negroes for political effect and because they are not yet ready to "go back on their record." Some of their preachers told me that they were getting very tired of them, and the negroes themselves are growing disgusted. They have a few strong men in their Conference; but I do not think that in this respect they will compare favorably with our Conference. In one respect, however, they have the advantage of us: they have a larger class of young men who are active and enterprising. They have few old men in active work, though their superannuated list is larger than ours. One thing surprised me: the small amount they raised the past year for missions. Their total foreign and domestic missionary collections only amounted to $2,214 46—an increase of only $81 over the previous year. Our Conference reported last fall $5,795 for foreign, and $3,148 for domestic missions; and our total assessment for both purposes this year is $14,255, and we expect to raise most of it.

Our Conference Church Extension Board has resolved to try to raise $10,000 of the half-million loan fund proposed by the general board as a centennial offering. The preachers of the Conference are "clearing the decks" preparatory to beginning Centenary work on the fourth Sunday in May. In my district most of the collections are already full, and the preachers promise me that the others will be by the first of May.

The revival work is still going on throughout our Conference. Over five hundred conversions have already been reported in my district (Plattsburg), and others are equal or not far behind. The union meetings in this city resulted in seven hundred conversions and large accessions to all the churches. About a hundred joined the three Southern Methodist Churches, making our strength in this city nearly seven hundred.

Dr. J. H. Vincent attended the session of the late Conference here, and delighted our people with several lectures and sermons. He is a grand man and a forcible speaker. T. DeWitt Talmage lectured at the Opera House the night after one of Vincent's addresses, and the almost universal verdict was in favor of the latter. Dr. Talmage said a great many good things, but he was somewhat disappointing. His voice and elocution are far inferior to Dr. Vincent's, and his mannerisms are unpleasant. But, for all that, there is a great deal in a man who can hold that Brooklyn Tabernacle audience Sunday after Sunday, and whose sermons are read in all parts of the English-speaking world.

M. B. CHAPMAN,
ST. JOSEPH, MO., March 17, 1884.

Letter from Yazoo City, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: "The bridge across the bayou is done," is the unanimous exclamation of our citizens. Well, what of that? says the reader. Nothing, perhaps, to the great majority; but to us, and those acquainted with our little city, by the river, under the hill, it means that the long-expected and impatiently waited for railroad has fairly entered our town. About two and a half years ago the first surveys for locating the road to this place were begun; and a little more than one year ago the work on the now Y. and M. V. road was begun. Again, it means to us a more thorough introduction to the world and a more rapid and convenient means of access to other places of business. The much degraded "old stage," as many were wont to call it, has shown signs of decay and final desertion for some months past, and ere many weeks shall have passed we will bid farewell forever to those familiar old coaches which have served us so well and so faithfully these many, many years. Yes, sir; we have entered the restless, busy, rapid railroad world. No more stages for us. But some, I think, will sadly part with the faithful old friend, which was such in time of need.

While the merchant and the artisan are calculating the great benefit its coming will be to them, it has been ours to query as to its moral effects upon our community. If it should be to increase our saloons, with all their attendant evils; to make more hold the gambler and the man of chance; to bring more Sabbath-breaking people; to increase the homicides, and produce a more careless feeling as to their eternal welfare, it were a calamity indeed, morally, that we ever should have heard the whistle of the locomotive. But if it be that we shall thereby have more frequent visits from foreign ministers, Bishops, D. D.'s, L. L. D.'s, temperance lecturers and mighty and valiant men of God, who shall come to us teaching in new and varied styles the old, old story, thereby attracting men by their spirit and eloquence to the cross of Christ, it shall prove to us a blessing indeed. Which shall it do? Ah! there's the question.

Our first quarterly meeting has just passed. The presiding elder was pleased, and everybody pleased with him. The best Quarterly Conference I ever attended; every steward and nearly every other official present.

A review of the work showed progress, and the brethren evinced a care for the church and a willingness to work which was gratifying to the preachers. We tried hard one Sunday to get up a boom and "clear the decks," and, whether in accord with our faith or not, we made a glorious failure. So we have resorted to our quiet, persistent card system. During the past three months we have had a perfect scourge of pneumonia, which has been very fatal, taking from us several of our oldest and best citizens. Many of the brethren will sorrow to learn of the death of Sister Susan Massey, whom we buried yesterday, having buried her last and only child, a young man of twenty-six years, just one week before. This passed away in a few years a whole family of father, mother, daughter and sons.

The river with us is beginning to rise quite rapidly, with considerable water behind. Some fear a repetition of '82; others think 1883's water will scarcely be reached. Time will tell us a few days, and when we have seen then we will know, and not till then. Bro. Abbey, I learn, has been very painfully, but not seriously, ill for some days. He is across the waters from us now; so it is very difficult for us to see him.

Yours fraternally, T. B. H.

Centenary College.

I had the pleasure of being present at the intermediate exhibition of Centenary College, Jackson, La., on Friday, March 7. The evening was very damp—part of the time raining furiously; yet the attendance was large and orderly. Five young men confided in oratory for a gold medal. Mr. George Galloway, by a hair's breadth, was the successful man. Two others of the class were about his equals in oratory. Sweet music by a string band—one of the best combinations according to my taste—was interspersed through the exercises; extempore speeches at the close. This part of the programme tries some of our more timid friends. To be vociferously called for—Speech! speech! speech!—when there is not a morsel within a mile of your mental grasp that you think would do at all to say, makes a man feel small. On one occasion somewhat like this a gentleman was called for. He ascended the stage perfectly serious, adjusted his eye-glasses, drew from his pocket a paper, unfolded it, and began, "Being very unexpectedly called upon on this occasion," etc. He was a little unfortunate in his efforts at concealment.

There are more students in the college department at Centenary this session than at any time since the war; in the preparatory department about the same as last year. This institution so ably officered, so healthfully situated, and so accessible since the Valley railroad passes it, ought to be largely patronized. President Rush has been called—and by those who ought to be able to judge—one of the best scholars of his age in the South. And his heart is in his work. Louisiana was once associated in my mind with long moss, marsh and malaria. But Jackson is situated amid rolling hills and narrow valleys swept by quicksand creeks, and is as healthy, I suppose, as any part of the Union. It used to be almost inaccessible. The Valley road has completely remedied that difficulty. The fine moral influences that are thrown around a boy here are also to be considered. I do not think they can be much better anywhere. I hope the school may have continued and increasing sneezes.

T. B. WEST.

MARCH 12, 1884.

Suggestions to the Mississippi Conference by Their Centennial Committee.

1. Let our preachers discourse not once, but many times, upon the distinctive features of Methodism; let them post our people upon the origin, the history, the doctrines and the polity of our church.

2. Let the subject, "The Hundredth Year of American Methodism," be made prominent at District Conferences, Quarterly Conferences, church Conferences, in prayer meetings, in class meetings, in Sunday-schools and at the social gatherings of the people.

3. Let special effort be made to circulate the ADVOCATE, and to encourage our people to read upon the year we celebrate.

4. Let a class meeting be organized at every church.

5. Let a Centennial Committee, composed of the most faithful and enterprising members, male and female, be appointed in each society, whose duty it shall be to project plans, to devise ways and means, to be foremost in all efforts to make the year fruitful of glorious results.

6. Let the District Conferences be held on different Sabbaths; but as near this same season as possible, so that a Bishop or special speakers may attend them all.

7. Let the pastors arrange a programme of centennial services for the last Sabbath in May (and in circuits and missions as many successive Sabbaths thereafter as may be necessary.) Let them appoint persons to prepare sketches of local churches; others to make appropriate addresses or sermons, and exhort all to make ready a liberal thank-offering to the God of our fathers who hath made us to "grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth."

8. Let the Sunday-schools arrange for a Centenary celebration in June. If on a week day, a picnic or an excursion might add to the interest. Let appropriate songs and addresses be provided, and let the children each and all be encouraged to save up money to contribute to the great cause.

9. Let the preachers and the people, let the old and the young, let male and female be united in heartfelt and continuous prayer unto the great Source of all success that as in the past, so in the future, and even more abundantly, we may have occasion humbly, yet exultingly, to sing: "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints."

C. O. ANDREWS, Chairman.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

Centenary Watchword—No. 5.

Faithful preaching on Christian giving, and a Centenary thank-offering from every member!

E. R. HENDRIX,
Chairman Cent. Committee.

Another Notice.

Remember, brethren, the time is at hand when the treasurer must put his annual report in press. Send your collections for foreign missions forward, so as to reach him on or before March 20, or this report must go to press with you left out.

H. A. YOUNG, Sec.
NASHVILLE, TENN., March 7, 1884.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1884.

"REST AND BE THANKFUL."

BY MARIANNE FARRINGTON.

Not at the gate of the journey,
Not till some work is done,
Not till the hill is mounted,
And high in the heavens is the sun,
Not till the feet are aching,
Not till the hands are tired—
Who rests at the road's beginning
Has earned no rest desired.

When the mountain top is below you,
Below you the tops of the hills,
Where the voices of men can not reach you,
And you sing with the singing rills:
When the roughest task is accomplished,
And the valleys are far beneath,
When God has provided a shelter
And spread you a couch of heaven.

Then is the time for resting,
There is the place of repose;
How grand are the skies above you,
How cool is the wind that blows!
And the thought of the task attempted,
Fully and nobly done,
Makes gladder the welcome respite,
For it comes after victories won.

Rest then, eye, and be thankful,
For it is not given to all,
To gain the heights they aspire to,
Some faint, some struggle and fall.
If God has given you courage,
Strength and patience that do not fail,
Sing unto him heart-praises,
Through him do your hands prevail.

Not long must you rest. Go forward,
There are heights brighter to gain;
Part of the journey is over,
But other parts remain;
Learn from the past how surely
The needed strength shall be given,
And heed the exhorting voices
Until you have rest in heaven.

"I Was Glad When They Said Unto Me, Let Us Go Into the House of the Lord."

There are fearful delinquencies upon the part of many in attending the ordinance of the world. Such delinquencies certainly exert a very deleterious influence upon the world, and are considerable bars to the prosperity and spiritual development of our people. Looking at the church from this standpoint our prospects appear gloomy; but, notwithstanding these discouraging features, I am not inclined to think that there is no hope, and that the church is not doing great good. As an evidence, I say close our church doors and have no more preaching, no more Sabbaths, no more prayer meetings, no more ordinances, no more Sabbath-schools. Let us hear no longer the gladdening sound of the church bells as wafted out upon the breeze of the quiet Sabbath morning, reminding us of a Christian Sabbath, a Christian's Bible, of the preached gospel, and the mellow songs of Zion, and the fervent prayers of faithful servants of God, who are ashamed not to be found in the sanctuary upon the holy Sabbath. Let this be done, and instead of the peace and order now so prevalent, prosecutions, law-suits and vexatious litigations would swell our court dockets, and the creaking of mighty iron doors and the clanking of chains would be heard as common occurrences, and thus the peace and harmony of society would be destroyed. The church, though corrupted, is yet an institution of power and of good. It is not of human, but of Divine origin. While there are many who can not conscientiously utter, "I am glad when it is said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord," I say, even if the church can not be improved, give it to us as it is, for the benefit of those who can say: "I am glad when it is said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." We inquire what was the underlying principle of the Psalmist prompting him to the house of God? Why was he glad when it was said, "Let us go into the house of the Lord?" Was it duty? It may have been, but not altogether. This was not the chief reason. As to his having been his duty there can be no doubt. Aside from any specific law, reason is sufficient to teach the duty of attending the house of the Lord. The very fact of the Psalmist being a member of the church, and the fact of the existence of the church, made it his duty to attend. These were sufficient reasons to settle the matter with the man of God. It was of little consequence to the Psalmist as to its being his duty to attend the Lord's house. "Duty" to him did not seem a load nor worship prove a task. He was a lover of duty, and duty to him was a pleasure. He was a lover of consistency and of Christian veracity. These were sufficient reasons to prompt him to action. But these were not the mainspring of his promptings. He did not assemble at the house of the Lord because of duty, fear, or because he was a member and expected to be there. Not altogether. There was something grander and more worthy, and beautiful in his character, which prompted his attendance upon the services of the church. What was it? It was love and a holy desire begotten in him by the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ. The services of the sanctuary were a pleasure to him. Hence he was glad when it was said unto him: "Let us go into the house of the Lord." By way of application, let me inquire, is it our duty to assemble at the house of the Lord? Is this Christian duty to be regarded as a mere incidental business? An honest conscience answers that it is not. The hindrances upon which this duty is suspended are providential, and not of our own appointing. Over these we have no control.

FEBRUARY 27, 1884.

HESLEY.

Analysis of the Statistics of the North Mississippi Conference—1883.

In this Centenary year of organic Methodism preachers and laymen will study and compare statistics more than usual. It has occurred to me that an analysis of the statistics of our Conference for last year might be helpful to the interests we wish to advance this year. A careful review of these statistics ought to convince any one that we have no grounds for boasting, but great room for improvement. My object in writing is to give honor to whom honor is due, and by the argument of stubborn facts, figures as stubborn facts, excite all to greater zeal in behalf of these interests. To make these facts tutorial, as far as possible, I will follow the plan observed by Dr. Young on "Missionary Day," i. e., to give credit to each district in the order they come, for the amount paid per member of the church in the district, for the several collections ordered by the Conference, and for the support of the ministry.

I.—FOREIGN MISSIONS.

District.	Members.	Paid.	Per Member.
Sardis.....	2,856	$425.35	14.72 cents.
Columbus.....	4,501	1,073.95	23.85
Winona.....	4,579	1,068.01	23.32
Greenville.....	4,794	1,032.25	21.53
Aberdeen.....	5,305	884.28	16.65
Greenville.....	1,667	125.10	7.50
Holly Springs.....	2,594	394.40	15.20
Corinth.....	4,763	579.80	12.15

Total.....30,479 $5,433.10 17.45

II.—DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

District.	Members.	Paid.	Per Member.
Greenville.....	1,007	$110.90	11.00 cents.
Sardis.....	2,836	261.85	9.23
Corinth.....	4,762	401.75	8.43
Winona.....	4,579	389.00	8.50
Columbus.....	4,501	280.00	6.22
Greenville.....	4,794	269.20	5.62
Aberdeen.....	5,305	232.75	4.39
Greenville.....	4,794	107.25	2.24

Total.....30,479 $1,439.25 4.72

III.—CONFERENCE FUND.

District.	Members.	Paid.	Per Member.
Sardis.....	2,836	$259.35	9.14 cents.
Columbus.....	4,501	547.15	12.15
Winona.....	4,579	521.70	11.39
Greenville.....	1,007	91.00	9.03
Corinth.....	4,762	321.00	6.74
Aberdeen.....	5,305	285.90	5.39
Holly Springs.....	2,594	269.20	10.38
Corinth.....	4,763	218.20	4.58

Total.....30,479 $2,161.40 7.09

IV.—CHURCH EXTENSION.

District.	Members.	Paid.	Per Member.
Winona.....	4,579	$33.33	7.28 cents.
Sardis.....	2,836	105.10	3.71
Greenville.....	1,007	37.15	3.69
Holly Springs.....	2,594	178.00	6.86
Columbus.....	4,501	124.75	2.77
Greenville.....	4,794	114.85	2.39
Aberdeen.....	5,305	39.75	7.50
Holly Springs.....	2,594	30.80	11.10

Total.....30,479 $663.53 21.76

V.—SUPPORT OF THE MINISTRY, PRESBYTERIAL ELDER AND PASTOR.

District.	Members.	Paid.	Per Member.
Greenville.....	1,007	$11.85	1.17 cents.
Sardis.....	2,836	335.15	11.82
Columbus.....	4,501	115.00	2.55
Winona.....	4,579	152.00	3.32
Greenville.....	4,794	135.00	2.81
Aberdeen.....	5,305	146.25	2.75
Greenville.....	4,794	75.00	1.56
Corinth.....	4,763	90.00	1.89

Total.....30,479 $992.25 3.26

VI.—SUPPORT OF THE MINISTRY, PRESBYTERIAL ELDER AND PASTOR.

District.	Members.	Paid.	Per Member.
Greenville.....	1,007	$5,045.60	$5.00 cents.
Sardis.....	2,836	6,700.00	2.36
Columbus.....	4,501	4,222.50	9.38
Winona.....	4,579	2,923.10	6.38
Greenville.....	4,794	2,248.00	4.69
Holly Springs.....	2,594	1,248.00	4.81
Aberdeen.....	5,305	7,575.55	14.28
Corinth.....	4,763	4,405.65	9.25

Total.....30,479 $35,345.31 11.60

The average salary paid presiding elders was $931.51; that of pastors in charge, $108.85. Pastors and Indian Bayou, Greenville district, paid $24.20 per member for the support of the ministry. Columbus station heads the list on foreign missions, having paid $1.05 per member. Grenada and Sena-tolia stations come next, the first with ninety-five cents and the second with seventy-seven cents per member. Bolivar, Greenville district, heads the Conference on three of the collections— for domestic missions, $1.25; for Conference fund, sixty cents; for Bishops', forty cents per member. Grenada station makes the best showing on church extension, having paid twenty-two and a half cents per member. Sena-tolia comes next, with eighteen cents per member. These figures don't look large by themselves, but on turning to the statistical reports you will find that thirty-four out of 112 pastoral charges paid last year less than $1 per member for the support of the ministry, forty-three paid less than ten cents per member for foreign missions, and not half of the charges paid as much as twenty-five cents per member on all of the collections ordered by the Conference. There is one district parsonage and forty-eight other parsonages in the Conference, leaving seventy-one appointments without a home for the preacher. There are 294 Sunday-schools, with 12,837 scholars, or about one scholar for every two and a half members. There are 2,832 church papers taken, or one paper to every eleven members. These figures speak for themselves. I offer no comments.

JAMES M. MOON.

From a Presiding Elder.

MR. EDITOR: The first quarter of the Conference year has expired, and the weather has been so bad it seems that almost nothing has been done in church work or any other business wherever I have gone, however I find the preachers and people hopeful as to the future. Notwithstanding the discouragements, I believe we have commenced the year as well as usual. A portion of our district is under water—three charges in the Yazoo valley. I have not been to that part yet, as I have never adopted the dug out as a mode of locomotion. And the prospect now is that I shall not be able to reach there before summer. I am told the water on the Yazoo has reached the stage of 1882. It is terrible on those people to have three overflows in three successive years.

We are trying to get ready for centennial work, and at some points there are symptoms of a revival of pure religion.

I wish to call the attention of all persons applying for assistance from our Church Extension Board to the following statement: We can not grant assistance to any church unless they send us a copy of the deed conveying a fee-simple title to the ground on which their house is built. Send your applications to Col. R. C. Clark. We are not authorized to assist in building parsonages or in building or repairing churches where the people are able to do it themselves. The object of the board is to aid those who can not build without assistance.

Now, brethren, this is one of the most important collections we have to take up. Please give your people an opportunity to contribute. They will contribute something whenever the subject is properly presented to them. We have aided several, and have some money on hand. Others would have been aided if their applications had been made according to our constitution. See constitution, article 6.

THOS. Y. RAMSEY.

Pastoral Sympathy.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow a note of a personal nature. January was to us a month of great sorrow. During the greater part of this month we experienced painful solicitude, and our sorrow reached its culmination on the last day. On this day, at nine o'clock P. M., our precious son, William, breathed his last. He had just reached his majority, having been stricken down with pneumonia on his twenty-first birthday. Oh! how we loved him. He was so noble, so true, so affectionate.

This hard, indeed, to realize that we shall see his manly face no more on earth. Our hearts, all lacerated, yet submissive, echo the words of the Psalmist: "All thy waves, and thy billows are gone over me, yet the Lord will command his loving kindness in the day time, and in the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life."

I write this sad note to tell you of the sorrowful love of our charge in this hour of our crushing grief. Having been advised of our great pecuniary pressure, our kind people paid at our first Quarterly Conference about fifty dollars in addition to the amount reported in answer to question 8. Tears of appreciation flowed freely on reaching home. No is this all. Not many days after Bro. Wesley Cain drove up to our house, and put into our already depleted larder meat, coffee, etc., accompanying which was this touching sentiment: "This is a present to our pastor, the Rev. J. T. Cunningham, in token of our love and sympathy in his late bereavement."

J. T. CUNNINGHAM.

Letter from Carrollton.

MR. EDITOR: No doubt your readers will feel an interest in the success of the missionary work which is being carried on in this locality by Bro. Newby and those who are assisting him in an earnest effort to accomplish a work of grace, by the Divine blessing. For two months past services have been held every Sunday evening, either at the residence of Sister C. W. Bentley, on Cambridge street, or else at the house of Bro. R. W. Knickerbocker, on Monroe street. A greater degree of heartiness and interest now characterizes our services, and there are those who are earnestly seeking salvation through the atoning merits of a crucified Saviour. After the sermon and the singing of some beautiful and appropriate hymns, last Sunday evening, several of the brethren and sisters gave glorious testimony to a personal work of Divine grace in their hearts. All that we need to make this missionary work an assured and permanent success is a church building in which to hold our services. Oh may the blessed Lord put it into the hearts of the brethren and sisters of New Orleans to help us in this good work in Carrollton. Probably there is no place where a comparatively small expenditure would accomplish more blessed and immediate results. With a population of twelve thousand souls, among whom are several zealous members of the church, it could not be long before a flourishing and successful organization might be secured. Contributions for the building fund may be sent to the pastor, at his residence, No. 320 St. Charles street, or handed to Bro. Knickerbocker, at his office, No. 20 St. Charles street.

Very truly yours, FIDELIS.

From the Work.

MONROE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We have organized "the band of Christian workers" of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Monroe, La. Its officers are: Miss Margie Garrett, president; Miss Mollie Hanna, vice-president; Miss Ida Preston, secretary and treasurer. These are all misses, but the society is composed of all ages. The object is to raise money for missions. The band meets every Sunday morning at half-past nine o'clock. It has made quite a successful beginning. Each member pays five cents per month as dues, and is expected to collect as much more from friends as he or she can. We have five prize books offered, to be given to the five children who collect the most missionary money in three months, the one collecting the most to have first choice, and the next the second choice, and so on. Our meetings are opened with Scripture reading, singing and prayer. Then extracts are read from the Advocates on missions and on various topics suited to children. The roll is then called, and the monies collected paid in.

MAY 18, 1884.

M. P. WHITE, P. O.

✓

Marriages.

GAGNET-JONES.—At the residence of David Allen, Esq., in Franklin, St. Mary parish, La., March 12, 1884, by Rev. T. K. Faint Lefroy, Mr. Seymour P. Gagnet, of New Orleans, to Miss Belmont Jones, of Franklin, La.

GRIMES-REYES.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Walnut Grove, Miss, March 8, 1884, by Rev. Irvin Miller, Mr. D. F. C. Grimes to Miss Alice Reyes.

BARNES-PITTMAN.—At the residence of the bride's father, February 27, 1884, by Rev. R. S. Gale, Mr. William Barnes, of Deer Creek, to Miss Sophronia Pittman, of South county, Miss.

ROOMS-CUNNINGHAM.—At the residence of Mr. J. T. Cunningham, March 12, 1884, by Rev. William Hart, Mr. Joseph Rooms and Miss Ella Cunningham, all of Ouchitla parish, La.

WEBB-CLARK.—At the residence of the bride's father, Dr. Clark, March 5, 1884, by Rev. Marcus C. Manley, Dr. Rufus C. Webb, of Sulphur Mine Station, to Miss Sue Clark, of St. Landry parish, La.

Obituaries.

MURPHY.—JOHN MURPHY, M. D., son of William and Henrietta Murphy, was born and educated in Union district, S. C.; moved, in 1853, to Holmes county, Miss., and on March 23, 1859, was married to Miss Laura L. Harrington, at the home of his uncle, Dr. Charles T. Murphy, in Durant, Miss. In 1860 he professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, where he lived until his death, which occurred at his happy home, near Durant, Miss., October 10, 1883.

In this brief memoir it shall be the object of the writer to make a simple statement of facts connected with the life and death of the subject of this notice, and gather and present a few of the impressions received from legitimate sources.

The stature, address and bearing of Dr. Murphy declared him at once above mediocrity. His fine equiline, grace of manner, thought and expression, adorned the great man with all things abreast with the age. As a citizen, his policy was sound and healthful. He responded readily and cheerfully to all legitimate calls made upon him. His tendency was upward; influence, refining and elevating; advice, wholesome and timely; example, emulating. He was honored and loved by a large circle of friends; but the less is more keenly felt and most deeply deplored by his immediate community, where it is regarded as irreplaceable. As a physician, he was courteous, approachable, thoughtful and kind; his practice, kind to tenderness, conscientious and cautious. In his intercourse prudent bearing and wise discretion, the constituent elements of the cultured gentleman and learned physician, were blended in beautiful harmony. He enjoyed the unqualified confidence of the critics as one with ample head and heart, qualified for the important position he so nobly filled. As a friend, he was safe, judicious and reliable—one in whose keeping your good name was secured—one to whom in darkest hours of severest trial and deepest affliction you could turn with confidence, and whose counsel and comfort would be a source of strength and courage.

As a Christian, he was meditative, earnest, serious, quiet, unpretentious, but fixed and strict; his religious life being marked with firmness, humility and unflinching devotion. His character—his attractive—symmetrical and beautiful, crowned with an abiding confidence in Jesus Christ; and as his religious life flowed as a deep, placid river, and was peaceful, so he lived "as dead a wave along the shore." In the family circle he was a most devoted and loving husband and father. He was a man of many labors, abundant, night and day—much of which was given to the suffering, moneyless poor—attacked with a fatal malady, looking to the inevitable result from an earthly standpoint, how mournfully and heart-sickeningly must have been the faithful realization of the natural man, husband, father cries out: How pleasant! comfort many, scenes beautiful, surroundings all inviting, food, raiment, limpid water, toil fitted, trial attuned for the enjoyment of the earthly rest! In the prime of a splendid health, with ample head and heart, qualified for the important position he so nobly filled. As a friend, he was safe, judicious and reliable—one in whose keeping your good name was secured—one to whom in darkest hours of severest trial and deepest affliction you could turn with confidence, and whose counsel and comfort would be a source of strength and courage.

To determine the true status of a man the witness is questioned as to the impression made upon the unprejudiced mind by what others say of him. With holy pride and joy, the pleasure of thus occupying the witness stand, while the angels are the jury and God shall be our judge. We would drop upon the casket containing all that is mortal of Dr. John Murphy a leaf, an evergreen, conscious of touch in the heart of the living, the responsive chord, where many friends memory shall ever be embalmed the deeds of nature's nobleman and the child of God.

Precious dust, quietly rest until Time's funeral knell shall awaken thee to a deathless life, when parted loved ones shall meet again.

J. C. STONE.

MEAD.—MRS. MARY JANE MEAD (nee Lewis), a native of Maine, was born Jan. 18, 1808, and had completed the seventy-sixth year of her age. She came to this parish in 1832, where she continuously resided for more than half a century. In 1839 she was united in marriage to Capt. Joshua R. Mead, a very early settler here, a gentleman of indomitable energy and perseverance, such as characterized many of the early pioneers who shaped its destiny, and have left their impress on the community of which they were honored representatives. Capt. Mead died in 1858, leaving as widow the subject of this sketch, and an only child, the present Mrs. James Jeffries. Mrs. Mead possessed, in an eminent degree, domestic habits, preferring the quiet joys of the home circle, where she ever presided with dignified amiability. Imbued with all the grace and charm of a true womanhood, of a fine presence, gentle and affectionate by nature and practice, the bright jewel, charity adorned her crown, and during her life she was honored and beloved by all who knew her; and while she will be sorely missed, her memory will be held in her immediate family circle, to whom she was especially endeared. The death of this venerable lady, among the oldest residents of this parish, has left a void nothing can fill. It is the breaking of another link that connects the past with the present. Alas! how few of her old acquaintances still linger on the threshold that divides time from eternity. Very soon must others be called. Oh! may all be so happily prepared.

From early convictions, Mrs. Mead adopted the walk and conversation of the Christian, and to the closing scene of her living career she beautifully adorned the doctrine she professed; hence death to her possessed no terrors, for by a long life of virtuous and pious, and the constant practice of deeds of charity, she had overcome all, and in perfect resignation yielded up her pure spirit to God, who gave it. Of her it may truly be said: She bore the cross, and now wears the crown. How inestimably dear the comfort and consolation to the grief-stricken ones left to mourn the realization that the victory was here, and not only this, but through her last sickness, of months duration, even to the end, her physical sufferings seemed to be light, and such as they were, were borne cheerfully and without a murmur. The remembrance of her rare and exalted Christian virtues and deeds of gentleness will dwell among us as a sweet incense. May the brightness of her pure and noble example teach us to strive to emulate it. Farewell, dear and cherished friend; thy sainted spirit has winged its flight to brighter realms, and earth contains nothing purer than we have lost.

The obsequies, which were solemnly and reverently held in the Methodist Church at Pineville, were attended by a large concourse of mourning friends and relatives. A most impressive and eloquent eulogy was pronounced by its pastor, Rev. J. M. Beard, and then in the family cemetery we laid the remains beside the husband and loved ones who had preceded her. The writer of this feeble tribute, having been honored with her acquaintance and friendship for a period extending beyond a third of a century, bows in humble submission to the Divine decree, and begs to mingle his tears with those of her immediate family.

MILLER.—A good man and minister fallen. REV. DAVID L. MILLER was born January 10, 1814, in the State of North Carolina; while yet in childhood removed to the State of Georgia; was happily married to Miss Isabella McCorvey, September 7, 1837; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1838; was licensed to exhort July 15, 1841; licensed to preach October 15, 1840; was ordained deacon by Bishop Kavanaugh, December 4, 1859; was elected to elder's orders, but was never ordained.

The writer first made the acquaintance of this pure, good and consecrated man when, but a boy, dating as far back as 1834, and will remember that the earlier days of his religious experience and Christian activities were associated with the private walks and public ministrations of the subject of this sketch. I forgot to say that about the time he reached the years of matured manhood he removed from Georgia to Alabama, and settled in Coffee county, where for many years he labored with marked success. Subsequently, about the time he reached the climax of his ministerial efficiency, he removed to Dale county, where for a full decade or more he worked with such irrepressible zeal, thoroughness of Christian devotion and ministerial success as but seldom ever mark the life and labors of any preacher, local or itinerant. Nor will we ever forget the multitudes that crowded the many houses where he preached, and scores were made to feel the joys of God's grace and pardoning love. His health failing, and thinking that a climate a little more northerly would be more friendly to his condition, he, about the year 1869, removed to north Alabama, and subsequently to the State of Mississippi, where, with much bodily suffering, he remained still God saw fit to call the faithful servant home. His disease—dropsy of the heart—was of such a nature as always to subject the patient to a sudden demise, consequently on the twenty-ninth of November, 1883, he sto his dinner, sat by the fire a while, and then lay down to rest, and in a few minutes without a groan, he was no more. His wife and all his children, except three, had preceded him to the bright beyond. His two sons are preachers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, one of them, A. D. Miller, a member of the Mississippi Conference. His only surviving daughter is the wife of Mr. W. H. Barus, formerly of Dale county, Ala., but at present of Smith county, Miss.

J. L. SKIFFER.

NEWSOM.—MRS. FRANCES MARY NEWSOM, consort of the Rev. Joseph D. Newsom, of the North Mississippi Conference, was born in Wilkinson county, Miss., December 22, 1832, and died at Faisonla, Miss., February 27, 1884. She was the daughter of the Rev. William Jones, of precious memory. Having been reared by pious parents, Sister Newsom was well instructed in the doctrines, duties and practices of our holy religion, and most faithfully did she exemplify these in her life. She was converted and joined the church in early life, and for more than forty years, walked worthy of the vocation wherewith she was called. She was married to the Rev. Joseph D. Newsom November 17, 1872, and bore her share of his itinerant life to the end of her earthly pilgrimage. She never complained of the sacrifices, self-denials, removals, or the breaking up of endeared associations incident to the itinerant life. Her religious life was cheerful, full of light and song, and her religion was of the demonstrative kind. She was ever ready to give a reason for the hope that was in her. Often her trembling, rushing joy, at such times she would voice her feelings, with emphasis that gave no uncertain sound. When it became evident that she must soon die, her spiritual sky seemed overcast with clouds, but before her death the clouds were all driven away by the light of the sun of righteousness, and she said to her husband: "There is not a mist, not a shadow between me and my Saviour." In an almost inaudible voice she was heard pleading the promises of God, and asking him to go with her "through the valley of the shadow of death." She repeated the blessed old hymn, "Children of the heavenly King," emphasizing "Only thou our leader be, and we still will follow thee." After sending messages of love to friends far away, and exhorting those about her to meet her in heaven, and bidding loved ones farewell, she opened a part of the hymn, "I would not live always," and then the disembodied, blood-washed spirit went weeping through the gates into the land of light and song.

JOHN W. FRIJOE.

DUBOIS.—REV. JOHN DUBOIS was born in Charleston, S. C., June 2, 1808, and died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. J. Grant, at Whitehall, Ala., January 30, 1884. He was educated in South Carolina, and was a pupil of Rev. E. Palmer. He came to Alabama in January, 1821, and was most happily married to Miss Louisa Williams, niece of Gen. J. E. Moore, in January, 1825, who preceded him to the better land only a few years. Bro. Dubois was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1822, was licensed to preach in 1833; ordained deacon by Bishop Morris in 1837, and elder by Bishop Andrew in 1841. Though not a member of the Conference since, yet he was frequently employed to supply vacant works, and was one of the most efficient local elders of the Methodist Church. Truly it may be said of him, as of Paul, that "he manifested his office." He had written a number of articles for the Alabama Christian Advocate, the last of which was on the desecration of the Sabbath. This article was read to him a few days before his death, and he was most gratified to think that he had left something written upon a subject of such vital importance to the Christian religion.

Bro. Dubois had a mechanical mind. He was the inventor of the Dubois Cotton Gin, and for many years lived in Greenboro, Ala., when he was at one time had a large factory. During the last few years of his life he had been subject to heart disease, which finally resulted in his death.

It was my privilege to be intimately associated with him for three weeks before he died, and we have never seen anyone suffer such excruciating pain, suffering, he never doubted the goodness and mercy of God. He was a man of great faith and prayer, and would often ask us to pray until he might be spared, but that he might have sufficient grace to patiently suffer the will of God. Often during his illness his soul was made happy, and he would shout the praises of his redeeming Lord. He died in peace and in the full assurance of hope. The good accomplished by his pure and holy life eternally alone will reveal. Though dead, he yet speaks. Among the last things that he said to his children was that he had no messages to leave them—that they knew how he had lived, and that was sufficient. Three sons, three daughters and a number of grandchildren survive him. "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

L. H. S. CHATFIELD.
DOLLAR.—ASA O. DOLLAR, son of Rev. W. A. Dollar, of the North Mississippi Conference, was born October 3, 1852, and died January 22, 1884. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

N. H. HAMER.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

With the fullest confidence the manufacturers of the Ivory Soap recommend it to those not already acquainted with it. They do not claim that it is the only pure soap; but the only pure soap to be had at a moderate price is the Ivory (99.44% pure.)

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap sent to any one who can not get it. Write to J. W. Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this advertisement.

PHOTOGRAPHS!

The Finest Establishment in the South.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1884.

TRUST.

I can not see, with my small human sight,
Why God should lead this way or that for me;
I only know he said, "Child, follow Me."
But I can trust.

I know not why my path should be at times
So straightly hedged, so strangely barred before;
I only know God could keep wide the door.
But I can trust.

I find no answer, often, when beset
With questions fierce and subtle on my way,
And often have but strength to faintly pray.
But I can trust.

I often wonder, as with trembling hand
I cast the seed along the furrowed ground,
If ripened fruit for God will there be found.
But I can trust.

I can not know why suddenly the storm
Should rage so fiercely round me in its wrath;
But this I know, God watches still my path—
And I can trust.

"Muzzling God's Oxen."

MR. EDITOR: In your paper of the twenty-eighth ultimo there appears an article from Gilderoy, headed "Muzzling God's Oxen," which gives utterance to sentiments that lead one to believe the author to be a diseased man, either in mind or body, and it may be both. We infer this from the fact that such expressions as he uses can emanate only from a morbid sense, and must, if persisted in, sooner or later, prove conducive to the financial downfall of the church through its members. No doubt many a dollar that would find its way into the contribution box for ministers and charitable purposes, is diverted into other channels by such scathings from ministers or other church members through the press.

Gilderoy writes like an avaricious man also, wanting all in his own pockets and none in others, and does not seem to think "God's oxen" work in but one place, and that there is no trouble so the muzzle is not put on a certain class, and invited there by a "parsimonious membership." He does not seem to imagine for a moment that there might be such a thing as transferring the muzzle to one less able to do without the "wisp of wheat" that might be "licked up," or one less able even to "tread out the corn," but that one class (ministers) constitute "God's oxen" and another class (the stewards and members) the muzzlers, which would be an excellent rule could it be applied only to cases and subjects like unto the ones now under consideration.

Perhaps Gilderoy has never seen an old gray-haired steward who had served for years in that capacity, and had footed the balance of assessment bills year after year rather than see it go unpaid, while his circumstances would not by any means justify such liberality. Perhaps he has never had charge of a circuit on which there was a church, the membership of which might have been large, but a few, perhaps three or four members fully alive to their duty, would pay the big end of church tax for every purpose rather than have a "parsimonious" parson say, "the last spark of grace is dead, or so dim it can not be seen with the naked eye." We say perhaps Gilderoy has never had such case under his observation, or certainly an honorable exception would have been mentioned. We contend there has been and is now plenty just such, and should the Lord in his wonderful goodness pour out his spirit on such people and converts be added to the church, and these new members, even able and willing to pay, and help support the church and its institutions, would it be an unreasonable or unjust thing to lighten the burdens of those who had borne the "heat and burden" of the day and made much sacrifice to support these noble purposes? We think not. Gilderoy would call it a "harvest of cash for the members," and that their "great joy" would consist in the reflection that good material was converted. "Paying men and women," or in other words stewards and members, would appropriate the extra cash to themselves and speculate in human souls instead of putting it in his bottomless pockets. Such principle is abhorrent, detestable, emanating from whatever source it may, and I rebel against it. Bear ye one another's burdens, and we must contribute to the necessities. Thus doing, these old soldiers would praise their God for the conversion of souls that might be saved from eternal death, rather than for their paying qualities alone and at the same time willing to contribute to the relief of suffering humanity. Does Gilderoy know of any person or persons who desire the conversion of souls through mercenary motives alone? or does he know of "stewards and members making merchandise of souls converted and added to the church." These are pertinent questions, and well deserve serious consideration. Should he be in possession of facts sufficient to justify an affirmative answer, we say he is certainly pursuing the wrong course, for such people can never be turned from the error of their ways by his style, for I believe it is a well conceded fact that the pockets of men can not be reached by abuse; but may, by reason and common sense, I believe, Mr. Editor, the world, say nothing of the church, will protest against Gilderoy's course. He reminds me of the law-making powers of some of the States, constantly passing laws to keep people from paying their debts, while, if they would enact such laws as would compel them to pay, there would be no necessity for any to keep them from it, enough to do that anyhow. Plenty church members pay little enough, and would pay just as much, and do it in a better spirit, if such articles as Gilderoy's never appeared in newspapers. This constant abuse of the stewards and members, by ministers about being parsimonious, stingy and negligent of duty, etc., gives great room to suspect those who did it of being themselves afflicted with the same disease, call it by what name you please. I once heard a presiding elder say, "I would fight a cow-pen of wild oats before I would come back to this district." That man still lives, and though he is well on in years, has no deeper hold on the affections of those who heard him say it than he would, perhaps, had he left that sentiment unexpressed, it is beneath the standard of dignity which should govern God's people, it begets a kind of alienation towards those who should be revered and esteemed on account of the position they occupy if nothing else.

"Let brotherly love continue." Yes, and let it be expressed by ministers towards those to whom they minister in holy things, and hard feelings and sayings provoked by such language as Gilderoy uses will, in a great measure, be overcome and subdued.

Yours,
WM. H. RAIFORD,
LIBERTY, MISS., March 7, 1884.
Lorenzo Dow.

In the "Reminiscences" by Rev. J. J. Harris, mention is made of this noted man. The writer is reminded of having once seen this strange minister of the gospel and heard him preach. You can publish my recollection of that event.

Lorenzo Dow lived about fifty miles southeast of Vicksburg, and was probably the second person to preach a sermon in that town. The first was Rev. John Lane, who laid off the town. He would preach in a blacksmith shop, with planks and blocks of wood for seats, the anvil as a rest for the Bible and hymn book, whilst he stood by the furnace for a pulpit. The writer has heard him preach under such circumstances.

Lorenzo Dow made an appointment to preach in Vicksburg, which was published; but, as it was several months before the day of preaching, the time was forgotten by all except the preacher. He came, but found no one expecting him nor any preparation for preaching. There was then neither court-house nor church in that little town, now historic city. Several citizens met the stranger, the result of consultation was that there could be no preaching for want of a house to preach in.

At this juncture Mr. Hartwell Vick, the oldest resident of the place, a very intelligent man and deservedly popular, proposed to have preaching at his house. He was the son of a Methodist preacher, and a man who knew and could properly consider what was due to the visitor and to his fellow-citizens, hence the tender of his house for preaching. In the evening many persons collected at Mr. Vick's residence than could have been expected. To many preaching would be a novelty, and to all the expected preacher was a man whose history excited curiosity. The dining room was filled by men, an adjoining room was occupied by women, the preacher stood in the door between the rooms so as to see and be heard by both men and women. A young man crowded in and saw it all, little thinking that he would write about it more than fifty years after, as he is now doing.

Before dismissal Mr. Vick rose and spoke in substance: "He told assured that his fellow-citizens would unite with him in thanks to the preacher for his visit to their town and for the sermon which they had just heard, and besides some of them would, no doubt, contribute to defray the expense of his traveling to and from the place. He called upon two gentlemen to hand around a hat, each to receive what any one would give."

To this the preacher replied: "He preferred that no collection should be taken; true, he was a preacher in good standing, but not acting under the discipline of his church; he could not properly accept compensation as by authority of the church. He would, however, state that he had with him a preparation for sore eyes in small vials, which he would sell for twenty-five cents each. He believed the purchaser would get value received for his money, and he would be as thankful as if the contribution had been made as Mr. Vick suggested." Each person retiring passed by the preacher. Some shook hands with him, and nearly all took a vial of this eye water, leaving on the table twenty-five cents in its place. Some left twelve and a half cents, taking no vial; there were no dimes or nickles then. Some gave even fifty cents for the vial which they took.

This was, no doubt, the only time he was present in Vicksburg. He soon left Mississippi, died, and is buried in the District of Columbia. His life was written, and can be consulted by any one whose curiosity may incline them to do so.

The subject of this notice had more notoriety than popularity. He must have been remarkable in some way to have made a reputation such as attached to his name even now.

The Philosophy of Liquor Legislation.

BY REV. J. W. HAMMON.

Liquor laws, more or less stringent in their character, have been enacted among all civilized people and in all organized forms of government. And what challenges our attention to the history of this remarkable legislation is the single fact that all these laws have had their origin in the universally admitted opinion of mankind, that the evils inevitably attached to, and growing out of the traffic, were so damaging to the financial interests of the country, and so damaging to the morals of every community, and so productive of every crime, that it was found absolutely necessary, as they supposed, to place it under restrictive laws in order to diminish its power for evil. The philosophy of these statutory laws was designed by their authors to protect society against an increase of crime and its deadly evils, and to prevent financial damage to the general prosperity of the commonwealth; and, therefore, they concluded to make it a great source of revenue under a regular license system.

How far it has fulfilled the expectation of its authors may be readily exhibited by municipal, State and national official records. These records show conclusively that all these statutory laws and restrictive enactments, instituted for purposes of restraint, protection and revenue, have, in all cases, proven to be absolute and disastrous failures. Surely the lessons of the past ought to teach our legislators wisdom in the future; for the wisdom of the British Parliament, embodied in four hundred and seventy statutory laws, embracing a period of three hundred years, to regulate the sale and obtain a revenue from the liquor traffic, has been confessed, within the last few weeks, by her wisest statesmen, to be a mortifying and disastrous failure.

The criminal statistics have become so voluminous on the subject, and they prove so conclusively, that license laws have not restricted the evils growing out of the traffic, to say nothing of the financial failure in the revenue, besides the financial damage done to the mechanical and labor systems of the countries, that a revolution is going on in the public mind that will culminate in absolute prohibition, save under the authority of the government.

The official records in regard to the failure of revenue is overwhelming, because the criminal expenditures exceed the revenue as five to one in most cases; but in our large cities seven dollars expenditure to one dollar of revenue is the common exhibit of municipal records.

These stern official facts that bristle all over with loss to the people can not be set aside any longer and pulled out of existence, because the social nature and generous sympathies of some of our legislators would have it otherwise. These official facts and damaging figures can not be ruled out of our legislative assemblies or out of the courts, for they "brought their birth in these places and have the legal stamp upon every one of them, no matter how false."

To ignore these facts in framing laws for the prosperity and well being of our citizens will be criminal in the future, and no man should be permitted to betray the highest interests of our social and political economy by the franchises of the citizen.

To sum up the philosophy, therefore, of its strange history, it may be formulated in a few sentences, and will read: National aspect of the traffic, millions for revenue and billions for expenditure.

Statehood record: Thousands for revenue, millions for expenditure. Municipal record: Hundreds for revenue, thousands for criminal expenditure.

As there is no rebutting testimony to condemn these well-known official figures we conclude that it will be exceedingly unwise in the voter or legislator, to treat such telling truths with false pleading or ridicule or even indifference.

Legislators, therefore, who propose to regulate the traffic when they ought to abolish, who propose the delusion of revenue when they ought to prohibit, who propose to tolerate when they ought to crush it, ought to be watched by the voter, jealous for his country's good, and relegate all such to the walks of a private farm, or to the smooth floor of some quiet law office, until they can rise up to the dignity of statesmanship to grapple with the master vice of the age and the leading question of the day.

And hence we have the strange and perplexing exhibition inaugurated by some legislators to regulate as a necessary evil the traffic, when the unvarnished truth now stands out like great rabbit ears, that the object of such laws is not to prevent damage to the commonwealth, not to abate criminal taxation, not to prevent crime, but when all these are consummated by the traffic, and the damage actually done, then they will display profound wisdom in making ample provisions of law for the payment of the damage done. Then, in statutes that ring with dollars and cents in the way of taxation, they will call upon the tax payers to foot the bills, balance the criminal docket, see the lawyers, and run up the scarlet, crimson flag of the great red dragon for another legislative campaign.

And this has been the philosophy of the liquor legislation; but a practical storm is brewing, a revolution has actually begun, and the banner of prohibition is advancing rapidly to the front.

Faithful to the Lord.

BY MRS. L. C. SADLER.

(An essay written for the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Enterprise, Miss.)

We read in Acts xvi, 14, that St. Paul, after going into Macedonia in obedience to the vision he had and the call he heard, went to Philippi with other ministers and tarried there waiting for an opportunity to preach.

Philippi had been made a Roman colony after the great battle where Roman liberty perished B. C. forty-two years, and this was a fitting place to begin the triumphal march of Christianity. Here he and his tarried "certain days." He had come "to help" somebody. Who was it? There was not a Methodist parsonage in all the whole city where he might go and tell his mission and find out how to begin his work. But he knew of a custom the people had of going to the riverside to pray.

So on the Sabbath day he and those with him went their way to the riverside. "And he sat down and spake to the women which were come thither." These women had come to this resort from different motives, as some go to church in our day, some to take an airing, some to see and be seen, some out of curiosity, some to hear and a few to worship.

Paul began a conversation with them. Some of them stared, some laughed, some wondered, some affectedly turned away, some with open eyes said, "He speaks as one having authority."

But among those women there was one that had "ears to hear" and a heart to heed, and she "attended to those things which were spoken of by Paul."

Her attention was manifested immediately. She did not try to conceal her attentiveness or "quench the Spirit" that was speaking to her. Then she was baptized and all her household. Her husband, (if she had one) her servants and her children, among the latter there might have been a baby. If there was she had it baptized in the faith she had accepted.

Lydia "worshiped God" before she saw or heard Paul, but when she heard the blessed glad tidings from him who had had a glimpse of "the third heavens" her soul was filled with joy and she received the grace of God in her heart.

This was Paul's first convert in Europe; though she was not a native of Europe. Her conversion was complete, and she seemed immediately inspired with the missionary spirit. Paul had helped her to find the "pearl of great price," now she must help him to help others. She opened her heart first, her house and means (for very probably she was possessed of wealth), next.

That call of which Paul had told her had no "uncertain sound," there was work to do and she in her zeal did the first thing her hands found to do. And that was the very thing Jesus told the disciples to do, "feed the hungry" and "entertain strangers."

She said to herself these holy men need rest and food, to them she said if you have "judged me to be faithful to the Lord come into my house and abide here."

Her work did not stop there, although we are not told much more about her, she probably spent her time and means in "labors abundant."

In this beautiful mention of Lydia the women of this day may find comfort and encouragement. We can "attend unto the things spoken of." We can open our hearts, houses and purses and enter the first open door to do good.

It may seem a little thing to some to be a member of a missionary society. A little thing to pay a small amount of money. A little thing to take a part in the exercises, but Lydia did not think it was a little thing to ask the preachers home to dinner or say she was sorry she could not do some big thing, but all she said was, "If you believe I am faithful, come and dine with me and make my house your home while you remain here."

Who will be a Lydia? and take hold of the first thing she can do and do that earnestly. If you are "faithful to the Lord," he will bless that work although it be a little thing, and give you more to do. Lydia was a model for all women who love our Lord Jesus Christ and want something to do. She confessed Christ. She was hospitable, earnest and "faithful to the Lord." Do not ask what can women do? But rather what can they not do? There is a lost world to save. O, ye Lydias, come, come and help us! The church needs your prayers, your presence and your means. Be a Lydia and "faithful to the Lord."

When I see a man holding faster his integrity in proportion as it is assailed, hoping in the ultimate triumph of virtue more surely in proportion to its present affliction; cherishing philanthropy amid the discouraging experience of men's unkindness and unthankfulness, and extending to others the sympathy which his own sufferings cannot obtain—I see a good produced so transcendent as to justify all the evil and suffering under which it grows up. The formation of even a few such minds is worth all the apparatus of this present world.—W. E. Channing.

Our Young People.

GOD IS WATCHING.

When I'm quiet, when I'm rude,
When I'm happy, when I'm sad,
When I'm sorry, when I'm glad,
When I pluck the scented rose,
Which in my next garden grows,
When I crush the tiny fly,
God is watching from the sky.
God is watching from the sky.

When the sun gives heat and light,
When the stars are twinkling bright,
When the moon shines on my bed,
God still watches o'er my head,
Night or day, and everywhere,
God is ever near,
Kindly guiding lest I stray,
Pointing to the happy way.

MR. EDITOR: I read your kind invitation in the ADVOCATE. I thought I would write and tell you what the Centenary year means. It has been one hundred years since the Methodists started, and that was before I was born. But I have heard my mamma talk about Methodists and Methodists all my life. She is one, and my grandmothers were all Methodists, and I am, too. I am going to join the church. I am making tidies for Centenary money. I have some thank-offering money. Our missionary society died; we are going to have a new one for Centenary year. We love our pastor. He has been to see us twice. Our Sunday-school died because we all had the whooping cough. We are going to start it again next Sunday. I am so glad. My mamma told me about some Methodist stories; but it would take me too long to write it all, so I must say good-by. God bless you, Mr. Editor, and all the consils!

WEST PEARL RIVER, LOUISIANA.
IDA C. SADLER.

(What say our little friends to Ida's definition of Centenary year? Has it been only one hundred years "since the Methodists started?"—Editor.)

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your paper, I thought I would write a few lines, as I want to answer Katie J. Coleman's questions. "The Old Testament contains 2,728,100 letters; the New Testament contains 838,350 letters; the entire Bible contains 3,566,450 letters. The word 'and' occurs in the Bible 40,227 times, viz: in the Old Testament 35,543 times, in the New Testament 10,690 times. In Ezra vii, 21, are all the letters of the alphabet—'a' and 'z' being considered as one. The thirtieth chapter of 11 Kings and the thirty-seventh of Isaiah are the same. Now, I want to ask a few questions: How many times does the name 'Jehovah' (or Lord) occur in the Old Testament? Which is the middle chapter, and which the middle verse in the Old Testament? Which is the middle line in the entire Bible? I am eleven years of age. I attend Sunday-school every Sunday. We have a splendid Sunday-school with a large membership—eighty in number. I am a Methodist, and we all like our new preacher, Bro. Featherston, splendid. For fear of growing wearisome, I will close. I remain,
Your little friend,
CLINTON STEGALL,
SOMMIT, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy six years old. I can write right well, but not well enough to write to an editor, so mamma said she would write for me if I would tell her what to tell you. I am going to school. My teacher's name is Mrs. Chrisman; my Sunday-school teacher's name is Miss Lizzie Lewis. I know no other little boy has any better or prettier teachers than me. Papa and I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Bro. Forsythe is our pastor. I love all the preachers. Mamma reads all the girls' and boys' and Bro. Jones' letters to me. I hope Bro. Sims will see my letter in your good paper. I expect he has forgotten me. I have a sweet little brother. His name is Johnnie, but we call him Pat. He is just one year and a half old, and can tell who made him. He cries to go to school with me. I wish you could see him say his prayers with me to mamma every night. I want some of the little folks to tell me, Who climbed up the acaymore tree to see Jesus, and what for? Hope you will put my letter in your good paper, and hope soon to write well enough so I will not have to get mamma to write.

Your little friend,
EDDIE H. REMBERT,
WESLEY, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: Knowing you allow girls and boys a column in your paper, I will take advantage of it. I am going to school at Rural Seminary, one mile from the city of Natchez. We have a good school whose principal is Prof. J. M. Fly. The children come out from town in a large omnibus drawn by two large mules named Dove and Tib. We have been having debates for the last few Fridays, which proved very interesting to us children. As I was reading the children's column last night I noticed a question, asked by Ernest Neil, that seemed a little peculiar. It was this: "At what point in the Union can one sit down and be in two States, three counties and four towns at the same time?" I would like very much for this young gentleman to explain himself, if not too much trouble. Our Sunday-school is quite flourishing in Natchez; but I guess you know that, as you were here during the Annual Conference, last December. I will close for fear of tiring you. Wishing you and the ADVOCATE success, I am, Your little friend, NATCHEZ, MISSISSIPPI.
FREDDIE PETTY.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your most worthy paper before, I concluded to write a letter. I have taken your paper, and we all eagerly await its coming. We have had no Sabbath-school this year on account of bad weather. We have been having Sabbath-school regularly, winter and summer, for six years until this winter. We have been going to school, but school has closed on account of measles. I will answer some of the boys' and girls' questions. The answer to John C. Mims' question—"Is there any taste in the white of an egg?"—is found in Job vi, 6. Also Hattie Tucker's—"Where is the word 'blue lace' found in the Bible?"—is found in Exodus xxvii, 37. Willie P. Nelson's—"Cut off a dog's neck"—is found in Isaiah lxi, 3. Maggie B. Gordon's is found in 11 Kings xix, Isaiah xxxvii—just alike. I will ask a few questions: How many letters, words, verses, chapters and books are in the Bible? Where in the Bible are there four verses alike? Which is the middle verse in the Bible? With many bright wishes for yourself and ADVOCATE, I remain,
Your friend,
COLEMAN BROCK,
BROCK'S, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: I must tell you about my missionary chickens, too. I had eight; but papa's hogs ate four, and I sold the others to Mrs. Cazo for a dollar, which I gave to Mr. Caldwell, our pastor. I did not sell my "mamma," as W. M. B. did, for I want to give a better account this year. Our Sunday-school will begin soon. Mr. G. W. Galloway is our superintendent; he is also president of our Wide Awake Missionary Society. I am twelve years old. There are four of us children here, and one on the "shining shore"—my dear brother, Johnnie, who was baptized in infancy by yourself, Mr. Editor. It has been a year and a half since we had to part with him, and our home is desolate yet. This is my first letter, and I will close, as I do not know whether it will be worth publishing or not. Your friend,
CANTON, MISSISSIPPI.
BIRDIE DAVIS.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading the letters in your valuable paper, which papa has been taking over since I can remember, and I like it very much. We have no Sunday-school, but hope we will as soon as spring opens. The answer to Hattie Tucker's question is found in Exodus xxvii, 28. The answer to Maggie B. Gordon's, Lillie B. Goodwyn's and Mattie Star's question: 11 Kings xix and Isaiah xxxvii are alike. (The word "reverend" is found in Psalms xli, 9.) I will also answer Daisy Urquhart's question: The book of Esther does not contain the word "God." I will ask the cousins, What Psalm has four verses in italics? With many good wishes to the dear ADVOCATE, I remain,
Yours etc.,
MOLLIE S. HOLT,
YAZON CITY, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading the letters in your valuable paper, which papa has been taking over since I can remember, and I like it very much. We have no Sunday-school, but hope we will as soon as spring opens. The answer to Hattie Tucker's question is found in Exodus xxvii, 28. The answer to Maggie B. Gordon's, Lillie B. Goodwyn's and Mattie Star's question: 11 Kings xix and Isaiah xxxvii are alike. (The word "reverend" is found in Psalms xli, 9.) I will also answer Daisy Urquhart's question: The book of Esther does not contain the word "God." I will ask the cousins, What Psalm has four verses in italics? With many good wishes to the dear ADVOCATE, I remain,
Yours etc.,
MOLLIE S. HOLT,
YAZON CITY, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: I have taken a great deal of interest in reading the young people's column in the ADVOCATE. I am a little boy fourteen years old. We have a nice little Sunday-school. Papa is the superintendent, and mamma is my teacher. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. I do not see how we could do without it. I will close by answering Gerie St. Roane's question. It was, "Has anyone ever discovered Moses' sepulchre?" No. I will ask a question: Where is "dead dog" found in the Old Testament?

Your little friend,
WILLIE C. OUNLEY,
BAGDAD, LOUISIANA.

MR. EDITOR: You were kind enough to publish my first letter to your valuable paper, and it has encouraged me to write again. You may tell Joseph E. Norwood the answer to his question is found in Jeremiah xxxi, 23. The answer to Edmund Brock's question may be found in Isaiah xxxiv, 14. Who of my little friends will tell me how often the word "Lord" is used in the book of Psalms? With many kind wishes from
Your little friend,
EUNICE E. HARMON,
BALLIS, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write another letter to your paper. We all love to read the ADVOCATE. Papa says he is going to take the ADVOCATE another year. I am a boy of thirteen years of age. I am going to ask the girls and boys a few questions: What kind of wood was Noah's ark made of, and where was it found? What is the middle of Samson? How many foxes did Samson catch? Yours truly,
FLETCHER TATUM,
FORT PAYNE, ALABAMA.

MR. EDITOR: As my father takes your valuable paper, I thought I would write a short letter. As I see that so many girls and boys ask questions, I thought I would ask one: What book and chapter and verse in the Old Testament has all of the letters of the alphabet except "j"? Your little friend,
ESTELLE HAMILTON,
BLACK HAWK, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy six years old. I was named for my grandpa, and a preacher, both of whom I love. I am a Sunday-school scholar, and can read in the first reader. I want some of the little folks to tell us how long white is to "Jacob's ladder," and how long white is to "deceased upon it?"
Your little friend,
L. H. LEWIN,
TYLER TOWNS, MISSISSIPPI.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. O. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1884.

Death of Bishop Kavanaugh.

We made a brief announcement last week of the death of our revered chief pastor, but a more extended notice of his character and career is due our readers. He passed peacefully away on the early morning of March 19 from the parsonage in Columbus, Miss., after a painful illness of two or three weeks. To him was given "length of days," and grandly did he fill up the measure of a laborious and glorious life and ministry. An honored son of Kentucky, to his native State he was proudly, devotedly attached, and it was fitting for his body to be carried home and laid to rest in the generous soil that gave him birth. He was born in Clarke county, January 14, 1802, and inherited on his mother's side a noble line of Methodist ancestry. His grandfather, Dr. Thomas Hinde, ranks among the most historic characters of early Methodism in the then pioneer State of Kentucky. His father dying when he was quite a boy, he went out to service, and apprenticed himself to Rev. Mr. Lily, a Presbyterian minister, as a printer. At sixteen years of age he was converted, and united himself with the Methodist Church, and at once gave evidence of that spiritual zeal and consecration that made his ministry so powerful and successful. In 1823 he was admitted on trial into the Kentucky Conference, and without a break in his effective itinerant labor continued to preach the word with unremitting ardor until the cross was exchanged for the crown. He went up from the field of battle—the veteran victor of many a struggle.

"His sword was in his hand, Still worn with recent fight."

At the General Conference of 1854 he was elected to the office of a Bishop, and with genuine reluctance and humility assumed its great and multitudinous responsibilities.

Without tracing in minute outline the bare facts of our dear old Bishop's remarkable ministry, we will instance and emphasize those salient points of character that gave him greatness.

First, because foremost and most important, he had a clear conversion and an inspiring Christian experience. He preached a living Christ. Religion to him was not a theory, but a joyful reality. His conversion was a radiant, distinct, supernatural fact, and it gave a glow and confidence to his faith that no doubt or temptation could cloud or eclipse. Cold form and lifeless dogma could not contain a soul aflame with a perpetual pentecost of fire. He dwelt amid the higher spiritualities, and preached out of a full heart and a rich, ripe, glowing experience. He talked not of an unknown and unfelt Christ, but of a personal, ever-present and all-powerful Saviour. He knew whom he had believed, and thrilled the church because of his very abundance of spiritual revelation.

Bishop Kavanaugh had a phenomenal catholicity of spirit. No narrow, pent-up ecclesiasticism confined the power and expression of his Christian charity. Evangelical above sectionalism or sectarianism, he had a brother's hand and kindly word for every true son of God. Though firmly denominational, he was warmly and Scripturally fraternal. An ardent Methodist, he bade every evangelical church a hearty, prayerful God-speed. There was in him nothing of the partisan. His Christian love knew no race nor creed, nor points of the compass. Though severely tried, suspected and persecuted during the war, because he was a Southern Methodist Bishop—arrested and arraigned on frivolous, groundless charges—he prosecuted his one work without fear or favor, stain or compromise. Nor did he nurse any antagonism or trace of bitterness toward the enemies of his life and character. He was conspicuous as an advocate of fraternal relations with the Church, North, and rejoiced when the same was established.

The Bishop had a refined and irrepressible humor, worthy the genius of Sydney Smith. This, chastened and controlled by a consecrated purpose and kindly heart, made him one of the most genial and charming companions. Few men excelled in the sparkle and readiness of genuine wit. The monotony of conference sessions was often ended by his pointed anecdotes and witticisms. They were pungent or sparkling as the occasion indicated. His fund of anecdote seemed to be inexhaustible, and were at times the striking and telling illustrations of his sermons and Conference addresses.

Bishop Kavanaugh was a theologian. He studied with profound interest the Bible as a system of doctrine, and in the hands of his rare analysis its teachings formed a harmonious and perfect whole. Independent in inquiry and exhaustive in investigation, he was yet conservative and reverent to an eminent degree, and had no patience with theological empirics or adventurers. He adopted the Arminian statement of doctrine entirely, and from investigation, not by family inheritance or social influence. So thoroughly had he mastered the science of theology that the slightest divergence in statement or tendency was detected at a glance.

But the Bishop's greatest glory was as a preacher. He was a master in the pulpit. It was his throne of power; and there he shone as a star of the first magnitude. Uniting at once the logical acuteness and skill of the metaphysician with the exuberant imagination and exultant temperament of the poet, he was a pulpit orator of almost peerless power. Rigid in analysis, clear in statement, logical in argument, and felicitous in illustration, he combined all the elements of a masterful gospel preacher. Argumentative and imaginative, he convinced the judgment and aroused the conscience—he instructed the intellect and stirred the soul. Some of his mighty achievements in the pulpit partook of the marvelous. On occasions vast congregations were lifted to their feet by the resistless charm of his wonderful eloquence. He revealed amid the celestial delights of the saints, and kindled many a camp meeting into a pentecost by his graphic descriptions of the glories of the redeemed. At such times his homely faces shone with a heavenly illumination, and his clear, clarion voice had a flute-like sweetness and power. Bishop Kavanaugh was the last of that old school of pulpit giants of which Bascom was the central and grandest figure.

As a Bishop in the church, his administration was characterized by rare gentleness, and an entire absence of the air and port of authority. Amiable and guileless, he lacked some of the sterner metal necessary for a model administrator. Abundant kindness, no doubt, sometimes controlled his better judgment, both in the assignment of preachers and the enforcement of law. But in purity of purpose, singleness of aim, innocence of unholy ambition, sweetness of temper, serenity of spirit, and transparent beauty of character, his name will shine among the most illustrious of our chief pastors. The funeral services in Broadway Church, Louisville, the sermon by Bishop McTear, and the vast mourning multitudes that early sought the spacious temple, were a worthy tribute to the apostolic character and labors of Kentucky's distinguished son. With a tender hand and an appreciative heart, responsive to his warm personal friendship, we lay a flower upon his peaceful grave.

Incidents of the Last Illness and Death of Bishop Kavanaugh.

BY MRS. LUTIE PAINE SCRUGGS.

Mr. Scruggs left Columbus, this morning, with Mrs. Kavanaugh, for Louisville with the remains of our much-lamented Bishop Kavanaugh, and requested that I should write you of the last illness and death of the Bishop.

The announcement of this death must have been both a sorrow and a surprise to his many friends; for, although he had attained an advanced age, he was so youthful in his feelings, so hale and hearty in appearance, that we were apt to forget that he was the "old man eloquent," and hope for him many years more of useful labor.

He left Kentucky, in the early fall, to preside over the Conference assigned him, attending the Virginia at Richmond, the Mississippi at Natchez, and the Louisiana at New Orleans. While in the latter place he preached his last sermon, on February 10, in Dr. Markham's Presbyterian Church. After a sojourn in New Orleans of several weeks, and a pleasant visit to his old friend, Col. W. R. Stuart, of Ocean Springs, Miss., he came to our city, February 27, in fulfillment of a promise made many months ago. He was quite feeble when he reached Columbus; but it was hoped he would regain his health after the fatigue of the trip had passed off. But such was not the case. Indeed, he grew so alarmingly ill that his physicians, Drs. Lipscomb and Vaughn, pronounced him in a most critical condition, and advised his wife to return at once to Kentucky with him. But the Bishop was such a sufferer, and so loath to leave, that it was decided to move him from the residence of Capt. C. A. Johnston, where he had been hospitably entertained, to the parsonage, where Mr. Scruggs could give him his personal attention.

This move was effected on Monday, March 10, without any inconvenience to him, and the following three or four days he seemed to improve. However, there was one unfavorable symptom: a desire to sleep. He had no disposition to converse, and, when aroused from a heavy, unnatural sleep, would answer incoherently or in a brief way as possible and immediately relapse into drowsiness. On Thursday, March 12, he was unusually sleepy until the close of the day, when he passed from out of the state of lethargy, was able to leave his bed and spend a social evening with us. The night was a dismal one. The rain fell in torrents, the lightning flashed and the wind blew to our utter dismay; but the good Bishop heeded none of these things. He was so bright and cheerful as we sat around the parsonage hearth and heard him quiz his wife by recounting their courtship and marriage (nineteen years ago), and tell of his trials as a young itinerant in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky.

One incident which he told amused him, and he laughed immoderately over it. You will pardon the digression if I recount it, as it engrossed his thoughts the last lucid moments of his life. On his first circuit there were twenty-four appointments, and on one occasion he spent Saturday night with his most aristocratic members. Sunday morning the gentleman of the house could not leave home, and requested the young preacher to escort two young ladies (who were, like himself, visiting the place) to church. The ladies were intelligent, accomplished, and the superiors of their neighbors; so he naturally enjoyed their society. The day was a pleasant one, and they rode leisurely, reaching the church as the congregation was assembling. He assisted the ladies to dismount, attending to their horses, after which he went into the pulpit. At the conclusion of the service he bade his friends good-by, and started to another appointment many miles distant. "Imagine my surprise," said he, "when upon returning to this appointment after an absence of a month, as I began the opening service, I was interrupted by one of the stewards, and requested not to proceed with my sermon as the church had charges to prefer against me for escorting two ladies to church, and even to be so indiscreet as to assist them from their horses. The church could not tolerate such behavior. She wished a minister in her pulpit, and not a gallant. Well," said the Bishop, laughingly, "I told them I had no defense to make, but would simply state I would do the same thing again; and before the year had closed they were heartily ashamed of their conduct, and to this day it is told in that neighborhood with mortification."

It was ten o'clock when he finished the recital of this little incident. He complained of being weary and desired to retire. Mr. Scruggs asked him to pray with us if he was able, which he did, kneeling and invoking the blessing of God upon us in a low, tremulous voice. This was his last rational act, except the recognition of a friend next morning. He had a severe rigor during the night, which was succeeded by a comatose state from which he never rallied entirely. Skillful physicians and good nurses did what they could to alleviate his sufferings and stay the hand of death. But he rapidly declined, and on Tuesday morning, March 18, the sad fact was realized that the Bishop was dying. During that day he was in a heavy stupor, each breath becoming more labored, and the following morning, at three o'clock, he passed away.

Mrs. Kavanaugh will deposit the remains in a vault in Louisville until she can confer with the Bishop's family regarding the proper place for final interment. The goodly people of Columbus feel that it has been a great privilege to administer to the dying wants of this great and pious man. Bishop Kavanaugh was my father's colleague in the episcopacy for thirty years. They loved and revered each other in this life; they are reunited now "where sickness and sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more."

COLUMBUS, MISS., March 20, 1884.

We notice in the Southwestern Presbyterian an item of news that furnishes a good suggestion. Judge Pentress, of this city, founded the Sunday-school library in the church at San Saba, Texas, known as the "Thomas Pentress Library." In memory of a son. That example might be emulated to profit in all our Sunday-schools. We need books—good books, carefully selected—for the children to read during the week.

The Mania of No Deficits.

A writer in the Nashville Advocate says some pointed and pertinent things on the subject of assessments for ministerial support and the relation of presiding elders thereto. We are distressed about the meager stipend on which our pastors have to subsist. The average "allowance" seems to have decreased within the past several years, until we wonder how many families are maintained and how the heroic pastor can go to Conference with a smiling face and a new suit of cloth. But the rigid economy and self-denying drudgery of the home are not seen and known. There should be an advance in this matter of pastoral support. One reason and explanation for the decrease is stated by the correspondent above referred to in what he calls "a mania on the subject of no deficits." Assessments are reduced to the minimum to assure full payments and the pleasure of reporting at Conference all the collections in hand. And the preachers sometimes encourage the policy. There is pastoral pride in being signaled on the Conference floor as having brought up a clear fiscal report, including one's own salary. Such comparisons are odious and enologies ill-timed, unless we consider the several assessments and financial strength of the congregations. A meager assessment on a wealthy pastorate, if fully paid, is poor liberality as compared with a larger apportionment to a weaker congregation only partially met. For such discriminations to be fair and stimulating to all, there must be no inequality of assessments. But this "mania of no deficits" has so reduced the pastor's allowance until self-denial cheapens his self-respect, and becomes a rock of offense instead of a Christian virtue.

There is an educating force in a good assessment. It indicates spiritual appreciation and enterprise. It is a mark to be reached, and worthy of the truest grace of liberality. We would rather have an assessment of $800 with only $600 paid than a salary of $400, every cent in hand—that is, provided $800 could be realized if each member contributed according to ability. So long as the church fails to observe this rule, low assessments are a compromise with duty and an apology for covetousness. Let the figures stand there as the Imperial call of conscience, though never reached.

Brethren sometimes say to the stewards: "Don't assess any more than you are sure of paying. We can not live on promises." And the stewards in response say: "That is our idea exactly. We always pay what we promise." Very good, provided the promise is the full measure of duty. But if not, it needs interment with that other musty morsel old avarice has rolled under his tongue for ages, viz.: "Charity begins at home." They are near of kin, and should sleep in a common grave. A deficit on a Scriptural assessment, after faithful, prayerful effort, is far better than full reports on a stingy, starving allowance. There is an evil in this mania of no deficits, and we here and now lift the danger signal.

A Good Law.

The late Legislature of Mississippi passed a timely and stringent act forbidding the sale or exhibition of obscene and immoral literature in the State. It prohibits any person from selling, giving away or exhibiting "any indecent pictorial newspaper tending to debauch the morals, or any indecent or obscene book, pamphlet, paper, drawing, lithograph, engraving, daguerreotype, photograph, picture or any model, cast, instrument or article of indecent or obscene use," or from advertising any of said articles. All the newspapers of the State are placed under the restraints of the act. The penalty for each violation is a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or twelve months imprisonment.

That is a good law, and should be enforced. We are encouraged at the growth of a moral sentiment that demanded such a measure from the Legislature. Now, if the administrators of justice are active and watchful the law will be a schoolmaster to bring the people to a higher plane of public morals.

The evils of an obscene and immoral literature are beyond calculation. The innocence and purity of many a young mind has been corrupted and poisoned by popular pictorial newspapers. Art refines and ennobles when the pencil is wielded by a hand as pure as skillful. But it may be an agent of infinite evil. Before some lofty conception of a genius whose soul was aflame with an inspiration of light and love, we are lifted out of our lower, selfish natures and seem to hold communion with the divine. We turn from the sensual and earthly and dwell amid the higher spiritualities. But, on the other hand, the immoral inflames the young imagination, and it is soon "set on fire of hell." A gentleman strongly contended, with us recently that boys ought to be early acquainted with the ways of the world that they might take warning and be strengthened against evil. A false and most dangerous policy. We pity any soul who is so reared and prophecy for him a career of sin and shame. As long as possible the young mind should be kept unsoiled. Let it grow into the strength of manhood in the contemplation and companionship of the pure, the beautiful and the good, and then the vulgar and sinful will shock and offend. He will flee from it and cling to the right.

An Afternoon at Amite.

In response to a request from the ladies of the Wesleyan Society at Amite City, La., we spent last Wednesday afternoon in that place, and delivered a lecture in behalf of the new church. It was a most enjoyable visit, and not soon to be forgotten. Our little congregation there, amid many discouragements and embarrassments, have done nobly. About fifteen months ago their church building was destroyed by fire, without a dollar of insurance. But nothing daunted, they renewed zeal and effort, and have nearly ready for occupancy a neat frame church of tasteful design and ample accommodations. They have also a comfortable little parsonage, quite well furnished, in which their faithful and highly esteemed pastor, Rev. J. M. Pugh, is pleasantly domiciled. We attended the prayer meeting at four o'clock, and was delighted with the numbers present, the spirit of the occasion and the manner of its conduct. Indications seemed favorable for a great awakening. Nearly every person in the house repeated an appropriate passage of Scripture, on which the pastor made a pointed comment. It was, indeed, a prayer class meeting, full of spiritual life and power.

At seven o'clock a fine audience assembled to hear the promised lecture on "Illustrious Ducees." That so many filled the church was a pleasant surprise. Unless in exceptional communities, our people have not attained unto the idea and value of lecture courses. Quite a nice little sum was realized for the building fund. With many warm hand-grips we hurried away, and at a quarter past eight was bounding homeward with all the speed of steam.

Our friends are profuse in their grateful acknowledgments to the Baptist and Presbyterian brethren for giving them shelter during the long months of their church homelessness.

Jealous for the Lord of Hosts.

Two traits not peculiar to Elijah are discoverable in this expression: 1. The making a merit of zeal, as if that brought God under obligation. 2. An expectation of approval from the world, whose course was condemned by his teachings and life.

There is a circumlocution in the words which may be noticed. Instead of answering God's question directly, "What doest thou here?" he begins away back, and winds up by saying: "I only am left." We did not say, "Hiding from Jezebel," though he might have done so. Nor "Praying to die, and leave the whole world to the devil," though that was the gist of his prayer. He begins, "I have been very jealous," etc. Why not put it in the present tense, "I am very jealous for the Lord, and Jezebel is seeking to kill me for it." That would have been a straight answer.

Zeal is meritorious if it be in a good cause. But it is better to be evenly zealous than apassionately so. Yet Elijah's depression was natural, and had perhaps the benefit of teaching him that the reaction of popular opinion was nothing more than the reappearance of depravity, hid for the moment by the fire from heaven. Miracles convert very few unbelievers. "They would not believe though one rose from the dead." The reason is clear; faith is voluntary. Forced belief is an absurdity. Elijah's zeal would have compelled belief. Divine wisdom foresaw the tendency, and provided for its cure. The influence of Jezebel's influence drives him into the desert. Idolatry asserts itself and revels in its triumph. The supreme moment seems to Elijah to have come. "Let me die." Life a failure. Surely I have lived holy to no purpose. What avail toil and self-sacrifice? Divine favor has been shown me. I have fought long, and apparently with success until now. But, alas! Diabolic resolution and resources seem inexhaustible. Fire from heaven does not appal. The death of four hundred prophets does not dishearten Jezebel. "The gods do so to me." What a fearful imprecation! Into what a thunderbolt does diabolism convert itself! Elijah is not prepared for it.

"I have been jealous." How many Elijahs do we find to-day? I have done my best, but no one was on my side. I struggled with all might against the fearful odds. But I was alone. I could have done without sympathy if I had had help, or without help had I had sympathy. But I had neither. It was more than I could bear. I have retired. Here let me die, under this juniper tree. Its own half perished branches standing out on the face of the desert like the torn and riven masts and sails of a stranded ship on a desolate shore. I under it. Let me die. Were I to die in the city only curse and rude gibes would be uttered over me. Here at least in peace. The winds sing a dirge through these old boughs. The whirlwind will pass, and heap earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust. The ravens will light above my head and croak out: "Man that labors of a woman hath but few days; and full of trouble." I have been jealous, but my dead energies now pray for death of all the real. Better die than live to become as selfish and as godless as others. Better die than to go again upon the forlorn hope. No. Don't talk about a revival that will shame the devil. I have been along there. You think it worth something; I know better. As the early dew. But there is another light in which to look at it. Elijah is telling over his experience to himself and God. It is by no means a profitless exercise. To what has life been so long directed? To God's service? Then mark it down. Bear an Ebenezer. The aim was lofty, the purpose sublime. The wings of Icarus melted, but it was at his topmost, and not at his lowest flight. Better thus than never to have soared. Is he fallen? He is not now lower than those who never dared the empyrean. So here under the juniper tree, praying to die, let Elijah tell what he has been. He will find in the recital no cause for self-reproach. Thank God a man that can make that discovery has not thrown away his life! Does Elijah want the fifty years of his life of jealous service of God undone that he may follow successful kingcraft, successful idolatry, successful mammon, successful debauchery of self and of all others? No. Let it stand: "I have been jealous for the Lord of hosts." Write it upon the old juniper trunk; write it on the desert rocks, and show it to the desert winds. "It has been a failure," but sublimer as a failure than the triumphs of Alexander or Timour. Men leave nothing behind at last but the record of their endeavors which have fallen infinitely short of their hopes and aspirations. What is the summation of all the love of Egypt upon its pyramids, its pillars, its tablets, its sarcophagi? "I have been eager for immortality." The most powerful despots of earth have set down and become beggars by the wayside of posterity, and Da obolom Belisario is a proverb that echoes from every mausoleum. But the failure of Elijah shines out in immortal beauty from the withered juniper. "I have been jealous for the Lord of hosts."

I have been.—So much history has gone to record. Whatever may be said of others contemporaneous with me, my history stands unique, conspicuous. Petty jealousies never disturbed my soul. Communal elections, partisan politics, national questions were beneath me. From the top of the mountain of my elevation I have looked down upon the eagle and the sparrow alike busied with things too low for me. The storm have swept below, shooting from their black bosoms the red lightning; but from above in calm sunlight I have looked upon those same clouds rolling in snow-white billows along the lower skies. Men have abounded; "God save the King," but I have been jealous for that God, defending his honor from imposition and fraud. Let men write others' history, and tell of the little prejudices and sly hates that have moved them to drench empires in blood. Mine must be written from a higher standpoint. Struggling with these mighty themes and eternal aspirations, I shall sit down alone in the desert and die; but the world must know that I have been, and heaven will stoop and forbid my bans with mortality. Henceforth the way is solitary, but not long. Even as he moves on the prophet seems to grow ethereal. With intensest longing he seeks to be alone, and yet Ellaha will cling. He who has passed the bitter stream and has drunk with Jesus the cup of Gethsemane has chartered the roadway of the skies and the ministry of angels, and at the same time has magnified all that is noble of earth which follows it with tears and anguish sweeter than all the glory and feasts of worldly kings.

T. A. S. A.

The Place of Power.

It is not often that we find anything so timely, practical and suggestive as an editorial on this subject in the New York Independent. It deals with the most important of all questions—the proper attitude of the soul and church for receiving that divine bestowment of power on which is conditioned all spiritual enjoyment and achievement. We must occupy a certain place or power can not be imparted. Outside the path of duty there can be no communication of spiritual life. If we are to see Jesus and feel his healing love, we must meet him in the way. The poor blind man near Jericho knew the road our Lord was traveling, and made haste to reach it. He was healed, because in the way of Life. There are some places our God never frequents. If we visit there, he does not accompany us. We commend the following liberal extracts as worthy of careful, prayerful study:

By a simple induction of the facts in connection with our Lord's ministry and that of the apostles and first Christian ministers of the word, we have seen several things to be true. First, that power belongs to God, and that the Holy Spirit is the great agent of it in the Godhead. Second, that the gospel of God concerning his Son, Jesus Christ, can only be made efficient in the salvation of men when it is accompanied with the power of the Holy Spirit. Third, that this power goes not so much with the word as with the minister of it. Fourth, that Jesus himself affords us the first illustration of the method of the operation of this power in that his whole ministry on earth was prosecuted by means of this power which was given to him as the "servant of God."

Furthermore, that he explicitly charged his disciples, who were to preach his gospel among all nations and peoples till the end of the days, that they must not undertake it until they were "endued with power" even as he was; and, lastly, we have seen that, when they were so endued, they were both faithful and bold in their preaching, and that mighty results followed their words. We fairly conclude that the general absence of apostolic results in the present ministry of the word argues an absence of the power of the Holy Ghost with the ministers of the word. We assume that it is still, as ever, the will of God "that all men shall be saved," and that the gospel is still the instrument of human salvation, and that the Holy Spirit is as ready and efficient as ever in his mighty work.

Our present inquiry is as to where the break is in the circuit of power. It is not in the gospel itself, for we hold that it is fairly and faithfully preached; it is not in the failure of virtue in the finished work of Christ; it is not in withdrawal of the Spirit of God from the work of human salvation; it must be in the fact that the ministers of the word, especially, and the whole church in general, have lost their proper position before God. If we may borrow a word from natural law to illustrate a fact in spiritual life, we would say our insulation is defective. If not wholly, at least in great part. For we hold that where there is perfect insulation from the world on the part of the ministry and the church there will always be a mighty rush and flow of power wherever the word is preached.

The continuation of this power ever since is seen only where the place of separation is clear and distinct. The law of the spiritual life is separation. God's people first separated from the dead religious world at Jerusalem. The testimony of the early church was one of life for a world to come. It gathered both its testimony and its life about a risen Christ. It did not study to make peace with the world, or how to adjust itself to its surroundings, but it steadily testified against it, and called upon the people of God to break with it. The doctrine of Jesus Christ is not the conversion of the world, but conversion from the world to God. The church occupied the same place and took up the same testimony in the pagan world. She first lost her place when she sought to accommodate herself to the world, and finally sank into superstition and death when she forsake her heavenly bridegroom and made an adulterous marriage with Caesar. Her first great awakening was from the sleep and death of the ensnaring Romanism. This began in the separation of a few from the false and apostate church and the world to God, taking up a testimony against both. The echoes of this great truth are heard in every week of prayer, in every assembly of God's people who look for revival. But no spasmodic and feeble measures will answer. If we are to have power again in the church of God there must be a moving into position. We believe it must begin among the ministers of the church. Each only place and power, earthly position and rewards, popularity and applause from man, and even ecclesiastical success as motives must be cast down as unclean and carnal, and a real inward separation to God from the world and to the gospel of his Son is the place into which we must move if we are to be endued with power.

A fearless study of the book of the Acts of the Apostles, as setting forth the fundamental law of the life of the church of God, the condition of power and "much fruit," would, we believe, lead many of us to see that we are not in our true place before God. We are not in the place where the Holy Ghost can use us. He will not, he can not use a ministry or a church that is not in a place of separation. A well try to force the electric current along a non-insulated wire as to expect the power of the Holy Spirit to flow through a worldly church or ministry. We study and magnify the life and work of Paul, and many of his spiritual successors in all ages; but who among us are ready to take the place of Paul and those worthies (who are the church's earthly glory), in their self-forgetful separation to God for the sake of Christ and his gospel?

An Affecting Scene.

We clip the following from the Evangelical Messenger. What a terrible revelation of sorrow! And what an eloquent lesson of warning! No man slus unto himself alone. Others are affected by his offenses. This wife and these children are not only widowed and orphaned by the dreadful crime of a husband and father, but through life the disgrace of his bloody deed and hangman's death will stain their otherwise fair names:

A heart-breaking scene occurred in a Southern State several weeks ago, showing the bitterness and cruelty of sin and the sufferings of helpless innocence with the guilty. John Thomas, convicted of murder, and sentenced to be hanged in April next, was on his way to Atlanta jail, where he was to be confined until the date of the execution. While waiting for the train at the railroad station in Palmetto his wife sat by him, her head upon his breast, sobbing violently. His three little children were gathered at his knees, kissing his hands and begging him not to go. At length one of them noticed the steel manacles on his wrist, took hold of them, and, pulling them vigorously, said:

"Papa, what have you these on for?"

The child kept trying to pull them off, ignorant of the dreadful truth of why they were there. Failing to release him, the child appealed piteously:

"Papa, do please take off these ugly things; I don't like to see them on you. Take them off so you can lift me on your lap."

By this time the other children joined in the appeal, and the crowd of persons surrounding could not repress their tears. At length the train rolled up, the murderer was taken from his weeping family, and was soon on his way to await his terrible doom.

Rev. Rober Randle, presiding elder of the Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, writes, under date of March 12, as follows "from the floods":

Things are rather watery with us now, as about three-fourths of the land in this district is inundated, with prospect of higher water. Yet our people are reasonably cheerful. Those who trust God look to him for deliverance, and the remainder have a vague hope of some success, from whence they know not, nor care. The preachers are all at work with some hopeful tokens. Our finances are, of course, quite prostrate.

Our jury laws seem to have been framed for the protection of criminals. If a man has had intelligence enough to read newspapers and has formed in view of the facts published, any opinion of a given case he is disqualified for jury service. The result is, ordinarily, our juries in criminal cases are composed of the most ignorant and irresponsible classes. We are glad to see that Ohio has taken a much-needed departure in so amending her jury laws that the court shall determine after examination whether a juror, who has knowledge of case, may have expressed an opinion of its merits, "will render an impartial verdict on the evidence." Such legislation would subvert the ends of justice in every State in the Union. Under the existing statutes the theory of a trial by jury—"a council of peers"—is a nullity and an absurdity. The trial of a wealthy and influential murderer by a jury of illiterates and undescripts is not by "a council of peers." In that way criminals go unwhipped of justice and the administration of law is brought into contempt.

A New Congregational Creed has been prepared and published by a commission appointed for the purpose at the instance of the National Congregational Council, held at St. Louis, in 1880. The creed, consisting of twelve articles, is a clear general statement of doctrine without much distinctiveness. We quite agree with the Northern Christian Advocate that "its distinguishing feature is its non-distinguishing distinctions." Except the statement on baptism, to which our Baptist brethren would object, it might be adopted by all evangelical churches. One fact, however, is noticeable, the progress of Congregationalism has made from the rigid Calvinism of other years. The following is the second article of the new creed: "We believe that the providence of God, by which he executes his eternal purposes in the government of the world, is in and over all events; yet so that the freedom and responsibility of man are not impaired, and sin is the act of the creature alone."

Enterprise, Miss., under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Weems, "cleared the decks" last Sunday, and is now ready for Centenary work. Enterprise has thus shown herself worthy of the name.

—The fourth of July will be doubly celebrated in Iowa this year. The State prohibitory law goes into effect on that day.

—Bishop Keener leaves to-day for Nashville to attend the meeting of the College of Bishops and the Board of Missions.

—The New York Herald says the great City of New York "is governed, through the aldermen, by a lot of foreign-born rumsellers."

—St. Paul's Church, Baltimore, was assessed $216 for foreign missions and paid $433, and Trinity Church, in the same city, was assessed $590 and paid $700.

—The Rev. T. A. S. Adams, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been appointed by Gov. Lowry one of the trustees of the State Female College to be established.

—Rev. J. T. Sawyer, of Bastrop, La., has "cleared the decks" of his assessments for foreign and domestic missions and church extension. We expected as much of that wide-awake pastor.

—Our special and appreciated correspondent, "Invalid," has been very critically ill, but we are glad to learn is improved and will continue to favor our readers with the choice fruit of her ready pen.

—The judges of the Court of Appeals, New York, have decided to wear silk gowns when sitting on the bench. Robes will add to their official dignity, if not dignity, but will hardly affect their wisdom or integrity.

—Rev. J. A. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference, will soon publish a volume entitled, "Facts Concerning the Church, Gathered from the Bible." We have seen the manuscript, and can commend its eminent worth.

—Dr. Ahrens delivered a memorial sermon in honor of Bishop Kavanaugh, at Dryades Street Church, last Sunday morning, from the text the Bishop selected for his Conference discourse at Carondelet some weeks ago.

—In a note to Bro. Jamieson, dated March 20, Dr. Walker writes: "I am able to sit up, some and to walk about my room a little." We hope the doctor will take counsel of prudence and await his full restoration before beginning active work.

—Missionary Ransom reports the prosperous opening of the college in Rio de Janeiro. Already one hundred and twenty-five pupils have been enrolled, and, if accommodations could be furnished, the number would increase to three hundred. From every point in our Brazil mission there are cheerful tidings.

—Hon. Frank Hurd, of Ohio, is a devout Romanist, and declined to attend President Arthur's State dinner because it occurred on a fast day. Without a particle of sympathy for his Romanism we honor a man who so respects his religious conscience and is not ashamed to declare it. Not every politician in Washington has such moral courage.

—The Argosy Society, of the Carondelet Street Church—an organization of active young members of that congregation—signaled their meeting on last Thursday night, by presenting the pastor, Rev. Felix R. Hill, an ornamental writing desk and outfit as a birthday souvenir. The Carondelet pastor wears such a youthful appearance that we refrain from publishing the almanac register of that day.

—Not every politician could echo the death-bed words of Congressman Haskell, who died recently in Washington. He said: "Next to my God, my wife and my children, I value my good name. My record is clean, and my children can look back upon it with pride. I'd rather have a good name than all the world." And that accords with the words of the wise man: "A good name is better than precious ointment; rather to be chosen than great riches."

—The Presbytery of Shantung, China, at a recent meeting reported six hundred and seventy-two converts as having been received during the past year, making an aggregate of two thousand and seventy-two members within the bounds of the Presbytery. Such a large percentage of increase we have not known; not in our Israel at home. The gates of the morning are opening on all heathen lands. Heaven deliver us from "dawdling at daybreak!"

—The last New York Advocate devotes eight columns to Dr. J. P. Newman and the Madison Avenue muddle. We must think that the distinguished New York editor is making much ado about a small affair. Dr. Newman's ecclesiastical tergiversations and acrobatics are too silly for such prominence. If a man gets too big for Methodism and wants to leave, the back door stands wide open for him. Nor do we believe in dignifying his exit by excessive mention.

—Our brethren at Vicksburg purpose repairing and remodeling their church, and are hard at work gathering funds. That unornamental nondescript on top of the building has needed laking down for years. We are specially interested in their success, and would modestly suggest that money paid a good architect is the cheapest investment they can make. There is an old saying that "when a man is his own lawyer he has a fool for a client." Suggestive of a fact when he wants to build and plays architect himself.

—O, for the rarity of a good sexton! Our Richmond confrere says, "A worthless doorkeeper of the house of God is a choice tool of the devil." A late Bro. Smith, of Charlottesville, Va., by bequest, endowed the sextonship of the Methodist Church in that place. A wise legacy. We visited a church recently that has a model sexton. He takes pride in having the house neat, comfortable and well-filled. The bells were rung at the right time, and the doors were closed after each new comer. We agree with Dr. Lathrop that "the average sexton and the average furnace make Israel to sin."

—The Colorado Methodist reports cheerfully of the red and substantial growth of our church in the great West. Six churches have been built during the year and improvements made valued at $13,000. The Las Vegas Seminary has 102 pupils and an addition of $1,000 to its property. Another school has been projected at Farmington, which promises well. Revivals at La. Veta, Colorado Springs, San Luis circuit and Beulah have netted about one hundred souls, and in nearly every congregation there have been conversions and accessions. A second church in Denver has been entered. These are good tidings, and give the general church great joy.

—One of the most solemn services we ever attended was a funeral, last Sunday afternoon, in the chapel of the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Jackson. One of the pupils—the first in the history of the institution—had died during the day. In presence of the entire school of deaf-mutes and their teachers we read the Scriptures, offered prayer and made some remarks. Prof. Dobyns stood by and interpreted to the pupils in sign-language. No word could they speak or hear, but the tears in their eyes and the sorrow of their countenances eloquently revealed the grief of their hearts. And so without ear of voice God can speak to the human spirit. It was a strangely, solemn hour.

—We had the pleasure, on Tuesday evening, of last week, to hear a lecture in Werlein Hall, from Rev. Dr. R. A. Holland, on "A Day in Jerusalem." The lecturer, well known as an accomplished elocutionist and rare rhetorician, and fully sustained his reputation on that occasion. Many passages were strikingly eloquent. Before entering the city and describing minutely its objects and places of memorable interest he gave a general description of it as seen from Mt. Olivet. Dr. Holland's manner is graceful, and his enunciation remarkably clear, but rather too studied for pathos. He will delight instead of arouse—entertain rather than convince. But on an occasion such as the above, when his descriptive powers have full play, he is at his best. He will lecture again soon under the same auspices on "The Sea of Galilee."

—The temperance agitation is bearing unexpected fruit both as to kind and quantity. It is not only arousing the masses to their danger and duty, ventering law officers and frightening the politicians, but is converting the liquor dealers. A meeting of liquor men was held in New York recently, when a series of resolutions were passed pledging themselves to support existing excise laws, to close their houses on Sunday, and to assist the police in enforcing the Sunday closing law. One of the gentlemen urged that theirs was "an organization that has been formed to observe the law and not to defy it." Well, that is encouraging. For saloon keepers to become observers and not despoilers of our Sunday laws was more than our faith had anticipated. Let the agitation go on. It is worth all this labor to compel such resolutions from any number of liquor men, however few.

Books and Periodicals.

—FAC-SIMILE REPRINTS OF WESLEYAN HYMNS. Nashville: Southern Methodist Publishing House.

This is a literary curiosity for Centenary year. They are exact reproductions of the original hymns published in 1737 and 1742, as to type, paper and arrangement. Price, seventy-five cents.

—AT THIS TIME; A Holy Week and Easter Musing. By Mary Leland McLaughlin. New York: A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 900 Broadway.

This is a beautiful poem, and printed in a beautiful style. Those desiring Easter cards and souvenirs, should send at once to this popular house.

RAWLINSON'S HISTORICAL EVIDENCES.

—New York: John B. Alden, publisher. This is an excellent reprint, at greatly reduced price, of the celebrated Hampton lectures in 1859, delivered by George Rawlinson, M. A., on the Historical Evidences of the Truth of the Scripture Records. They have been so long before the public, and so often quoted as authority on the subject discussed, we need add no word of commendation. Mr. Alden has put them in the reach of all our readers.

JUDITH; A Chronicle of Old Virginia. By Martha Ballard. Philadelphia: The Centennial Publishing Company, New York: Fords, Howard & Thibert.

It is needless to speak in terms of high praise of any production from the pen of Marian Harland. Her name ranks among the highest for beauty of conception, felicity of expression and rare power of description. The story of Virginia, and of social life is one of her best, and will find appreciative readers North and South. There are a few fine illustrations. Send to publishers for a copy.

—The Sunday Magazine, for April, is the best number of that excellent monthly we have received for some time. Most of the articles have been read, and some of them with real profit and pleasure. The leading article has exceptional interest. "A Pilgrim in Yellowstone Park," by M. Seymour. The paper on the great German philosopher, Goethe, is worth double the subscription for a year. This is an excellent illustrated literary-religious monthly for only $2.50 a year. Mrs. Frank Leslie, 55, 57 Park Place, New York.

—The North-American Review, for April, is a fine subject discussed with freshness and ability. The following is the table of contents: The Decline of American Shipping; Shall our Civilization be Preserved? The Development of Religious Freedom; Changes in the Climate of North America; A Plan for Modern Languages; Literature for Children, by Julian Hawthorne, and Recent Criticisms on the Bible. The last and the article on Religious Freedom, by Dr. Philip Schaff, are of special interest. New York: No. 30 Lafayette Place. Single number, fifty cents; yearly subscription, $5.

—The Irving and Elzvir Libraries are unique conceptions of John B. Alden of New York. They are marvels of cheapness and excellence. Of the Irving Library, we have received Salamsund, by Washington Irving; Some Twice-Told Tales, by Nathaniel Hawthorne; Conversation, by Thomas DeQuincey, and A Century's Message, by Dr. A. D. McLean. Of the Elzvir Library we have a Life of George Mallory; Luther's Anecdotes; Luther's Table Talk; The Raven and Other Poems; Legend of the Wandering Jew; and Public Health. Either of those can be had for a few cents. They range in price from two to twenty cents. New York: John B. Alden, 18 Vesey street.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

"Ella" wants to know if we can tell her what the Knights of the Kith are? Usually Saturday nights, dear.

GOOD NEWS TO PLANTERS.—Ozier Cotton Seed reduced to 41 per bushel.

Lambkin says the only sure preventive against Western rivers rising would be for him to own a few shares in 'em.

The New La. Remedy has found its way to more than twenty States and to Europe; and wherever it goes, it elicits enthusiastic eulogies from delighted men, women and children.

Two boys quarrelling: "My pa is a preacher and will go to heaven." "Yes; an' my pa is a doctor, an' cau kill your pa."

Sanarian Nerve, the great nerve conqueror, is invaluable in nervous prostration. "May God bless you," said Rev. W. L. Martin, of Mechanicaltown, Md. "Sanarian Nerve cured my fits." $1.00 at Druggists.

He: "You made a fool of me when I married you, an' an." She: "Lo! You always told me you were a self-made man!"

COLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF TONIC is best calculated to cure indigestion, and to perpetuate bodily vigor and regularity. Take no other. Of Druggists.

"How do you know when a cyclone is coming?" asked a stranger of a Western man. "Oh! I get wind of it," was the reply.

For consumption use HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. PIKE'S TOOTHACHE DROPS cure in one minute.

Father: "I never imagined that your studies would cost me as much money." Student: "Yes; and I don't study much either."

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP for diseases of the skin.

A contest between two dentists as to which of the two could take out the most teeth in a given time resulted, as was expected, in a draw.

CONSUMPTION CURED.—An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails, has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

"MURDER," asked the two fond daughters, "can't we have anything we want?" "Yes, my dear; but be careful and don't want anything you can't have."

W. C. Sheppard sells dinner, tea and breakfast sets, $14.00; china case teachers, $1.50; china case chamber sets, $1.50.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal Street, New Orleans, is prepared to supply plans and arguments on the most liberal terms. Write to him for his prices and catalogues. You need not send off North for instruments of a questionable character when you can get a good article nearer home at a fair price. Mr. Werlein's house is well known to us all for its fair and honorable dealings. Plans of the most celebrated facilities are kept. "Chickering, Weber, Mathiaschek, Hale, Hammond, Werlein and every instrument maker had a great number of years. Organs: Mason & Hamlin, Day State, Sterling and others very low. If you will send your order to Philip Werlein you will be satisfied and pleased with your trade. Music or any musical article to be had.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

To those of our subscribers, not content in a money order office, we would say, please inform us by postal card whether in continue the ADVOCATE or no.

We would again call the attention of advertisers and agents, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, please keep this in remembrance.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and tubercular consumption, asthma and general debility. The most solid, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and K. H. TRUAX, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

150 PAGES, GAINED IN THREE WEEKS. J. C. AND CURD OF CONSUMPTION. Messrs. Carver & Co., 1032 Race St.

GENTLEMEN—Yours send me twelve bottles of Dr. H. JAMES' CASSARA SYRUP, one each of Pills and Ointment, for a trial of value who is not expected to live, and as your medicine cured me of Consumption some three years ago, I want him to try them. I suffered from pneumonia while taking the first three bottles, and I know it is just the thing for him. Respectfully, J. V. HILL, Lawrenceburg, Anderson Co., Ky.

AGENTS WANTED for the Grand New Book WOMAN AND TEMPERANCE, BY FRANCES E. WILLARD, "A Free of the W. C. T. U." and the leading temperance orator of America. The great interest felt in the cause and in the noble work done by the women of our country will make this demand for this book unprecedented. Every member of a temperance order, every one who wishes the welfare of the temperance cause, should have a copy. Extensively bound, 32 full page illustrations, price $2.50. Extra price to Southern Agents. PARK PUBLISHING CO., Hartford, Conn.

No More Nauseous Dozers. It has been reserved to our age to furnish materials for the greatest cough and throat ailment. The New Remedy for all throat and lung complaints. The New Remedy, containing no poison, and is delicious. Home references by thousands. Life tonic, infallible for children. Home Depot, 151 Julia St., N. O.

LOUISIANA STEAM

Sash, Blind and Door

FACTORY.

299, 301, 303, 305, 307, Gravier Street, NEW ORLEANS.

ROBERTS & CO.

Proprietors.

Sash, Blinds, Doors, Mouldings, Flooring and Ceiling, News, Balusters, etc., always on hand, or made to order.

Orders promptly attended to.

Plantation Cabins a Specialty

BRANCH OFFICE: NO. 32 CARONDELET STREET.

Sabbath School

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

SPECIAL MEETINGS, ETC.

RECENTLY SONG BOOK OUT, 64

Who people say "Oh!"

"A grand song book!"

"A very superior one!"

"It is some of the best!"

"The quality of the songs, together with the new and beautiful illustrations, make it a most desirable work."

"An excellent series of superior merit."

"If you speak for it all." All we ask of Sunday schools needing new song books, is to send for a sample copy before adding any other.

Single copy 50c. Order per dozen. Sample copy to any address, 25 cents. Printed both in round and character notes.

PLEASE WRITE TO PUBLISHING CO., Springfield, Ohio.

YALE & BOWLING,

WHOLESALE

DRY GOODS

AND NOTIONS

17, 19 & 21 Magazine and 88 Common Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

HEADQUARTERS

FOR

Sunday School Supplies;

Consisting in part of GOSPEL HYMNS, Single and Combined, With and Without Music.

Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Teachers' Bibles, Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bible Dictionaries, etc.

Union Primers, First and Second Reading Books; Catechisms; Reward Cards; Scripture Text Cards; Tickets, etc. Also a large assortment of Books suitable for Sunday-School Libraries, or presents to children. Pupils and Family Bibles, from $1.50 to $15. Liberal discount to ministers, churches and Sunday-schools. Catalogues sent on application.

W. D. HILLMAN, Business Manager, 84 Camp Street, New Or

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 14.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, APRIL 3, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1444.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—113 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers Act! price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUMPHREY,
REV. O. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. F. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

RACE.

BY FATHER RYAN.

My feet are weary and my hands are tired,
My soul oppressed,
And with desire have I long desired
Rest—only rest.

'Tis hard to toll, when toll is almost vain,
In barren ways;
'Tis hard to sow and never gather grain
In harvest days.

'Tis hard to plant in a field that is hard to bear,
But God knows best;
And I have prayed, but vain has been my prayer,
For rest, sweet rest.

'Tis hard to plant in a field that is hard to bear,
But God knows best;
And I have prayed, but vain has been my prayer,
For rest, sweet rest.

'Tis hard to till the soil, when 'tis tilted to weep
O'er fruitless toil.

And so I cry, a weak and human cry,
So rest—rest—rest;
And so I sigh, a weak and human sigh,
For rest—rest—rest.

My way has wound across the desert years,
And care is left;
My path, and there the flowing of hot tears
I pine for rest.

'Twas always so; when still a child I laid
On mother's breast;
My weary little head—'twas then I prayed,
As now, for rest.

And I am restless still, 'twill soon be over,
For down the west,
Life's sun is setting, and I see the shore
Where I shall rest.

Musings.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTELL, D. D.

There was once before the Alabama Conference—prior to the divisions and re-divisions whereby that grand old Conference of Jefferson Hamilton, Neely, Walter C. Harris, Cottey, Summers, Father Riley, and the like of them, became fragmented—a proposition for the establishment of a Conference organ to be published within its geographical borders. In a little talk regarding our journalistic and other literary needs I remarked that it was well for us to have a central representative paper whose columns should furnish to this Methodist public the very finest we are capable of producing upon all questions and subjects of interest to the human mind. From its columns should be excluded that which was of merely local significance—such as mention of men's whereabouts, marriages, pastoral presentations, births of babies, great big little revivals and the stupendous effects of the preaching of "our beloved presiding elder, whose praise in the gospel is in all the churches"—leaving these to the Advocates and Methodists secondary to the connectional, metropolitan paper. In illustration, I said that our mental needs were similar to our physical needs; that as a horse could not thrive on corn simply, but must have shucks and fodder to fill up with, so was there a demand of the mind for the coarser, gossipy matter relating to ordinary persons and events, and that a Conference organ should meet this demand. It is very well that this policy did not prevail, for instead thereof there has ensued a generations, courteous rivalry among our papers, and it appears now that all narrow-gauge theologic and ecclesiastic policies are being quietly, but inevitably, substituted by whatever pertains to the world of mind. In a word, catholicity in its highest evangelical sense seems to be the demand; so that a church journal, in order to be in demand, must feed the mind with the word in its every legitimate variety. Such was the significance of what Christ said when he declared that "man shall not live by bread alone."

Original Wesleyan Methodism was as the springing forth of a new dispensation of fraternity among men, and, in order to conveyance of the enlarged thought and sentiment, a wider gauge was in demand. Wesley—whom I regard as the best historic personal representative since Christ of that religion which is one in this life itself, and whose genius is to discover the sacredness of all that is not sinful—availed himself of what he could gather from any source, evolving, according to the exigencies and surprises of the new life that had dawned upon him and others, methods that were organic, and not mechanical. Hence a growth, and not a mere upbuilding. No one can take an inventory of such a field, for it belongs to the Christian world in common. What is properly Methodism has so diffused itself through all ecclesiastical orders, and has so infiltrated the public as to reconsecrate society. No church on earth is now in its movements and manners toward the public and toward other churches what it would have been without Methodism. It has wrought a wonderful softening and refining. The Christian ministry of the world has become a brotherhood, so that we are almost as much at home when we sit on the train with a minister of another denomination as if with a Methodist. After awhile it will be realized that man to man is sacred as man, and then a thrill of the love-life of humanity, of the Christ-life, will pass us out from many of the peculiar ways which have been operating their insulations and inducing self-consciousness and complacencies.

But I began to speak of our literature. Bishop McTear has recently, in a letter to a Canada editor, mentioned the seeming inability or indisposition of the Church, South, to maintain a monthly magazine. The solution of that problem is simply this: Let some capable man smitten with a zeal on behalf of what is best in philosophy, art, science, poetry, and all economic interests of society, dare somewhat and throw his enterprise upon the support of men and women of all classes, in attorneyship for nobody and nothing, and there would be no failure. We want no election or appointment of such editor, as we want no church institution, by Annual or General Conference action, of such a monthly. We want fat light-wood kindling, and no soggy wood for a literary flame of that order; and writers who are competent to contribute, profitably, to the columns of such a journal should be compensated for their work. Above all else is there need for that which will go by its own strength or weight to the heart, and inspire by its own living energy; engender by its own vigor, thought and sentiment that are enriching and refining. Writers that insist upon religiousness, and write about holiness and piety, and about Christ and about the Holy Ghost, and who are hortatory and monitory, but who yield little or nothing that a reader feels to be strengthening or refreshing, have occupied about as much space in our literature as has been profitable to us. Like tearfulness of voice in the preacher, or any other religiousistic fetch in substitution of sense severely sifted out or sentiment impulsively, writing of that order is at a premium among the less discerning.

Bishop Keener once said that the greatest man is he who is capable of doing the most drudgery. Yet does it require the inspiration of that which is above drudgery to spring a great soul to the tedious details. An editor is taxed in sensibility quite as much as in other regards, as he is compelled to decline publication of what writers have been at pains to furnish under conceit of literary sufficiency. Dr. Summers suffered in the spirit no little in this regard. A wearisome waste of salamander and hills, indexing the dreariness and punctuating the monotony of the poorer pine ranges, of Florida, is after the order of much of the religious literature of this churches. When an editor becomes smitten with a conceit of epigrammatic apt-ness in himself, and essays something peculiar in this form of literary brevity, it takes more than a sprinkling of piety to make relishable his little flirts and frips. There ought to be at least one plum or one apple-slice in each of the little dumplings. When all dough, with merely a sprinkle of sugar thereon, they make pensively the countenance of the guest. In truth, it is as we are ourselves, read by that which engages us, that literature gives us pleasure and profit, and not that which we have this task of reading. No little of banality and insipidity of writing arises out of thumbing on a few strings—treatment of themes and disquisition of duties that have again and again brought words into requisition until they seem faint and sluggish. This droop of nothing in nature is more provocative of pity than is a willing of words annoying.

It is ungracious to be hypercritical; it is unbrotherly—yes, coarse, to discount or to deride what others do according to their peculiar make up of mind or moral being. Dr. Lafferty has an editorial in the last issue of the Richmond Advocate, on nursing our antagonisms, that is to the point. It is a hard old time of it we have with human faces. They will follow us into our solitudes. We will forget a thousand faces that have smiled in benevolences as we have greeted them, and allow a single one, or two, or three, of them that have worn a grin to haunt us. I have spoken of expressions of literature that are not attractive. I must head off from this subject of human faces. Aught that is sinister in the expression of the human countenance is afflictive to the eyes of one whose soul seeks soul. To see a face pass from repose to expression of thought and to radiation of sentiment that betoken self-forgetfulness in preoccupation with truth, and to hear a voice accordant, as words fraught with sincerity and ponderous in meaning carry out to others the inner being of him who thinks and speaks, cheapens all other expressions in art and nature. Alas for us that our lives are not ingenious enough to have secured to us such qualifications for spiritual service to our fellows! "He that loveth pureness of heart, for the grace of his lips shall the King be his friend." The grace of one's lips borrows from the brow and the eyes and from abroad everywhere where that master conception of the Divine mind—the human countenance. It may be with faces as it is with words. We put a meaning into or upon them from our own moods. As all attempts at ascertaining truths by inquisition of words, by philological siftings, have been abortive, even so it may be in regard of this other method of discourse; for sickness and suffering and superinduced affectations and imitations of admired ones, and much that we may not account specifically, have wrought disguises, so that underneath coverings not the most suggestive of such treasures are often found the most hountful supplies of nobility and benevolence; and after we have otherwise made discovery we seem to see it all written upon the face. How true it is in this, as in everything else: when we have appeared to reach a conclusion, or to have made discovery of something that we flatter ourselves with as an increment of wisdom, precisely its apparent opposites presents itself as quite as true. It is only the mind well practiced in apprehensions of truth's paradoxical turns that can escape one-sidedness and avoid partial views leading to belittlings of life and character. This accounts for some men, who have promised much in early manhood, falling off and dropping out just where was expected the ripening of their greatness.

Letter from Memphis.

Our people have enjoyed a visit from Bishop Hargrove. He spent the third Sunday in March with us, and delighted us both in the pulpit and the social circle. His account of Western matters was peculiarly interesting. He is not only full of enthusiasm and hope about our church in the West, but also of wise practical plans for its enlargement. I confess I have been more or less skeptical about the Western work, and have questioned the policy of spending money in that field; but Bishop Hargrove's calm and business-like look at the condition of its development has impressed me. When I say the Western work I mean Montana, Idaho, and the ends of the earth that way. We have a grand future in all that region if Bishop Hargrove's recognizances has not been a mistake.

The new Hernando Street Methodist Church was opened for worship last Sunday. Rev. David Leith is pastor. Leith is a Scotchman, a broad and brawny Caledonian, with the dash of a Highland chief and the rigor of a Puritan, though he stoutly denies that he objects to the calf sucking the cow on Sunday. The story goes around on him that soon after coming to this country he had occasion to ride somewhere on horseback, and put the saddle on with the face to the horse's tail. He has moved off finely at Hernando Street, and has pushed the building to speedier completion than some expected. And it is a gem; this interior showing to more advantage than the exterior. What an improvement has been made in pulpits! The old box concern with a huge bookboard has given place to a simple platform with a table and a bookstand. The old style pulpit is a barbarism. Every one of them ought to be split up into kindling wood. Let the preacher stand among the people, as near to them as he can get, with nothing between them. Bishop McTear's idea, which I believe he picked up somewhere in Europe, is the right thing: let the pulpit stand out well in the church, and put the people all around it. Bishop Hargrove preached for Bro. Leith at night, on "The Success of Methodism, and Its Causes," to an overflowing congregation. It was a masterly presentation of the subject. I wish it could be delivered in all our churches. It produced a deep impression here, and will do us good in many ways.

The First Church continues to grow in numbers and power. Some changes have been made in our city work recently. Saffron's Street Mission has been attached to the First Church, and Rev. G. B. Baskerville appointed junior preacher. This arrangement bids fair to work out fine results. Bro. Baskerville is an excellent preacher, a faithful pastor, and has already made a good beginning in his work.

It is not generally known that the Vanderbilt University originated in this city. Hon. R. J. Morgan, an officer in the First Church, and the Rev. W. C. Johnson, the editor of the Western Methodist, met on the street one day, and in conversation they talked over the project of a great central university. The result was: Judge Morgan wrote an article for the paper in favor of it; Dr. Johnson urged it editorially. The Conference took it up and appointed committees to meet in Memphis and organize the movement. They met in the lecture-room of the First Church and started the great enterprise. The brethren tell us how startled they were by Dr. Garland's statement that at least a million of dollars would be needed to carry out their plans.

Memphis is just now excited from center to circumference over this Sunday law. A few weeks ago an effort was started to have the barber shops opened on the Sabbath. The president of the taxing district, or as he would be called under a different order of things—the mayor, announced his purpose to do his duty and enforce the law. I preached a sermon on the subject, which seems to have been the opening gun of the battle. The other preachers followed. The press took the other side, and the Avalanches and Ledger have especially waxed hot in zeal for the abolition of Sunday. Last Sunday Rev. Mr. Long preached a sermon against the Sabbath. He took the most extra ground in favor of its abolition. His sermon is a tissue of sophistries from beginning to end, but artfully woven together, and, being addressed to a public who desire to do away with Sunday, they swept the city like wild fire. An edition of 5,000 extra copies for distribution was issued, and the Sabbath desecrators are very jubilant. But the end has not come. Tomorrow nearly every pulpit in the city will reply, and the sophistries of this young ecclesiastical revolutionist will be dissipated like mists. I have resolved to reserve my fire until a week later, and if anything is left of him, I will try to dispose of the remnant. The result will be good in the end. It will provoke a general discussion of the Sunday question and arouse the conscience of the city. Besides, Mr. Long's position has been very equivocal, and this attack uncovers him and will drive off from his support all the moral sentiment of Memphis. He will become the recognized leader of the lewd fellows "of this baser sort," and if he is personally a good man, which I do not doubt, he will find he has made a serious blunder.

We have no church paper here, and the secular press is against us. I doubt if there are a hundred Methodist papers taken in Memphis. Can you, Mr. Editor, come up and see us and help us in our fight? We have had a Bishop; now we want an editor if we have to make one.

A Word to Preachers—A Centenary Thought.

Every Methodist should read up this year on Methodist history. The task may seem a dull one at first; but, persevered in, the interest will grow on our hands. Reading the account of the itinerant labors of the early Methodists, I can not help noticing the contrast between the pulpit of to-day and former times. Do not the facts then and now justify the assertion made by the old lady in New England the other day, that then "we had golden sermons in wooden pulpits, and now wooden sermons in golden pulpits"? We have rich churches and cultivated pastors; but where is the old time power of the pulpit? True, we have revivals here and there; but do they not depend mostly upon the eccentricities of some "evangelist" oddity? And do not the failure of revivals under the ordinary pastorate prove that the preaching there is not in demonstration of the Spirit and with power?

No faithful observer can doubt the fact that there is a present lack of power in the pulpit, nor is it hard to find the cause and point out the remedy. Doubtless several causes more or less operate: such as the secularization of the ministry, the unusual prominence given to other agencies of the gospel, such as the collections, education, the propagation of special measures of reform, etc. But the main trouble, I doubt not, is of an intellectual kind. The rationalizing spirit has usurped the throne of the pulpit. The religious processes of thought, which it calls Christian philosophy, that through intellectual sympathy the ministry is unconsciously drifting away from the simpler and stronger grounds of faith. The authority of God's word and the Divine institution of the church and the ministry do not hold sway over men's minds as formerly, and we are trying to make converts on the ground of the intellectual superiority of our Christian philosophy. Such preaching does not secure convictions. We may gain applause by it; but it will not win souls.

In Jeremiah there is a passage that may have analogies to this subject: "He that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord." This is the remedy: "Preach the word." Preach it in faith that it is "the sword of the Spirit." It is a mistake that the learned and educated require any other kind of preaching. In Paul's time noble converts were made by "the foolishness of preaching." So in this time of the Wesleys and Whitefield not only the ignorant colliers, but the most cultivated of English society were struck with the power of their preaching. And so it is down to the present.

I give this as a Centenary thought. While we are studying the noble facts of our history, and contemplating the wonderful accretions of power bequeathed to us during these hundred years, let us not forget that a chief factor entering into all this result was the irresistible power accompanying the messages of the early preachers; and, while it is hoped that our membership may catch the inspiration of enlarged liberality, it is no less important that our ministry become re-consecrated and re-animated with power from on high.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRY, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.
JUDGE JAMES WHITEWORTH, Treasurer.

Centenary Reflections.

Bishop Kavanaugh: "The glorious march of Methodism through the past century of her organic existence in America is a theme that inspires my soul. I congratulate myself that I have been permitted for more than four-fifths of this glorious period to witness the great triumphs of the church through the direction of God's Spirit. I bear joyful testimony to the fact of the genuineness of the wonderful work wrought and of the mighty results accomplished. This track of this century is embossed with the shining marks of God's outpouring Spirit. There are towering monuments of his love and care all along its backward track. What an inspiration they should be to us today! Brethren, how they encourage us to press forward to the mark of our high calling as it is in Christ Jesus! What a grand theme to dwell upon! This Centenary year we should, as a church, not prove recreant to the noble history our fathers have made, but should add to it pages of heroism and devotion worthy a place in the records of American Methodism. O for a revival of the old days of gospel power and triumph! What glorious opportunities are offered to make this year memorable! Let us measure up to our responsibilities and privileges! We can make this year a monumental one. The great objects—missions, church extension and education—appeal to our liberality, and should not appeal in vain. We can discharge every obligation we, as a church, owe to these worthy aids in our grand work of evangelizing the world and not be weakened by the outlay. Brethren, let us go forward, and fail not."

Dr. Young: "I venture to say that every presiding elder in Southern Methodism who falls, at his next District Conference, to report all assessments paid in full will make a meager showing in the vast column that will be footed up in December, 1884. These assessments will clog and hinder him until they are paid up, reported and out of the way."

Dr. McFerrin: "I feel great concern for the success of children's day. It must be successfully celebrated; to do so will inspire and aid the great Centenary work. I want a large sum of money raised on that day, and properly invested, so that the annual interest may be applied to the purchase of sound literature for the benefit of Sunday-schools in destitute places, in the suburbs of cities, and in sparsely-settled country places. What a mighty lever for good will thus be placed in the hands of the church! The grand results of this work will only be fully revealed in eternity."

Bishop Parker: "Besides the argument of hope which this centennial delivers, it comes to us also with the voice of admonition. It should be an awakening appeal. We should be jealous especially of our spirituality. If there be any symptoms of decline, if the tendency to worldliness be evident, we must return to the simplicity and fervor of our fathers. There is abundant occasion for thanksgiving, but reason also for searching of heart. The century of Methodism commits to us, upon whom the ends of the world are come, a priceless inheritance. How to be faithful to so great a trust should be our prayerful and anxious study."

W. P. HARRISON.

When darkness gathers round my path
And all my song birds cease to sing,
I know it is not sent in wrath—
'Tis but the shadow of the wing.
When dancing sunbeams round me shine,
And joy has peacefulness embrace,
I know the radiance is not mine—
'Tis just the brightness of thy face.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, APRIL 3, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

LITTLE MARY MARGARET.

BY INVITATION.

Not with the summer's blushing rose,
Not with the sweet breath'd magnolia,
But in December, crowned with snow,
Came little Mary Margaret.

No fly, sparrow, pure and fair,
Wearing its jeweled coronet,
Can in its dainty grace compare With dainty Mary Margaret.

No summer's rarest, queenly rose,
With sweet, celestial dew drops wet,
That in the golden sunshine glow,
Can rival Mary Margaret.

No star is brighter than her eyes,
Gleaming in night's jeweled coronet,
No flower blooming 'neath the sky
Sweeter than Mary Margaret.

'Twas smile clouds and tempests wild—
Sad faces—wondered the dear pet,
A widowed mother's sorrow-child,
Nay, angel Mary Margaret.

She came too late for summer flowers,
With sunshine kissed and dew drops wet;
No song bird, in those sunlit hours,
Sang "Welcome, Mary Margaret."

No father his fond kisses gave—
A mother's tearful glance the met—
A widow's tears fell on his grave,
As on thee, Mary Margaret.

O blessed angel, spotless dove,
These sorrow charms her to forget;
Wreath in her heart the flow'rs of love,
Sweet baby, Mary Margaret.

Surely some angel lost a pearl
From its bright jeweled coronet;
They found it here—a baby girl—
And named it Mary Margaret.

Sunday-School Lesson.

PREPARED BY REV. CHRISTIAN KREMER.

Second Quarter—Lesson I.

SUNDAY, APRIL 3, 1884—ACTS XVII, 1-17.

GENESIS TEXT—"And when Paul told his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them."

PAUL'S THIRD MISSIONARY JOURNEY.

We return to the history where we left Paul at Corinth just after his adventure with the contemptuous Gallio. After a stay there of a few days he started, in company with Aquilla and Priscilla, for Jerusalem, to attend one of the annual feasts of the temple. On his way he made a halt at Ephesus, where, for some reason, his companions remained, while Paul went on to the holy city. After attending the feast he returned to Antioch, and from this center starts out upon his third round of missionary labors. At this point the history leaves Paul to pursue his way alone, and turns back to give us an incident occurring at Ephesus. We can find no more instructive narrative to the whole precious history of the acts of the Holy Ghost than this of Apollos. He was a Jew, born at Alexandria, that city famed for its learning and great Christian writers. Nowhere was there such a fusion of Greek, Jewish and Oriental peculiarities, and an intelligent Jew educated in that city could hardly fail to manifest all these elements in his mental character. He turned his Alexandrian culture to high account—"an eloquent man and mighty in the Scriptures." His Greek culture, based upon his Jewish training, made a rare combination of accurate eloquence, and fitted him to skillfully enforce the truths which he, as a Jew, had gathered from the Old Testament Scriptures. What brought him to Ephesus is not stated in the history in so many words, but is plainly suggested. The Holy Ghost was leading Apollos as he had led Paul. Aquilla and Priscilla had been halted at this very place. The same Spirit who had arrested these two, and caused them to give over their contemplated trip to the holy city, was leading Apollos to those who could declare to his fervent soul the way of the Lord more perfectly. Luke gives his history in one or two graphic touches. His birth place, his religious state, a Jew, accurately pointed on the Scriptures, appreciating the full significance of every Messianic prophecy, instructed in the way of the Lord, not only by what was written, but also by what had been preached by the great Baptist. He had learned of the career of Jesus, his miracles and his doctrine, all of which fitted the Scriptures, and his fervent spirit endorsed the claims of this Messiah; but here his knowledge ended, "knowing only the baptism of John;" but of the resurrection and ascension, and the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, which shed such floods of light upon the Redeemer's mission, he knew nothing. How eloquent his state. He knew certainly, as far as he had come, the way of the Lord; only to the baptism of John; and at that its best was but preparatory and incomplete, but of great promise. He knew enough to fire his soul to boldly affirm the Messiah came, but of the nature of that kingdom and of that baptism which He commanded in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost he was yet ignorant. But he was searching the Scriptures and nearing the life they declare. He had Moses and the prophets, and was persuaded, though he had not seen one raised from the dead. The reward which the Lord will give to those who diligently seek him was all but in his grasp. To his fervent soul there was capital enough in the old covenant promises to fire his heart and make him preach better than he knew. Among the hearers of his sermon were Paul's converts, Aquilla and Priscilla. They were overjoyed to observe the extent and accuracy of his knowledge of the Scripture and the flashes of evangelical truth which ever and anon gleamed through the impassioned periods of this fervent and courageous preacher. The sermon ended, they took the preacher home with them, and behold the scene! This gifted teacher sitting at the feet of this Christian woman and her husband, with all the humility and teachableness of a child. We hardly know which most to admire, whether the delicate tact of the Christian hearers in their criticism of the great preacher or the reverent and attentive hearing of Apollos as he learned from them the way of the Lord more perfectly.

This lesson had a wonderful effect upon this ready scholar. He arose with a new disposition; he has new purposes to push on to new fields of labor and to preach a fuller gospel. He goes to Achaia, and there his ministry was so powerful that he drew a following who glorified his preaching as better than Paul's.

While the Holy Ghost was bringing Apollos and Paul's converts together, he was arranging another meeting as wonderful in its results, but really converging to one and the same end—the furtherance of the gospel. Apollos was in Corinth, preaching with singular power, and Paul appears at Ephesus; here he meets certain disciples, of whom he asks the question: Did ye receive the Holy Ghost when ye became believers? They answered: No; indeed we never even heard a Holy Ghost mentioned. What led to this question of the apostle we are not told. Evidently he was surprised to see something in the language or conduct of these disciples denoting very imperfect knowledge. He soon found out their position. They had confessed their sinfulness, but had not acknowledged Christ, in his divinity, by being baptized in his name. Paul convinced them that this was only a preliminary step toward the truth. These were in the same category with Apollos. Paul's question implies that at the moment of belief or baptism the seal of the spirit does not always come, so that baptismal regeneration finds no ground here to rest upon. The point of contrast is not between John and Christ, but between the baptism of the one and the baptism of the other. John baptized with the baptism of water unto repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him which should come after him, and shall baptize with the Holy Ghost. When they heard these words and explanation of them they were baptized into the whole fullness of the new economy as opened up to their believing minds. And when Paul laid his hands upon them the Holy Ghost came on them. The impartation of the Holy Ghost may have been coincident with the touch of Paul's hands, but this is no sign nor proof of apostolic order, for the same Holy Ghost came upon Apollos through the agency of a woman.

Retrospective.

SIXTH PAPER.

In a previous paper I remarked that a part of the Wilkinson circuit was situated among a highly intelligent and thriving people. There were fifteen or more regular appointments, besides occasional services held at school houses and private dwellings.

It was no affliction to a preacher (if not wanting in physical ability) to be assigned to this circuit; indeed, after many years' experience and observation in the itinerant work, I have long since concluded that our people have had as much reason to feel afflicted at some of the appointments made as those who have served them. The polity of our church being understood and mutually agreed upon by the parties interested, it has afforded an opportunity for the exercise of the grace of patience and forbearance on the part of both preachers and members. Notwithstanding there always have been some men to enter the itinerant ranks with neither fondness for nor adaptability to the work. Under the third question at our Annual Conferences they could, without injury to them, be discontinued. I remember to have heard an experienced presiding elder say in response to the question, "What is the trouble with that brother?" "Well, sir, the trouble with that brother is he has got no got-a-long-abilities about him." With a traveling preacher common sense, prudence, industry, social qualities, deep piety and thorough consecration are in demand. Where these characteristics prevail success will crown ministerial labor. Never fail.

To return from this digression, allow me to say that Midway Church was a good appointment, near the residence of our much beloved Dr. William Winans. Anything I could say would not add to his well-merited reputation as an eminent divine and correct administrator of Discipline. I will only say that I have never had a presiding elder I so much admired. I have dreamed about him frequently since his demise, and on one occasion of meeting with him in heaven, and conversing with him. May I not hope the time will come when it will not be a dream? I still have a pleasant recollection of Bros. Dickerson, Germany, Abram McGee and others who were in my pastoral charge at Midway; generous, liberal-hearted brethren were they. Bro. McGee had his peculiarities, but he was fondled he treated with the utmost kindness. He was always ready to respond to a call from the stewards. His doors were open, and his well-supplied table free to his preacher and friends, to enjoy his generous hospitality. I hold in grateful remembrance my friend who made me a present of a horse and conveyed my family two hundred miles in his carriage to visit parents and relatives to spend the interim between the close of circuit work and the approaching Annual Conference. The church at Midway was built for the accommodation of both the white and colored people; a liberal space was provided for the latter; they availed themselves of their privilege, and added volume and interest to sacred song.

Bethel was the most noted appointment on the circuit. Here we had our stated camp meetings and largest congregations; near by their preacher's family was pleasantly domiciled in 1848. I would not make invidious distinctions; all the neighbors were kind and considerate, so that we wanted for "no good thing." Dr. Winans married nearly all the young couples and baptized their children. At one of our camp meetings, after he had baptized a large number of children, he called upon me to administer the ordinance to a sprightly child. At first I did not understand why he declined, until I asked, "name this child." William Winans Wall was his little grandson. Query: Did the bright little boy live and become a preacher? At one of our camp meetings Drs. Burdick, Drake and Watkins (a strong trio) preached sermons which told favorably upon the large audience. The meeting closed with good results. Bro. William James, a local preacher, and a most excellent man (in whom all who knew him had the utmost confidence in his piety), greatly assisted me at protracted meetings. He was plain, pleasant and unassuming. I remember while we were on our way to an appointment we passed an old place, long deserted, and nothing left but the debris of a chimney. Said he, "Do you see that old place?" pointing to the right; "there one night I heard Lorenzo Dow preach in a double log cabin; both rooms were filled with people, besides a large congregation outside in the yard. During the discourse there were some rude persons in the room, not seen by the preacher, who engaged in conversation. The preacher, hearing them, stopped long enough to administer this rebuke. Said he: 'If you are white folks talking in there, hush; if you are niggers, you ought to have better sense.'"

In those days came Lorenzo Dow preaching in the wilderness of Mississippi, and many of his quaint sayings are still remembered. I frequently enjoyed pleasant association with Bros. Thorne and Samuel Dawson, both preachers. Among the stewards living on this part of the circuit were Bros. John Whitaker and Henry Stockett, who never failed to have a good report at their Quarterly Conferences, being liberal themselves in supporting the institutions of the church. They could, with good grace and without embarrassment, urge others to contribute. Such stewards are always in demand, and are important factors in running church machinery. Before taking leave of Wilkinson circuit I have other retrospective items to note.

D. M.

MARSHALL, TEXAS, FEB. 15, 1884.

Look Out, Brethren.

Mr. Editor: I have just read in your issue of March 20 "A Remarkable Robbery," written by Bro. A. M. Jones, in which he tries to put the public on their guard against a certain bogus dealer in non-explosives, who was suspected of exploding and robbing a safe at Havana, Ala. But, unfortunately, Bro. A. M. Jones gives no description whatever of the man. His fictitious name and business can be changed at will, and used indefinitely as a cover for deep villainy.

Now, it just so happens that our little town and community have had a somewhat similar sensation, and possibly from the same source. Last Saturday night, while our Bro. L. B. Johnson was still lingering in his store, about four miles from town, winding up business for the night, two masked and heavily armed men entered, overpowered Mr. Johnson, and robbed the store of all the money it contained. At first no clue was found to the perpetrators of this daring robbery. But on the following Sunday morning a finely-dressed and extra-urban young gentleman (?) appeared in our church here, joined himself to our Bible class, was very much "at home," putting on the religious "dodge" successfully. He had evidently traveled much. Seeking further acquaintance, he represented himself a native of England—to which his speech slightly agrees—that he was traveling as "designing artist," and making his way to Panama. To be brief, after loitering about, and especially in company with a anapionous copper-colored man, he mysteriously disappeared, leaving his board bill unpaid. No one saw any baggage; he carried some umbrella and small articles. His many apparently careless inquiries about the financial condition of our citizens, with other things, revealing his great hypocrisy, lead us strongly to suspect his being one of the robber class.

Since his departure—March 19—we learn that he answers the description of a notable train robber for whom a reward of $12,000 is being offered. He left here on foot, going toward Natchez. Description: Height about five feet, eight and a half inches, weighs probably one hundred and forty pounds, a rather broad across the shoulders, very lithe and wiry in his motions, especially about his hips, can hardly sit or stand still, has brown hair, rather light, and wore here a medium sized moustache and small "Burnside" whiskers; large cheek bones, rather sunken, and long cheeks, heavy jaw, heavy brow, surmounting bright blue-gray eyes; complexion very bumpy and a little scarred about forehead. He is unusually "at his ease," quick spoken and over-much polite, adding "if you please" to nearly every reply he makes in conversation. If he be the villain, as suspected, he is a bold one. We know him to be a fraud, and as each publish him for the benefit of your readers and the public generally. He called himself Burke—but that is little to the purpose—and had his card printed accordingly.

J. P. DRAKE.

FAYETTE, MISS., MARCH 21, 1884.

From the Work.

ABBEVILLE, LA.

Mr. Editor: If you want eggs, chickens, sea breeze and delightful society, and to know the best workers in any church, you must come to Abbeville and get acquainted with our Ladies' Aid Society. I came to this work from Conference with the determination to put in the best year's work of my life. My motto: "God my sufficiency." I had been crying to God for months to give me a work that would draw on my whole being. Abbeville was the answer to that prayer. It exactly fills the specifications of it, and I am happy; never so busy and happy in all my ministerial life. I want others to be partakers of this, my joy. This is why I write. I hate selfishness and I now call for participants of my gladness. Before I explain how your readers may share this blessing let me give a little history. Arriving here I found no church or parsonage; no preparation for parsonage. I at once called the ladies together, and organized an aid society. Ten members. In a little over a week they collected enough money to furnish a parsonage. A good brother made us a Centenary gift of a lot, and another brother is building us a very neat house, and the ladies pledge themselves to pay for it. God's rich blessings on the ladies! From Morgan City, Pattersonville and New Iberia the parsonage has received help. So you see that blessing has been taken up, you can not share it. But we must have a church. Well, we have the lot and money in hand to pay for the lumber, and we expect to build it by subscription labor. We expect to have the lumber on hand in the next five weeks. We want a church 30x50 feet. Now I come to the part I want the readers to share with us.

The windows! We want eight windows, memorial windows, Centenary windows, or whatever you may call them, so that they are ten feet by three feet, six inches. We can get them in New Orleans—gothic window frames, glazed, ash and blinds—at $25 apiece. Who will share the rich blessing of giving us these windows? What you do quickly. We only want eight, and they will soon be taken up. The Methodists of Louisiana are going to do great things this year. Father, mother, have you not a dear babe in glory? Would you not like this year to raise a memorial to it? What more fitting memorial than a window in this church of God. As God's light has shined into your hearts I beseech you think and act on this at once. Are there not ten or twenty Sunday-school children in some of our schools who will, under the guidance of their teacher, band together and raise us a window? Will not one of the oldest Methodists in our church, one whose sun is fast setting, who may soon be in that temple where they have need of no windows for money, and where God in the Sun, give us a window, through which God's light may shine upon us when they are gone? But I must stop, or I shall have to send somebody a twenty-five dollars back again, saying: "Too late, my dear, the blessing is all gone." That would be sad. If anybody thinks we are not doing all we can here, and coming up to the full measure of our ability, let them suspend judgment long enough to cross the prairie and come and help us. Address all letters to me at Abbeville.

ALFRED B. CLAY.

Marriages.

STAMLEY-HUMPHREYS—Near Belle Grove, Jefferson county, Miss., March 8, 1884, by Rev. J. P. Drake, Mr. Steddie stampley to Miss Meta Humphreys, all of Jefferson county, Miss.

FOLKES-MONTGOMERY—In Fayette, Miss., March 10, 1884, by Rev. J. P. Drake, Mr. S. P. Folkes, of Warren county, Miss., to Miss Mary A. Montgomery, of Fayette, Miss.

Obituaries.

SPILLER—On March 7, 1884, sorrow came to the home of Mr. P. S. and Mrs. Josephine Spiller, of Tangipahoa, La. Their eldest child, Miss Lou Lee, died of congestion of the lungs, the consequence of an attack of measles.

She was a large number of friends, buried her on Sunday, March 9, 1884. She was in her thirteenth year, and possessed those qualities of mind and heart which naturally made her many friends. Patient, with loving obedience, and a fondness for reading were marked traits in her character. She was greatly beloved by her associates, and her parents and grandmother lavished upon her their fondest affection. But the devotion of friends could not stay the hand of death or keep the loved one here. She has gone to the home of the good, into which disease and death can never enter. May this event under God's providence be sanctified to the spiritual benefit of the bereaved, and may their hearts be comforted by the consolations of the gospel and the sweet words of the Son of Mary.

J. M. PUGH.

BUCK—MAUD has gone! How much this expresses to all who knew her! When the brightness of a cloudless sky has become darkened by approaching night, and we stand dejected for a time gazing into space, a gloom comes over us, and we feel an eager longing to recall the rosy twilight; but while we linger the east grows bright, and another light appears, mellow, mature, and far more beautiful than the one we have lost. So it is with the bright life that has so soon been brought to a close. She lingered here a brief space, by a sweet influence attracting all who chanced to be with her, and gaining the love of those who knew her best. Just when she seemed nearest, sheltered by the hands of love and affection, the angel of death bore her swiftly away. Would we recall her? No. See, she stands on the shore and waits for those she has left behind, and like a guiding star the beacon on before, arouses us to renewed efforts to join her.

Maud was the second daughter of E. H. and R. A. Buck, and to say that they mourn her loss with deepest feeling is but a mild expression, for in her they lose a gentle, modest, patient and dutiful child, and one whose filial love characterized her young life. Sisters and brothers feel keenly the vacancy caused by her absence from the family, and when friends gather with them they miss the cheerful welcome and smiling face of Maud. Of her it was said: "I know not a more perfect character." Sweet simplicity graced her actions, to give pleasure to those around her was a chief desire, and she asked no higher reward than an approving smile. We are taught that such is the kingdom of heaven; and when the body of the dear one was borne to the grave we felt assured she had joined the heavenly host. A number of friends followed the remains to the last resting place, while beautiful floral tributes spoke of love and sympathy to her hereafter loved ones.

LINA.

Noble Register and Tuscaloosa paper please copy.

CUPIT—Tribute of respect to the memory of Bro. S. L. Cupit by the Quarterly Conference of Scotland circuit, Mississippi Conference. Committee: B. F. Jones, J. W. Purifry, B. Garrett.

Bro. Cupit was born October 3, 1841, and died at his residence in peace, and the faith of Christ, January 30, 1884. He was converted and made profession of faith in Christ at a prayer meeting held at his brother's house, in 1881. Since then he endeavored to live as a child of God. Naturally of a quiet and reserved disposition, he was not demonstrative in his feelings; but he lived his religion, and his religion lived in him. He was a burning light. He was honored and respected for his consistent Christian character and pious example. For some time a steward, he was ever ready to give of his earthly possessions to the support of the cause of Christ. A few days before his death, after talking with him about his spiritual welfare, he joined in singing Kirkham's grand and soul-comforting hymn, "How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord," and as we bowed around his bed he gave hearty responses to the petitions offered at a throne of grace in his behalf.

Alas! a good man is dead. No, not dead; but sleepeth in the arms of Jesus till the resurrection morn. He leaves a devoted and mourning wife and two children, whose solace is in the ever-abiding presence of the Holy Spirit. Resolved, that a copy of the above be spread on the minutes of this Quarterly Conference, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy sent to the ADVOCATE for publication.

B. F. JONES, for Committee.

CRISLER—The following resolutions were adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Spring Ridge circuit, March 1, 1884:

Whereas, It hath pleased Almighty God (who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind) to take out of this world the soul of our deceased brother, Dr. J. W. CRISLER; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Quarterly Conference, of Spring Ridge circuit, that, while we bow with submission to the will of God, we feel that we sustain a sad loss in the death of our brother, that our community has lost a valuable citizen, his family an affectionate, kind and indulgent husband and father.

Resolved, That we sympathize with his afflicted family, and pray that God may vouchsafe to them his grace in all its sufficiency.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon a separate page in the recording steward's book, a copy sent to his family, and also to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

J. A. HONNS, for Committee.

INA D. ROBERTSON, P. O.

WALKER—Died, March 7, 1884, MARY CHAMBERLIN WALKER, daughter of the Rev. W. C. Chamberlin, deceased, and sister of the late Key. Corrydon Chamberlin, of California. She was born in Natchez, Miss., in 1849, and married to James Walker, of Wilkinson county, Miss., in 1877.

She was for years a member of the Methodist Church, and every Christian grace was united in her character. A lovely woman never brighter than earth with her presence. She had been expected from her life, with the sweet hope of a blissful immortality. A husband and five little children she leaves behind. The only anxiety she felt was that she leaves her husband out of the fold. We who loved her—an iso did not who knew her—have one tie the loss to earth, one tie to heaven.

ANNA RAUNDERS.

Northern and Western papers please copy.

GUICE—B. C. S. GUICE was born in Franklin county, Miss., November 22, 1809; joined the Methodist Church some thirty years ago, and died, of pneumonia, at his home, on Ouachita river, Ouachita parish, La., February 5, 1884.

He left a devoted wife and one daughter—wife of W. H. Huber—in whom his departure, with grandchildren, loved him from the cradle to manhood and stood by him even till the last. He suffered a great deal, though he thanked the Lord for so long a life. He prayed for the young and old all over the world, and especially for the Louisiana Conference, and passed away without a struggle, leaving an assurance that he received a crown prepared for him and all other Christians from the foundation of the world.

H. R.

WILLIAMS—REV. JOHN W. WILLIAMS died, of paralysis, at his home, at Silver Creek, Lawrence county, Miss., at four o'clock A. M., February 23, 1884, in the sixty-eighth year of his age.

A good citizen and a noble Christian has left us; but we are consoled to know that his spirit has taken its flight to dwell in a bright and better world.

J. A. B.

KIRBY—Died, at her residence, in East Baton Rouge parish, La., March 3, 1884, Mrs. MARY ELIZABETH KIRBY, aged twenty-five years. Sister Kirby was the daughter of Bro. B. T. Keenan, one among the most consistent and efficient class leaders in the Methodist Church, South.

Sister Kirby had long held her membership in the Beech Grove Church, of East Baton Rouge. She leaves a husband and one sweet little child, with numerous relatives and friends, to mourn her loss; but while they weep over her departure, yet they weep not as those without hope of that glorious reunion provided for those that place their trust in God.

A FRIEND.

NEWTON—Mrs. P. S. NEWTON was born in Trenton, N. J., July 22, 1817. She moved to Mississippi when a girl. In May, 1840, she married Mr. Ira D. Newton. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1872, and died near Mossa Point, Miss., December 2, 1883.

We are informed that Sister Newton was a faithful, zealous Christian after her connection with the church. She died suddenly; but, dying in that faith in Christ which she had exemplified in life, she was ready, and is now at rest.

R. J. JONES.

DEAL—ANN M. COLE, wife of Henry Deal, was born, May 27, 1822, in Darke county, Tenn.; married June 10, 1838, and died at Shreveport, La., February 18, 1884, where she resided the better part of her life, the mother of fourteen children—ten of which have gone before her. She was a member of the Methodist Church for many years, and many of her children were members of the same faith. Her good deeds on earth are recorded beyond the grave.

Nashville Advocate please copy.

RAYNER—The infant child of Mr. T. H. and Mrs. Carrie Rayner passed from the shores of time to eternity, on Friday, March 14, 1884, aged eleven months.

Bright, gay and cheerful, she was the pride of the household. God's ways are mysterious; his providence puzzling and unsearchable. We can but commend the afflicted ones to him who said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

LINA.

THOMPSON—MARVIN THOMPSON, son of William and M. J. Thompson, born October 10, 1879, and lost his life by the stroke of a glo lever on February 7, 1884.

Little Marvin was a pet in the family and the joy and comfort of the household. But he has gone up to dwell on our Father's house. The bereaved parents are exhorted to look upward and think how joyful will the meeting be after life's tiful fever is over with them.

JAS. M. GRIFFIS.

TAYLOR—Died at her residence, near Jackson, La., March 8, 1884, LILLIAN N. SHARPE, daughter of the late Dr. Thomas Sharpe, of Natchez, Miss., and wife of Mr. K. K. Taylor, aged twenty-two years and seven months.

J. W. TAYLOR.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Because it is so unusually handsome and attractive in appearance, many persons think the Ivory Soap is intended for toilet use only. While it may be used for the toilet with pleasant and satisfactory results, it is a laundry soap in all that the name implies. Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, says: "As a 'laundry soap the Ivory has no superior.'"

PHOTOGRAPHS!

The Finest Establishment in the South.

Are situated within a block of the principal hotels and almost directly opposite the City Station. You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever. We make every kind of portrait known to the art, from the miniature for the locket to life size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon or Oil. Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged to the likeness faithfully preserved.

CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE

One thousand acres cypress timber lands, situated in townships 10 and 11, south range 10 east, south-western land District of Louisiana.

For information, apply to N. O. Christian Advocate, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY APRIL 3, 1884.

"SHOW ME THY GLORY."

O thou, who art the light,
I long thy face to see;
Thou holdest in my feeble sight,
Thyself reveal to me.

I long to hear thy voice;
Listening, I wait, apart;
Thou sensest only earth's rude noise,
Speak thou unto my heart.

Thou art the infinite,
I'm lost in search of thee;
All hopeless I to reach thy height,
O condescend to me.

In vain my feeble grope
Would seize on thee divine;
Come, O thou Mighty One, enclose
My spirit, Lord, in thine.

A Groaning, Agonizing Spirit.

It was my privilege about two weeks ago to spend the evening and lodge for the night under the hospitable roof of one of our most intelligent and influential laymen and enjoy a free conversation with him and his pious wife around their fireside. Conversation for a time upon commonplace matters, then turned to recollection of long ago when "he and I were young," we have been friends for more than twenty years. Time has left his impress upon us both in more ways than one. We had many pleasant things to tell and many that were sad to recall. It was not long till our "discourse" turned to matters of graver import, and then especially did the "gude friend" become interested and take a part.

Some things this Christian mother said that night suggested my present article and left lasting impressions upon my mind. The burden of her utterances was the groaning, agonizing interest of a mother's heart for the salvation of her children. One remark I shall not soon forget, I am sure: "Bro. Harris, it seems to me that if I could kill me if one of my boys should be converted, I could not survive the shock. They are constantly in my mind, upon my heart. I have prayed, and do pray for them daily, constantly, and I see no change for the better."

As these words fell from the lips of this Christian mother they came baped with a tear and seasoned with the wine of uncton, and I felt sensibly that a heart was deeply imbued with a spirit that maketh intercession for mankind with "groanings that are unutterable." I felt too the force of a declaration made by a brother many years ago, when the church had been shipwrecked for several days with no little tokens of revival. Rising up in this place, he said: "Brethren, the order of souls is not upon us as it ought to be. God will hold us to account for this effort fails and souls are lost because of our want of zeal and unyielding earnestness. Let us all get up and pray." The whole congregation began to pray, a cloud of mercy shrouded over them, and showers of blessing descended, words were comforted and there was a glorious season refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

Now, however, some even professing Christians, may denounce such a spirit as fanatical and excuse themselves because of the truth of individual responsibility, and say that every one must give an account of himself to God, it is nevertheless true that not until the church and individual Christians realize that the salvation of others in a great measure depends upon their faithfulness. No, until then will many whom they love and desire should become religious, be persuaded to give God their hearts.

But certain, as the Bible is true, when the spirit of this Christian mother, the sentiment of that Christian brother, takes possession of the hearts of God's people everywhere, just so certain will there be a revival of God's work. That mother's prayer will be answered. Oh, how we need, this centennial year, an earnest, wrestling, agonizing spirit of prayer! We must see it or we can not succeed in the enterprises of the church. Only converted people can, or will, rightly estimate the importance of these enterprises, and that the people, our children and others, may be converted we must feel and pray as if it would "kill" should they fail to be converted while in their sins. May some able emphasize these reflections and all church be roused to a full appreciation of their importance and a glorious revival ensue.

H. J. H.

Pulling Through the Mud.

I have completed my first round on this bus district for the present Council year, and, looking back over my way I have come, I think of what a brother wrote me soon after my appointment to this district, now more than three years ago: "Had it not been for a change made in the appointments just before the adjournment of conference, you might have been at this station, while I, instead of myself, would have been 'pulling through the mud.'"

Well, during the last two or three months, mud has abounded to almost borders of our Conference; the preacher who illustrates in the little hole of the North Mississippi Conference has a larger experience with mud and a deeper insight into it than most of his brethren.

This opinion, I dare say, can be established by the testimony of Bros. H. R. Tucker, of Crawford; E. H. Cacy, of Brooksville; B. F. Phillips, of Hebron, and S. D. Worsham, of Starkville circuit, all of whom have experience in "pulling through the mud" over first-class prairie road. Dr. Worsham, who has served his apprenticeship in the Mississippi bottom, says that itinerating in a "dug out" boats travelling on horseback over a broken causeway along a muddy prairie road. The soil is porous, strongly impregnated with lime and destitute of sand, and when worked up by the rains and freezes and thaws of winter, becomes very soft and very sticky. Travelling about at such a season, with any sort of comfort, is out of the question. The ladies undergo a sort of social hibernation, while the gentlemen on horseback with pauls stuck inside of leather top foot gear, literally "go it boots."

Again, the preacher who serves the church in this prairie region may not expect to be as a sportsman with a "scatter gun," delivering his charge of small shot into a large flock of birds, surely bringing down some of his game. On the contrary he must be as an expert, taking his birds on the wing or "drawing a line bead" with a rifle. He has not the inspiration of large crowds to preach to, but rather a small and scattered congregation. Hence he should by prayer and by study have his subject so fully in hand as to feel in the spirit of preaching as well to six as to six hundred.

Near the close of the winter of 1882, in company with Bro. Howell, preacher in charge, I attended a quarterly meeting at Cross Prairie, on the Brooksville circuit. The church was more than thirty miles distant from the district parsonage. A bleak wind swept the scanty forest, skirting the open prairie fields. We were met by two faithful stewards, our entire congregation. The church being locked up, we improvised a fire and a Conference on the outside and went through the "order of business." Next day, Sunday, we were rained out, not getting to the church.

On the morning of the last day of January past, I awoke to consider whether I should undertake my Hebron quarterly meeting by a horseback ride of fifty miles over prairie roads, or go a much longer route by rail or steamboat. Murky clouds threatened more rain and worse roads. Deciding to go by public conveyance I took the morning train to Columbus, and the next day, Friday, found passage on a boat going down the Bigby river. After a pleasant run of more than sixty miles I landed at Fairfield in the night, and presently found myself clambering up the limestone bluff, rendered soft and crumbling by recent freezing and thawing.

Fairfield is in a corner of Pickens county, Ala., lying west of the Bigby river, and is the site of the circuit parsonage occupied by Bro. B. F. Phillips and his amiable wife. The road along the street is of uncertain depth, great tenacity and very black. A broad landscape of black rolling prairie trends away toward the south and west, all now under cultivation. Already the thrifty planters hereabout are plowing, turning over the fertile globe. They live on their plantations and are an energetic, money-loving, money-making people. They are kind to their pastor, sharing with him the comforts and hospitalities of their little tables and their homes. There is no drawback to this particular locality. The country merchant adds to his other business the whisky traffic under a retail license. And this is sometimes done by members of the church, much to the annoyance of the preacher, whose righteous soul is vexed and growing under the evil. May it not be long before this great evil is driven from the church and from the land.

Hebron Church, giving name to the circuit, is three miles distant. Four stewards met the pastor and "the elder" in Quarterly Conference on Saturday. An assessment of $740 was made for the preacher in charge, and all other Conference business received due attention. On Sunday, as the presiding elder looked over his congregation of nine hearers, all told, and thought of the ninety miles traveled by land and water to meet them, there may have been somewhat of human nature in the almost wish, that he had given them a week-day instead of a Saturday and Sunday quarterly meeting. But he preached and felt better about it, when Bro. Phillips said the sermon did him good.

"He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." So it is often with the itinerant who, during the winter months, traverses these broad and rich, but bleak prairies along by hedges and grey, "pulling through the mud," to scatter the seed of the word in scanty handfuls to more scanty congregations.

These lands are beautiful during the fall and summer months, and scattered over them are many homes of refinement and hospitality, where the preacher is sure of a cordial welcome and generous entertainment. During these summer months the roads are like a pavement, and the people will go for miles to attend public worship, the congregations are greatly improved, and the spiritual husbandman gathers bread from seed sown in the mud and water of the winter time. Last year Hebron circuit, under the administration of Bro. Phillips, reported eighty conversions.

T. C. WIER.

"I was Glad When They Said Unto Me, Let Us Go Into the House of the Lord."

Upon what arguments is our duty to attend upon all the ordinances of God based? I do not mean merely the public preaching of the gospel upon the Sabbath, the day we are forced by civil law to observe by cessation from labor, but I mean all services of the church appointed for the glory of God and the salvation of men from sin and for the cultivation and development of the morals of our community. First of all the duty is incalculable by the word of God. The members of the church of Israel were required to attend. The duty of Christians to attend upon all the ordinances of the church is based upon the command of the Scripture. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is." There are other arguments upon which the duty is based. The fact of the existence of the church, and the purposes of its organization among men, and the relation we sustain to the same, are all strong reasons why we should "not forsake the assembling of ourselves together."

The same reason which authorizes your absence authorizes the absence of all men. Another very important and special fact, upon which our duty to attend church is based, is the fact of having solemnly and sincerely vowed to do before God and the public congregation. We are taught that we had better not vow than to vow and not pay. In the general rules of the Methodist Church it is taught that the members should "attend upon all the ordinances of God, such are: The public worship of God; the ministry of the word, either read or expounded; the supper of the Lord." In our vows at the altar of the church, before men, angels and God, the question was asked and answered by every member of the church. "Will you be subject to the discipline of the church, attend upon its ordinances and support its institutions?" We are solemnly committed to God and the church, and how can we with indifference regard this heaven witnessed obligation. A vow is a solemn promise made to God. Specifically a promise of fidelity. Our veracity and fidelity are both involved in our church obligation and fearfully so. The nature of our obligation is such that we can not with impunity absent ourselves from the services of the church and remain guiltless. But is this, we inquire the primo reason, why we should attend church? I mean should duty be the main spring of our actions in this matter? We answer, No. If we have not the motive power, which prompted the Psalmist, we should follow up the line of duty until we possess an experience that will make the house of the Lord attractive to us and a place of desire. Our obligation, veracity and fidelity, should be respected, but a principle more ennobling and godlike should prompt us. Love for communion with God and his people, desire to promote the kingdom of Christ, and the pleasure and joy and happiness, accruing to us through the services of the church, should sweetly and powerfully draw us to the house of the Lord. The Psalmist said: "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." It was a pleasure to him to assemble to praise and pray. He was always the happy recipient. And so it is with us. If we willfully absent ourselves from the church of God we are not children of God. But if we, as children of God, frequent places of worship, we are always the happy recipients. Love, desire for the pleasure of the Lord's house, with a glad heart to do his will, should always prompt us. The Christian's heart swells with emotions when he is permitted to sing:

"I love thy Kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode
The church our best Redeemer bought With life own precious blood."
Beyond my highest joy
I praise her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise."

HENLEY.

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev. Geo. Shaeffer.

(Continued.)

November 3, 1846: I preached at Mr. James Hamilton's, Saturday night, to the blacks, about twenty of them presented themselves for prayer as penitents, and there seemed to be much engagedness among them. I appointed a meeting at sunrise next morning, and though it was raining in torrents they assembled and I held a prayer meeting with them. After I returned to the dwelling three or four women came in very happy, having found the Saviour through the night, and we had a delightful meeting. I think two or three more professed religion in the prayer meeting. I preached at eleven o'clock at Cooke's plantation, and at five o'clock at Richard Barry's. I feel this morning a great desire to be holy and much need of a deeper work of grace. I do not redeem the time sufficiently. I do not study enough. I do not write enough. I am not sufficiently strict in keeping my heart. Lord, help me. I yesterday heard a remarkable instance of sagacity in a dog—Mr. Mayberry, who was overseeing for Mr. John Gilmer, was engaged in weighing cotton at night. He sat down to calculate the weight, when one of the negro men slipped up behind him with a large handspike for the purpose of hitting him on the head, probably intending to kill him. His dog, a large, fierce animal, went up to his master and called his attention to the negro by taking hold of his arm with his mouth and pulling him. He looked round instantly and discovered the negro, who immediately ran away and has not been heard of since.

I was the first missionary to the blacks in the prairie west of Columbus. I commenced with only three plantations, but the work gradually increased until I preached twenty-five times every three weeks. Many of the colored people were converted, and the missionary labors were not lost on the overseers, quite a number of whom were converted at the churches and camp meetings. I recollect I said to one of the black men one day, "I think the preaching on the plantations does the colored people good, don't you?" "Yes, massa," said he, "and it do oberserve some good, too."

In the month of August Bro. Hamilton held a protracted meeting in Columbus, which was much blessed, of which I find the following notes in my Journal:

Columbus, July 30, 1847: This day (Friday) has been set apart as a day of fasting and prayer by Bro. Hamilton. It is the Friday preceding the quarterly meeting, and the object is to prepare the church for the services of that occasion, and pray for a special blessing of God upon the inhabitants of this town. I feel that I need a revival in my own soul. I have not, for some time, had that lively faith which I have formerly enjoyed. My preaching does not seem to be attended with the same divine influence and power, and my thoughts have not been so sanctified, wandering more from God to earthly interests and considerations, yet I am not without religious light and grace, and I think I have realized some advancement of late. My mind has been more directed to the subject of entire sanctification by our Thursday morning prayer meeting, which I have found to be a great blessing to me. I think I still retain the spirit of sanctification. I hold myself as the exclusive property of the Lord, and having nothing too dear to be given up to him if required, so far as my will is concerned. Nothing on earth I call my own. I am a steward of the manifold grace of God, and would use this world as not abusing it, seeing the fashion of it is passing away. I do not enjoy any peculiar ravishing views or exercises of soul, but my peace flows like a river. I am free from disquietude, distrust and care, and feel thankful to God for his manifold and unceasing mercies to me. I am not worthy of the least of his mercies, and yet I have been a subject of mercy and grace all my days. I wish to be more fully in the work. I am fully in the work in spirit, but not actually. My family, living out of my field of labor, when I am at home I seem to relax for a season. I think I was living among the people of my charge I should be more useful. But I have reservedly given myself to the Conference, and they have placed me where I am. I am content, and shall try to do the best I can. I have been blessed more thus far in my work this year than last, about thirty have professed religion and we have a good many seekers.

I feel very anxious to see a revival of religion in Columbus, it is greatly needed; some are praying for it, many are perfectly satisfied at ease in Zion. Iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxed cold. O, Lord, revive thy work and grant this may be the set time to favor Zion here.

August 2, Monday: I returned to town last night from my work, and had the pleasure of hearing Bro. Hamilton preach a most powerful sermon from "Go thy way for this time," etc. It was like an avalanche, and produced a powerful effect on the congregation. Three females and two young gentlemen presented themselves at the altar for prayer, and the church was evidently much quickened, there was a lively spirit of faith and prayer in the congregation. Bishop Paine was with us, he having preached in the forenoon. He is a very interesting man, and appears to be much in the spirit of religion, he does not allow his Bishop dignity to keep him from the altar and laboring for the conversion of souls.

We had a prayer meeting this morning, appointed especially for the church, and it was a gracious time. There was a fine turn out, and the Bishop opened the meeting with a powerful exhortation. I feel much encouraged. Bro. Hamilton knows how to conduct his meeting, and is full of faith and power, and the beat of all is God is with us.

(To be continued.)

While missions in Egypt, Palestine and Turkey have won but few converts among the Muslims, the contrary is true in India, where the empress of India counts more of this belief among her subjects than even the Sultan of Turkey. The recent Missionary Conference at Calcutta developed the fact that in Northern India there are five Muslims to every one Hindu among the converts. They are men of influence from the learned classes, and no less than fifty are doing evangelistic work among their people. At one place in Bengal there is a community of 6,000 Christians, almost all of whom, or their ancestors, were once believers in Islam.

Our Young People.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

BY MRS. L. CHERRY FAIRBANKS.

I call to sing about a king,
And it is my opinion,
That 'not of royal blood, that he Was born to 'have dominion.'
He looks it over all each day,
And ever rules at night,
And long before the light is up
He watches for the light.

And now be unto one who is
A morning nap just taking,
This king doth make the week rise
Till sleep's an undertaking
That few of all his subjects try,
And so they have to rise
And wait upon the little king
That has such wakeful eyes.

His power he knows, as well as those Who have to play the minton,
And like the first man—Adam—le
Has 'over all dominion.'
Outlines his throne's life mother's knee,
And sometimes 'tis the best:
His scepter is a chubby fist,
His crown—a curly head.

The cat, the dog, the horse, the cow,
The chickens and the geese,
Seen one and all to understand
That he is their commander.
His subjects sing: "God bless the king!"
"God bless the king!" they pray,
Bright angel guards attend the king
That's one year old to-day.

FEBRUARY 8, 1881.

Mr. Editor: Will you kindly permit me to join the little folks' circle. My papa takes your valuable paper, and has taken it as far back as I can remember. I am a little girl eleven years old. I go to school at the convent, there being no other school in this place. We have no Methodist Church here. The people are, strictly speaking, Roman Catholics; but we have family worship. I have two sisters—one older than myself, and one younger. The former says she thinks a French missionary could do much good here. Some of these poor misguided people are not verse to Protestantism, if they had some one to give them the explanations they require in their own dialect. I will answer Lily's question. The name of Abaziah's mother was Athaliah, the daughter of Omri, the king of Israel. It is found in II Kings viii, 26. I will now close by asking the little cousins a question: Where is the word "hankkerchief" found in the Bible? With best wishes for you and the dear old Advocate, I remain,

Your little friend,

LUCY HART.

St. Martinsville, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As so many children are taking advantage of your liberality, we, too, will write you a letter. To-day is a beautiful day, but it is the first pretty day we have had in some time. Since Christmas the weather has been bad on farmers here; very few have planted their gardens, and hardly any farmers have plowed any of their land for corn. Papa takes the Advocate, and says he will take it as long as he lives. Lois was Timothy's grandmother, and Eunice was his mother. The word "washpot" is in Psalms ix, 8. If Patty Lewis will read I Samuel xvii, she will find the answer to her question. Now for our questions: Who had an iron bedstead? What was the length and breadth of it, and where in the Bible is it? Where is the word "bed" first mentioned in the Bible? We were both baptized when infants. Pa says we have written enough. He says if we write too much, you will put it in the waste-basket—whatever that is. Your little Methodist friends,

FANNIE AND FRANKIE THOMAS.

Lawrence, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I have been thinking some time of writing to your most excellent paper, but never could find courage enough. I read the young folks' letters every week, and think they are so nice. Mamma told me it was very improving. There are so many Bible questions, and I must search out some. I will answer two questions. "What two chapters in the Bible are alike?" II Kings xix and Isaiah xxxvii. "By what authority did John baptize Christ?" A voice from heaven. It is found in the New Testament. Hoping you will notice my poor little letter, I will close by asking a question: In what chapter in the Bible is there a verse containing every letter in the alphabet except the letter "j"? Your little friend,

RUBY LOGAN.

Lawrence, Mississippi.

SCRIPTURAL ACROSTIC.

What was the name of the court held on Mars Hill?

To whom did the Israelites sell Joseph?

Who was the eldest son of Isaac?

Who was the father-in-law of Jacob?

What is the first word of the twelfth chapter of Luke?

Who was the third son of David?

Who was the grandmother of Jacob and Esau?

What is the twelfth book of the New Testament?

Who was the king of Ilishan?

Who was the daughter of David?

Who was the son of Eunice and grandson of Lois?

The initials of the answers form the name of our much-beloved organist and Sunday-school teacher in the St. Charles Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, New Orleans, La.

MARY E. CARRADINE.

MR. EDITOR: Since I could read I have loved the Advocate. My dear grandfather, Rev. John Dubois, always took it, and we enjoyed especially the children's column and the letters from the little folks. Grandfather died two months ago, and we miss him very sadly. In the book of Esther there is no mention of the Deity either as God, Lord or Jesus Christ. Can the little folks tell where the words "Gods and spoons" are found? Bro. W. Hart is our pastor, and, though he has been here but a short time, we are much attached to him. Papa is an editor, and his columns are often crowded. Thinking yours may be, I close, hoping to see my letter in the Advocate.

Your little friend,

LOUISE P. MONROE.

Calcasieu P. O., Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not seen my letter from Calcasieu parish, I thought I would write you. We are going to have preaching here twice a month. Bro. Porter preaches the fourth Sunday in every month. The answer to Wm. J. P. Higway's question is found in Ezra iv, 11. Now, I will ask a question: Who was the interpreter of dreams? As this is my first letter I have written to your paper, I hope it will not find the way to the waste-basket.

From your little friend,

MINNIE E. SWEENEY.

Calcasieu P. O., Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I have seen so many letters in the Advocate from little girls, I thought I would try and write one. I live in Hazlehurst and go to Sunday-school every Sunday. I must speak of our preacher we have this year—Mr. Howell. He is a great favorite, especially with the young folks. I will answer Lily's question: "Where is 'blue face' found?" It is found in the Old Testament, Exodus xxviii, 37. I will ask a question: In what part of the Bible is "selfedge" found? I will close with best wishes for your good paper.

Your friend,

ZULA O. RAY.

Hazlehurst, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I see so many of the young people writing letters to the Advocate, I thought I would write you one, as I have never seen any from this part of Florida. I am a Northern boy, emigrated to Florida when twelve years of age. I have been here four years, and I like the country very much. The Methodist Episcopal Church is my mother church. I read your paper and like it very much. I am a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Milton, West Florida, and attend Sunday-school and church every Sunday. Rev. J. A. Peterson is our preacher in charge, and also my teacher. We have a splendid Sunday-school, and a regular attendance of fifty-four. Our superintendent we all like very much. I close, hoping this letter is not too long. Yours truly,

WILLIAM A. SNIBOFF.

Black Water, West Florida.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eight years old. I go to school to my mother with my little twin sisters. We have to say our catechism every Sunday, and I am going to spend the afternoon of each Sabbath in looking out the questions of the children's column. John C. Mims question is found in Job vi, 6. Hattie Tucker's is found in Exodus xxviii, 37. The mother of Abaziah was Athaliah. "Reverend" is found in Psalms lii, 9. II Kings xix and Isaiah xxxvii are alike. The name of God is not in the Song of Solomon. John baptized Christ from the authority of Christ himself, as found in the New Testament. I am trying to solve the geographical questions. If this finds space in your paper, I will then send you an acrostic. I remain,

Yours truly,

BESSIE A. VAUGHAN.

Kingston, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As you perhaps have received but few letters from our little town, State Line, I have concluded to write you a short missive hoping to interest some of the nice little cousins whose letters have interested me very much. We have just completed a very handsome little church. We have for our pastor the Rev. J. W. Harmon. He is greatly beloved by all. I have been reading the young people's letters and think they are so nice. I will answer Ernest O. Smith's question: "Honeycomb" is found in Proverbs v, 3—xvi, 24—xxiv, 13—xxvii, 7. Now I will ask a question: Where in the Bible is the word "girl" found? And also the word "bottles" found? This, being the first letter I have written to your very interesting paper, I hope it will not have the pleasure of forming an acquaintance with the waste-basket. If you think this letter is not worth printing, please do not print it. I will close by wishing the Advocate success.

EDDIE M. KNOWLES.

State Line, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I have been wanting to write to your interesting paper for a long time. I think you are so kind to let the little boys and girls have a space in your good paper. We live in Meridian. It is a growing town; people are moving here all the time. My papa is the preacher, and he finds new Methodists every day or two in his pastoral work. My two older sisters and I go to school at East Mississippi Female College. Prof. A. D. McVoy is the worthy president. We all love him very much. He has a large school and four nice teachers. Now, Mr. Editor, this is my first letter, and I do hope it will not find its way into the waste-basket. You know I am one of your little acquaintances. I have your photograph which you gave me when we lived in Yazoo City. I prize it very much. Now, let me ask my little friends a geographical question: What river in the United States flows through the corner of four States? With best wishes for your paper and yourself, I am, Your friend,

LIZZIE F. ROBINSON.

Meridian, Mississippi.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. F. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors: REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER. REV. W. L. O. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY APRIL 3, 1884.

We surrender most of our editorial space this week to Bishops Parker and Hargrove. No doubt the Advocate readers will approve and enjoy the change.

As we go to press the College of Bishops and Board of Missions are in session in Nashville. From those headquarters there will be some editorial correspondence next week.

The memorial service in honor of Bishop Kavanaugh, held in the Vanderbilt Chapel, Nashville, was most appropriate and impressive. The sermon, by Bishop McTear, was a discriminating and worthy tribute to a wonderful man.

That was a striking tribute to the tireless industry of Mr. Wesley which appeared some years ago in the London Athenaeum when it said: "If under the horse-hoof of Attila the grass never grew, so the grass never grew under the tread of John Wesley." May a like spirit characterize every son in the ministry in this our day of tremendous possibilities and responsibilities.

When a brother is so regular in attendance at prayer meeting that his absence provokes remark, and the pastor's hurrying out the next day to ascertain the cause, he never lacks attention when sick. And then what a tribute to punctuality and spiritual fidelity! It is the indifference or intermittent class, whose absence is not noticed because their presence is never or rarely expected, that do the complaining, and wield with such marvelous skill the "pastoral gimlet."

The Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society will meet in annual session at Brandon, April 17 and 18. All auxiliary societies are requested to forward the names of delegates at once to Mrs. Mary Green or Mrs. J. K. Jayne, Brandon, Miss. Preparations are being made for an interesting occasion. It is expected that Mrs. Juliana Hays, from Baltimore, will be present. As many pastors as can find it convenient to do so are requested to attend. Ample hospitality will be extended to all. We expect to be there.

The riot and reign of the mob in Cincinnati is one of the most desperate and diabolical we have read of in any civilized community. That the murderers could not have been earlier suppressed, with so many organized forces at command, is a matter of surprise. The good citizens seemed to be powerless against the wild banditti who had taken the law into their own hands. Such violence can not be condoned on the ground that the criminal laws are not enforced. No doubt it results from lax administration, but, instead of remedying, it always aggravates the evil. Lynch law never enforces the authority of constitutionally organized courts, but rather brings them into contempt, and breeds a spirit of daring outlawry. It is a pity that the fair name of Cincinnati, after all the sufferings of the dreadful overflow, should be stained with blood and humiliated by a reckless ruffianism.

The recent Philadelphia Conference had one or two exciting sessions. The subjects up for discussion were tobacco and transfers. There was strong opposition to both. It is given out that the committee of entertainment find it difficult to secure homes for delegates to the approaching General Conference because of the anti-tobacco sentiment of Philadelphia Methodists. On that subject we sympathize with the enemies of the pipe. Smoke and spit are not credentials or recommendations of the gospel ministry. We most heartily wish that smoking may be banished from all our Conferences—not by prohibitory statute, but by a universal sense of ministerial propriety. On the other subject warmly debated in the City of Brotherly Love, we are Methodist and thoroughly connoisseurs. The transferring power inhering in our episcopacy makes Methodism the most aggressive of all evangelical churches. It is like a moving battalion on the field—deployed and marshalled according to the demands of the hour and the issues of battle. Opposition to transfers would deconsecrate the church. And when that ensues, she will be shorn of her strength, and her glory will have departed.

National Aid to Education—The Partisan and Patriotic.

The "Blair bill," providing for a distribution of national funds to the States, according to the degree of illiteracy, for public education, has been under discussion in the United States Senate a number of days. For some time the question has been quite thoroughly considered in the public prints. Newspapers, magazines and reviews have contained articles on the subject from the ablest educators and statesmen. There has been general agreement as to the advisability and necessity of such legislation, but wide difference of opinion as to the method and measure of distribution. One party, led by Gen. Logan, of Illinois, oppose the distribution according to illiteracy, and advocate the plan of making the grants according to population. The narrowness of the partisan is so evident in that very suggestion as to be beyond question or defense. It is violative of the foundation principle of public education. Taxes are levied for the support of a public school system because illiteracy is dangerous to the body politic. A nation educates as a measure of self-preservation. Then it logically follows that there should be the largest facilities where there is greatest need—the most liberal appropriations where there is densest illiteracy. If money is to be given where schools are best organized, and there is least need, it is merely to compliment and not to aid—to flatter, not to foster. Such is the spirit of Senator Logan's argument. He is especially violent in his opposition to liberal grants to the South. Says we have not demonstrated our appreciation of education, and do not deserve aid. And in course of the recent discussion Senator Sherman objected to the illiteracy measure of distribution because the South would get a large share, and "the South could not be trusted" with its administration. Then, for purely partisan reasons, these distinguished senators would set aside a great principle, and substitute spite for specie. We have urgent need. Much has been done, but the South is too poor to meet the emergency of the hour. Vicksburg pays a larger proportionate tax for education than Boston, still the amount is small on account of her poverty. Shame on the partisanship that can not rise to the height of this great argument! It is unworthy a voice in the councils of our nation. In significant contrast to the party prejudice of Senators Logan and Sherman—both aspirants for the Presidency—we reproduce the patriotic utterances of Dr. A. D. Mayo, of Boston, in an address at Vicksburg. They have the breadth of a statesman and the spirit of a philanthropist:

Your people need and ask for that education for their children which will help them to become good citizens of the Republic. An intelligent people can be trusted to take care of the constitution; but no body of statesmen is wise enough to do it if the people are ignorant. I can not speak to-night what I feel concerning this matter as I go up and down this Southern land. I came from a State that is renowned for its schools, and from the city of Boston, that, perhaps, on the whole, does more for its children than any city on the earth. I am glad I come from that city, and have my own honest pride in her great renown. But, last Monday, I came to your little city of Vicksburg. In the States tributary to your town a larger territory is under water than the whole State of Massachusetts, and more property will be disturbed in a month than New England pays for education in five years. Our boat was loaded to the water's edge with the poor people rescued from the rising flood. Yet I was met by a deputation of your foremost citizens, and now, for two nights, this house has been crowded to hear me talk about the children. Your colored people send me an address of welcome, and ask me to tell them what I know of education. I remember that little more than twenty years ago Vicksburg was a battle-field, and around your walls the soldiers sleep on your hills as living people walk your streets. I remember that again and again, since that day, you have faced the pestilence, that even your river has turned the cold shoulder, that the open country for hundreds of miles about you is not yet on its feet from the overwhelming destruction of war. Yet I find your people taxing themselves almost twice the per cent. of Boston for public schools; still compelled to teach the children in unsuitable buildings, and even your open country imposing almost as heavy a tax on its valuation as our proud Athens of the Bay State. When I see such things—and I see them in every one of your twelve States through which I have traveled in the past four years—I thank God that I live in the same country with the people of the South, who, out of their poverty and amid all their difficulties, are doing such things for the children. It seems to me that a Congress that would turn its back on the cry of these millions of children and youths for the bread of knowledge, and give them the stones of constitutional theory and sectional distrust and partisan policy instead, would be a Congress itself sorely in need of education, of patriotism, and of that statesmanship whose highest achievement is in helping the people to help themselves, and giving to the Republic a new generation fit to deal with the mighty era that is already upon us. Let our honored senators and representatives at Washington give one week to the children who will inherit the Republic, and will write the history of what they are doing to-day.

At St. Louis.

BY BISHOP PARKER.

Thirty-five hours from New Orleans to St. Louis; distance probably about seven hundred miles. Crossing at Cairo, there were signs of the flood. The Ohio here mingles with the tawny waters of the Mississippi. Before and after crossing the road is on high embankments, or trestles, for miles. Water everywhere, and, as the marks on the trees and buildings show, it has been recently higher by many feet. Cairo is protected by levees, but, as appeared from the train, there was much water over the suburbs and outlying regions. The Ohio valley has been swept as perhaps never before, and the destruction of property has been greater because there was more to be destroyed. What is to be done about these devastating floods in the Ohio and the Mississippi? They come now nearly every year, and how to meet them and obtain adequate protection against them is a national problem of the first magnitude.

At ten o'clock our train passes over the great bridge, so solid and so massive that it seems like solid ground, and after a dive into the bowels of the earth—a tunnel of several squares—the train emerges amidst the flash of electric lights, and the usual uproar at the Union Depot, St. Louis. A stroll over the bridge by daylight and a perspective view impresses one with the magnitude of the enterprise. The cost, including the tunnel, I suppose, was fifteen millions of dollars. It is two stories, the lower for railroad trains, and the upper for foot travel and vehicles. It is broad enough for a double track, and four wagons can move abreast on the upper floor. The structure is of iron, resting on stone piers, and the arches springing from the piers are sufficiently high for the largest steamboats to pass under them. Because of its length, and solid and broad structure, it does not look as high as it really is. Viewed from a favorable point on the levee, it is most impressive. On the whole, there is a grandeur about it in keeping with the mighty river it spans, and the great commerce to which it ministers. From the middle span of the bridge there is a good view of the river, the city front, the steamboat landings, and glimpses of spires, domes and towers rising above the mass of walls and roofs of this great Western metropolis.

St. Louis claims at the present time four hundred thousand inhabitants. It has a solid and prosperous appearance. The principal streets are well paved, there are miles and miles of handsome brick, marble and stone residences. Many of the business blocks are imposing in their architecture, and the marts of trade are as lively as a bee hive. I was in St. Louis a generation ago nearly. It was then a small place. This immense and rapid growth is marvelous, and it is still growing. Like most of the Western cities, St. Louis owes its progress and prosperity largely to railroads. The river did all for it at first, and is an important factor in its business still; but the railroads bring to it the trade of the Southwest, of Texas, North Louisiana, of the West indefinitely, and of the Mississippi valley north of Memphis.

The Southern Methodists have several fine church edifices here. Centenary, St. John's and First Church are all elegant, commodious and costly, and have a large and strong membership. Dr. Tudor is pastor of Centenary, and is at this time in the midst of a most protracted meeting. For two months these revival services have been going on under the labors of Rev. Thomas Harrison, whose title for these many years has been "the boy preacher." He is probably somewhere up in the thirties, but he has quite a youthful appearance. Short but thin, his clothes hang about him as on a mere frame. His hair is black and cropped short, and his lank face, without beard, bears no trace of the use of the razor. A somewhat retreating forehead, and not wide, gives him anything but the appearance of a man of high intellect. The expression of his countenance is, however, pleasing; there is a glow upon it, and nearly always a half-born smile. His eyes are full, dark blue, not particularly penetrating in appearance, but always wide open; and, as a matter of fact, he sees everybody and everything from floor to gallery and from pulpit to vestibule. His physiognomy expresses spirituality, devotion, sweetness of spirit, earnestness, alertness. This is the way he impressed me.

Entering the church on a week

night, a night of drizzle and mud, the large auditorium, with its spacious galleries, was packed; many standing in every part, for lack of seats, and they stood there through a nearly three hours' service. The active little man was on the platform, surrounded by visiting ministers. From his own selection he gave out a hymn, talked about it, exhorted some and then sang. There was a cornet, the large pipe organ and a company of singers located just behind the pulpit. The music was good, and the singing hearty and general. I was called on to make the opening prayer. Then more talk from Mr. Harrison about the work. A thousand and twenty seekers to date, a jubilee occasion, what had been done in his meetings in Philadelphia, Indianapolis, Decatur, this equalled any. Then more singing, a short prayer offered by himself. After this more talk, and finally he tells how he found a text, half announces it, and then talks more about the jubilee. Then he goes back to his text, looks for it in a small Bible, and reads: "It shall be"—goes off again at a tangent in a brief exhortation, and after awhile, coming back, he reads again: "It shall be a jubilee unto you."—Leviticus xxv, 10. This was a time to rejoice—over ten hundred and twenty souls brought to Christ in the city of St. Louis. Twenty-five minutes is spent on the sermon—a sermon abundantly scattering—a mere thread of exposition and continuity. After this more singing. Our long metre doxology this time. Then came propositions to stand up, to lift up hands, a silent prayer, and invitation to the altar. Many came first and last, and more at the last than at first. A number professed to find peace, but there was no particular demonstration. The work at the altar went on, Christians kneeling beside the penitents to instruct and encourage, while Mr. Harrison seemed to be everywhere. At one moment I saw him talking to some one at the altar, and it seemed but a minute after that his voice was heard in the middle of a crowded gallery announcing a conversion up there, and calling again for "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." The doxology is sung at every conversion. None were called on to pray after the opening of the service. There seemed to be little instruction given by Mr. Harrison to penitents. He does not scold, no words but those of encouragement are uttered by him. His own faith and assurance seem to inspire all.

I saw nothing in his meetings that is not common at our Southern camp meetings, and in our revival services in the churches among us. The members of the church seem to be quickened in their spiritual life, and the seekers were evidently in earnest. There have been many clear and bright conversions, in some instances entire families have been brought to Christ. A gray-headed man, whom I saw at the altar on Thursday night, came forward on Sunday morning as an applicant for church membership, so changed and so transfigured in appearance that I scarcely recognized him. There is some chaff, no doubt, but there is also much good wheat. The work among the young people is especially gratifying. Numbers of young men have been reached. As to the number of conversions it is not easy to determine. The names and address of all who come forward as seekers are taken every night. Over a thousand so far have been at the altar, and Dr. Tudor has received the names of over two hundred who profess conversion, and who have applied for membership in his charge. Some have joined other churches, and many were already members of the church. The congregations are uniformly large, and will average from fifteen hundred to two thousand. There is always a rush for seats, and many are compelled to stand or to retire. It is something to hold such an audience for over two months, and to sustain an interest which seems, at this writing, to be greater than ever.

In accounting for these results, I think we are compelled to admit that it is a work of God. Mr. Harrison is certainly one of the least pretentious men I have met in the social circle. He is awkward in his manner, has an indifferent voice, and there is nothing very striking in what he says. His manner is in contrast with our ordinary way of preaching. There is in it a good deal of eccentricity, it may be, and a studied effort to keep up the attention of his hearers. He is a capital manager, has everything perfectly in hand, and guides and controls all with masterly skill. But to Methodists his methods are neither new nor extraordinary. He is a specialist, a revivalist, an evangelist, and is wonderfully successful in this particular work. In this case he has a wise and efficient helper in Dr. Tudor, and a praying church around him. On Friday night, the twenty-first, there was a parlor Conference at St. John's Church in the interest of church extension. This church has a spacious and elegantly furnished parlor, with dining room and kitchen connected with it. First of all there was "a tea," given by the ladies—a most sumptuous repast, and, of course, most elegantly and gracefully served. Then came the Conference. The parlor was well filled with some of our best St. Louis Methodists, and brief addresses were made by Bishop Hargrove, Dr. Morton and others. A delightful evening. Sunday afternoon there was a church extension mass meeting in the main auditorium. The attendance was only fair. Here we had addresses, Bishop Hargrove presiding, and the occasion was characterized by some as "a rich treat." The interest in church extension was deepened beyond doubt, and we may hope that the financial results will appear. The secretary, Dr. Morton, is managing this important work effectively, and it is rapidly coming to the front as one of the most important of our church enterprises. The total collections for the year will be over thirty-six thousand dollars. This includes what is retained by the Annual Conference Boards. Over a hundred churches have been built through the aid afforded. This is doing well for a new undertaking.

Sunday night there was a service at St. John's Church in memory of our lamented Bishop Kavanaugh. The sermon was assigned to the writer, Bishop Hargrove, Dr. Morton, the pastor, Dr. Lewis, Bro. Vincell and others taking part in the service. Dr. Morton read a brief memoir, of great excellence, and short addresses were made by Bishop Hargrove, Dr. Wilson, and Lewis and Vincell. Bishop Kavanaugh was greatly loved in St. Louis, and the presence of a large congregation attested their devotion to his memory.

I was gratified to meet your conferees of the trip, Dr. McAnally and Bro. Bounds, of the St. Louis, and Bro. Godbey, of the Southwest. Christian Advocate, and all our pastors in St. Louis. These brethren appear to be working faithfully, and with a measure of success. A new church on Page Avenue, in the extreme western part of the city, is soon to be built. There are here a number of prosperous and devoted laymen, who are capable of devising liberal things, and of noble women not a few. To keep up with the growth of the city, and to meet the demands for constant enlargement in our church enterprises, calls for energetic work and a full and generous consecration. The decks, I believe, are generally cleared in the city, and throughout Dr. Wilson's district, and our friends are talking and thinking about the Centenary of Methodism. We have hope that the Centenary offering of the St. Louis Conference will not be less than fifty thousand dollars.

St. Louis, Mo., March 24, 1884.

Parsonages in the West.

BY BISHOP HARGROVE.

In the first thirty years after the organization of Episcopal Methodism, as shown by an alphabetical list in Dr. Bangs' History, 1,616 itinerant preachers had united with the different Conferences, of whom, two years later, 764 had located, 116 had died in the work, 31 had been expelled, 19 had withdrawn, and 686 still retained membership.

These figures show that, during a period about the average of human life, immediately following the organization of the church, only seven per cent. of its itinerant ministry died in the active service, while forty-seven per cent. had located. The locations exceeded by seventy-eight the whole number of itinerants then remaining, the accumulation of all these years. Remember that this was the result with men who had completed their probation, tested men, and that, too, in the "heroic age" of Methodism. This vast loss of available force shows an immense strain on the system at some point.

At the same time the efficiency of the itinerancy was demonstrated by the accumulation of more than 200,000 communicants within the period under review. Its aggressive power is all the more conspicuous for this grand achievement, with the waste of more than half its working capacity. What might have been the result if Methodism had conserved its forces, and thus doubled the energy of its itinerancy? This would have swelled the millions who, with glad hearts, celebrate this Centenary year, and it would have intensified the joy and wonder of each of the increased millions by the added grandeur of the result.

Bishop Coke, as early as the year 1800, appealed to the church to provide parsonages and the necessary heavy furniture for the use of the families of preachers, in order to retain the services of those most experienced and influential. The failure to do this is believed to explain most of the locations and the loss involved.

Here is a conspicuous lesson of this first century of organic Methodism; and attention is called to it just now, because the conditions at present existing in our Western work are similar to those of that period. The country is new, the population is scattered, the distances are great and the people not rich. As in all new and attractive countries, houses are relatively scarce, and command high rents, rapidly exhausting the limited means of a preacher, who is forced to pay these prices. It is known to the writer that two of the worthy men furnished by Georgia to our mission work in New Mexico within the past two years have found it necessary with their own hands to construct a shelter for themselves as the first condition for conducting their ministry. The meager support the missionary treasury could afford them would not allow them to pay prevailing rents. What avails missionary money if it must thus be exhausted?

We are more considerate of our missionaries in foreign countries. Homes are accounted indispensable for them. At this point the itinerancy pinches most in a new country, and just here expenditure is first needed, and investment the true economy. The rent of a house for three years will usually buy it. The benevolent fund that meets this first condition yields the surest and the largest revenue. It is noteworthy that, while the fathers saw the difficulty and sought to provide for it, we, so far as the West is concerned, seem to overlook it.

Unmarried men, with the attainments and experience requisite for that difficult field, are not to be found in numbers sufficient to meet the urgent and growing demand. Maturity of character and culture are nowhere more important than among this adventurous, enterprising, wide-awake, worldly population. Its cosmopolitan character concentrates there the ideas of the world, so that the missionary encounters every phase, both of belief and of unbelief. Weakness and ignorance are the decision and sport of such elements, and, instead of arresting the torrent of iniquity, are themselves swept by it as straws by a tempest.

Strong, experienced, capable men are especially needed. Divine as is the power of the gospel, a man, a chosen man, is God's agency to wield it. Any man lacking the elements for a successful ministry in the older Conferences is an assured failure in the new. The missionary money expended on such is worse than wasted—it is a positive hindrance—a repression of the benevolence that supplies it, and an obstruction of the field to be occupied.

Besides, all our valuable men without families can not be spared from the older Conferences. In all these Conferences there are particular places whose peculiar surroundings require this class of men.

The parsonage is the desideratum for the Western work. It removes the most serious obstruction to an itinerant ministry in new countries where, if not indispensable, it is certainly a powerful adjunct. It is singular that, while the church provides machinery for almost every other separate interest—its boards for Sunday-schools, finances, missions, literature and church extension—it leaves the parsonage interest, the right arm of the itinerancy, to provide for itself as best it can. Parsonages, indeed, we have in localities able to provide them for themselves, but these are the outgrowth of necessity and convenience rather than of any thoughtful provision of organic Methodism. In those places where salaries are necessarily small, and parsonages are therefore the more needed, they are unprovided, and there is not even an organized effort to provide them. Aggression is the dominant idea and aim of itinerancy, and yet we strangely ignore its prime factor at the very point where all aggression must be expected, among the weak and helpless. The church expects the itinerant at her bidding to carry the gospel whither the Macedonian cry proceeds, and yet leaves unsheltered his wife and children, whom the gospel he hears, and his plighted faith, require him to protect. Many a true itinerant has thus surrendered to the inevitable. Location had no alternative. A heart made too heavy to bear glad tidings to others has turned to minister relief and solace at home.

Whatever necessities may excuse our fathers when there was no old and well-established church to help in their new work, their loss by that lack was great, and the lesson is among the most impressive of their history. This record of their failure, due to lack, not of wisdom, but of means, appeals to us through our enlarged resources to do this for the Lord which they earnestly coveted to do, but could not compass.

Why not extend the privilege of

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Prominent Minister Writes.
Dr. Mott's Lung Balm. I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies.
I have used your Lung Balm for several years, and have been cured of my consumption. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well woman.
MRS. R. H. HAYES, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. H. Mott's Lung Balm.
After years of suffering from consumption, I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mott's Lung Balm.
I have been suffering from consumption for several years, and have been treated by the best physicians, but have not been cured. I have been cured by your Lung Balm, and am now a well man.
REV. C. H. HAYES, Elder M. E. Church, South No. 25, Tenth street, Atlanta, Ga.

Household.

Potatoes make an excellent addition to the compost heap.

CRACKED WHEAT PUDDING.—Crack wheat mixed with milk in this portion of half a cup to a quart, and have red with cinnamon and a raisin or two, makes a very good pudding.

Egg Sauce.—Boil a half dozen eggs hard, when add remove the shell, cut each egg in half crosswise, and each half into four quarters. Put them into one pint of melted butter.

BANANA FRITTERS.—Cut your banana into a dozen pieces, and mix them with batter, fry them as fritters, taking one piece of banana in each tablespoonful of the mixture, as you turn it into the frying-pan.

FEATHER CAKE.—One cup of milk, one cup of flour, one egg, half a cup of sweetened milk, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Bake to a dark brown.

PUDDING SAUCE.—A very nice sauce for a duck soup, is made by dissolving one teaspoonful of corn-starch in a little water; add to it a coffee-cupful of boiling water with nearly a cupful of light brown sugar; let this boil for ten minutes. Take one cup of tart elder, one tablespoonful of butter, and the yolk of two well-beaten eggs; let them scald and add to the boiling sauce.

TO DEVIL A TURKEY'S CARCASS.—Cut all the meat off the carcass and bones, then place these pieces inside the carcass, together with the felled gravy and stuffing, if there is any. Place in a hot pan, which put in a hot oven. Ten or fifteen minutes will suffice to heat it through. Serve it as it comes from the oven, in the carcass, which you can garnish on the outside with celery tops and parsley. Every household should always have on hand some good stock soup, and they can readily have it if they keep Johnson's fluid beef in the house. This should be reduced to the desired strength and the carcass of the turkey basted while in the oven, which will form a nice gravy. The Caterer.

MEAT EATERS.—Dr. Allison, whose vegetarian dinners and recipes have attracted so much attention in London, says the Esquimaux live on fish and flesh from necessity. They eat as much as eight pounds of flesh meat or twelve pounds of fish at a meal, says Dr. John Rao, and a man who lived among them twenty years says they usually die at from thirty-five to forty-five of scrofula, the women living about ten years more. He knew of only two men living to be seventy. The Esquimaux eat the green contents of the reindeer's stomach, and in spring eat scurvy grass, wild turnips, wild vetch, wild oats, wild rice, sorrel, docks, &c. In autumn they eat wild prunes, blackberries, blueberries, crowberries, cranberries, &c. The women who gather these berries eat more of them than the men, and live longer in consequence, while the two men who lived to be near seventy lived as much as possible on these green stuffs and fruits.

BEEF STEAK PIE.—Ingredients.—For a large pie, 3 pounds, for a small, 1 to 2 pounds of beefsteak; seasoning, taste of salt, cayenne and black pepper; suitable dripping or suet crust; water. Mode.—Have the steaks cut from a rump that has hung a few days, that they may be tender, and be particular that every portion is perfectly sweet. Cut the steaks into pieces about two inches long and two wide. Allow a small piece of fat to each piece of lean, and arrange the meat in layers in a pie dish. Between each layer sprinkle a seasoning of salt, pepper, and, where liked, a few grains of cayenne. Fill the dish abundantly with meat to support the crust, to give it a nice raised appearance when baked. Pour in sufficient water to half fill the dish, and border it with paste; brush it over with a little water and put on the cover, slightly press down the edges with the thumb and trim the paste off close to the dish. Make a hole in the top of the crust and bake in a hot oven for about one and a half hours or more if the pie be large.

BEEF TEA.—Professor Roberts Bartholow, of the Jefferson Medical College, says: "Nothing has been more conclusively shown than that beef tea is not a food. It is nothing more than a stimulant. In preparing beef juice the lean part of the beef should be selected. This should be cut into thick pieces, about the size of a lemon squeezer. The pieces should be next placed on a hot coal fire for a moment to sear the exterior; the meat is then transferred to the lemon squeezer, which has been warmed by dipping in hot water, and the juice pressed out and allowed to flow into the glass, which has also been heated. The juice is seasoned with a little salt and Cayenne pepper, if the patient desires it, and taken immediately. In this way the nutritious elements of the meat are obtained, and the elixir scorching develop constituents which give the peculiar flavor to cooked meat." This is for a diet, the principle of which is the administration of those elements which are supposed to be in the stomach, and do not require the aid of the intestines in their digestion.

Try cranberries for malaria.
Try a sun-bath for rheumatism.
Try clam-broth for a weak stomach.
Try cranberry poultice for erysipelas.
Try swallowing saliva when troubled with sour stomach.
Try eating fresh radishes and yellow turnip for gravel.
Try eating onions and horseradish to relieve dropsical swellings.
Try hutter milk for the removal of tan and walnut stains, and freckles.
Try the group-dipnet when a child is likely to be troubled in that way.
Try hot flannel over the seat of neuralgic pain, and renew frequently.
Try taking cod liver oil in tomato catsup if you want to make it palatable.
Try enuffing powdered horax up the nostrils for catarrhal cold in the head.
Try taking a nap in the afternoon if you are going to be out late in the evening.
Try breathing fumes of turpentine or eucalyptus to relieve whooping-cough.
Try a cloth wrung out from cold water put about the neck for a sore throat.
Try walking with your hands behind you if you find yourself becoming bent forward.
Try an extra pair of stockings outside of your shoes when travelling in cold weather.
Try a silk handkerchief over the face when obliged to go against a cold, piercing wind.—Evangelical Messenger.

"The Third House."

ITS GOOD AND BAD MEMBERS.—THE REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE OF A HOUSEKEEPER BY HIS WORK—DURING A LONG RESIDENCE AT WASHINGTON.

(Correspondence Rochester Democrat.)

No city upon the American continent has a larger floating population than Washington. It is estimated that during the sessions of congress twenty-five thousand people, whose homes are in various parts of the north and other countries, make this city their place of residence. Some come here, attracted by the advantages the city offers for making the acquaintance of public men; others have various claims which they wish to present, while the great majority, however, are the crew of the "Third House," as the public crib, the latter class, as a general thing, originate the many schemes which terminate in vicious bills, all of which are neither directed at the public treasury, or toward that revenue which the black-mailing of corporations or private enterprises may bring.

While walking down Pennsylvania avenue the other day I met Mr. William M. Ashley, formerly of your city, whose long residence here has made him unusually well acquainted with the operations of the lobby.

Having made my wants in this particular direction known, in answer to an interrogatory, Mr. Ashley said:

"Yes, during my residence here I have become well acquainted with the workings of the 'Third House,' as it is termed, and could tell you of numerous jobs, which, like the 'Heavenly Chinee,' are peculiar."

"You do not regard the lobby, as a body, vicious, do you?"

"Not necessarily so, there are good and bad men comprising that body; yet there have been times when it must be admitted that the combined power of the lobby has done things more than a draft upon the public treasury for the expenses of the investigation. Another squeeze the lobbyist bills, as they are called. These, of course, are fought by the buffers and market-men. The first attempt to force a bill of this description was in 1877, when a prominent Washington politician offered a fabulous sum for the franchise."

"Anything else in this line that you think of, Mr. Ashley?"

"Well, take the annual gas bills, for instance. They are introduced for the purpose of bleeding the Washington Gas Light Company. They usually result in an investigating committee, which afterwards work in such a way that a draft upon the public treasury for the expenses of the investigation. Another squeeze the lobbyist bills, as they are called. These, of course, are fought by the buffers and market-men. The first attempt to force a bill of this description was in 1877, when a prominent Washington politician offered a fabulous sum for the franchise."

"Yes, there's the job to reclaim the Potomac river, which had it become a law, would have resulted in an enormous steal. That work is now being done by the Government itself, and will rid the place of that malarial atmosphere of which we hear so much outside the city."

"During your residence here have you experienced the bad results of living in this city?"

"I have not at all times enjoyed good health, I am certain that the difficulty which I laid up so long was not malarial. It was something that had troubled me for years. A shooting, stinging pain that at times attacked different parts of my body. One day my right arm and leg would torture me with pain, there would be great redness, heat and swelling of the parts; and perhaps the next day the left arm and leg would be similarly affected. Then again it would locate in some particular part of my body and produce a numbness which would well nigh drive me frantic. There would be weeks at a time that I would be afflicted with an intermitting kind of pain that would come on every afternoon and leave me comparatively free from suffering during the balance of the twenty-four hours. Then I would be on at any time during the day or night when I would be obliged to lie upon my back for hours and keep in motionless as possible. Every time I attempted to move a chilly sensation would pass over my body, or I would feel from hot flashes. I suffered from a spasmodic contraction of the muscles and a soreness of the back and bowels, and even my eyeballs became sore and distressed me greatly whenever I wiped my face. I became ill-tempered, peevish, irascible and desperately despondent."

"Of course you consulted the doctors regarding your difficulty?"

"Consulted them? Well I should say I did. Some told me I had neuralgia; others that I had inflammatory rheumatism, for which there was no cure, that I would have to take all my life, and that time alone would mitigate my sufferings."

"But didn't they try to relieve your miseries?"

"Yes, they vomited and physiced me, blistered and bled me, plastered me, and, finally, I was told to try everything but to take me, but without avail."

"But how did you finally recover?"

"I had a friend living in Michigan who had been afflicted in a similar way and had been cured. He wrote me regarding his recovery and advised me to try the remedy which cured him. I procured a bottle and commenced its use, taking a tablespoonful after each meal and at bed time. I had used it about a week when I noticed a decrease of the soreness of the joints and a general feeling of relief. I persevered in its use and finally got so I could move around without limping, when I told my friends that it was Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure that had put me on my feet."

"And do you regard your cure as permanent?"

"Certainly, I haven't been so well in years as I am now, and although I have been subjected to frequent and severe changes of weather this winter, I have not felt the least intimation of the return of my rheumatic trouble."

"Do you object to the publication of this interview, Mr. Ashley?"

"Not at all, sir. I look upon it as a duty I owe my fellow-creatures to alleviate their sufferings so far as I am able, and any communication regarding my symptoms and cure that may be sent to me at 506 Maine avenue will receive prompt and careful attention. I use and finally got so I could move around without limping, when I told my friends that it was Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure that had put me on my feet."

"Indeed, there is, sir, for no man suffered more nor longer than did I before this remedy gave me relief."

"To go back to the original subject, Mr. Ashley, I am glad to hear of the same familiar faces about the lobby session after session?"

"No, not so much as you might think. New faces are constantly seen and old ones disappear. The strain upon lobbyists is necessarily very great, and when you add to this the demoralizing effect of late hours and intemperate habits and the fact that they are after found out in their steals, their disappearance can easily be accounted for."

"What proportion of these blood-bills are successful?"

"A very small percentage, sir. Notwithstanding the power and influence of the lobby, but few of these vicious measures pass. Were they successful it would be a sad commentary upon our system of government, and would virtually annihilate one branch of it. The great majority of them are either reported adversely or smothered in committee by the watchfulness and loyalty of our congressmen."

J. E. D.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad.

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS.

North and East and in the Northwest.

Low Rates and Quick Time on Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFAIR.

Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Trains.

With Pullman Palace Cars.

NEW ORLEANS.

Meridian, Birmingham, Chattanooga and Cincinnati.

Morning Express. Even's Mail.

Leaves New Orleans. Arrives, Meridian.

Freight and Passenger Depots, Press street and Levee.

Freight and Ticket Offices, 34 and 36 St. Charles street, N. O.

H. COLLIERAN, General Freight Agent.

E. P. WILSON, Gen'l Pass'g Agent.

Queen and Crescent Line.

BARNARD BROWN, Gen'l Frt. and Pass. Agt., N. O. and N. E. R. R., New Orleans, La.

BODLEY BROTHERS, OFFICE OF Wagon Repository, 70, 72, 74 St. Charles St. Factory at Ing. W. Va.

Canes, Wagons, Small Carts, Log Wagons, All with Black Locust Hubs, Bodley's Steel Ekin Wagons, the best steel wagon sold. Wheelbarrows, Axle Grease, Spokes, Pellets, Corn Meal, Flour, and Sublimed Shavers, Wagon and Carriage Material. Can deliver goods along the river, direct from factory, and in car loads on railroads.

W. G. WHEELER, Clothing and Furnishing GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to WHEELER & PIERSON, 56 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

Reductions.

To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock, though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent.

Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.

To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from figures that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

W. G. TEBAUT, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

THE OLDER LONG STAPLE MILK.

THE BEST NEW STAPLE MILK.

THE BEST NEW STAPLE MILK.

THE BEST NEW STAPLE MILK.

THE BEST NEW STAPLE MILK.

THE BEST NEW STAPLE MILK.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad.

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS.

North and East and in the Northwest.

Low Rates and Quick Time on Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFAIR.

Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Trains.

With Pullman Palace Cars.

NEW ORLEANS.

Meridian, Birmingham, Chattanooga and Cincinnati.

Morning Express. Even's Mail.

Leaves New Orleans. Arrives, Meridian.

Freight and Passenger Depots, Press street and Levee.

Freight and Ticket Offices, 34 and 36 St. Charles street, N. O.

H. COLLIERAN, General Freight Agent.

E. P. WILSON, Gen'l Pass'g Agent.

Queen and Crescent Line.

BARNARD BROWN, Gen'l Frt. and Pass. Agt., N. O. and N. E. R. R., New Orleans, La.

BODLEY BROTHERS, OFFICE OF Wagon Repository, 70, 72, 74 St. Charles St. Factory at Ing. W. Va.

Canes, Wagons, Small Carts, Log Wagons, All with Black Locust Hubs, Bodley's Steel Ekin Wagons, the best steel wagon sold. Wheelbarrows, Axle Grease, Spokes, Pellets, Corn Meal, Flour, and Sublimed Shavers, Wagon and Carriage Material. Can deliver goods along the river, direct from factory, and in car loads on railroads.

W. G. WHEELER, Clothing and Furnishing GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to WHEELER & PIERSON, 56 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

Reductions.

To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock, though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent.

Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.

To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from figures that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

W. G. TEBAUT, Wholesale and Retail Furniture, 37, 39 and 41 Royal Street, New Orleans, La.

THE OLDER LONG STAPLE MILK.

THE BEST NEW STAPLE MILK.

THE BEST NEW STAPLE MILK.

THE BEST NEW STAPLE MILK.

THE

MISCELLANEOUS

A Home Production.

YEAST POWDER.

It is an absolute fact, as a pure, unadulterated article, entirely free from alum, has been analyzed by a chemist, and has been pronounced by the highest authorities to be the purest and best yeast powder ever produced. It is certainly worth the praise of the public. It is manufactured at 179 Grand street, by Mrs. A. F. Goodwin, widow of the late P. M. Goodwin. It is handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in can or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 179 Grand street, New Orleans, La.

JAMES PYLE'S

The Great Invention, For EASY WASHING, IN HAND OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER. Without harm to FABRIC OR HANDS, and particularly adapted to Warm Climates. No family, rich or poor should be without it. Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

THE EASTER ANGELS

A BEAUTIFUL Easter Service

With Responsive Recitations and Music prepared expressly for it.

The Responses are so arranged that they may be used by classes or individuals, thus giving additional variety and interest. The Service is arranged under the following heads: First Subject, THE EASTER ANGELS; Second Subject, CHRIST COMFORTETH MARY; Third Subject, MARY TO SAVE; Fourth Subject, PAUL'S TESTIMONY; Fifth Subject, ALL PRAISE IS GIVEN UNTO ME. Each Subject has appropriate music and readings.

Price, 50 cts. Fifty cents per doz. by mail. $4.00 per 100 by express.

Published by JOHN CHURCH & CO., CINCINNATI, O.

200 West 4th St., New York. J. CHURCH & CO. 200 West 4th St., New York.

Booksellers and Music Dealers Generally.

MRS. POTT'S GOLD HANDLE SAD IRON

DO NOT BURN THE HAND. DETACHABLE WALNUT HANDLE. DOUBLE POINTED, IRON BOTH WAYS. BEST IN USE AND CHEAP. THREE IRONS. ONE HANDLE AND A STAND TO A SET. FOR SALE BY THE HARDWARE TRADE.

DIAMOND DYES

Are the Best Dyes Ever Made. DRESSES, COATS, SCARFS, HOODS, VANS, STOCKINGS, CARPET RAGS, RIBBONS, FEATHERS, or any fabric or fancy article, and perfectly colored to any shade. 2 FAST AND DURABLE COLORS. NEW PACKAGE WILL HOLD DYE FOR FIFTY USES, OR MORE. Compare with them for Brilliance, Durability, Simplicity and Economy. Sold by all druggists, chemists, or send us 10 cents and any color wanted in post-paid. 27 colored samples and a book of directions sent free. WELLS & RICHARDSON CO., Burlington, Vt.

Gold Paint. Silver Paint. Bronze Paint. Artists' Black. For glazing Fancy Boxes, Frames, Lamps, Chandeliers, and for all kinds of ornamental work. Equal to any of the high priced kinds, and only 10 cts. a package at the druggist's, or post-paid from WELLS & RICHARDSON CO., Burlington, Vt.

Weekly Market Review.

For Week Ending April 1, 1884.

COTTON.

Low ordinary	7 1/2	44
Ordinary	10	44
Good ordinary	10 1/2	44
Low middling	11	44
Middling	11 1/2	44
Good middling	11 3/4	44
Fair	11 1/2	44
Galveston middling	11	44
Mobile middling	11	44
St. Louis middling	11	44

SUGAR.

Superior	34	44
Common	34	44
Good common	34	44
Fair	34	44
Good fair	34	44
Prime	34	44
Choice	34	44
Seconds	34	44
Yellow clarified	34	44
White clarified	34	44
Choice white	34	44
Granulated	34	44

MOLASSES.

Syrup	26	39
Fair	26	39
Prime	26	39
Choice	26	39
Panicy	26	39

RICE.

Choice	52	64
Prime	52	64
Good	52	64
Fair	52	64
Ordinary	52	64
Common	52	64
No. 2	52	64

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	5 99	0 00
Minnesota patents	7 00	0 00
Extra fancy	6 25	6 37 1/2
Winter wheat patents	7 00	0 00
Choice	5 50	5 75
Fancy	5 75	6 15

CORN PRODUCTS.

Corn meal	3 40	3 50
Corn meal	3 40	3 50
Grits	3 40	3 50
Hominy	4 00	0 00

GRAIN, ETC.

White	72	00
Yellow	66	00
Mixed	66	00
OATS	45	00
Western	45	00
Texas rust-proof	45	00
BRAN	1 05	00
1 cwt.	1 05	00
Choice	22	00
Prime	15	00

PROVISIONS.

Pork	10 00	10 12 1/2
Mess.	10 00	10 12 1/2
Prime mess	10 00	10 12 1/2
Rumps	16 75	00

BACON.

Choice breakfast	11 1/2	00
Shoulders	8 1/2	00
Sides, clear	10 1/2	00
Sides, clear rib	10 1/2	00

HAMS.

Super-cured	13 1/2	13 1/2
-------------	--------	--------

DRY SALT MEAT.

Shoulders	7 1/2	00
Sides, clear	9 1/2	00
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2	00

FISH.

MACKEREL	14 25	00
No. 1, in bbls.	7 75	00
Half bbls.	13 75	00
No. 2, in bbls.	6 25	00
Half bbls.	13 25	00
No. 3, in bbls, large	7 00	00
Half bbls.	7 00	00

GROCERIES.

COFFEE	10 1/2	42 1/2
Robusta, choice	13	14
Java, choice	16	00

BUTTER.

Western dairy	25	00
New York dairy	25	00
Country	17	20

LARD.

Choice	9 1/2	00
Choice	50	1 00
Fair	25	50

OILS.

Coal, cases	18	00
Coal, bbls	13	00
Coal seed	4 1/2	43
Lard	7 1/2	00

VEGETABLES.

POTATOES	1 75	00
Western	1 75	00
Eastern	1 75	00
Seed, Western	1 50	00

KIDNEY.

3 bbl.	20 00	00
3 bbl.	2 50	2 75

BALING STUFFS.

BAGGING	10 1/2	00
2 b.	11 1/2	00

BALING TWINE.

3 b.	13 1/2	00
3 b.	1 30	00

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY	4 00	4 25
Chickens, Western	3 00	3 25
Young	3 75	4 00
Chickens, Southern	3 75	4 00
Young	3 75	4 00
Chickens, Southern	14 00	18 00

EGGS.

Western	18	17
Southern	22	18

WOOL.

Lake	20	21
Louisiana	20	21
Barry	10	15

HIDES.

Green salted	71	8
Dry salted	11	11 1/2

STAVES.

Oak, kegs	50 00	55 00
Oak, barrels	75 00	80 00
Oak, casks	50 00	105 00
Oak, hoghead	75 00	140 00

HOOP-POLES.

Hoghead	40 00	00
Barrels	20 00	00
Half barrels	12 50	00

FERTILIZERS.

Cotton seed	12 00	14 00
Meal (country)	21 50	22 00
Meal (city)	25 25	25 50
Pure ground bone	42 00	00
Muriatic acid	3	00
Sulphuric acid	22	00
Black	34	00

Address all mail matter to New Orleans Christian Advocate, New Orleans.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

NASHVILLE, March 25.—This morning hallatones, varying in length from one to two inches, fell for two minutes, falling white the ground. Great destruction was wrought in the city and country, the damage aggregating many thousands of dollars. A tornado passed nearly directly over the National Cemetery, six miles from Nashville, and had an average width of about three-quarters of a mile.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—A thorough understanding of the appeal in behalf of the blood and honor in the Mississippi Valley insured a prompt response on the part of Congress to-day. The House voted the amount asked, the sum not to exceed $125,000, with every evidence of sympathy, and the Senate ratified the act without hesitation.

The President sent to the Senate to-day the nomination of A. S. Sargent, on extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Germany, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Russia, vice William H. Hunt, deceased. Mr. Sargent was soon after confirmed by the Senate.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., March 25.—Dispatches regarding the cyclone in this section of North Carolina last night, state that at Newton thirty houses were blown down. The Methodist Church was wrecked. Mary Hunsacker was killed. Fourteen persons were wounded. At Mocklandburg five or six residences were destroyed; no lives were lost. The cyclone passed through Irwin county, doing great damage to fruit and blowing down many houses.

RALEIGH, N. C., March 25.—The cyclone that formed near Newton, N. C., traveled east. Trees were blown a distance of two miles. Everything was swept clean. Many persons are homeless and without food. Hail stones as large as eggs fell.

LONDON, Ky., March 25.—A terrific cyclone passed near this place and at about 1 o'clock yesterday evening, carrying death and destruction in its train, especially at Pittsburg, where it was severest. The Methodist Church was razed to the ground, and much other property damaged.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 25.—The Brookville correspondent of the Journal telegraphs that the village of Shelby, near the Ohio and Indiana line, was wiped out Tuesday's tornado. Only two houses remained and they were badly damaged. Rev. Joseph Winston was killed.

DAYTON, O., March 25.—Intelligence from Shakerstown, Ridgeville, Centerville, Spring Valley, Trebleins Station and South Charleston, tell of a terrible destruction by Johnsons brothers were killed at Ridgeville and ex-Sheriff Glatfelter was drowned while refueled in a bridge which was struck by the cyclone.

MOOREHEAD, Kan., March 27.—Last Friday a man named Herald opened a saloon in Canton, this county, in defiance of law and the officers. Monday he got into a row over one of his drunken customers and was shot by a constable. Tuesday the women of the place raided his saloon and poured his liquors into the street. He now realizes that prohibition prohibits. The conduct of the women is indorsed by all good citizens.

LOUISVILLE, March 25.—At a mass meeting to-night it was definitely decided to hold another exposition here, beginning Aug. 15, lasting sixty days. The capital stock, $200,000, is already subscribed. The exposition promises to be as great a success as last year.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Although the regular supply has been distributed, urgent requests for more to be sent to the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Loring, who is much disturbed at the state of affairs, and fears that in a few years time the general government will be expected to furnish seed for every farm, garden and flower bed in the country.

DENVER, Col., March 25.—Probably fifty buildings of all sorts were unroofed by yesterday's windstorm. About midnight a portion of the rear wall of the Lindell Hotel on the west side was blown in. The guests, previously warned of the danger, escaped injury. The damage throughout the city will probably not exceed $10,000 or $15,000.

CINCINNATI, March 25.—Berners crime was assisting Joe Berners in a murder or less serious crime. Berners, who is much disturbed at the state of affairs, and fears that in a few years time the general government will be expected to furnish seed for every farm, garden and flower bed in the country.

As the meeting at Music Hall adjourned last night the attention of the people was attracted by a shout. A young man cried out: "To the jail; come on, follow me to hang Berners." Although there was a mob, this was the first time it found vent in a decided expression. The cry was soon taken up and spread rapidly. The crowd around the jail soon reached 10,000 people.

The jail office and jailer's residence have been severely damaged by the riot. The fire at the court-house was started by rolling in barrels of coal oil, setting them on fire and keeping everything out. Capt. Desmond entered to subdue the flames and was instantly killed. The flames have been an inconvenience to the mob would not let the firemen use their engines. The flames went unchecked, though slow, as the great structure was strongly built. It cost probably $250,000, and was made to withstand fire as far as possible. An irreparable loss in the valuable records, and the loss of great historical interest and value, and in the destruction of the second best law library in the United States.

COLUMBUS, March 25.—Berners was landed in the penitentiary at 8 o'clock to-night, being accompanied by a strong guard of specials, commanded by Deputy Sheriff Joe Moses, of Cincinnati. He has had a most eventful experience of escapes for the past thirty hours.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—On receipt of Secretary Frelinghuysen's telegram, informing him of his transfer to St. Petersburg, Minister Sargent accepted the transfer and resigned his post at Berlin, because of ill health, and for other reasons to be explained by letter.

CINCINNATI, March 30.—The mob in possession of the cannon at Fourth and Walnut streets at 3 o'clock this morning seemed to have had no powder. They were trying to secure some. At the opening fire, about 8 P. M., four or five persons were wounded. Since the firing at 8 P. M., no one has been shot. The volleys since that time have been merely hindals to clear the streets. It has been ascertained that at the 8 P. M. firing no one was killed.

COLUMBUS, March 30.—Gov. Hardy has ordered every military organization in the State to report to Cincinnati immediately—seventeen regiments in all and five batteries.

MORGAN CITY, March 30.—For the forty-eight hours ending this morning the rise of water was not more than an inch, but to-day the increase was four inches. Row-boats are being used on some of the streets.

CAIRO, March 30.—The Red Cross Society, through Miss Clara Barton, president of the American branch, will charter either the Henry S. Tyler or the Ella Kimbrough to relieve the sick and needy in the lower Mississippi flooded districts, and will start with a full load of supplies early this week.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 30.—The board of church extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which has been in annual session the past three days, will adjourn to-morrow. Bishops Granberry, Lindgrove, Parker and Wilson are attending. Collections were taken in the different congregations of the church in the city to-day in aid of the Centennial loan fund, resulting in raising $1,200 toward the fund of $50,000 to be raised in the State of Kentucky, to be named the Kavanaugh Loan Fund.

CINCINNATI, March 31.—At midday there is no appreciable relaxation of preparations for defense. Barbed wire of barrels and every other sort of material still remain across all avenues of approach to the county buildings, and behind them stand the militia with guns with fixed bayonets everywhere bristling. The police have been sent away to their regular posts and are obtaining some rest.

The exact number of dead and wounded will probably never be ascertained, on account of many of the wounded being carried away by friends, but the number killed outright or dying at the hospital up to midnight was counted from the same sources, is 120. There are probably half as many more wounded and not reported.

NEW ORLEANS, March 31.—The Ohio River, Cumberland, Tennessee and Mississippi at St. Louis, Cairo, Vicksburg and New Orleans will continue slowly falling; at Memphis and Helena nearly static. The river at Cairo is 18 feet 3 inches, and fallen 4 inches; at Memphis, 33 feet 10 inches, and risen 1 inch; at Vicksburg, 47 feet 11 inches, and fallen 3 inches; at Nashville, 20 feet 1 inch, and fallen 2 inches; at St. Louis, 24 feet 2 inches, and fallen 2 inches.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, March 25.—Moody and Sany's meetings, gatherings and addresses are being held in London. The movement is spreading in London. A monster meeting of converts was held in St. Panera's Hall, at which Moody, Rev. Charles Spurgeon, Rev. Mr. Pentecost and Major White delivered addresses. Steps have been taken to band together the converted young men and women as workers.

SUAKIM, March 25.—British infantry encamped nine miles from Suakim, where they remain for rest to-day. Of the 300 who fell out of the ranks yesterday, overcome by heat and hunger, the majority are now in the hospital. The rest have returned to duty. Another week of such fierce heat will render the British camp battalions an easy prey to Osman Digma.

LONDON, March 27.—Orders have been sent to Gen. Graham to return immediately with his troops. The Paris correspondent of the Times telegraphs: The Pope has notified Emperor Francis Joseph, in an autograph letter, that there are reasons which induce him to leave Rome at once or less early than he had intended. The Pope says that his decision will have serious consequences to Christendom, but he is bound to carry out his intentions.

BERLIN, March 27.—It is officially stated that last year, at Emsleben, a small town of Prussian Saxony, 403 persons became seriously ill and sixty-six died from trichinosis. The disease was caused by eating raw pork, which all came from one and the same hog.

SUAKIM, March 27.—The British forces began to advance on Tamasieb at 6 o'clock this morning. Eritrea opened at 7:30, and was brisk upon both sides. The rebels were in larger numbers than yesterday. The English cavalry and mounted infantry led and drove the rebels from the rocks, dispersing them among the hills. There were no British casualties. The loss of the rebels is unknown.

Gen. Graham and cavalry have returned to Suakim. The infantry will arrive to-day. It is expected the troops will embark immediately. Five hundred natives will soon be sent to open the Berber route.

LONDON, March 28.—Prince Leopold, fourth and youngest son of Victoria, died suddenly at 2 o'clock this morning at Cannes. The Queen is naturally very distressed at the terrible news, more so as it was what she could have expected. Major Gen. Sir John Cowell, master of the Queen's household, proceeds at once to Cannes to fetch the Duke of Albany's remains to England. The curfew bell at Windsor Castle was tolled at half-past 7 this evening. The blinds of Buckingham Palace are drawn at this morning. Eritrea drew to Cannes only a few days ago for the sake of his health. Nothing serious was anticipated. He was looking fairly well, and had been taking part in the festivities of the place, but had severe chills, which may have been the precursor of the fatal ail. Neither the Queen nor the Princess Beatrice will attend the wedding of Princess Victoria at Hesse.

Keep your religion sweet. A sort of kind of piety, that is always finding fault with others, and grumbling and growling because things are not different from what they are, is neither well-pleasing to God, nor profitable to men. Open your heart to the sweet influence of divine grace, and let a little of God's sunshine into your soul.—Methodist Recorder.

The view men hold of the object and end of their being exerts a controlling influence over their character and conduct. If a man thinks he is a creature of chance, with a chance future, he is likely to live an aimless or selfish life. If one thinks he is only an animal, without an immortal soul, he will be sensual and groveling. If a man believes he is the off-spring of an all-wise and holy God, created for holy purposes and a glorious future, his conduct will be in keeping with this faith. Brother, do you "walk worthy of God?"—Colorado Methodists.

APPORTIONMENT BY THE DISTRICT STEWARDS, SEASONS DISTRICT, 1884.

	BISHOPS
Mass. Point.....	$ 8 00
Ocean Springs.....	11 00
Pearlington.....	6 00
Mt. Carmel.....	6 00
Killaville.....	6 00
Poplarville.....	5 00
Chalm Grove.....	6 00
Covington.....	5 00
Americus.....	4 00
Vandlenave.....	4 00
Wilmington.....	3 00
Hattiesburg.....	4 00
Meranton.....	4 00
Franklinton.....	4 00

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 15.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1445.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Presbyters 50% price.

All Presbyters of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

FIRST EASTER DAY.

BY MARY B. HUNNETT.

In old Jerusalem the Easter Day was born,
Stars for her foot at morn!
Stars for her brow at night!
And lilies for her breast as white as light!

The Roman guards the streets in silence kept,
The city dreamed and slept;
Dit no dreamer saw
The splendor of the Easter Day to be!

Only one woman in a garden's gloom,
Beside an empty tomb,
Saw angels watch and wait
To flood with glory the sky's eastern gate.

She saw through tears, while heaven's trump and psalm Broke the first early calm:
Then to the soft, clear skies
Rose the dark smoke of morning sacrifice.

And priest and soldier, Jew and Roman heard
The quick commanding word,
The clash of shield and spear,
The tramp of marching men afar and near.

And saw the white-robed figures at some shrine
Stand waiting to divine;
But 'mid the stir and mirth
No voice foresaw what day had come to earth.

Nor how with beautiful steps its hours should climb
The topmost peaks of time,
And flood the land and sea
With the clear light of luminous life.

Hail, Pearl of Days, for these we watch and wait,
Wait at thy eastern gate,
And watch for thee with love,
Come, fairest morn, with white wings like a dove!

Stars for thy foot at morn! Stars for thy brow at night!
A day so sweet and bright!
Thine is the joyful psalm,
The Rose of Resurrection and the waving palm!

—New York Independent.

China and Her People.

BY REV. J. W. LAMBUTH.

(Forty-first Letter.)

My Dear Young Friends: About the time of the Christian era there lived a man by the name of Tinglan, who lost his father and mother when very young. When he grew up to be a man he never knew what it was to have a father's and mother's affection, and had never had an opportunity to show any affection for his parents' affection and for their kindness to him when a little child. He secured a piece of timber, and had an image carved to represent his father and one to represent his mother. Day by day he had food and water placed before them as he would have done had they been alive. He would also bow before them each day as he would have done had they been living. His wife was very unwilling to bow down to those wooden images and reverence them as her husband. The story in the Chinese books goes on to say that on one occasion, when her husband was away, she took a needle, stuck it into the hand of one of the images, when suddenly blood came out. When her husband returned, and, seeing the blood, asked, "Who has been so cruel as to do this?" his wife replied, "I did it." The husband, looking more closely, saw tears had been coming from the eye of the image, which made him feel very badly. He called his wife to him, and said: "I can not have you live with me any longer; you must leave me," and he at once sent her away. It seems almost impossible that any one could believe such silly stories as that which is related above; but, not having the light of the gospel of Christ, these heathen people are ready to believe any story, no matter how unreasonable it may appear. They refuse to believe the truth; but prefer to believe a lie because their minds are darkened and full of superstition and all ungodliness.

I will give an account of a little boy, named Loktsih, who lived nearly two thousand years since. On one occasion, when but six years of age, he went to call on the magistrate in the city of Klukiang. The father of Loktsih was an official of high rank, and was well known to the magistrate. The boy was well received by the magistrate, and during his visit was given some oranges to eat. When the magistrate stepped out of the room for a short time Loktsih slipped two oranges up his sleeve. (A very common thing in China.) When the boy was leaving, and while bowing to the magistrate, the oranges fell from his sleeve. The magistrate said to him: "How is this; that, after I had given you oranges to eat, I now find you have concealed two in your sleeve?" The boy replied: "My mother is very fond of oranges, and I wanted to take some to her." The magistrate laughed, and he wondered at the boy being so young and yet having such an affection for his mother. It is said this boy afterward became an official. Here we see the old Adam developed in this little child. He steals and tells a falsehood, and the Chinese are ready to overlook it because he is said to love his mother. He was not excusable in the sight of God. The Chinese think there is no sin in telling a lie unless you are discovered in it. But it is not so in the Christian's Bible.

Some two thousand years since there was a boy, named Klaukuk, who lost his father when he was quite young, and he was the only child. When his mother became advanced in life there was great trouble in the land—war and famine. They were often in great danger, when he would carry his mother on his shoulders out of the way into a place of safety. At that time the country was infested with highway robbers. Often this man would meet these robbers when he was in search of food for his mother. When meeting these robbers he would fall down before them and pray that they would spare his life for the sake of his mother, which they always did. The famine became very great, and he found it necessary to hire himself out in order to obtain food for his mother. His love for his mother was very commendable, and reminds us of many such instances in our own Christian land. Yes, we can point to many thousands in our own land who have an undying love for their parents and would do anything in their power to help them.

About the time of the Christian era there was a boy by the name of Wong Shung, who lost his mother when he was nine years old. For many days he wept and was greatly distressed on account of his mother's death. He was called by all who knew him, "The loving and obedient son." He was a faithful worker, and was always obedient to his father. During the summer months, when the heat was intense, he would at night watch by his father's bedside and fan him until the cool hours of the night, and then he would retire to rest. In the winter, when the weather was very cold, he would in the evening go to bed before his father retired and get the bed warm, and then he would have his father take the warm place in the bed. The officials, hearing of his good behavior, sent notices of it through the whole country and held him up as an example of filial piety.

Another obedient and loving son, named Wong Burr, lived some two thousand years since. He loved his mother and did all he could to make her happy. His mother was very much afraid of thunder while living. When she died her son had her buried on the hillside near his home. Whenever there was a thunder storm approaching this young man would always run to the grave and call out: "Mother, fear not; I am here." He never filled any office in the government, but preferred to remain at home, and, as he was a good scholar, he taught the young people of the village. He would read to them from the "Book of Odes," where it speaks of returning hearty obedience to one's parents in order to repay them to some extent for their kindness. Very often when reading from this book he would weep, and the scholars, seeing this, would avoid reading it lest the teacher might weep over it.

Another young man, named Yung Mung, was a very obedient son at the age of eight years. His parents were very poor. They had no curtain around the bed; so that in the winter, when it was very cold, he would go to his father's and mother's bed early and get the bed warm for them. In the summer the mosquitoes were very bad; so that in the early part of the night he would go to his father's and mother's bed and allow the mosquitoes to come and take from him all they wished, and then he would retire to his own bed, allowing his father and mother to retire and sleep. The picture in the Chinese books represent this little boy lying on the bed with great swarms of mosquitoes around him. We can not tell if this is a true picture; but it is believed by all Chinese throughout the length and breadth of this land. He certainly had great affection for his parents, and, though he was a heathen boy of heathen parents, his actions teach us an important lesson of love for parents.

I will in my next continue the history of some others who manifested great filial love and affection for their parents.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Jan. 25, 1884.

Lessons from the Rainbow.

BY REV. W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

The rainbow was the postscript of the fearful deluge history. It appears upon the retiring storm cloud as God's signet of promise, his smile of hope over the wrecks caused by the watery waste. To the poet's eye the rainbow glows with suggestions as many and varied and beautiful as the hues seen in the Bible in the clouds. To the philosopher there is but the illustration of the laws of refraction of light through the falling raindrops. To the Christian the rainbow is full of lessons of richest instruction and highest value.

The beautiful group of colors in the bow on the cloud is a perpetual reminder of a mighty historic fact dual and yet opposite—the deluge with its fearful destructive waters, the ark in which was preserved the germ of the future human race. Here wrath against sin and sinners associate with Divine tenderness and love—each presenting harmonious action, harmonious character directed by pure fixed principles.

The rainbow recalls the marked long suffering of God to a world of sinners. For one hundred and twenty years Noah not only preached righteousness by his voice and life, but by each blow of his hammer or sound of his axe. The slowly-rising ark was an increasing appeal, a danger signal, day by day, for long drawn out years. It teaches us that long suffering has its limit, and that unrepenting sinners will certainly receive the punishment against which they have been warned in vain. We stand wonder-stricken as we in imagination see the heavens giving its floods and the earth sending from ocean depths its fearful tides. Cities and cultivated fields, and burial grounds and massive monuments, forests and palaces and unnumbered human beings engulfed in one common watery grave! Nature and histories and geographical boundaries and languages and letters at once blotted out by deluge flood because of human guilt too huge and aggravated, and insolent and defiant, to be longer borne by a righteous Heaven! Language would fail in the effort to describe the terrible surprise, the sudden heart-rending agony, the despairing tones of hopeless sorrow, as relentless waters were doing their work and submerging the hill tops crowded with men and women and children and animals. The concentrated sizzle that went up to heaven from a drowning world in its last struggling agony but faintly pictures the more fearful scenes of fire at the last day.

The rainbow has God's pledge written over land and sea as beautiful as the colors in which it is painted. The earth shall no more be destroyed by water. The deluge is dead with no promise of a resurrection. We love to think that unhurt above the wrecks, as if responsive to the bow God itself, the deluge has left us the holy Sabbath, the original glorious rest of Almighty creative energy, and holy matrimony born in Eden's purity and uniting a sinless pair, the parents of our race. Let the cloud put on its blackest habiliments and roll fearfully on in its chariot of thunder. When the eye greets God's symbol in the sky the heart is reassured, for there is God himself with his Divine promise—following the track of the retreating clouds.

This lovely arch in the heavens is a most precious pledge that seed time and harvest shall never fail. The deluge obliterated landmarks of empires as well as of farms, and buried farmers with their implements and granaries and harvest wealth in one fearful watery ruin. History began anew to write its introduction; the race began a new life. When the hot sun parches, the grasshopper and locust destroy, the heavens are brass and human hope at last begins to dig its own grave, as in the near approach of skeleton famine seems to tell of lingering agony of the most fearful sort, then, when the shower falls to refresh the parched grass and the thirst of men and beasts and birds, amid these falling drops the glad sunshine brings out new and beautiful, as when it first met Noah's eye at his new family altar, the rainbow in its celestial attire, meet messenger of precious promise.

A magnificent lesson is taught us of God's care for the righteous, his special gracious providence. The ark was God's insurance society for Noah's family, and other tenants of that wonder of naval architecture. No lightning could shatter that vessel; no wave, even rolled in mountain height by "the prince of the power of the air," could affect a shipwreck. That vessel not only carried evidence of love to Noah, but the promise and certainty of a world's Christ, a world's salvation. The "colonization of heaven" depended on that safe repose of the ark on Ararat. Shut up in the ark its freight was a most precious association of prophecy and promise, the joy of earth, the sublime scenes of eternity. The church of God was there, and God himself was the safe pilot.

Thus the rainbow was at once not only a beautiful and intense reminder of the past to warn us of sin and its results, but it taught us God's love to his chosen people as objects of his tenderest, most unremitting care. Thus to us the rainbow is a grand memorial of the past, interweaving in its lovely hues most glad pledges along the pathway of the future. It is a simple, sublime sermon of our Father in heaven—fearful when his long withheld wrath against us is let loose; yet full of tenderness and love to those who trust and obey him.

What a suggestive heavenly symbol—"a rainbow round the throne!" What a glorious volume unwritten and full of Divine record! The redeemed remember from what doom of sin and sinners they are saved. Eternal protection and safety flash from that rainbow loveliness. Securely adds to the joys of the saved. They have left sin and temptation and the carnal mind amid the charred remains of a fire-scorched world. Death is remembered as one of the obsolete words of sinful collocation; it has no place in the vocabulary or experience of heaven, whose vital air is eternal life.

Let the rainbow, as it flashes in mellow loveliness on the heavens, call out to our grateful, loving, trusting souls offerings that shall be as dear to our Father's eye as the colors of the rainbow are beautiful to mortal vision. May our intense trust in God make lovely rainbows amid our falling tears to cheer the heart with memory and light it up with hope!

CARLETON, Kentucky.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

Letter from Kansas City.

BY REV. J. W. LOWRANCE.

We have just passed through what is said by the oldest citizens to have been the severest winter experienced since before the "late unpleasantness." Mercury at zero has not been the exception; many times below, and once as much as thirty degrees. I used to say I liked cold weather; but I am now "in a strait betwixt two." The spring is opening upon us, and after enduring six or eight weeks of strong winds, we will enjoy a delightful summer. Our falls are the nearest ideal in pleasantness and serene beauty I ever saw; so, after all, we can afford to endure the cold winters and windy springs for the sake of the short cool summers and delightful falls. Real tornadoes are no more frequent here in the Northwest than in the South or East. We also have comparatively little rain. When Mississippi and Louisiana are suffering heavy rainfalls in the winter season we are having large supplies of the beautiful snow. Our neighbor just over the river—Kansas—is suffering some sort of blight among her cattle just now. Cattle growing is an important factor in Kansas industry; much more so than in Missouri, though it is a great source of revenue here. The governor of the State has called a special session of the Legislature to see if any method can be devised by which the ravages of the plague may be staid. Our farmers are hopeful of a good crop this year. The Missouri river at this point is low; our rise comes after the snow thaw on the mountains of the Northwest. The tide of emigration westward is astonishing. A great many people are stopping to make their fortunes in Kansas City. Real estate is still rising here, and is destined to do so for years to come. In eighteen months the value of unimproved property in the eastern part of the city has increased about twenty-five per cent. Ten years from to-day Kansas City will number 300,000 people. A recent decision of the court, making foreign loans illegal in the State, has depressed business in reality a little. It can not be permanent. With all our getting we are trying to "get-understanding."

I have never seen the cause of Christ had more at heart, and the work pressed more vigorously both by preachers and laymen, than in this city. This is so of all Protestant denominations. Episcopal Methodism is stronger than any other branch of Protestantism; Presbyterians next. We are laying broad and deep the foundations of our branch of Methodism, and hope to make a long stride in the line of success this centennial year. By the close of this year we will (D. V.) have three more church buildings. For the present they will be missions; but it is only a question of a little time when they will be self-supporting. I venture the assertion that the members of our church in Kansas City have given more money to the cause of church building and to Christ within the last three years than the same number anywhere in the connection. We do not boast, but thank God that we have been able to do it.

The Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North), which includes all that part of the State of Missouri south of the river, has just adjourned its session at this place. We have two Annual Conferences on the same ground—the St. Louis and Southwest Missouri. They are just about equal in number to the Southwest Missouri; so you see we are almost by half stronger in the same territory. The personnel was about that of an ordinary Annual Conference, except it had a very able background. Probably thirty out of the one hundred and twenty, or twenty-five, were descendants of Ham. There is one presiding elder of that color, and his district is as large as the entire Conference; so you see we do not mix the colors much except at the annual gatherings, and really we would prefer not to do that. Let us see if our General Conference does not make a change by-and-by. Bishop Foss presided, and Bishops Bowman and Hurst were present part of the time. Dr. Mathews came to them from us as "fraternal delegate." His speech was characteristically unique. They laughed uproariously. The doctor assured them of warmest fraternal feeling; but that there was room enough for both churches in this broad land of ours. He also assured them that the Southern Methodist Church was loyal to both the polity and doctrine of Wesleyanism; we still preached with emphasis depravity, conversion, hell and heaven. Dr. Thimble, from Brooklyn, was in the city, last week, and addressed one of their Conference meetings. He said he had stolen the Methodist class meetings; that his church was divided into five; "He did not call them class meetings, but 'parishes.'" He also lectured in the Board of Trade Hall to about 1,500 people—subject, "Ingersollism." His voice and style are peculiar; his rhetoric inimitable. Inasmuch as Ingersoll has lectured here twice within the last twelve months, I think this lecture was timely. As a rule, our preachers pay no attention to Ingersoll because they scarcely preach to men who hear him. Christ crucified is the best antidote for doubt.

We expect to have one new church dedicated in May by Bishop Wilson. The freehold in the auditorium is said by a lady, who is a judge, and has seen both, to be prettier than that on the theater in Denver, Col., and that is said to be the prettiest west of the Mississippi. We also speak of changing the name from Lydia Avenue to Centenary.

I enjoy so much the weekly visits of the Advocate. It has the charm of a letter from home.

Alabama Conference Items.

The minutes of the Alabama Conference of 1883 show many points of improvement and some lack of such indications of health and vigor. Figures, after all, are good indices of value and approbation when applied to the financial departments of the church, and when applied to the increase and success of church work in saving souls.

In this light the support of the ministry may and ought to be regarded. With this rule regulating our steps we will look into the minutes and see how the Alabama Conference stands by districts, as follows: Mobile district increased the pay of the presiding elder $66 20, and that of the preachers in charge $345 20; Greensboro increased the pay of the presiding elder $83 25, and the preachers in charge $362 70; Selma increased the presiding elder $49 65, and the preachers in charge were decreased $32 85; Prattville increased the presiding elder $66 00, and the preachers in charge $441 60; Montgomery increased the presiding elder $20 50, and decreased the preachers in charge $21 75; Eufaula decreased the presiding elder $72 60, and increased the preachers in charge $282 70; Marianna increased the presiding elder $53, and decreased the preachers in charge $185; Union Springs increased the presiding elder $69 05, and the preachers in charge $390 20; Pensacola increased the presiding elder $38 10, and the preachers in charge $273 65; total increase for presiding elders $415 05, and preachers in charge $249 45. The Conference paid on Bishop's Fund $1,280 50—increased $133 20.

In regard to infant baptism, adult baptism and accessions to the church on profession, I select from the minutes the leading stations and some of the leading circuits—seventeen stations and seventeen circuits—total: 465 adults, 243 infants; 834 received.

These figures show that stations baptize more infants than adults, and yet receive into the church more on profession of faith than infants baptized. These figures also show that circuits baptize nearly twice as many adults as infants, and yet the numbers received on profession exceed the total of adults and infants baptized. The proportion of excess in circuits of receptions over baptisms is about equal to the excess in stations of adult and infant baptisms over receptions into the church. These figures further show that where the Methodist people are best informed infant baptism is more firmly believed and consistently practiced; also that circuits are more vigorous and aggressive in soul saving. These figures indicate points in which both stations and circuits should improve.

ANGUS DOWLING.
BANKER, Ala., March 26, 1884.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
WINE & METER.

(Mark iv, 23.)

My heart is faint, my flesh is weak,
I may not bear alone;
My trembling lips can scarcely speak
The words, "Thy will be done."I know the cross will lift me above,
And see it looming near,
Not black with wrath, but bright with love,
And yet I shrink with fear.I shrink, and cry for myrror and wine,
A soothing, strengthening draught;
The cup thy lip did once decline,
By wine would I be made.I know the boon I crave of thee
I shall not beg in vain;
Thy presence, Lord, 'tis mine to see,
And myrror to ease my pain.

Sunday-School Lesson.

PREPARED BY REV. CHRISTIAN KEMM.

Second Quarter—Lesson II.

SUNDAY, APRIL 1, 1884.—MATTHEW, 23, 27.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And many that believed came, and confessed and showed their deeds."—ACTS XIX, 18.

PAUL AT EPHESUS.

The events of this lesson follow immediately after those of the last. Paul, having completed the faith of that company of twelve disciples of John, and imparted to them the gift of the Spirit by his timely instruction, he at once entered the synagogue and spoke boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God. His preaching had a wide range, after the style of his discourse on Mars Hill, and was delivered with the courage of one who felt himself under a more than earthly sovereign's protection. It took this sort of courage to preach Jesus as the Messiah before a congregation of his murderers. But when divers were hardened and believed not, but spoke evil of that way before the multitude, Paul treated them as he did the opposing Corinthians—shaking his raiment, consigning the responsibility of their unbelief to themselves, and withdrew to the lecture hall of Tyrannus, taking with him all those who believed and were willing to abide in that way. We preachers might take a suggestion from this move, and deliver many a dying shrill by hiring a hall and seceding from the synagogue, where the hearers are in the minority and the gospel-hardened members hold sway. Paul's move from the synagogue to the schoolhouse was not only a protest against the bigotry of Judaism, but it was for the safety of those who believed; for these opposers not only related the truth, but they spoke evil of that way which was any way exactly different and opposed to their own way. We have a striking illustration of this same movement in the history of Methodism. When Mr. Wesley turned himself and followers out of the church of the Establishment of Great Britain, and held their services in meeting houses, so called by the church. This change of base and renunciation of the synagogue for a worshiping place of their own, though much humbler in pretensions, was blessed of God, for from this center the gospel spread so that all Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks. There was during this remarkable period of successful preaching our remarkable and extraordinary manifestation of the Holy Ghost's presence and attendance upon Paul.

"God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul, so that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them." Miracles had been wrought in Corinth, but it is here plainly implied that those wrought at Ephesus were unusually striking. The reason seems to be that Ephesus was pre-eminently a city of magic and false miracles, and the Holy Ghost chose to show his power by working true ones. The methods of the Holy Ghost are brought in vivid contrast to the magical arts of the evil one. The one heals with the falling of a shadow, the touch of a kerchief or of a hand or a word. The other, with its laborious arts and senseless incantations, utterly fails. Paul, among these Ephesian magicians, was attended by the same Jehovah who accompanied Moses and Aaron, when they stood before the sorcerers of Egypt.

A band of seven vagabond Jews, whom the devil had out on the road, pushing his interests, thought that they had discovered the secret of Paul's success in healing diseases and in casting out evil spirits, to be in the use of the name of Jesus, and hoped that by applying him in this to be equally successful. So these conjurers adopted as their formula of exorcism the same name, saying I adjure by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth. These seven sons of Beelzebub in this experiment reached the very height of profanity, which generally brings its own punishment. They were playing with an edged tool, sharper than a two-edged sword, to their own wounding. The evil spirit in the man possessed answered, Jesus we recognize, and Paul we are well acquainted with, but who are you? and the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them and overcame them, so that they fled out of the house, wounded and naked; they escaped with their skin. What an inextinguishable mixture of man and devil, and yet how distinct, and suddenly were the two personalities of this being brought out in this vain attempt of wicked men to wield the forces of the Holy Ghost. Notice the sharp distinction between "the evil spirit who answered" and "the man in whom the evil spirit was." The devil did the answering and the man the fighting. Such appalling testimony against these seven sons of darkness and in favor of Paul and the Jesus he preached was calculated to make a profound impression upon the whole city, and it did in a most remarkable way. Many were conscious smiters at the thought of what fools they had been, and what dupes of these magicians, and openly confessed how they had been deluded and how deeply they had allowed themselves to be implicated in such practices. They unburdened themselves, telling over all their curious incantations and senseless labors, and brought the books containing the mystic formulas of this superstition, and made a bon-fire of them in presence of all the people, and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver. This was a good deal of money to put in ashes, some eight or nine thousand dollars in our money. It was the very best use that such value could be put to. To have sold the books would have been to have handed on the temptation to others and to perpetuate their sin. The burning of these Ephesian Scriptures, which no doubt were inspired of the spirit from beneath, must have made a lasting impression upon all who witnessed the scene. It was a strong proof of the honest conviction of these sorcerers, as well as a public avowal and renunciation of their sin. Public sins demand a public confession; confess the others unto God's ear only. Young man, have you burned your bad books? Have you nothing locked up in your business which is only evil and tends to produce only evil? Waste it, pour it out, burn it, count not the cost, part with it forever, every bad habit, all unlawful gain. To starve and die with a good conscience is better than to feast with Dives and live with a guilty conscience. What shall it profit if you gain the whole world and lose your own soul? What will you offer God instead of it when he asks for it and claims it as his own purchased possession.

A Word of Correction.

Mr. Editor: With your permission I will occupy a little space in the Advocate to correct the mistake of my Bro. Ramsey, made in his answer to my "rather salty article," calling attention to the injustice done to myself and former charge by the statistical table of the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference. He has things considerably mixed. While at Conference I did not expect a letter from Friars' Point about the finances of the charge; did not tell any one, so. But having charge of the Conference mail, I know of others who did. And it is evident to my mind that Bro. Ramsey had a similar conversation with another brother to which he refers as having passed between us. I had prepared, before going to Oxford, two reports of my charge, one for the statistical secretary, which was rendered the first day, the other I purposed reading before the Conference. This latter, however, was mislaid, and I was obliged to call on Bro. Ramsey for the one presented to him, at the same time making a correction in the amounts paid for both foreign and domestic missions, to which he pleasantly objected, saying he would have to scratch his book. I understood him not only to be through with my report, but also to make the correction desired, then and there. It was a mere oversight in not returning the report.

H. C. MOREHEAD.

Concordia, Miss., March 29, 1884.

From the Work.

WINFIELD CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: Last Saturday night a mass meeting was held in the church at Atlanta, Rev. A. M. Wallis was called to the chair, and C. D. Hunt elected secretary. The chairman explained the object of the meeting to be the organization of a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. After a few brief remarks from the chairman in reference to woman's work, and the great need of this organization in order to reach all classes, the call was made, and soon quite a number came forward and had their names enrolled, after which they went into the election of officers, with the following results: Mrs. M. C. Thresher, president; Mrs. Addie Lewis, first vice-president; Miss Mollie Barr, second vice-president; Miss May Wallis, recording secretary; Miss Bessie Curry, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. H. Bennett, treasurer; Mrs. Mollie Wallis, Miss C. V. Ferguson, Mrs. Sallie Dixon and Mrs. E. Turner, collectors. The feeling manifested was indeed encouraging. On Sabbath morning, in the Sabbath-school—a very large one—we organized two societies, the boys to collect for our enterprise in Mexico, and the girls to work for the girls' school in Brazil, as directed by Dr. Hendrix. After a very practical and profitable sermon from Bro. Wallis we "cleared the decks" of our foreign missionary assessment at this place in cash and subscription. We are soon to meet in Winfield for the same purpose, and at other points the effort will be made. The members of our Centennial Committee are: W. A. Little, Esq., J. M. Abie, S. M. Barr, Mrs. M. C. Thresher, Mrs. Anne Little and Miss Helen Kelly. Our people have gone to work heartily, and now I shall expect a "revival in every congregation." God grant us the baptism of fire.

J. W. HEARN.

ATLANTA, GA., March 18, 1884.

ATTAKAPAS FRENCH MISSION.

Mr. Editor: No doubt some of our good people, who are interested in the propagation of the gospel among the French-speaking portion of our population, wonder what is being done to accomplish this much-desired end. These French people living among us are not of us; that is, they are not, as a class, in sympathy with any great movement, either educational, civil or religious. I am fully aware that there are notable exceptions to this fact, but, on the whole, it must be acknowledged by those acquainted with the social life, and customs of these to be too true. This is due to ignorance, in a great measure, on their part, and prejudice somewhat on the part of the American people about them, as they are termed. Because a person speaks English it is no infallible sign that he exercises charity. On the other hand, there has been a sad lack of this heaven-born principle and a deplorable abundance of censoriousness. The grace of God alone can remove this prejudice on one part, and educational advantages, which are characteristic in this age of our church, the ignorance on the other. Light is needed; light that banishes darkness, that reveals to our people their relation to their brethren, and shows to them, who for years have sat under the shadow—Romanism—that we sympathize with them in their heightened condition.

At the last session of the Louisiana Annual Conference some of the elder brethren asked me if I would undertake to preach to this people. I replied that my knowledge of French was limited, and I could only leave the matter with the Bishop and cabinet, in whose hands our annual destinies were placed. They saw fit to send me. I have visited the mission at two points—Leaux Cannes and Cypremort—having filled two appointments at the latter place and preached five sermons. The preaching was in English, the praying and singing in both languages. Much earnestness is displayed by those who know the truths of Protestantism. Some of them understand English enough to catch the meaning of the preacher. But a large majority speak only the French tongue. This is especially true as regards the women and children. On the whole, they are not averse to preaching of any kind, but welcome any minister among them. The converted are very zealous, and can say amen with true Methodist fervor, sometimes rather promiscuously, and irrelevantly. With my present knowledge of French I can only exert a conservative influence, so far as I can judge, upon these people. What is needed is a man who is a thorough master of French. In fact, this is indispensable in order to work aggressively and effectively. The fundamental truths of the gospel must be set before them clearly and lucidly; they must be explained and simplified.

Don't let some good brother imagine I am ignorant of the fact that the Spirit must do the great work of regenerating these people. I am writing on the man-side of the subject. God is ever ready to do his perfect work. The language of the home circle, the language in whose words and terms our ideas were first clothed when lapping infants, and afterward were embodied in the ripper periods of life, is the language of the heart. Truth never seems so real, ideas are not so vivid when expressed in a strange tongue. The religion of our Lord Jesus Christ is a religion of the heart, and unless heart, mind and spirit are united in his worship there is very little satisfaction in it. The sentiments and emotions must be awakened, and through these channels one may be led to surer heights. Psychology is a very pretty science, but this dissecting the mind into so many parts does not always suit the case. But I am digressing what I wish to impress upon the public, and especially upon the Methodist public, is that there is a Macedonia here in our midst, and help is needed, and needed badly. Can't our missionary leaders find a man to "come over and help us" in this great work?

J. J. DAVIES.

JACKSONVILLE, LA., March 23, 1884.

MINDEN, LA.

Mr. Editor: The grand Centenary wave has not, in any conspicuous form, made its appearance "in these ends of the earth." We all seem to be quite satisfied (?) with our present condition, and why not? We don't have to be "bothered" with attendance upon any of those old-fashioned class, prayer or experience meetings, that so fill the soul with love and truth, and make the church "a city set on a hill." We don't have to go to church on Saturday; a few of us, however, do "turn out" on the Sabbath for our own sake. We are not all the time "pestered" with getting the children off to Sunday-schools, for there is but one on the whole circuit, and we that live near that one don't attend regularly; it's too much trouble, and, besides that, the superintendent and a few others more interested in our children's welfare can keep it up without us; at least they try. We are not encumbered with any of the mission or temperance literature, having no "societies" nor "unions" to go to, and with reference to letting our "light shine" in order to the salvation of souls, we have very little experience in that direction, and hence leave that sort of thing for other folks and preachers to do. In fact, we are enjoying a very perceptible spiritual dearth and wide-felt need of vital godliness. In justice to my people, however, I will say that I have been very kindly received, and agreeable arrangements have been made for my stay among them. On the work there are some real hard-working Christians, pure and noble soldiers of the cross, doing what they can for the cause of the Master. Believing the promises, we have asked, and are now importuning at the mercy seat, for a gracious shower of love, and would humbly request the prayers of the brethren that in these waste places be heard the shout of rejoicing, and these "dry bones hear the word of the Lord" and live.

W. H. MAXFIELD, P. C.

MARCH 22, 1884.

CADDO CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: I suppose I have reached your ears that I have found a place on the Caddo circuit, which work, you remember, was left to be supplied. Whether or not this is the case, I know the Caddo circuit has found a place in and has a hold upon my heart. I have made one round upon this work. Have had a cordial reception; preached to large and attentive congregations. We are now domiciled in a nice parsonage, just purchased. The ladies have furnished it with stove and utensils, dishes, chairs, bedsteads, mattresses, bedding, towels, tables, pans, etc. The brethren have furnished the smoke-house with hams, angars, coffee, molasses, rice, bacon, lard, meal, coal oil, flour, potatoes, etc. The corn crib has corn and fodder in it, and of the $300 allowed for the pastor's support over one-fourth has been paid. I find the people kind, intelligent and liberal, true to Methodism, and ready to support her institutions. The former pastor, Bro. Pipes, left a good record behind him; his praise is in the mouth of the lovers of the Master all over the work.

I have sent twenty-eight subscribers to our various Advocates. The work has raised since Conference about $500 for the parsonage and near $30 for missionary and Sunday-school purposes. So, considering the lateness of our start, and the inclemency of the weather, I think we are well up to the front.

My family are all in fine health, and well pleased with the change from the Little Rock to the Louisiana Conference. For while we are deeply in love with Arkansas and Arkansas Methodism—our natal State and mother church—still Louisiana's warm greeting and hospitable welcome has filled our hearts too full for utterance, and we can but pray that the blessings of our God may abide upon this people, and that this year may be one long to be remembered for the outpouring of his Spirit, and the ingathering of many precious souls into his kingdom.

F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH, P. C.

KATIEVILLE, LA., March 24, 1884.

HATTIESBURG.

Mr. Editor: This little town is located on the New Orleans and North-eastern railroad, one hundred and eleven miles from New Orleans and eighty-five from Meridian. It is said to be a year old, and has something over four hundred inhabitants, and the people continue to come. We have several dry good stores, five boarding houses, one drug store and, sorry to say, three whisky shops. We sent a petition to the Legislature to prohibit the sale of spirituous liquors within five miles of this place, which was passed, and took effect the first day of March. Now we hope to have a better time. It is likely this town will become a considerable place if it does not grow itself to death. We have no church here, and some of the brethren ahead seem to think it very strange that I do not get my circuit to build one instead of going abroad to get help to build. It is true, I have five appointments—Hattiesburg—Enon, Augusta, New Prospect, Gasaway and Tallahalee. At Enon we have no church at all, except a union one, and this is as good as none, so far as our claim is concerned. At Augusta we have one, but it is nearly ready to fall down. At New Prospect we have one made of pine poles, and the people hardly have houses in which to live. At Gasaway we have an unfinished hull of a church, and the people are very poor. At Tallahalee we have no church, and the presiding elder's and preacher in charge's salary is $10. At this place (Hattiesburg) the people are so straitened with their own buildings, which are unfinished, and perhaps will remain so for some time, that they are not able to build a church without help. Some one, perhaps, who does not know the true state of things here would say, wait until the people get able to build; but this would not do, for it is to the interest of Methodism at this place to build now. For further information let me refer you to Bro. Moore, at Franklington, La., who was on this work last year, and to our presiding elder, Bro. B. S. Rayner.

I. L. FREDLES.

MARCH 23, 1884.

Marriages.

HALLMAN-BANKS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Banks, near Trenton, Smith county, Miss., March 15, 1884, by Rev. A. D. Miller, Mr. M. C. Hallman and Miss F. A. M. Banks.

RICHARDSON-HUBERT.—At the residence of Mr. Daniel Richardson, near Trenton, Smith county, Miss., March 16, 1884, by Rev. A. D. Miller, Mr. William A. Richardson and Miss Mary G. Hubert.

MARTIN-DAVIS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Zion, Scranton circuit, Miss., March 10, 1884, by Rev. Thomas Price, Mr. William L. Martin and Miss S. E. Davis.

ASWELL-SELBY.—At the residence of Mr. J. L. Goodwin, March 17, 1884, by Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, Mr. J. H. Aswell to Miss Lucie Selby, all of Jackson parish, La.

HUDSON-GUNION.—December 30, 1883, by Rev. I. W. Cooper, Mr. Thomas Hudson to Miss Martha Gunion.

LUKE-CLARKE.—March 9, 1884, by Rev. I. W. Cooper, Mr. Ed. Luke to Mrs. Fannie Clarke.

THOMAS-BROWN.—March 20, 1884, by Rev. I. W. Cooper, Mr. L. E. Thomas to Miss Mattie Brown.

Obituaries.

McDANIEL.—LOUISA, the youngest daughter of J. A. and M. D. McDaniel, was born October 15, 1850, and died at the residence of her father, January 27, 1884.

The destroying angel of God, who thus so untimely robbed a happy family of one of its cherished and loved members, chose a swift disease—typhoid-pneumonia—with which to end the web of Louisa's young life. Only a few days before we laid her away from the view of family, friends and schoolmates she was bright and cheerful, enjoying the fullness of health and happiness. To herself and her family the summons were unexpected. The young girl came like a mighty thunder clatter from a clear sky. At times her suffering was severe; but at last calmly she sank to rest "as one that wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams." Young in years, lovely in life, beautiful in death, dear Louisa, thou art now in the sweet fields of Eden to be forever with Jesus, the good and the pure. Thy earthly home is saddened by thy transfer to heaven; but the loss of thy loved ones here is thy eternal gain.

To know her was to love her, for amiable qualities which adorned her pathway. She leaves sisters, brothers, and a heart-broken father and mother to grieve her loss. To them we offer the holy comforts of our religion, believing they shall meet their cherished loved ones in that bright eternal home.

CLARK—THOMAS J. CLARK, son of Archibald and Milly Clark, was born at Shubuta, Miss., March 7, 1853, and died, of congestion, at Easthatch, Miss., on the Northeastern railroad, June 11, 1883.

Tommy was a kind, generous young man, who by his upright walk had won the respect of all who knew him. He was industrious and always sought to be profitably employed. He had lived a quiet, moral life from early childhood, but had not made an open profession of religion until about twelve months before his death. He was married to Miss Florence C. Verneulle, November 15, 1882, and was a kind, loving husband who ever sought to make his young wife happy and to fulfill the sacred vows made to him at the hymeneal altar. He was a true friend, an obliging, good neighbor who seemed to seek to fill the relations of life that he bore to his fellow-creatures. He had lived for some years with his aunt, Mrs. Isaac Champenous, and so kind, gentle and attentive was to her that she esteemed him more like a son than a nephew. Tommy was converted and joined the church during a revival service held at Shubuta, during October, 1882. From the day he joined the church he sought to live a consistent Christian. Though suddenly cut off as a dying testimony, we trust that he was ready and is now at rest in the sweet by-and-by.

W. D. DOMINICK.

HOWELL.—Died, January 14, 1884, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. N. G. Irby, in Jackson parish, La., Mrs. MARY HOWELL, aged sixty-nine years. Her maiden name was May, and she was born in Yazoo or Pike county, Miss., October 29, 1815. She married, at nineteen, to Mr. Howell, and about the same time became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. For a short time after coming to Louisiana she was in communion with the Methodist Protestant Church, because it was the only one in reach. With this exception she was, as I am told, a zealous member of the church she first joined.

She was the mother of seven children, whom she reared to be grown with one exception, and all were trained in the church and became religious. Her husband died in 1847, and she was left with the care of her family. For six years of my acquaintance with her I knew her as a pious mother in Israel—a warm lover of the church. She was feeble and afflicted for some time, but was patient and submissive. She talked of her death as a release, and rejoiced in hope of rest in the home of the Father. Her loved ones mourn her absence, but rejoice in the assurance given in the gospel of the better state of such as she who pass from here to the other shore.

F. T. RAWSON.

WIGGERS.—Died, in Winnsboro, Franklin parish, La., January 18, 1884, of pneumonia, LIZZIE A., second daughter of Edward and Angeline Parker, and wife of N. A. Wiggers, aged twenty-nine years, four months and twenty-five days. Decapitated was born in this parish, August 23, 1854, and was married to N. A. Wiggers, September 21, 1877. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in October, 1881, and was a consistent member until her death.

She seemed to have a presentiment that her end was near before the disease had assumed a fatal type, and expressed herself as ready and willing to go. Death seemed to have no terrors for her, and she went willingly to rejoin the four lovely babes who had gone before to the spirit land. She leaves a grief-stricken husband and three little children to mourn for her, and many friends who will sadly miss her pleasant smile and friendly greeting. With her the preacher ever found a pleasant home and cheering words, and in the church, too, she will be missed. But God, "who doeth all things well," has said unto her, "Come up higher," and we can only acquiesce with perfect trust in his wisdom and love.

C. M. B.

at preaching or prayer meetings, unless providentially hindered. She was conversant for three months before she died of her approaching dissolution, and she was ready. In all the relations of life she proved a true and noble woman, and her death was a triumphant exhibition of the power of Christian faith.

HER HUSBAND.

RUSSUM—CLERMONT WATSON, son of T. G. and E. A. Russum, was born in Jefferson county, Miss., June 25, 1875, and departed this life February 22, 1884, aged eight years, seven months and twenty-seven days.

To the memory of hut few children could we pay greater tributes of due honor than to that of our departed little Clem. His many virtues at such an early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his gentle way of reproving wrong-doing among his associates, never neglecting his prayers, his patience in all his affliction, and his early age won for him the love and confidence of all who knew him. The little sufferer had been trained to fear God and keep his commandments. His truthfulness, his

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY APRIL 10, 1884.

EASTER DAY.

Now the Lenten fast is ended, Holy Week has passed away.
And we through the holy temple, welcoming glad Easter Day.
On the font and on the altar Easter lilies are entwined,
And the organ's solemn music quietly each troubled mind.
Soon we hear God's chosen servant telling us this Easter morn,
How the Lord of life and glory, when in Bethlehem was born—
He who knew our human weakness, and who died our souls to save—
Now hath won his glorious triumph—Christ is risen from the grave!
Christ the Passover is offered; therefore let the feast be kept;
From the grave our Lord hath risen, great fruits of them that slept.
Christ is risen, and forever from death's sting has set us free;
Once to sin he died, hereafter he shall live eternally.
Oh, that, like these Easter lilies, pure and white our souls might be,
And our hearts become henceforward one eternal melody!
That the teachings of this season in our hearts and lives might stay,
And the world might be the better for the church's Easter Day.
By thy special grace prevailing make us long to do thy will;
Thy continual help still aid us all our duties to fulfill,
Till our work is calmly ended, and life's Lenten fast is o'er,
And we keep the heavenly Easter with thee, Lord, forevermore.
—Churchman.

"Ye Must Be Born Again."

The new birth has ever been one of the distinguishing and most frequent themes of the Methodist pulpit. While justification by faith, the witness of the Spirit and other important and vital subjects have been faithfully preached by our ministry, still the text most used by them has been the one from which Jesus preached his sermon to Nicodemus, found recorded in the third chapter of John. It has been ringing in the ears, sounding in the consciences and stirring in the hearts of all students on Methodist preaching through all the years from the Wesleyans and Whitefield to the present time. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," are words as true and forceful to-day as when the Master spoke them, and every earnest minister and winner of souls to-day found urging upon his hearers with much frequency and special emphasis the necessity of the great change. Men are apt to confound regeneration and justification. Justification is that act of God done for a man by which God pardons all his sins up to the date of the act of pardon. Quite a different thing is regeneration, for it is a change of nature, a change of heart, a quickening unto newness of life, a being born from above, a partaking of the divine nature, a planting within a man of a new and divine principle of spiritual life. While justification changes a man's relationship to God, regeneration changes the man himself, making him a new creature.

That a man in order to salvation must be born again is argued from his condition by nature. Created "in the image and after the likeness of God," in "knowledge," "righteousness" and "true holiness" man's "reason was clear, his judgment uncorrupted and his conscience upright and sensible." At the top of the scale of earthly beings he was the masterpiece of God and pronounced by his Maker to be "very good." Made like unto God he was as the companion and friend of his Maker, who walked and talked familiarly with him in the garden. God designed man for constant development and grand achievements through the ages, but the story of his fall and ruin is told in these words: "By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men for that all have sinned." The summing up of man's state is: "All we, like sheep, have gone astray and have each one turned to his own way." "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." "There is none righteous," "none that doeth good," "no, not one." "There is no difference between the Jew and the Greek," for all the unregenerated world lieth in the lap of the wicked one, all men are concluded together in sin, and all who are yet unborn of the spirit are in "the gall of bitterness and the bonds of iniquity." As the children of darkness, unregenerate men are everywhere found seeking the works of their master, the devil. Paul declares: "The carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." It is written: "For there is not a just man upon earth that doeth good and sinneth not." Says Job: "What is man that he should be clean? and he that is born of a woman would be righteous?"

Isaiah says of the natural man that he "is wounded and bruised and putrefying sore, and from the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in him." Says Paul: "They that are in the flesh are not pleasing God." "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Thus we learn from the best possible source that by nature all men are in such a condition as to make the new birth necessary in order to their salvation. What the Bible teaches upon this point is certainly verified by human experience. For the proper participation in and the thorough enjoyment of any state a man must be fitted for it, i. e., have a nature that responds to that state. As Joseph Cook would say, a man must be suited "to his environment." How sorry a figure does a man who has never read a line in his life make in the company of those familiar with books? He has neither the nature nor culture necessary for enjoying such company. How very uneasy is the wearer, the Sabbath breaker, the card player, the dancin' or theater-going professor, the mere worldly, the heartless woman of fashion, or the cordial money maker, or any other godless one in the atmosphere of a prayer meeting or class meeting, or in the presence of that best of society this earth affords, the genuine people of God? Having little of thought or speech in common with the Christians about them, they not infrequently descend to brazen impudence to cover their confusion. No wonder they feel themselves out of place, for they are out of place; and, until reformed in the spirit of their minds and taught of God, the companionship of the good must be to them very unpleasant, if not a positive torture. We must have a nature and education suitable to it in order to be easy and happy in any state or condition of life. No one would expect a fish to live if taken out of the water and fed on grass, nor an ox to flourish if thrown overboard that it might browse in the depths of the sea. It would first be necessary to entirely change the nature and training of that fish and that ox. So none can go to heaven until they are so changed in nature and educated in grace as to be fitted for the practices and enjoyments of heaven. The conceived, sin-born, sin-loving man must be changed so to hate sin and love holiness, which is the opposite of sin. No man, capable of thought, can prove even to his own satisfaction, since heaven is pure and holy, and the life that leads to it is a life of holiness, that any change less than the thorough change wrought in the new birth is a sufficient foundation for that godly life in the living of which a man may become meet to dwell in the sinless heaven. God's word and human experience alike teach the necessity of regeneration. Examining into the nature of this wonderful change we see at once that it is more than the rejection of error and reception of truth; more than outward reformation, changing the externals of life; more than morality, however complete that may be, for Christ said to the young ruler, "One thing thou lackest;" more than mere profession of religion or performance of its duties, for the Pharisees, Nicodemus and Saul of Tarsus met those requirements. It is more than any and all of these, in that it works the spiritual change of the heart, the renewal of the mind and the restoration to the soul of man of the lost image of God. It has to do with the inner, the real man. It is called a translation from darkness into light, from the kingdom of Satan into the kingdom of God's dear Son, from death to life. Says Paul to the Ephesians: "And you hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." The fact is that regeneration is not the repairing or fixing over of the old nature, wrapping the dead in lifeless, though beautiful, external forms, but it is the complete and divine reconstruction of a man's nature, even from foundation to cap-stone.

A thorough reconstruction has taken place in the regenerated man's disposition. The whole tendency of his mind has been altered, and the bent of his nature is the very opposite of that which it was before. His affections are reconstructed. No more does he roll sin under his tongue as a sweet morsel. He neither longs for nor joins himself any more to the gay, thoughtless, aimless ones who are speeding to ruin. His affections are no longer towards sinful things and people, for his heart now pants for the rich delights of the sanctuary and of communion with the people of God. Removed from the things seen and temporal, his affections are now fastened upon the things that are unseen and eternal. His motives are reconstructed. Self-dominated him before the change, but since he has been in all things bent upon God, He has made God's will the measure of his duty and to eat, drink and do all things unto his glory is the one aim, chief delight and sole motive power of his new and regenerated life. He illustrates Watson's definition of the new birth: "It is that mighty change in man wrought by the Holy Ghost, by which the dominion which sin has over him in his natural state, and which he deplores and struggles against in his present state, is broken and abolished; so that, with full choice of will and the energy of right election, he serves God freely, and runs in the way of his commandments." The regenerated man, thoroughly reconstructed in his disposition, affections and motives, is a man inspired of God. In an important sense working out his own salvation with fear and trembling, yet "God worketh in him" to will and to do of his good pleasure. He is found going contrary in all his thoughts, words and deeds to the maxims and ways of the world, so that, as Paul, he is literally "crucified unto the world and the world is crucified unto him." His life, as a child of God, is necessarily one of marked peculiarity, clear cut and sharply defined, even as a white spot on a black wall. For a man who was born in sin and with an irresistible tendency to sin and who has lived it maybe for years in the daily practice of sin, to be so changed as to lead a life of holiness is to argue, as a necessity of it, not only a reconstructed nature but a life, in the entire of it, inspired of God. Indeed, such is the Christian's state—a changed and inspired state. He "walks not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." His spiritual life, unseen in its course, though constantly felt in its power, is "hid with Christ in God," being the life "of faith of the Son of God." A "new creature in Christ Jesus," he draws a daily inspiration from the Spirit of Christ, for it is written: "If any man has not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Being born again, he is Christ's, and being Christ's, he has of his Spirit, which is his indwelling inspirer. Having received Christ, he is a Son of God, for "as many as received Christ, to them gave he power to become the sons of God," and, being a son of God, the regenerated man is necessarily inspired, led of the Spirit, for "as many as are led of the Spirit they are the sons of God."

Said Christ to Nicodemus: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God." Had a mere man said this, we might doubt the statement, but the Lord of glory said it. He said it, who is the "Life, the Truth and the Way."—Nothing more certain than this—if we would be saved, we must be born again. How, then, shall a man be born again? The human conditions are reaching after God and reception of God in his Son, Jesus Christ. We must be so thoroughly conscious of our need of this great change that we shall cry mightily unto God for the coming unto us of the new life. Filled with an intense longing after the way of salvation, there will be on our part a stretching out of the whole mass in persevering prayer for the imparting unto us of the new and divine nature. Without any reservation we shall adopt the Psalmist's words: "Lord, be merciful unto me; heal my soul: for I have sinned against thee;" "I acknowledge my transgressions; and my sin is ever before me;" "Against thee, and thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight." Thus, under conviction of our usefulness and guilt, and making free and full confession, we must embrace as our Saviour, God's Lamb, slain for sinners. Remembering that "God so loved the world that he gave his only-begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," and that as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name," remembering and pleading these or other and similar precious promises, we are to receive God's salvation by believing that his Son does save, not only all sinners who believe, but even us, and not to-morrow nor one hour hence, but just now. Thus we shall realize the full blessing of the Scripture: "But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness." The repentance being thorough, the confession all-weeping in its fullness, and the faith, however feeble, taking hold on the one mediator between God and man, the sinner has come upon him the mysterious yet perfect working of the Divine Spirit, whereby he passes from death unto life, from the death of sin unto the life of righteousness, from a state of slavery to sin and Satan into a state of spiritual freedom as a new creature in Christ Jesus. True it is, that God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness "abides into our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." True is the incorruptible seed of the kingdom of God sown in a man to germinate unto life eternal. This internal, mysterious working of God in a man by which he is "born again" is beheld only by the eye of God. The kingdom of God in a man comes not by observation; hence, Christ says in illustration of it: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." No man can tell how he was regenerated, yet every man who has experienced the blessed change can truthfully join Peter in his exclamation: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you. Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time."

God's message, through his Son, to all men, is simply this: "Ye must be born again." Ye may be born again. Will ye be born again? May all, by a hearty repentance towards God and present faith in Jesus Christ, yield to be born of the spirit and consciously made a child of God and a joint heir with Christ of all that God has promised.

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev. Geo. Shaeffer.
(Continued.)
August 3, 1847: Last night the Bishop preached from "Work out your own salvation," etc. He preached an excellent discourse. Five mourners came forward, but there was not much spirit in the meeting. This morning, at eight o'clock, Bro. Hamilton held a prayer meeting, especially for mourners, five came forward and some of them seemed much engaged, and one professed to find peace, an interesting little girl about ten or eleven years old. She did not shout, but a change was manifest in her countenance. We had a good meeting, and I think the interest is deepening.

Thursday, August 5: On Tuesday night Bro. Hamilton preached from blind Bartimeus a very interesting and appropriate sermon. There were eight mourners. The public congregation was dismissed at ten o'clock, and Bro. Hamilton announced that he would remain and labor with the mourners about fifteen minutes longer, but they seemed so much engaged that it was thirty minutes before he closed. I then left, but some of the mourners being unwilling to leave. He and a few others remained and three professed before they left. One young man left the church and walked home with his sister and returned, on his way back he was converted and came into the church to tell the news. Another young man was converted at his room that night. Making five conversions in all.

Wednesday morning: Prayer meeting at eight o'clock—a good attendance; only one came to the altar as a penitent. Five or six of the members came forward, confessing their backsliding and praying for more grace. At night Bro. Hamilton preached from "Strive to enter in at the strait gate." There was a good congregation, though there had been a shower. There was considerable life around the altar, three mourners presented themselves and seemed deeply engaged; one of the sisters shouted aloud, which, I think, was a good sign in a fashionable church.

Friday, August 6: On Thursday morning, at eight o'clock, prayer meeting. There was an increased attendance of the members. After one or two prayers the members were requested to speak of their personal experience. Several spoke of having been much revived, and some of being reclaimed from backsliding of heart. There was much good feeling, and the heaven is evidently spreading in the church. After prayer meeting Bro. Hamilton requested the brethren to remain, and consulted with them on the propriety of sending for help. It was determined to send to Tuscaloosa for Bro. Sparks.

It rained Thursday evening till near night, but the bell was rung and Bro. Nash preached on prayer; a very profitable discourse; mourners were not invited up; but few out, it being rainy. This morning (Friday) I left home for my appointments. I feel greatly encouraged about Columbus, though there will have to be a desperate struggle before the victory is won. There are many opposing influences, a difficulty unsettled in the church, a strong tide of worldly influence, several members have been hurt on account of exceptions having been taken to their religious exercises, many are disaffected in heart to the work, some do not like to be disturbed in their spiritual slumbers, some are opposed to the light of truth, because it condemns their moral deformity. There are a great many adversaries within and without, but at present the most formidable are found within the church. As soon as the church gets rid of the glorious tide of salvation will flow on with resistless force, and God will be glorified in the triumph of the gospel in Columbus. I feel deeply interested in the success of the meeting. I have felt much burdened, and cast down in view of the state of the church. I have seen her declining, step by step, into formality, fashion and folly, and the life of vital religion gradually disappearing until scarce a spark has been left us. I have felt the influence in my own heart, and now rejoice to see a prospect of better days. I feel revived myself, and pray God that I may be fully restored to the image of my Saviour and be filled with all the fullness of God, and that my family may all be converted to God. Glory be to God for all his mercy and goodness to me and my family. May all that is within me praise and magnify his name forever.

Monday, August 9: I returned to town in the evening and attended church. The interest appears on the increase. There was a fine congregation out. Bro. Hamilton preached from Psalm xl, 1, 2, 3. A fine sermon, but not one could be induced to come to the altar. The Holy Spirit has been grieved. I think there is too great anxiety after great folks, and too little regard paid to the poor by the church. They will not be properly in the faith till they embrace all classes in their efforts to save sinners. And we ought to be willing to let God work in his own way, not restrict the operations of the spirit, nor be too anxious for order, and gentility in our meetings. What the world calls order is often produced by pride and conformity to the world. The spirit, like the wind, does not always move in gentle zephyrs, but sometimes, like the fierce tornado, bearing down all opposition in its course. We should curb its influence and leave the manner to himself; so could be converted, it matters not whether it be in a storm or a calm. I am greatly anxious to see a thorough revival here, which shall drive the world and the devil out of the church, they both have a large share in her now I fear. I am informed that one or two have been converted since I left town.

(To be continued.)

Our Young People.

"THOU GOD SEEST ME."

God can see me every day.
When I work and when I play,
When I read and when I talk,
When I run and when I walk,
When I eat and when I drink,
When I sit and when I think,
When I laugh and when I cry,
God is ever watching nigh.

When I'm quiet, when I'm rude,
When I'm happy, when I'm sad,
When I'm sorry, when I'm glad,
When I pluck the aced rose,
That in my neat garden grows,
When I finish the tiny fly,
God is watching from the sky.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl twelve years old. My mother is a widow, and lives with grandpapa. My uncle, Rev. J. J. Brooks, our pastor, also lives with us. I am the only child in the family. I do not go to school now, but study at home. Auntie has given me a missionary hen from which I expect to raise some chickens. I will try and answer some questions in last week's paper: "Is there any taste in the white of an egg?" The answer is found in Job vi, 6. "Reverend" is found in Psalm xli, 9. The name of "God" is not mentioned in the book of Esther. "Lace of blue" is found in Exodus xxviii, 24; xxxix, 31. II Kings xix and Isaiah xxxvii are just alike. The meaning of Methodist Centenary is the one hundredth anniversary of organized Methodism in America. I will now close by asking a question: When were the children of Israel first called Jews? Your friend,

WILLIE M. BECK.

HALEMS, Mississippi.

(Our little friend has correctly answered the question about our Methodist Centenary. Now, we will ask him when and where was the Conference held, and who presided?—Editor.)

Mr. Editor: As many little boys and girls are writing to your interesting paper, I thought that I would write a little letter too. I am a little motherless girl ten years old; have been living with my adopted parents, Rev. N. B. Young and wife, since I was a little babe. I am a member of the Methodist Church at this place—Hazelhurst. Rev. J. D. Howell is our preacher this year, and we all love him very much. I suppose our little friends would like to know what has become of "our little tramp." He gets a hymn book and gets on a chair, and sings, "Over there joy!" He says he is preaching. So you see, little friends, that we have a little preacher with us all the time when papa goes to preach. I am so glad that the good Lord sent that little tramp to our house. If all the little tramps are like him, we will take another one. I will close with many kind wishes to you and all the little readers of your excellent paper. Now, Mr. Editor, please come to our camp meeting this summer at Crystal Springs. Also bring with you Rev. C. Keener, so we little folks can shake hands with him again.

Your little friend,

HATTIE YOUNG.

HALEMSBURST, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: As my first letter to the Advocate found its way into the appreciated columns of your very valuable paper, I will venture again to trouble you, as I desire to become one of your little correspondents to "Our Young People." I think it will be improving to me both in writing and in finding the Bible questions, which I take great delight in. Our Sabbath-school is going on again, and we have more pupils than ever before. Papa, the superintendent, says we will have an encouraging school through the present and coming season. I will answer one of Katie Coleman's questions: "Which two chapters in the Bible are alike?" II Kings xix and Isaiah xxxvii. I am a little boy twelve years of age. If you do not think my letter is worthy of publication, do not use it, for it is my own production. Our school is now in progress, but was closed awhile on account of mail-pox being near us. Your little friend,

W. J. P. RIDGWAY.

MEAN WAGON, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: As mamma wishes to send money to pay for the Advocate this year, I will write and answer some questions asked in last week's paper. The name of "God" is not found in the book of Esther. Athaliah was the mother of Ahaziah. The words "blue lace" are found in Exodus xxviii, 37. I will ask the little cousin a question: Solomon says there are four things which are little upon earth, but they are exceedingly wise. What are they, and where is it found in the Bible? Our public school has closed, and mamma is teaching a neighbor's boy and myself at home. I do not live convenient to a Sunday-school this year, which I regret very much. I hope I will have good luck with my missionary ben this Centenary year. With best wishes for you and the dear Advocate I will close. Your little friend,

MINNIE ROBERT.

WRECA, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I have been reading letters in your paper from several of my little friends, and I like to read them very much. I have a question to ask: How many and what were the names of the churches in Asia at the time Christ came to show signs to his servants? Your little friend,

WADIN O'HARA.

Mr. Editor: I am so proud to see so many interesting letters in the Advocate from the little children, and thought I would write one too. My father has been taking your paper for many years, and I love to read the children's column. I am proud to see some kind friend encouraging the little folks to write to the Advocate. Our school opens the first of April; I hope we will have a good teacher. Rev. D. A. Given is our pastor; Rev. D. A. Little is our presiding elder. We have preaching twice a month. This is the first letter I have ever written to any paper, and I hope it will not be thrown out. I saw the question asked some time since: "Where is the shortest verse in the Bible to be found?" It is in John xi, 35. Now, I will ask some questions: Where in the Bible is the word "remember" found? And also, Where is "ruckoo" found? For fear my letter will get too long, I will close with many kind wishes for you and my prayers for the success of the dear Advocate.

Your true little friend,
SALLIE NEYLAND.

CENTREVILLE, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I wish to write a letter for the Advocate, as I never have. Pa takes the Advocate, and I like it so much. A Sunday-school has been started on Apple Pie Ridge once more. I hope it will be a success. We have no church-house. It got burnt; but we are hoping to build one soon. Bro. W. G. Backus is our pastor this year. We live on Pearl river. It is a very poor country for business just now. I see so many places in the Advocate that Mrs. L. C. Sallier writes; some draw my attention. We have preaching here once a month only this year. I hope many will join the church and be converted. I joined the church in 1883. As so many little children are asking questions, I will ask one: Where is the word "schoolmaster" found in the Bible? I want to see who will be the first to answer my question. Mr. Editor, I saw the piece you put in, stating that you were glad to see so many letters for the children's column. I see, too, that one boy says he is going to take Mr. Jones' advice.

Yours very truly,

EMILY PROVOST.

PEARL RIVER, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: Papa has been taking the Advocate ever since I can remember. We all like to read it very much, especially the little folks' letters. As I have never seen a letter from this county, I will try to write a little letter. I have three little sisters and one baby brother. We can not go to school; it is too far from us. The roads are so muddy that we can not go to church; but I read my Bible every day and try to be a good girl. Our preacher is Mr. Mark H. Moore. We all like him very much; he is so friendly to children. He comes to see us right often, and we are always glad to see him. I am working to make missionary money, though my friends give me some. I gather all the eggs during the week for mamma, and she gives me all I can find on Sunday for missionary money. I have now altogether $4.80. I never commenced collecting until February, and am going to try to get as much as any little girl in the district. Many good wishes to the Advocate and yourself. I am,

Your little friend,

MAGGIE R. GRAMLING.

MAVERVILLE, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: My mamma takes the Advocate. I have been reading the letters from the little folks. I like to read them very much, and I thought I would write one myself. I am a little girl ten years old, and am living in Western Texas. My papa moved from Crystal Springs, Miss., to this place one year ago. My Grandmother and Grandfather Barnes are living at Crystal Springs now, and I have many other relatives and friends there that I will always love. Decatur is a very pleasant place to live at, and I have learned to love some of the people very much; they are so kind and good to strangers. We have three churches here, and have good Sunday-schools. I am a member of the Methodist Church, and, of course, go to that Sunday-school. Our pastor's name is DeFournet. This is his third year, and we all love him very dearly. For fear I may make my letter too long, I will close by asking the little folks a question: Where can the word "powder" be found in the Bible?

Your little friend,

MAUD BARNES.

DECATUR, Texas.

Mr. Editor: As it has been some time since I wrote to your most valuable paper, I have concluded to write a few lines to-day as it is raining and I have nothing else to do. I am going to school to Mrs. Munday; Miss Daisy Radliff and Mrs. Ida Hawley are assistant teachers. I will now answer some of the questions that are asked in the Advocate of the thirteenth. Katie J. Coleman asks: "Which two chapters in the Bible are alike?" II Kings xix and Isaiah xxxvii. Ernest O. Smith asks where the word "honeycomb" is found in the Bible. He will find it in Psalm xix, 10. Now, I will ask your little writers some questions: Where in the Bible is the word "worms" found? Also the word "turdo"? I will close for this time, hoping my letter will not find its way to the waste-basket. I remain,

Your true friend,

LUTHER M. GILMORE.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LUTHERAN, METHODIST AND SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONFERENCE OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. E. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HURRICUT.

THURSDAY APRIL 10, 1884.

In an elaborate and discriminative editorial on New York City Methodism the New York Christian Advocate makes this gratifying statement:

Methodism in this city has made more progress during the past four years than in any corresponding period since 1850. It is equally astonishing and gratifying to all who are in a position to know the facts, and who do not overlook the conditions under which its work is done.

The educational bill passed the United States Senate, on Monday last, by a large majority. As amended, it appropriates $5,000,000 for the first year, $10,000,000 for the second, $15,000,000 for the third, and thence decreasing $2,000,000 each year until the eighth, when this Federal assistance ceases. The distribution will be made according to the degree of illiteracy. We hope the measure will promptly pass the House and become a law.

The Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., of the Louisiana Conference, and Hon. A. H. Colquitt, of Georgia, have been appointed by the College of Bishops as fraternal delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which meets next month in Philadelphia. We commend most heartily the wisdom of these appointments. Dr. Carter has distinguished ability in the pulpit and on the platform, and will reflect credit upon the great church he represents. Senator Colquitt will do honor to his vast lay constituency.

A marked copy of the Summit Sentinel has been received, containing a capital sermon from the Rev. H. Walter Featherston, entitled "A Famous Mother's Boy." It bristles with fine points. The following might be read to Young America with profit:

Many a man has tried to conceal his cowardice in bragadocho. Many a man fills to-day a duelist's grave because he was too cowardly to face the jeers of a vitiated public opinion, which had misnamed this foul relic of barbarism "an affair of honor." It requires more bravery to face such a public opinion, and bear its savage sneers of "cowardice" and "dishonor," than to face the muzzle of a foeman's pistol.

Our old friend, Dr. B. H. Catchings, of Atlanta, Ga., sends us a cheering note, from which we extract as follows:

Trinity Church, of this city, has certainly given a boom to the missionary collections for the Centenary year. Our beloved pastor's (Dr. Kendall's) heart is glad to overflow, and no doubt all will rejoice with him. The collection amounted to $3,000, and contributions still coming in. We are to give to China next fall Miss Laura Haygood. How we can spare her from Trinity we can not see, but the Master calls and must be obeyed. Trinity Church now has two in China, and we hear that three more, including Miss Laura, will in all probability go to the same work.

Accompanying some excellent letters, which will appear in due time, Rev. Dr. J. W. Lambuth sends us the following private note. His letters have been much enjoyed, and we are glad to promise our readers a new series:

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Feb. 14, 1884.

MR. EDITOR: By this mail I send three letters, the last of my series to the young people. In a few weeks I shall begin another series of letters, giving an account of my call to the missionary work, my journey to China, my first experience as a missionary in China, the progress of the missionary work to the present date, and at the same time I will endeavor to give interesting facts in regard to the life, character, habits, customs and manners of the Chinese.

We had an agreeable traveling companion in the person of a prominent Baptist minister a few weeks ago, and in course of conversation he said: "We Baptists have been too fightive, and it has injured us. But now we are adopting a peace policy and are succeeding much better." Just so. But the average landmarker soothes his conscience with the reflection that he is fighting for the truth. He is contending for "much water." Though by his "fightive" course Christ is wounded in the house of his friends and the cause of true religion made to suffer, he replies: "Sure, I must fight; I'll not be slain."

Our good brother is right. To be "fightive" against those who entirely agree with you is essential, saving truth, is harmful to oneself and hurtful to the Master's cause.

Editorial Correspondence.

Twenty-seven hours from New Orleans to Nashville is rapid transit. And the trip was marred by no accident, missed connection or vexatious delay. Why is it that delayed railroad travelers are the most restless of all humanity? They are irritable, unreasonable and unconsolable. Special grace is necessary under such a temptation. We had no stop-over, and therefore had no unusual strain of spirit. But the "Big J." only maintained its reputation for fast time, good accommodations, a smooth road and close connections. Quite a number of Northern visitors to the Crescent City were on board homeward bound. That doubtless accounted for a shrewd colored brother, approaching us in this way: "Captain, can I sell you a nice little pet alligator?" He thought such a souvenir from the sunny South would be most acceptable to a Northern tourist. Possibly he had been driving a lively trade in that line, and felt sure of another sale. What a figure an alligator would cut in a Northern village! And to the average denizen of that latitude—who reads the papers of his section, how typical of Southern life and civilization! Many of them think we are hoon and fit companions for such ugly monstrosities. We did not invest in the alligator.

Arriving at Nashville at eight P. M. Tuesday, our special friend, Bro. J. D. Hamilton, was on hand with his carriage to extend his usual welcome to the "City of Rocks." Brushing off a little dust, we went immediately to McKendree Church, where a Woman's Missionary Mass Meeting was in progress. Dr. Hendrix was on the platform, reading a letter from Miss Laura Haygood, offering herself to the China mission. With that preface he led off in a capital speech. Next followed Dr. Haygood in an address full of point, pathos and power. In referring to his sister's purpose of going to China, he spoke of her early devotion to the Master's work. What is now Trinity Church in Atlanta—the congregation that gave three thousand dollars to foreign missions last Sunday on the regular assessment—was organized in his mother's school-house. And at length, when a little chapel was built, the congregation being too poor to afford the expense, his mother and sister served as sexton. Trained in that way to service in the church no wonder she feels ready for any call of duty, however great the sacrifice or heroic the faith demanded for its achievement. At the conclusion of his speech a collection was taken amounting to seventeen-life memberships at $20 apiece, besides small contributions.

We learned shortly after arrival of the death of Rev. R. T. Nabors, chaplain of Vanderbilt University and pastor of West End Church. He had died about noon, much lamented by the entire Methodist community. Had length of days been given him he would have ranked among the mighty men of our Methodism. Brilliant, studious, consecrated, genial, gentle and manly, he won all hearts, and had a career of uninterrupted success. At the early age of thirty-three he has fallen on sleep and gone up to his rich reward. His widow, the daughter of Dr. A. S. Andrews, of the Alabama Conference, and three little children weep over the loss of a noble husband and loving father. His funeral takes place this afternoon from the Vanderbilt Chapel, conducted by Bishops McTyeire and Granberry and Drs. Fitzgerald and McFerrin.

The Bishops met again in annual session on Monday, but their ranks have been broken. Bishop Kavanaugh, the "old man eloquent," who was present last year in usual vigor, has ceased from his labors. Gentle, amiable, conservative in counsel and masterly in the pulpit, his presence was always appreciated and enjoyed. Bishop Pierce looks ruddier and stronger than for some years past. He has recovered his volume and tone of voice, and on Sunday last delivered a memorial sermon in honor of Bishop Kavanaugh with much of the old-time power and fire. The other Bishops are in good trim for any amount of Centenary work.

The attendance of members of the Board of Missions is unusually full. Here all interest centers and the warmest zeal gathers. There has never been more diligent inquiry into the widening fields and increasing work of the Board, and never have reports more inspired the faith and purpose of members. The church is growing in liberality, and responding to the urgent calls from every field. One feature is noticeable—the advance in our foreign congregations in the direction of self-support. Dr. Kelley stated that the native preachers of the Central Mexican Mission, at their recent annual meeting, proposed to appropriate one-fifth of their salaries for the extension of our work in that field. That is self-denial and consecration worthy of the highest commendation. Where can its parallel be found in any home Conference or congregation? The receipts of the Board up to date have aggregated nearly one hundred and eighty thousand dollars. Dr. Young thinks two hundred thousand will be reached by the first of May. At this writing the report of the committee of estimates is still under consideration. The appropriations will possibly exceed somewhat the committee's recommendation—$192,000.

The first Centenary gun at these headquarters was fired last night (Wednesday), at McKendree. Dr. Hendrix presided, Bishop Wilson made a short address and Dr. Young managed the collection. The congregation did not equal expectation, but the contributions amounted to $12,500. This is but the initial, reconnoitering movement of old McKendree—the first fruits that promise a plentiful Centenary harvest. The first card read "A Friend of Missions," $3,000. Dr. Kelley responded with $3,000, Dr. Young $2,000, and other smaller amounts followed. Our friends here think that Nashville Methodism will not give less to Centenary objects than $75,000. Such an offering would inspire the whole church to do great things for the Master this year.

The Centenary mass meetings at Tulip and Elm streets, on Thursday and Friday night, were addressed by Drs. Potter and Hendrix. It was thought best to postpone Centenary collections until Sunday morning. We hope the offerings of that day exceeded the largest expectations. The Central Centenary Committee had an important meeting on Friday afternoon. Bishop Wilson reported the action of the Conference committee of the several Methodisms in fixing the ratio of representation in the Centenary Christmas Conference. The number suggested was one clerical and one lay delegate for every fifteen thousand members. According to that figure Southern Methodism will have sixty of each. The Bishops have been industriously engaged making the appointments—a very delicate, difficult, thankless task. After all care and prayer the appointees will not give universal satisfaction. Somebody can not go.

From Business Manager Palmer we learned that the business of the Publishing House is still increasing. The sales of the past year exceeded the former by $28,000. Over $40,000 of bonds have been retired, thus reducing the debt to less than $140,000. This we consider a financial achievement as phenomenal as it is gratifying. The honor of the church has been preserved, a great institution has been rescued, and its facilities for great service largely increased. More than two-thirds of the enormous debt of 1878 has been paid in six years of droughts and floods and hard times. All honor to the calm, clear-headed, skillful helmsmen who have guided the craft into smooth seas. The presses are running with all possible speed, throwing off books of the highest order. This will appropriately become our great publishing year.

It was gratifying to see Dr. McFerrin so active and vigorous after his long, critical illness. He attended every morning and afternoon session of the Board of Missions, and took part in the discussions as in other days. He has lost nothing in clear statement, aptness of illustration and quick repartee.

Our connectional officials at the Publishing House are eating no idle bread. They are taxed to the full measure of time and strength to meet the growing demands of their several departments. Dr. Fitzgerald has quite recovered his wonted elasticity, and is steering the "Great Official" with true Centenary enthusiasm. Dr. Cunningham and Bro. Lyons are in labors diligent and abundant, furnishing "food convenient" for Sunday-school workers and their scholars. Growth in that department is marked and gratifying. Mrs. Butler, editor of the Woman's Missionary Advocate, has the nearest, coziest office in the Publishing House. She inherits the journalistic genius of her distinguished father, and is making a paper worthy of the great cause of woman's work for heathen women. We learned from her that thirteen applications are on file from young women to go to China. Seven have been accepted, and will be sent out in October next. These, with the two gentlemen ordered out by the Board of Missions, will greatly strengthen our forces in the celestial empire.

Of the Vanderbilt, the churches, etc., we can not write now. With many thanks for the generous, home-like hospitality always extended us by our special friends, the Hamiltons, and with memories of a pleasant visit, we left for home on the early morning of Saturday.

Our Ministerial Supply.

Bishop Parker's article on this subject, in the ADVOCATE of March 20, has perhaps exhausted one side of it in seeking for the reasons why there is such a lack of ministers to meet the growing demands of an expanding church. He gives many probable reasons. Multiplying stations and reducing the size of circuits, higher standard of qualifications required for admission into the ministry, resisting the call of God, the failure of the church to pray for more laborers, the low state of spirituality in the church, these are enumerated by the Bishop as among the probable reasons to account for the dearth of ministers. These may be conclusive to a man who looks at the problem from only one standpoint. It is clear, from the general tone of the Bishop's article, that these reasons have not entirely satisfied the questionings of his own mind. He seems to put forth these reasons in a sort of tentative way to see if they will not account for the existing state of things in regard to this matter. There have been other writers lately endeavoring to solve this same question, and they appear all to have looked at it from the same point of view. The most of them proceed upon the principle that in the ministry, as well as in commerce, the law of supply will always meet the demand. Hence when the demand is satisfied, the question naturally comes up, What is the matter here? It seems, as far as the express teaching of the word of God on this subject goes, that this law of supply and demand has no place here at all. Now, there is a plain law that obtains here. God governs not only the natural world according to law, but he governs the spiritual world according to law. Whatever other people may believe, the Methodists believe that the minister of God is "called of God." Is this call issued in a haphazard way or is it according to law? We can not think that God does anything accidentally. What, then, is the law according to which God calls men to the ministry? The ministry is Christ's gift to the world. In his last prayer for his disciples he says to the Father: "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." The Father gave his Son. Christ is the Father's gift to the world. Christ gave the ministry, "As thou hast sent me, so have I sent them." Now, the law according to which Christ gives is one of the plainest laws in the Scripture. Christ himself announced it on several different occasions. "For whosoever hath to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance; but whosoever hath not from him shall be taken away even that he hath." It is announced in the first chapter of John's gospel: "And of his fullness have all we received and grace for grace." This is the law according to which all God's gifts in the spiritual realm are bestowed. The interpretation of this law is that grace is bestowed upon the improvement of grace. Many of the articles on this subject of "Ministerial Supply" seem to take it for granted that God calls as many men to the ministry now as ever he did. One writer has this sentence: "In assigning the cause of this scarcity all Arminian 'theology' exonerates God." Now, if the Lord works according to law and gives according to law his works and gifts will be in the ratio of the improvement made of them by those upon whom they are bestowed. Then it follows that if there is a scarcity of ministers of the gospel it is to be accounted for either in the fact that the ministry is not appreciated and used properly by the church, or the ministry itself has been untrue to its calling. Both these are true in some measure. A number of people think that the ministry is held in higher estimation than ever before, and that the appreciation of the ministers by the populace is much truer. There is truly much popularity and enlarging reputation, but when these are critically examined they are not found attaching themselves to ministers for the sole reason that they are "ambassadors for Christ." Many other things enter in here as factors to make up this popularity. The church, as a body, does not look upon the ministry as the best and last gift of a risen Christ to a perishing world, and of course there is not a proper appreciation of the gift. A gift can be appreciated truly only as it is seen in its true light. And if God's gifts are not appreciated they cease according to his own law—"whosoever hath to him shall be given—whosoever hath not from him shall be taken away." It may seem a very bold charge, that the ministry has been untrue to its calling, but it is a fact, and applying the same law according to which the Lord gives we have an explanation of the scarcity of preachers of the gospel. The true position of the minister is stated by Paul in a part of a sentence: "Separated unto the gospel of God." On one occasion the Holy Ghost said: "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." During the last twenty-five years the ministry has been growing out of this its true position. To-day, where we see one minister, "a man of one work," we find a dozen that are engaged in all sorts of work. Ministers of the gospel by hundreds are roaming about through the lecture fields, and are enterprising other labors to which the Lord has not called them. If this was simply an evidence of a want of appreciation of God's call to preach the gospel it would not be so bad. But when a man turns away, even for a time, from that to which God calls him he dishonors the call and him who gave it. He ceases to be "separated unto the gospel of God," and the Lord ceases to give ministers according to his own law—"grace for grace."

The remedy for this scarcity of preachers is in the hand of the church. The church is responsible for a great deal of this outside work that her preachers are doing, for she has invited them into these fields. Let her now go out into these fields with a true appreciation of the gift of the gospel ministry, and lead her deluded pastors back to their true position of being, "separated unto the gospel of God." Let the church show, in an unmistakable manner, that the minister's only work is to "preach the word" and "take care of the church of God," and hold him rigidly to this, and then the law according to which God gives will work easily, and there will be an abundance of gifts bestowed and no scarcity of ministers. "Them that honor me I will honor," saith the Lord.

C. W. CARTER.

"Honor to Whom Honor," Etc.

MR. EDITOR: The ADVOCATE of April 3 contains a letter from our good Bro. Steele, giving to Memphis the credit (through Judge Morgan and Dr. Johnson) of originating our great Vanderbilt University. I do not question the fact that Judge Morgan and Dr. Johnson talked over the project of a great University, that the judge wrote an article for the paper, and the doctor urged it editorially, but my conviction is, and has been, that the origin of Vanderbilt was by the wisdom and inspiration of Divinity, working through the immense brain-power and generous heart of that grand and noble man, Dr. A. L. P. Green.

This writer remembers well the meeting of the first commission in the lecture-room of the first church in Memphis, the intensely cold weather, the icy streets, the darkness which hung over the subject, and the manifest gloom in the hearts and countenances of the members when that noble enterprise was urged upon an impoverished church and people. He remembers the urgent speech of Dr. Green, and the able reply of Dr. Garland, seconded by some of the lesser lights of that body of Christian men. When the adjournment was had, after the first day's proceedings, the several delegates left with depressed feelings of despair to do what all felt we were unable to do. The power of the Almighty Being was at work in the brain and heart of Dr. Green, who went with Dr. Garland to his room at the hotel, and spent the night with him. The writer does not know what passed between those men of deep thought during that night; but after the usual form of opening the Conference next morning, the adoption of the minutes of the preceding day, Dr. Green arose, with all the solemnity of a man of God, and delivered a powerful and effective speech in advocacy of the building up of a great University; not a mere college to compete with other colleges of the church, but a higher and grander institution, to take charge of the graduates of the high schools and colleges we had already, and lead them to higher branches in learning and usefulness. In his remarks he alluded to a "large gift" which he thought might be made to the church if she would take hold of the enterprise with her accustomed energy and zeal; at any rate, said he, let us adopt the plan, go on with the work, the ways and means would follow. No one then thought of the Vanderbilt aid subsequently given. Dr. Green felt impressed, however, and expressed himself confidently that means would be furnished; he could not tell certainly how, but some way certainly.

At the conclusion of his speech Dr. Garland stated that for the first time he saw light on this subject, and made a stronger speech in favor of the undertaking than he had made against it the day previous; that his opposition was on account of the inability of the Southern Church, peculiarly, to undertake a work of such magnitude. From the time those two able speeches were made there has been no faltering, no lack of spirit and determination in the mind and heart of Southern Methodism in building up a great University. True, the way seemed dark and inauspicious at times, but the faith of the fathers never failed them. God was at work in the heart of Dr. Green and others. By his wisdom another instrument of no mean pretensions (Bishop McTyeire) was brought to the front. While Dr. Young was laboring faithfully, and to a considerable extent successfully, with the people at the Conferences and everywhere, the Bishop was led to New York, the generosity of the Commodore was opened, and Vanderbilt University was established. My conclusion is it is a building of God, through the instrumentality of our good Dr. Green, who has gone to his reward, McTyeire, Young and others.

H. W. FOOTE.

The Tables Have Turned.

In the olden times the people of God, then in captivity, were required to sing the Lord's song in a strange land; but they hung their harps upon the willows and sat down upon the river's brink and wept. They had no heart to sing the Lord's song in a strange land; it would have been a profanation of the song. Now, in many places here at home, in our own country, so blessed and favored of Heaven, God's people are required to sing a strange song in the Lord's land; but they hang their harps upon the willows, how their heads and hold their tongues, feeling that such songs and such music would profane the place—the land and house of God.

In the olden times the Lord's people were carried away captives; but now the Lord's songs have been almost banished from some churches, even here in the Lord's land. The Babylonians led God's people away from their home; and the choirs have driven the Lord's songs from some of our churches.

Not long ago, in an important charge, a preacher, occupying a distinguished official position, selected six hymns of difficult and peculiar meters that his own wife, who, by request, presided at the organ that day, might have a good chance to exhibit her musical cultivation, both as an organist and vocalist.

The performance was admirable, the good lady got much praise for her musical skill, her husband much blame for his vanity, but no one worshiped the Lord that day in the service of song. A few devout souls would have sung the praise of God, but the multitude sounded the praises of that lady. I blame not the organs—poor, dumb things—they play only as they are played upon; I blame not the choirs or quartets, unless they are godless people, who come to be praised rather than to praise God, but I do blame the pastors and the people of God who have allowed the emissaries of Satan to drive out from us the Lord's songs, so blessed in leading the Lord's hosts to victory against the citadel of sin. There seems to be an inborn tendency in choirs, in many places, to sing hymns, chants and tunes that none but themselves can sing. O! that we could get back the old songs and the old-time singing that used to lift our souls up to the throne of God. Our people do not know, and they will not learn, these new songs and this new fangled singing, and our choirs do not know, or will not sing, the old-time songs and tunes, made sacred by the memories of a hundred years. At least this is true of too many places. It is not the Lord's people, but the Lord's songs, that are in exile. Can we not and will we not recover them again? To this end we labor and pray.

OLDEROY.

Errata.

MR. EDITOR: On perusing my article, "Quixotism in Philosophy," in the April number of the Review, I find several typographical errors. Where I wrote "flowers of rhetoric" the printer has "flames of rhetoric." The expression, "becomes capable of originating and communicating motion" (page 233), is very materially changed in its meaning by substituting "emotion" for "motion." The following sentence (page 280) is greatly marred by omitting the "if": "When we ask for the bread of logical argument, if materialism persists in offering us instead the stones of mere cathedra speech, we have a right to refuse the gift." A few other errors, such as the substitution of "and" for "in" and "emulate" for "emulate," will correct themselves. These errors, I suppose, are attributable not to the printer, but to my wicked pen, which persists in tracing characters similar to those which for so many years puzzled the Tribune compositor. If I ever become an editor I shall certainly procure a type-writer.

Yours,

W. C. BLACK.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending April 8, 1884.)

COTTON. Low ordinary 7 1/2, Ordinary 8 1/4, Good ordinary 9 1/4, Middling 10 1/4, Good middling 11 1/4, Middling fair 11 1/2, Fair 12 1/4, Galveston middling 11 1/2, Mobile middling 11 1/2, St. Louis middling 11 1/2.

SUGAR. Inferior 34, Common 42, Good common 44, Fair 46, Good fair 48, Fully fair 50, Prime 52, Strictly prime 54, Choice 56, Seconds 58, Yellow clarified 60, Gray clarified 62, Choice whites 64, Granulated 66.

MOLASSES. Syrup 24, Fair 26, Prime 28, Choice 30, Fancy 32.

RICE. Choice 52, Prime 54, Good 56, Fair 58, Ordinary 60, Common 62, No. 2 64.

FLOUR. Minnesota bakers 5 50, Minnesota patents 7 00, Extra fancy 7 00, Winter wheat patents 7 00, Choice 5 50, Fancy 5 50.

CORN PRODUCTS. Cream meal 3 40, Corn meal 3 40, Grits 3 50, Hominy 4 00.

GRAIN, ETC. COIN: White 74, Yellow 74, Mixed 68, OATS: Western 46, Texas rust-proof 46, HAY: Choice 97, Prime 17 50.

PROVISIONS. Pork: Mess 18 00, Prime mess 18 50, Rumps 16 25, BACON: Choice breakfast 11 1/2, Shoulders 10 1/2, Sides, clear 10 1/2, Sides, clear rib 10 1/2.

HAMS: Sugar-cured 13 1/2, DRY SALT MEAT: Shoulders 7 1/2, Sides, clear 9 1/2, Sides, clear rib 9 1/2.

FISH. MACKEREL: No. 1 in bbls 14 25, Half bbls 13 75, No. 2 in bbls 13 75, No. 3 in bbls 13 25, No. 4 in bbls 12 75, Half bbls 7 00.

GROCERIES. COFFEE: Rio, choice 10 1/2, Cordova, choice 13 1/2, Java, choice 16 1/2, BUTTER: Western dairy 25, New York dairy 25, Country 17, LARD: Choice 9 1/2, Country 9, TEA: Choice 50, Fair 25, OILS: Coal, cases 18, Coal, hbls 13, Cotton seed 33, Lard 32.

VEGETABLES. CABBAGES: Western 1 00, Country 1 00, POTATOES: Eastern 1 00, Western 1 00, Seed, Eastern 1 00, Seed, Western 1 00, KROUT: 20 00, ONIONS: 2 75, Beans: 1 30.

BALING-STUFFS. BAGOING: 12 b 10 1/2, 2 b 11 1/2, BAILING TWINE: 13 1/2, TIES: 1 30.

SUNDRIES. POULTRY: Chickens, Western 4 00, Young 3 00, Chickens, Southern 4 00, Young 2 50, Turkeys, Southern 12 00, EGGS: Western 15, Southern 15, WOOL: Lake 20, Louisiana 18, Burry 9, HIDES: Green salted 11, Dry salted 11, STRAWS: Oak, kegs 50 00, Oak, barrels 75 00, Oak, claret 50 00, Oak, hogshead 75 00, HOOP POLES: Hogshead 40 00, Barrels 20 00, Half barrels 12 50, FERTILIZERS: Cotton seed 12 00, Meal (country) 25 00, Meal (city) 25 00, Pure ground bone 42 00, Muriatic acid 3 1/2, Sulphuric acid 3 1/2, Bone black 3 1/2.

WS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 2.—The most destructive and frightful cyclone of the year swept over North Alabama and North Georgia last night. In the vicinity of Collinsville, Ala., and in Dade county, Georgia, it seemed to be at its worst. The storm was not over 300 yards wide.

CHICAGO, April 2.—A Muncie (Ind.) special says: A destructive cyclone struck this county about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, completely wiping out the town of Muncie, and leaving a trail of destruction. The storm was not over 300 yards wide. The damage is equally great. Every farm passed over was made a perfect wreck, barns, houses, orchards and forests being blown down and fences leveled to the ground. Everything presents a scene of desolation. James Sanders was instantly killed. At the town of Murray a family of eight persons had their houses blown to splinters, and the father, Wm. Lines, was killed outright. The others escaped uninjured. W. Frank, a school teacher, was caught by the storm and killed. The condition of the denizens of Oakville is terrible to think of. Without homes, clothing, food or bedding, they were found standing in the cold, blinding snowstorm, or shivering in the few fireless houses that yet remain.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 2.—A furious hurricane has prevailed continuously with unabated fury throughout the day. Hundreds of trees have been blown down, and the people throughout the city left their homes and took refuge in stronger buildings. Many families spent the day in large open fields. Large trees have been uprooted and blown down, beautiful flower gardens, chimneys, miles of fencing, elevated, chimneys, blown down, windows and skylights blown out and barns and outbuildings unroofed and demolished. The hurricane wrecked the large brick depot of the South Carolina Railroad at Camden, and McDowell's store and several other buildings in that town. Forests of trees are raging on the outskirts of Camden, and nearly the entire population are out fighting it. The town of Rock Hill, on the Charlotte and Columbia Railroad, is on fire. The depot and Western Union Telegraph office are burning, and a high wind prevails.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., April 2.—A destructive cyclone passed through the southeast portion of this county last night, greatly damaging timber and fencing. The house of a family named White was completely blown away. Mrs. White and her mother-in-law were killed. A man named Glover had both shoulders broken and will die. Others were more or less injured.

VICKSBURG, April 2.—Yesterday evening a severe windstorm struck Smith Station, on the Vicksburg and Meridian Railroad, fourteen miles from here, demolishing two houses and causing great consternation throughout.

OSYKA, Miss., April 4.—Rev. A. Goss, of the Baptist Church, a cousin of Gen. B. F. Butler, and one of the oldest and best known ministers in South Mississippi, died at 4 o'clock this morning at this place of old age and general debility.

SHILOH, Pa., April 5.—A terrible explosion of powder occurred this morning at William Beunty & Co.'s powder mill. The report was heard within a radius of twenty-five miles, and smoke and ashes shot up high enough to be seen fifteen miles. Houses within a mile and a half were shaken and windows broken. Wm. Youm, superintendent, was burned beyond recognition, but is still alive. The others all escaped. The damage is $7,000.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Rev. Dr. J. P. Newman occupied his pulpit today in Madison Avenue Congregational Church, despite the notice he received from a portion of his congregation dispensing with his services. Dr. Corry, of Brooklyn, was with him in the pulpit. After service Dr. Newman said he had been approached by a representative of the Rannet act, a proposition that he should be regularly installed as pastor. This he had refused to entertain, and he stated he should formally tender his resignation on Tuesday evening. The adherents of Dr. Rannet say they regard the proposed resignation as unnecessary, because they claim that Dr. Newman's office expired on March 31.

MINNEAPOLIS, April 6.—A snowstorm set in this evening and the weather is chilly. Reports to the Tribune indicate that the snow is general throughout Northern Minnesota and Dakota.

CLEVELAND, April 6.—The tug Peter Smith left here on Saturday night, Toledo with two lighters in tow. About 8 o'clock this morning, off Vermilion, she exploded her boiler, killing John Peter and John Caddo, engineers, and Capt. Smith, of the schooner Sherman, who was making the trip for pleasure.

PENSACOLA, April 7.—This city was visited today by a very disastrous fire, leveling to the ground the buildings and almost completely destroying the contents of seven or eight large business houses in the business centre of Pensacola.

BATON ROUGE, April 7.—The Board of Supervisors of the Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College met at the college today. Col. J. W. Nicholson presented his resignation as president of the faculty, to take effect at the close of the session, which was received. It is not yet known who will be elected in his stead.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 7.—At West Point yesterday a block of buildings were burned, and over 2,000 bales of cotton destroyed.

MORGAN CITY, La., April 7.—The water here is now five and a half feet above the ordinary level. The rise today was but one-tenth of a foot.

NEW ORLEANS, April 7.—The Signal Office reports: The Lower Mississippi will fall slowly except at Houma and Memphis, where it will remain about stationary. The Lower Missouri will rise slowly at stations below Leavenworth, and fall at stations above Leavenworth.

FOREIGN. BERLIN, April 2.—Prof. Virchow, after minute inquiry, has been unable to authenticate only one case of typhoid fever in Germany, and that one of doubtful origin. No case was traced to American port.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 4.—The steamer Daniel Steinmann was wrecked off Sambro Point this morning. The Daniel Steinmann left Antwerp on March 20, under the command of Capt.

Van Schoonhoven. A few rockets were seen from the shore, but the storm prevented any one going to her rescue.

Out of the crew of thirty-nine and ninety-four passengers only nine reached the shore—the captain, five of the crew and three passengers.

HALIFAX, April 6.—Reports from the wreck of the steamer Daniel Steinmann up to this evening state that the wreck remains in the same position. The water was comparatively smooth to-day and a large number of boats went out grappling. Three bodies only were secured to-day, making eleven altogether so far recovered. None of the cargo has drifted ashore.

CAIRO, April 7.—Gen. Graham reached this city to-day. Gen. Stephenson, commander-in-chief, will to-morrow review the troops returned from Suakim.

MADRID, April 7.—The small number of filibusters who landed at Cuba from Key West leads to the conviction that they will not quickly overcome. A New York dispatch, however, says that an Havana letter received there states that the filibusters in Cuba are securing recruits in many parts of the island.

"COULD NOT HAVE LIVED MANY DAYS."

The following testimonial from Hon. H. P. Vrooman, of the law firm of Vrooman & Carey, Topeka, Kansas, is of so direct and positive a nature that it can hardly fail to convince the most skeptical as to the Compound Oxygen's value as a marvellous healing and restoring power:

"TOPEKA, KANSAS, June 27th, 1883. 'DR. STARKEY & PALEN: Gentlemen: In the interest of suffering humanity I send you for publication an account of the Compound Oxygen performed in the case of my wife. Her condition was a very peculiar one. She had a complication of diseases, Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, or Liver Complaint, and general nervous prostration. If, and general nervous prostration. If you will refer to my description of her you will see that she was suffering from severe attacks of colic and vomiting. These attacks first came once in two or three months, when she would vomit herself almost to death's door. Each time the attacks came at intervals and were nearly exhausted. We could see a change in her condition from the first inhalation, for she never from that time on had an attack of colic afterward and had more strength to endure the pain and retching. She continued to gain steadily, and for the past four years has had no severe attacks. If she is threatened with one she takes an inhalation or two and it is all over. I think it but right that we should make known to others what Compound Oxygen has done for us, and therefore send this statement for publication. 'Very respectfully, H. P. VROOMAN.' Our 'Treatise on Compound Oxygen,' containing a history of the discovery and mode of action of this remarkable curative agent, and a large record of surprising cures in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuritis, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., and a wide range of chronic diseases, will be sent free. Address, Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1109 and 1111 Girard St., Philadelphia.

A POLITICAL CHRISTIAN.—While at Washington about twenty years ago, and the guest of the President, I had occasion to observe his practice of assemblage his household for family worship. Thinking that it would glorify every Christian in the world to know the fact, and that the example would be salutary, I made a paragraph respecting it, and published it in the Observer. A subscriber in Hartford, Conn., wrote at once to this effect: 'I have always had perfect confidence in the statements of the New York Observer, but I do not believe that where else; and no paper that says he does shall come inside of my house. And so this good Christian, because he hated the President, would not tolerate a paper that said, 'Behold, he prays!'

I confess that nothing in the line of unreasonableness and all uncharitableness has ever exceeded that of the Hartford political Christian. Observe, I do not call him a Christian politician. I do not so regard him. He was a political Christian, and it was gall and wormwood to him to be told that the man whom he opposed in politics was a praying man.

If you should ask me, 'How dwelleth the love of God in each a man?' I should reply, 'I give it up.'—N. Y. Observer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

It Will Pay You

—TO—

READ! READ! READ!

GOOD READING

GOOD READING

CHEAP

As most every family takes secular, as well as religious journals, we have made arrangements to club with the following newspapers, at the rates annexed.

The first column of figures give the price of the publication per year, the second the price of the two, including our ADVOCATE.

New Orleans Picayune $2 00 2 75
New Orleans Times-Democrat 1 50 2 25
Southern Cultivator 1 00 1 75
Country Gentleman 3 00 3 75
American Agriculturist 2 50 3 25

Cash to accompany all orders. No reduction allowed on these rates for remittance. Will receive subscriptions for all the leading newspapers in the United States.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers, New Orleans Christian Advocate.

APPORTIONMENT BY THE DISTRICT STEWARDS, SEASHORE DISTRICT, 1881.

Table with 4 columns: Name, Amount, Name, Amount. Includes entries for New Point, Ocean Springs, Pearlton, etc.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The Mobile District Conference will be held at Suggville, Clarke county, Ala., May 13, exclusive. Bishop Keener will preside.

The Opelousas District Conference will convene at Lake Charles, Thursday evening, May 15, 1884. The members of the district will bring up the Bishop's collection, apportionment for each charge the same as last year; also their Quarterly Conference records. Let all the delegates make their arrangements to attend this Centenary session. Bishop J. C. Keener will preside.

The Shreveport District Conference will be held at Natchitoches, La., beginning at nine o'clock A. M. on Thursday, June 28, 1881.

The Greensboro District Conference will meet at Livingstone, June 20-23.

The Brandon District Conference will meet at Brandon, June 19-22.

The Meridian District Conference will be held in Waynesboro, June 20-23.

The Greenville District Conference will be held at Greenville, Miss., beginning at 9 o'clock A. M., on Friday before the second Sabbath in May. Bishop McFeyre will preside.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

GREENSBORO DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

MOBILE DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

OPELOUSAS DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

DELHI DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

SEASHORE DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

BROOKHAVEN DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

MERIDIAN DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

WOODVILLE DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

BRANDON DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Brandon station, Westville, Pleasant Grove, etc.

JACKSON DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Canton, Sharon, at Lone Pine, etc.

VICKSBURG DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Dentville, at Rodney, etc.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

GREENVILLE DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Jones Bayou, Greenville, etc.

COLUMBUS DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Starkville circuit, West Point and Blue, etc.

GREENADA DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Water Valley, etc.

SARDIS DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Hernando and Cold Water, etc.

CORINTH DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Corinth station, etc.

HOLLY SPRINGS DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for New Salem circuit, at New Salem, etc.

ABERDEEN DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Aberdeen station, etc.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Table with 2 columns: Name, Amount. Includes entries for Blanket for Clerks of Court, etc.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. No economical thus the ordinary kind, and can not be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., New York.

MISCELLANEOUS. A Home Production. YEAST POWDER. J. W. Billington's LIGHTNING LINIMENT. THOS. J. CARVER, Cotton Factor. COMMISSION MERCHANT. 44 Perdido Street, NEW ORLEANS, LA. ENGINE FOR SALE. A 12 horse power Atlas portable engine on wheels, has been but little used, and is in thorough order. Will be sold on time to a good purchaser. Apply to T. J. CARVER, 44 Perdido St., New Orleans. NEW JOB OFFICE. CARVER & JAMIESON, 112 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS, LA. LETTER, NOTE and BILL HEADS. VISITING CARDS. BLANKS. All Kinds of Job Work. THE EASTER ANGEL. A BEAUTIFUL Easter Service. With Responsive Recitations and Music prepared expressly for it. By GEO. F. ROOT and H. BUTTERWORTH. The Responses are so arranged that they may be used by classes or individuals, thus giving a variety of interest. The Services are arranged under the following heads: First Subject, THE EASTER ANGEL; Second Subject, CHRIST'S TRIUMPH; Third Subject, NIGHT'S SAVING; Fourth Subject, TESTIMONY; Fifth Subject, THE EASTER ANGEL. Price, 50 cents. Fifty cents per doz. by express. $4.00 per 100 by express. Published by JOHN CHURCH & CO., 300 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL. FOR SALE BY Booksellers and Music Dealers Everywhere.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 16.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, APRIL 17, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1446.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased preachers ad/ price.

All members of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

DR. OF BISHOP KAVANAUGH.

BY REV. W. C. ANDREWS, D. D.

Star had the falling tears been dried.

From weeping eyes, that faint and died.

When news came of his death's end.

Kavanaugh has fallen by death's hand.

Ye who the church's tribute weep.

He is not dead; he only sleeps.

Is uttered by the Savior's voice.

Midst sorrow's tears our hearts rejoice.

Another chief of Israel's call.

Has fallen from our Zion's wall.

Earth's brightest gem doth Jesus seek.

In his own royal court.

Honored with years so rightly spent.

In work to which his God had sent.

Our Kavanaugh carries to his home above.

Regard of heaven—man's tribute love.

How great our loss! how large our joy?

Grieve on our hearts, we songs employ.

Lost one of earth's purest and best.

His passed from toil to heavenly rest.

Where goodness, much-loved name.

His mind was wreathed in immortal fame.

His mind was one of grandest make.

Each power employed for Jesus' sake.

His soul was one of purest mould.

Where God his loveliest truths enrolled.

Life was humble, courteous, bright.

And nobly grand in Jesus' sight.

A picture where each lovely day.

Was taken from celestial sky.

A statue where, in peace and face.

Beauty divine was carved by grace.

His work was done, his passport right.

With Stephen's gaze he takes his flight.

Around the throne of glory he is thronged.

Where crown and palm, life victor's song.

With our offerings, holy praise.

Centennial monuments we raise.

No dearer gift to Christ is given.

Than our loved Bishop called to heaven.

With holy pride we read the roll.

Of noble dead begun with Soule.

Our Isaacson, Capers, Early, too.

Marvin and Doggett, Wightman true.

And Kavanaugh numbered with the best.

What glorious meeting on the shore.

Where all his life forevermore!

AMBLE, Kentucky.

Sketch of Bishop Kavanaugh.

BY REV. W. C. ANDREWS, D. D.

Published by permission from "Life and Times of Bishop Kavanaugh," by A. D. Bedford, D. D.

Bishop Kavanaugh has presided over the Mississippi Conference five times during the last twenty-six years: first at Vicksburg, in 1868; then at Meridian, in 1871; at Brandon, in 1872; again at Meridian, in 1873; and last at Natchez, in 1883, just a few months before his death.

I might say that the impression which he made at the first Conference was confirmed and strengthened by each succeeding one. He was of so transparent a character that all could readily see through it. An utter absence of duplicity prevented him from concealing anything even if there had been anything to conceal. It would have had to come out no matter whom or what it damaged, as he did not know how to take counsel of policy or cunning. He was so unambitious that I readily believe he was just as self-possessed on one occasion as another no matter how occasions might differ in importance or magnitude. If there was any difference, he seemed to be more unconcerned upon occasions where he had reason to believe that great things were expected of him than, ordinarily, when the salvation of souls was more directly dependent upon the proper presentation of the truth.

Bishop Kavanaugh was as guileless and as simple as a little child. I have seen him in the social circle, when he would bring himself down to the level of little children, entering into their enjoyments with a freshness and forgetfulness of self that could not be affected, but could come from nature only. There was no stiffness or formality about him. The very same freedom of manner that characterized him in the company of little children seemed to belong to him when associated with the learned and the elders.

He had an inexhaustible fund of anecdote. There was an appropriateness and a pertinency in his anecdotes that made you think he originated some of them for the occasion. He had that rare quality of enjoying a joke at his own expense. This kind he seemed to narrate with peculiar relish. He did not consider his features very handsome nor his person very graceful, and any humorous reflection he happened to hear made upon either he treasured up and would often relate to friends with irresistible humor. An illustration of this occurred at the late session of the Mississippi Conference during one of the sessions of his cabinet. Some reference had been made to his figure. "That reminds me," said he, "of a remark the gifted and erratic Tom Marshall, of Kentucky, made about me. Tom and I grew up together and were quite intimate. I used to admire his genius and lament his wanderings. He got down so low at one time that he had no home, got his meals just where he could and would fall down and sleep wherever sleep overtook him, even though it was in a stable or a hay loft. I was walking down street early one morning, and felt my sorrow stirred at seeing Tom coming out one of his sleeping-places with the hay still sticking in his hair and to his clothes. He called out to me while I was yet at some distance from him: 'Kavanaugh, you and I resemble our blessed Saviour; but in different particulars: I in that I have not where to lay my head, and you in that you have no form or comeliness.' It was impossible to resist the inimitable gusto with which he related this, and the presiding elders forgot all about the knotty cases they were trying to dispose of and laughed in uncontrollable merriment.

His features in repose were rather homely and his body was very large and unwieldy; yet when in preaching he was warmed to the subject, and would begin to indulge in quick succession his enrapturing flights of eloquence, his face would be lighted up with a captivating radiance, and every movement of his body would seem to be responsive to the glowing sentiments as to make the impression that it was the very vehicle of all others in which to convey impassioned eloquence. A physician who entertained the Bishop during one of our District Conferences, and who was quite captivated by him, expressed his admiration for his guest in the following extravagant and yet characteristic words: "Why," said he, "he reminds me of a great big hoghead with its hoops ready to burst off with genial humor, with goodness of heart and with glorious eloquence."

There was never any friction in the Bishop's presidency over our Conference: no one stood in awe of the rap of his gavel nor dreaded a rigid ruling. He allowed the broadest latitude, and appeared as a father ready to encourage all his sons rather than as an officer whose stern regard for law and rigid enactment of order knew no sympathy nor relaxation. His decisions of law were made up not so much from the strict letter nor from close analytical construction as from the practical bearing of the question and its relation to life and morals.

Every one who writes, or speaks, or even thinks of Bishop Kavanaugh will endorse the opinion that his chief characteristic, his crowning glory, was his unsurpassed—not to say, peculiar—talent for preaching the gospel of Christ. There is one adjective that always seemed to suggest itself whenever I would undertake to characterize his preaching—an adjective, by the way, which I associate with the preaching of no one else—that is, "grand." He was emphatically a grand preacher when at himself. He was noted for a peculiarly clear and concise statement of doctrine; but many others excelled in this as well as he. He had a rare use and richness of illustration; but in this he had equals, though not many. But there was a sphere in which he was unrivalled, a domain of pulpit power which they who were familiar with his preaching awarded to him alone. It was when the Divine afflatus furnished him with a fullness and richness of expression that drew forth at will the most fitting words from the treasuries of language; when with thoughts coursing with true poetic fire; when with life-like images—some glowing with ecstatic beauty, others reeking with the odors of perdition—as, looking down into the clear depths of revelation, he evoked them from the regions of glory or from the realms of despair, and, above all, when, with the air of authority belonging to one who has received his commission from Heaven, he himself appeared as transported with the everlasting gospel, and by his magic power lifted up his willing hearers to the same enrapturing heights. Nothing but inspiration could have given such power. No matter how richly an orator may be endowed by nature, no matter how diligently he may prepare himself, the most faultless productions of the most accomplished artists would be tame in comparison. The true gospel of the transfiguration can be preached only when there is the bright cloud overshadowing and the voice out of the cloud attesting the presence and inspiration of Heaven. Here was the secret of the wonderful pulpit power of Bishop Kavanaugh. He was fond of preaching from the text, "But there is a Spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding," and his own preaching was at once a demonstration of its truth and a grand illustration of its power.

Our last association with Bishop Kavanaugh was on Christmas Eve, 1883. We had invited a few congenial spirits to meet him and Mrs. Kavanaugh in the "hired house" which we were using as a presiding elder's parsonage. (The very next night the dwelling was consumed with our entire stock of personal effects, including the ministerial labors of twenty-six years, together with the manuscript records of the Mississippi Conference since 1853.) The Bishop was in his happiest mood, playfully abandoning himself to the enjoyment of the hour, showing a deep interest in all that was going on and delighting the company by his sparkling conversation and entertaining anecdote. One of the guests who had sat under his ministrations, but had never seen him in the social circle, was so charmed by the Bishop's entertaining and genial manners as to say that the experience of such an evening would rarely occur again even in a lifetime. The music, both vocal and instrumental, seemed to give him unfeigned joy. Particularly was he interested in the song of "The Bridge," by Longfellow. Were its weird melody and sad sentiments prophetic to him of the calamity about to befall us and of the translation soon to come to him?

"And forever and forever,
As long as the river flows,
As long as the heart has passions,
As long as life has woes,
The moon, and its broken reflection
And its shadows shall appear
As the shadow of love in heaven
And its wailing lunge here."

He conducted worship before leaving us with a fervid simplicity, with impressive earnestness and with tearful pathos. The memory of Bishop Kavanaugh to me and mine will be an experience of benefit, a joy forever.

Our young California friend, the Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, Inclosing a communication for our columns, thus speaks of his old Conference paper: "I enjoy the Advocate greatly under your administration. Alive to all the living issues of the day, you make a live paper. It is not only alive, but strong."

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

China and Her People.

BY REV. J. W. LAMBETH.

(Forty-second Letter.)

My Dear Young Friends: About the time of the Christian era there lived a boy whose name was Wong Tsang. His mother died when he was quite young. It was not long before his father married again; but his step-mother took a dislike to him. From day to day she spoke evil of the boy and accused him to his father of everything that was vile and detestable. This the mother continued to do until the father came to feel with the mother and believed all her accusations were true. At one time, when it was very cold and the canals were all frozen, the step-mother told Wong Tsang to go and get her a live fish to prepare for her dinner. He could not purchase any in the market, for the canals were all frozen. He took off his warm clothes, spread them on the ice, and then lay upon them until the ice melted, and immediately two live fish leaped out of the water. These he secured and took to his mother. Whether this be true or not we can not say; but it looks very much like a "fish story." Whether true or false, it certainly has a good moral in it. He must have been a good boy—better, I should say, than a great many boys in America, if he was a heathen. There was love and obedience in his actions toward his step-mother, which was very commendable.

It is related of another worthy son—Yang-Shang—who lived before the Christian era, that on one occasion, when fourteen years of age, he went with his father to the hills to mow the grass, when suddenly a tiger came from his hiding-place and carried his father away. It is said the boy rolled up his sleeves and gave chase. At last he overtook the tiger, when he laid hold of him with all his might and power. He had no fear, and he thought only of the rescue of his father. The boy made such a vigorous attack upon the tiger that the animal was forced to let go its hold and flee in great terror. Thus by his valor and daring he saved the life of his father. This may be so. David destroyed the lion and the bear, and when yet a youth he slew Goliath. God was with David, and his faith was strong in God. It may be that God gave strength to this little Chinese boy in the hour of need. At any rate we are convinced that the love he had for his father was stronger and more precious than that for his own life.

More than two thousand years since there was a boy by the name of Mang Tsoung, who lost his father when he was very young. His mother had never been very strong, and as she grew older she became more feeble. She was very fond of eating bamboo shoots. On one occasion, when it was winter, she had but little appetite for any food except the bamboo shoot. Her son was not able to purchase any in the market, so he determined to go to the bamboo grove and search for some. Not being able to find any he wept, and, while weeping, he discovered some bamboo shoots springing up near him. He gathered them as quickly as possible and had them prepared for his mother to eat. The mother began to recover at once, and she became strong and happy. This is a very pretty story, but a little exaggerated perhaps. The bamboo shoots did not spring up because he shed tears; but in the midst of his trouble he may just have discovered them. There is one thing certain: It teaches a lesson of love and affection, and one which we can commend to all young people—love and affection for our mothers.

Several thousand years since there was an officer of the government, named Yung Ke, who was a very affectionate son. He was appointed to office in a certain town, to which he went in a short time. Yung Ke had not been in the town very long when one day he felt his heart palpitating very rapidly and great drops of perspiration came down upon his face. He said: "I can not understand this. There must be something taking place in my home of a very extraordinary nature, and I must go see what it is." He left his office and returned home without delay. He found his father quite ill, and immediately called a physician to see him. The physician said he must die. This news distressed the son very greatly, and he at once prayed to Heaven to take him and spare his father. It is stated in the account given that his father recovered and was for many years spared to the son. It may be that man felt that there was a God to whom he could pray. Many people in China say they worship Heaven, or, in other words, the God of nature. They have never had any revelation of the will of God, and all they know of him is what is manifested in nature around them. Many, no doubt, are thus blindly seeking after God.

More than two thousand years since there was a girl, named San Nay, who was a very affectionate child. She had a great-grandmother, and San Nay and her mother were very kind and affectionate toward her and left nothing undone to make her happy. San Nay's great-grandmother was very old and had lost all her teeth; so that there was scarcely anything she could eat, and she became very feeble. San Nay's mother gave her milk from her breast, when she revived and grew stronger. When she came to die she called all her friends and relatives around her, and said: "My daughter-in-law has been very kind to me, and I trust when the time comes for her to have a daughter-in-law, she may have one who will be as kind to her as she has been to me." So you see there is some love and affection even among the heathen in China.

Something over twelve hundred years since there lived a man by the name of Ser-Tsang, who lost his father when he was but seven years old. They were very poor, and his mother was sold to some man to become his wife. From that time the boy lost sight of his mother. In the course of time he went to school, became a good scholar, and was at last appointed to some office in the government. At the age of fifty he was appointed to some office in the capital. The thoughts of his mother were never out of his mind, and he felt that he could not be happy. He determined to go the length and breadth of the land in search of her, with a fixed resolution not to return until he had passed through every town and city in search of her. For weeks and months he continued this search, and at last found her to his great joy. She was then over seventy years of age. He returned with her, and did all he could to make her happy.

Many years since there was an officer in the city of Nankin who loved his mother and did all he could to make her happy. Whatever she wanted he prepared for her. She would not suffer any one else to wait upon her, and he was very prompt in preparing everything that would make her comfortable and happy. This completes the list of the twenty-four dutiful sons and daughters mentioned in Chinese books to encourage the young to love their parents. We must acknowledge that there is much here to instruct us in the law of love and affection. The people are considered to be heathen; but you will not find circulating in the land anywhere, open and above board, immoral reading and teaching. It is not recognized by law, and any man circulating such literature is at once arrested and imprisoned. Would that it was so in Christian lands!

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Feb. 4, 1884.

Children's Centenary Day.

By authority of the last General Conference the Sunday-school department of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, suggests that the "Children's Day," as set apart by each Annual Conference, be devoted wholly to the children of the church, and it is recommended:

1. Where it is not convenient to have the school more than once together during the day, let the programme herewith furnished be used, if practicable.
2. Where it is deemed advisable let the morning hour for church service be given to a children's service, with a short sermon to children, or such other exercises as may best secure the objects for which Children's Day was instituted.

3. If practicable, hold a children's mass meeting or Centenary concert, in the afternoon or at night, and use the following, or some similar, exercises, plentifully interspersed with the best music the school can furnish and the best speeches and recitations that can be provided for the occasion.

PROGRAMME.

I. Song—"All hail the power of Jesus' name."
II. Prayer.

III. Song—"Children of the heavenly King."
IV. Reading the Scriptures (Psalm xlv; Matthew xviii, 1-14).

V. Song—"Glorious things of thee are spoken."
VI. Responsive service.

Sup't. What day do we celebrate?
School. The Children's Centenary Day.

Sup't. Why do we call this the "Children's Centenary Day?"
School. Because to-day the children celebrate the Centenary of American Methodism.

Sup't. What do we mean by the Centenary of American Methodism?
School. One hundred years ago the Methodist Church was organized in America.

Sup't. At what place?
School. Baltimore, Maryland.

Sup't. What was the precise date?
School. The Christmas Conference, beginning December 24, 1784.

Sup't. Was that the beginning of Methodism in this country?
School. It was not; Robert Sirawbridge began to preach in Maryland as early as 1762, and Philip Embury in New York in 1766.

Sup't. How do we propose to celebrate this Centenary of Methodism?
School. By liberal thank offerings to God for foreign missions, church extension, education and Sunday-school cause.

Sup't. Did the church observe the Centenary of the beginning of Methodism in America?
School. The Methodist Episcopal Church observed this Centenary in 1866 by raising over eight millions of dollars.

Sup't. Did Methodism have its origin in America?
School. It did not; John Wesley organized the first Methodist Society in London, England, in the latter part of the year 1739.

Sup't. Did the church celebrate the Centenary of the first Methodist Societies?
School. The Wesleyan Methodists of England observed this Centenary in 1839.

Sup't. How many Methodist preachers were in America in 1784?
School. Eighty-one.

Sup't. How many preachers and members now in 1884?
School. Over four millions in the United States alone.

Sup't. How many Sunday-schools in America in 1784?
School. None.

Sup't. How many Methodist schools are there now?
School. There are now in the Methodist Episcopal Churches, North and South, 31,027 schools, with 292,276 officers and teachers, and 2,148,829 scholars.

Sup't. What shall we render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward us?
School. We will take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord. We will pay our vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all his people in the courts of the Lord's house; in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem, praise ye the Lord.

Sup't. How can we show our gratitude to God for his great benefits and blessings to us as his children?
School. By giving ourselves to him, and our money to supply the poor children of our land with the blessings of the Sunday-school and of the gospel.

VII. Song or recitation.
VIII. Centenary address.

IX. Collection for Centenary Sunday-school Fund, and distribution of medals.

X. Closing song and benediction.

—Will not, the infant, when dying, hold his trembling, enaculated hands upon the sacred volume, and exclaim, solemnly and with unwonted energy, "The only objection against this book is a bad life!"

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, APRIL 17, 1884.

THE CHRISTIAN'S DEATH.

BY MISS LUCIA FORT.

Affectionately inscribed to Mrs. Ella Howell.
Peaceful and calm was thy spirit when
To the brink thy weary feet had come,
When from across death's silent stream
Bright angels came to bear thee home.

The river was dark, but Jesus' feet
Before thee shone the cold, dark wave,
And stilled the waters e'er thou passed,
And proved in death his power to save.

Ever near to thy Saviour's cross
Thy loving heart did fondly cling;
Firm in faith of pardoning love,
From which our true salvation springs.

In life thy constant, faithful friend,
Thy Guide until thy latest breath;
He was thy Saviour, strength and shield,
Thy sure repose, thine only hope to death.

And in that "house not made with hands,"
Around the glorious throne of God,
Thou hast joined to songs of praise,
Of him who saved us with his blood.

And when our life work here is done
We'll meet again to part no more;
Beyond the parting and the tears,
On Eden's fair and peaceful shore.
MISS FORT, Mississippi.

Sunday-School Lesson.

PREPARED BY REV. CHRISTIAN KENNEDY.

Second Quarter—Lesson III.

SUNDAY, APRIL 20, 1884.—CONTRIBUTORS, 17, 18.

GOAL: Text—"He preached Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block and unto the Greeks foolishness."—1 Corinthians 1:23.

PAUL'S PREACHING.

Paul set a higher value upon his call to preach than upon the subordinate commission to baptize. He put disciplining of men above the mere formal and solemn recognition of these disciples. Like his Lord, he waived his right to baptize, and left this ordinance for others to administer. Christ, during his ministry, baptized none, but delegated this duty to his disciples; and Paul followed this example through his entire ministry, with the exception of the few special cases which he mentions. Why this was so we can only conjecture. It may have been that no undue significance might be attached to this ordinance, and to show that the grace of this sacrament did not depend upon who administered it so much as upon the faith of the person who received. In the apostolic times, when religion was passing out of a dispensation of sight into a dispensation of hearing, men were prone to cling to symbols and ceremonial rites rather than to the way of the Spirit, whose approach was through the ear and not the eye. The teaching then was addressed to the ear. The Master pronounced special blessing upon our ears, and gave us to understand that the truths which reached the soul through the avenue of hearing were more blessed than those which came by seeing. For the word's sake was more acceptable belief than that which was for the work's sake. For this reason hearing of the word held first place; preaching the gospel was before baptizing. Paul does not, however, mean to depreciate this ordinance of baptism, so far from that he most highly exalts it by making it the seal of heaven upon the believer's formal appropriation of all the benefits, advantages and privileges of Christ's death. He would only exalt this central truth, the atoning death of Jesus immeasurably above all external rites and ceremonies. Men to this day are fond of inventing God's truth. They make the baptizing more than preaching, more than believing. What a fruitful root of bitter factions has this institution been from the time of the apostles until this day! We do not wonder that Paul should put such emphasis upon the not to baptize, and find the burden of his call to be preaching the gospel. He long ago determined not to know anything but Christ and him crucified. The death and the resurrection of Jesus made up the entire ingredients of his gospel, and the simple exhibition of these two mightiest facts of revelation were to constitute his preaching; not with wisdom of words—that is, words the contents of which were human wisdom instead of the revealed truth of God—less under the garb of philosophical terms and scientific phrases the gospel truth would be completely concealed, and the mind's attention called away from the truths of salvation to the rhythmic rumble of unintelligible terms. I know of no bushel which has extinguished so many lamps of gospel truth as the nomenclature of our theology, whose terms are to the average hearer about as clearly intelligible as the recipe of a late graduated doctor, who conceals in hieroglyphics and Latin the nature of the remedy from the eyes of his dying patient. We have known writers and teachers to bring in so much of their worldly wisdom in their lessons upon the gospel that their learned criticisms, profound researches and far-fetched orientalisms have made the word of God of none effect. Everything touched but the conscience and the heart. This sort of preaching is powerless, and worse than worthless.

The apostle shows how much out of place such teaching is by showing how the unbelieving world—the perishing—look upon the gospel; to them it is foolishness, but to us who believe it is the power of God. Why should we, who know that the gospel is the wisdom and the power of God, endeavor to explain or elucidate it by mixing with it human philosophies. The divine plan of salvation by Christ, never imagined by human intellect, at once so new and complete, has shown all human systems for the regeneration of man to be in comparison folly.

When, in God's wise providence, the world failed, by its own philosophy, to find out God, it pleased God, by the foolishness of preaching, to save them that believe. Paul does not mean that the act of preaching was foolish even in the eyes of men, but that thing preached—the doctrines of Christ—were a foolish tale to the world; but the foolishness of God is wiser than men. That which, in God's scheme, seems foolishness, the simplicity of his loving counsel, that which seems weakness, the flesh passion and death of Christ, have proved stronger than the strong. The seeming folly of self-sacrifice and the seeming weakness of suffering have proved more powerful to subdue evil than the profoundest discoveries of human philosophies.

From Opelousas.

Mr. Editor: What a dreadful trip we had from Bastrop to Monroe, en route to the Conference at New Orleans—an open stage, a blinding snow storm, till Monroe was almost reached, with almost impassable roads. Add to this a lonely way, where a shivering traveler could not get a cup of coffee at scarcely any point for the distance of a whole day's journey. Of course as a person gets near other town he might request some one to "draw" him a cup, and it might be done. But these are the oases in the desert.

Returning from the Conference we had the same road, in a far worse condition, to be "carted" over, with a cold, north rain blowing right into one's face. When about half way we all stopped and built up a fire, out of old boards, in a deserted negro cabin. There we tried to thaw out and dry. O dear, what a cargo of cold and cough we took aboard each way. And we are still suffering from its effects.

In the winter in our State we have no roads and no stages—only machines of torture, for which we pay in advance a most exorbitant fare.

Why will our Conference have their sessions in December or January? We are compelled to go through the storm, and many of our members suffer severely by the exposure. Bro. McGoughy, of precious memory, lost his life by it, and other names might be given.

Our Baptist brethren of this State show more wisdom and common sense. They turn away from the winter and hold their conventions (which are annual) in the summer, about July or August, when roads, etc., are favorable. And their conventions are as well attended by lay delegates, as well as preachers, as ours. I do hope that the next Conference will take up this matter and instruct the Bishop, and pass a resolution requesting him to fix the time to some month after April and before September. I might introduce another serious matter of fact argument for the aforesaid resolution, and that is "moving." What a burden of exposure it is to the minister who, with wife and children, must move in our wet, muddy, changeable winter months! What tales of woe and calamity might be detailed, and occasionally some little one is buried on the way.

Permit me to say that as soon as I reached home wife and I began to "pack up," and there was no rest and but very little sleep till we started off through a heavy fall of rain to the landing, two and a half miles off. And then we began our descent of the rivers to your city. Thence by Morgan's railroad to this place, where we are resting and trying to "right up" preparatory to the centennial year's labors.

We feel that we are among old friends, who are tried and not found wanting, and then there are new ones who no doubt have fallen into line. These friends certainly deserve unusual credit for the very neat, comfortable and beautiful parsonage which they have built here, and then the excellent furnishings. I do wish that every work in the Conference were as well provided for. May they never go back upon this monument of love and devotion to the Master.

Our dear Bro. Hough, who felt compelled to ask for a supernumerary relation at the last session of our Conference, because of declining health, has been seriously suffering lately with lung disease. He is now improving, and his numerous friends here all wish heartily that he may soon be able to leave his room and get out again into the bright sunshine of returning health. God grant that the many prayers offered for this useful servant of God may be favorably answered.

J. E. BRADLEY.

The Eighteenth Century.—No. 1.

This our Methodist centennial year naturally turns our thoughts to the century in which Methodism arose, and that was the last or the eighteenth century. Carleige, who built up nothing good, and who did not seem to try to, but tried to tear down and destroy, denounces the eighteenth century as "barren and exhausted," as though the productive powers of humanity, in the days of Queen Anne, had exhausted themselves, and during that last hundred years was lying in ignominious repose. No greater mistake could have been made. The eighteenth century was a century of "new beginnings," and glorious revivals of things hidden for ages beneath the forms of formalism and the oppressions of power.

In the last century science made rapid strides. Modern chemistry and electricity sprang into being, and they continue to reveal nature's secrets to the wonder and for the blessing of all. Great minds and great writers arose in Germany. "Reid and the Scottish school rise to meet Hume and Kant, and so with politics. The British empire was established in India, Frederick the Great elevated Germany, and the American Republic issued its Declaration of Independence, and became a wonderful, new light and an exponent of free principles on the subject of human rights and civil and religious liberty; but more wonderful, and more life-giving and light-giving and love-giving to the human race, was the religious revival under John Wesley, more than any or than all of the above.

The new birth, the witness of the Spirit, salvation by faith in and by Jesus Christ, the ladder by which we climb to heaven, which had been covered out of sight by the hood and cowl of the church of Rome, and had been stripped by Luther in the reformation, had again been covered up by the formalism of the church and the pleasures of the world, both in and out of the church, until even the most conscientious, spiritually anxious and the most self-denying and devout walked in darkness. Piety was a duty, but a burden, and even the best of humanity were only servants of God, but not sons. Aetioleism in abundance could be found, but joy in the Holy Ghost almost never. Some religious victories were won by intellectual struggles, and some worse by wars, but no appreciation of the declaration of the prophet when he said: "The joy of the Lord is your strength."

The eighteenth or last century brought John Wesley to Oxford, to the ministry, to America, and then returned him to England, soon to be converted, happily converted, and from that time he became a restless itinerant, torch, traveling and preaching all over England. And now John Wesley again stripped the ladder to heaven of all its pretending formality, and faith in Christ, as a present Saviour and as a full redemption and a free redemption and a redemption for all, soon became the truth of God, as published by Wesley and his followers, in England and America. But, in connection with this, we must say, and acknowledge with pleasure, that Mr. Wesley and Methodism owe much to the Moravians for the teaching that gave him the proper light on the subject of salvation by faith, and the practical working of their system, love-feasts, etc. They were and are a good people. They are a missionary, liberal, self-sacrificing people, and why they are not more numerous all over the earth, as they are in Greenland and all of the extreme North, it is not ours to say or suggest.

John Wesley converted was, if possible, more industrious and laborious than ever, and his members, happy in the love of God, were all workers also. Fifty years since I heard Gleason Fillmore, an old, powerful, popular Methodist preacher, and President Fillmore's uncle, in giving the reason for the wonderful increase and spread of Methodism, say in the pulpit: "They are all at it, and always at it."

If the six millions (more or less) of Methodists now on the face of the earth were "all at it, and always at it," in less than another hundred years the millennium would be ushered in; and if to this army were added the millions of other churches, and if all were faithful, zealous and true, the children of this generation might live to see "the knowledge of the Lord cover the earth, as the waters cover the great deep."

LOCAL ITINERANT.

"Out of the Depths."

Mr. Editor: Perhaps a voice from "out of the depths" may not be without interest to your numerous readers in the more elevated sections.

The water is now only a few inches below the highest point reached in 1882, and is still rising. Our little town is all covered by back water. Our front is protected by levees, but, in spite of the diligence of those who have the matter in charge, it threatens to give way at any moment. If it breaks an immense current will be precipitated through the town that will do us great damage. We have no means of knowing the extent of damage done in the country around us, but suppose it has not been very serious, as the people have been in daily expectation of an overflow for the last six weeks, and have prepared for it. They have built scaffolds, both for themselves and live stock, and many of them have driven all their live stock to the hills.

This writer and his family are somewhat elevated above the danger line. Our people have recently built a comfortable parsonage, and had the good judgment to select one of the most elevated lots in town, and then have the house built four feet above ground. A portion of the lot is yet above water, but we land a batteau at the front steps. Many families are in their upper stories, and others have moved to more elevated situations.

The water commenced to come up very rapidly Sunday morning, and early yesterday it was spread over most of the town. Sunday was a day of busy excitement to us all. The cackling of the chickens, squealing of the pigs, the howling of the distracted cattle and voices of drivers filled the atmosphere with anything but melodious sounds.

I am cheered by reading accounts of the success of the brethren in other portions, but am made to feel very sad when I view the situation in my own field of labor. My circuit is composed of portions of two others, and was, therefore, without a plan and in an unorganized state. The winter was so severe I was unable to get among the people to organize any plan of appointments. The excitement occasioned by the severe winter and the expected overflow prevented me from meeting two of my appointments at all. I have attempted to preach but one sermon out of this town, and that was to about half a dozen hearers. I have only preached five or six sermons altogether since I came here, and then my congregations were small and distracted, thinking more about the anticipated overflow than religion. Three months of the Conference year have passed, no collections taken, nothing done for any church enterprise, no Quarterly Conference yet, and this the Centenary year. Our presiding elder has not been able to reach us, and I fear will not before his third round. The condition of Christianity, under such circumstances, can be imagined better than told. I have reason to believe that my experience is identical with the experience of all my brethren in the "great valley." I hope this will not be understood to express complaint or despondency, for we are contented to wait and hope for better things in the near future. We are among a kind and appreciative people, who have not been unmindful of our material comforts, and there is reason to hope that much good may yet be accomplished for the Master in spite of the many obstacles apparently in the way at present. I hope soon to be able to do something for your (our) excellent paper.

Q. A. OATS.

GREENWOOD, Miss., March 11, 1884.

Union Sunday-Schools.

Mr. Editor: While the subject of union Sunday-schools is before your readers I wish to offer a few facts for their consideration.

First. We will notice its character. It is essentially dissentient. It disagrees with all churches on church principles, whence arises the objection to fearing the name of any church. The parties proposing to form the union school have some objections, even to the church they like best, and they seek to find something better, as they imagine. From a dislike to your church in some degree, and from a dislike to some one else's church, the demand is made for a compromise of church name. This principle instills dissension and dislike, in a measure, to some established church, and weakens church devotion. Thus far a union Sunday-school does an evil instead of good. We can not give up the churches yet. God grant a higher devotion for our churches. Any work worthy to be done by the people of a church is worthy to be done in the name of the church. It should be as degrading and criminal for church members to go out under a false name as for a man to abandon his own name and assume a false one for business purposes.

Second. It dissents from all doctrine. This militates against a proper religious education, which should be radical and thorough in order to save. St. Paul says to Timothy: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee."—1 Timothy iv, 16. A union Sunday-school thinks of a better way, dreams of elysian strolls along the path of life from earth to heaven, far, far above such disagreeable work.

The church, in keeping with Divine authority, says: "Let the preachers faithfully enforce upon parents and Sunday-school teachers the great importance of instructing children in the doctrines and duties of our holy religion."—Discipline, page 121, of 1882, answer 4. A union Sunday-school dissents from both Divine and church authority. Away with your doctrines in a union Sunday-school. Can any Christian or Christian Methodist approve of this? In a school of this kind it is a wonder that material of this kind brought into a church should ignore church vows and church authority? There they learn to be willful, and seemingly do well as long as you let them have their way. This should not be. "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief: for that is unprofitable for you."—Hebrews xiii, 17. This is the way we should raise our children. The above passage shows how we should respect our pastors, but a union school needs no pastor. It is too ecclesiastical and doctrinal for them. Unless he will compromise they think they can do better without him. They are too happy to consider his sacred duties. From the foregoing principles I would not support a union Sunday-school if there was no other. Its position is social rather than religious. It is not a necessity. Each church can, if it will do it, do such work under the auspices of its own name and authority. The fact is no member has authority to work in any other name or by any other authority than that of the church of which he is a member. Persons belonging to a church might contemplate such a thing, but not church members. They can not afford to go back on their church vows.

We have no use for such maudlin sentiment of religious work, and hope the Methodist Church, South, will take the above phrase, or something else if better can be found, and grow more healthy and sound in the future. This is spoken with due respect to all the good that have engaged in such work. We often do wrong and never find it out, or at least not till late.

J. W. RELLISON.

Marriages.

HARRISON—ELLIS.—At the Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., March 19, 1884, by Rev. J. A. Jones, Mr. William E. Harrison, of Nashville, Tenn., and Miss G. E. T. Ellis, daughter of Rev. J. A. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference.

DUNLAP—COLLINS.—At the Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., March 19, 1884, by Rev. J. A. Jones, Mr. James M. Dunlap, of New Orleans, and Miss Nettie Collins, of Meridian, Miss.

MCNEMOTT—WOOD.—In the Methodist Church, Greensburg, La., April 12, 1884, by Rev. J. B. Parker, assisted by Rev. O. A. Powell, of Clifton, La., Mr. Edward O. McNemott, of Mount-Cello, Ark., to Miss Nanette F. Wood, of Greensburg, La.

Obituaries.

HOFFPAUR—SEERN.—HOFFPAUR was born January 15, 1848; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, January 21, 1884, and died, of pulmonary consumption, February 8, 1884, at the early age of thirty-six years.

Bro. Seern Hoffpaur was raised amid religious influences, among those who exhibited to him the ways of the better life, and lived all his life but a short distance from the sanctuary of God, and yet, notwithstanding, cared for none of these things, living a wild, reckless life, apparently heedless of the continued godly admonitions of friends and relatives. A man of strong purposes, he listened to the words of friends, and sometimes orally acknowledged respectfully the soundness of the counsel given, and then pursued his own rebellious way and habits of sin. A few years since God laid his afflictive, chastening hand upon him; his neck and stiff with the delusive hopes so common in this invidious disease, looked everywhere for help except to his God until a few months since, being convinced his end was near at hand, he began to show signs of desire to set his house in order. Friends came around his bed of suffering and administered to him with the words of life. The faithful talk and earnest prayers of an old colored friend seemed to have great effect upon him. He now solicited prayer and Christian company; but, oh! what a struggle the cares and anxieties for the welfare of his little family. How they pressed upon him with the reminiscences of an ill spent, sinful life! The well chosen weapons of the untiring enemy, accompanied by his extreme sufferings, seemed for a time to predict only defeat to his determination to make his peace with God in the few last days of his life; but, thanks be to God, we have reason to believe that this deathbed repentance was successful because of the testimony he gave; for he not only professed to have found peace in believing, and surrendered the care of his children whom he tenderly loved to the All Father, but he made use of his weak voice and feeble breath in admonishing his old comrades in sin of the danger of delay. He seemed to be impressed with the uncertainty of such a repentance. He thanked God for his afflictive chastenings. "Had I continued in health in company of my wife and children," he frequently remarked to his old companions—"I might have been killed and hurried into eternity unprepared to meet my God; but now, thanks to his mercy! he has arrested me in my career and brought me to his footstool. Oh! my friends, run not the same race; prepare in health to meet the Holy One."

In his tender love for his children he gave particular instructions and exacted promises that they should be taken to and raised in the church and Sunday-school. He particularly requested that they might be kept aloof from the baneful influences of sinful amusements, and for that purpose gave directions that his old violin should be removed from the household. His great regret was "that they had never heard him pray." His last utterances were continued, earnest rejoicings and expressions of gratitude, on the night of February 7, until midnight. After that he was unconscious until he passed away.

He leaves a widow and three little sons. May God bless them, and help the mother to rear these boys in the nurture and admonition of the Lord as their departed father desired!

W. S.

WALKER—Bro. John Walker was born April 4, 1811, in Jasper county, Ga., and died at his residence, in Claiborne parish, La., February 20, 1884, aged seventy-three years, ten months and some days.

Bro. Walker joined the church in the seventeenth year of his age, and was a faithful and devoted member of it to the church triumphant. He left Jasper county, Ala., and moved to Chambers county, Ala., in 1834, and remained until the fall of 1852, at which time he came to Claiborne, La., where he remained until the autumn of 1861. "It is enough," come up higher." We have known Bro. Walker since the year '68, since which time, first and last, we have been associated with him as pastor, and have lived neighbor to him for the last eight years, and found to know him better was to appreciate him more highly as a citizen and a Christian, a veteran of rare excellence. Not that he was more demonstrative than other men; but that in his political and religious principles there was a purity and devotion constantly shown in his life which commanded him to the confidence and esteem of those who were allied with him politically or religiously. My children were always glad to meet with "Uncle John," because he was ever ready to give a heartening word of advice or counsel both instructing and profitable.

Bro. Walker was the minister's friend and support. He loved to talk about religion and was a lover of truth and right. He had been afflicted with deafness and throat trouble for several years, which was a drawback to him in religious and social enjoyment. But this led him to seek converse with his God more through the medium of the blessed "old Bible"—the book of his faith and the comfort of his pilgrimage. This circumstance rendered him more conversant with the Bible than most Christians, and what he learned of it he endeavored to weave in his every-day life. He was a man of five languages, and well read in religious literature. In a word—we have lost one of our best men.

With reference to the testimony of a blissful passport from the tented field of Christian conflict to the "rest that remains to the people of God," we have this to say: It is strong and satisfactory. For several years past it has been the delight to know that he was nearing the "harbor." Three years ago he spent a night at my house in company with his daughter. He spoke of the port of deliverance ahead, and asked her to sing the song with the chorus, "We have but one more river to cross," which he enjoyed very much. After she was through he remarked: "After Kimball, I want to sing when I'm dying." About a year ago I was at his house, and after a long conversation on the subject of religion, he remarked: "Well, Bro. Kimball, I am glad I have but the one more river to cross." While on his dying couch he requested his daughter to sing that song, and while she was singing the chorus, he tells me God blessed him. He clasped his hands and shouted aloud the praises of God, who makes the pilgrim's dying bed soft as downy pillows are. Oh, that his life character and death may be stamped on each of his children, especially the daughter who sang at death his favorite song.

W. R. KIMBALL.

CAMPBELL.—At some time in life we have brushed away the fear of sorrow as we read the inspiring words, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death;" and, while our faith teaches us that this fell destroyer is on his march to the feet of the conqueror, there are yet evidences that he is still among us. The sorrow we feel to day over the death of Miss LILLIE CAMPBELL—who was taken away while tender in years, gentle in disposition, so true in all the relations of life and faithful to her church—but too forcibly reminds us that we, too, must die. In the truest submission, of which our faith enables us, we exclaim, "Thy will be done!"

Resolved, that our grief shall give place to the joyful hope of meeting her in our Father's house, where all tears shall be wiped away—where she said she would enjoy so much happiness.

Resolved, that this Sunday-school strive to profit by this call from our midst, that none of us be found sleeping with no oil in our lamps when the Bridegroom comes.

Resolved, that our sympathies and prayers be extended to the sorrowing members of the broken household.

MISS BRULAH RANCHER, For Committee.

ENTERPRISE, Miss., March 16, 1884.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

"A direct, practical
"experiment in a laun-
"dry has proved to
"me that the 'Ivory,'
"tested against a cer"tain well-known
"brand of laundry
"soap, has the same
"amount of cleansing
"power and one and
"two-thirds the last-
"ing capacity. That
"is, the 'Ivory Soap'
"will do one and two-
"thirds times the work
"of the soap against
"which it was tested.
"I therefore consider
"the 'Ivory' a very
"good laundry soap."
JOHN W. LANGLEY,
Professor of Chemistry,
University of Michigan.

PHOTOGRAPHS!

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WA' HBURNS

Photographic Parlors,

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal Hotel and

and almost directly opposite the City Square.

You are cordially invited to visit our

There will be no obligation whatever.

We make every kind of portrait known to the art, from the miniature for the pocket to life size. In

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon or Oil.

Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged and the likeness faithfully preserved.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,

FOR EASY WASHING,

IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.

Without Harm to FABRIC OR HANDS.

And particularly adapted to Warm climates,

No family, rich or poor should be without it.

Sold by all Grocers, but beware of the imitations.

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY APRIL 17, 1884.

THE HARVEST.

How much didst thou sow? "I sowed," Friend,
With little of fruit or of grain;
While his neighbor, with harrow running o'er,
Still followed the full-fledged wain.
How much didst thou sow? "I sowed," Friend,
With little of fruit or of grain;
While his neighbor, with harrow running o'er,
Still followed the full-fledged wain.
Who sowed the seed, must look
For fruit of fruit or of grain;
The only beautiful sower can reap
A beautiful harvest again.
A lesson, I said, to thee, soul,
For harvest time soon will be here;
So with beautiful hand let thou reap in the last,
When the Lord of the harvest draws near.
—Watch Tower.

"Reminiscences."

BY REV. H. J. HARRIS.

HARRIS HILL, the class leader, at Fayette, was a man of different mold. Seemed at first sight to be made of "sterner stuff," as some express it; but one of that class of men who "improve upon acquaintance," and the preacher had no better friend. He and his good wife never forgot the preacher's family when they had anything good to divide. He was strictly a business man, an energetic and thrifty planter. His wife, who was "widow Mayberry" when he married her, had two or three interesting daughters, who grew to be valuable members of the church. One is the wife of Bro. W. G. Millsaps, of the Mississippi Conference, another was married to Bro. Benjamin Bullen, of Jefferson county. They are all of precious memory to me and mine.
Bro. James Clark was a local preacher, and as I have already stated, was the father of that distinguished man of which Mississippi will always be proud, Gen. Charles Clark. The latter, at the time of which I write, was practicing law at Fayette, and was just emerging upon his upward career in political life, and, if I am not mistaken, was then a whig, though afterward he became a leader in the ranks of democracy. Bro. James Clark was an old and intimate friend of Bishop Soule. One of his sons married a daughter of the Bishop. He seldom preached as a local preacher. At one time I think he became somewhat disaffected toward the church or disapproved of the administration in some cases and the impression seemed to linger with him. He was more than an ordinary man intellectually, and had his physical strength justified by no doubt, could have served the church with great usefulness. He had an interesting family; mostly daughters, all of whom at that time were members of the Methodist Church. One of them was married to the Hon. F. A. Montgomery, of Bollinger county, Miss. Gen. Clark, I think, became a member of the Campbellite Church, as it is commonly called.
Dr. Duncan was the "beloved physician," especially to the occupants of the parsonage; always attentive and obliging. J. B. Carpenter, who, I believe, still lives, was the Methodist merchant of the place. He was the nearest neighbor to the parsonage. Bro. Carpenter never failed to do a kindness for the preacher when it was in his power. He was one man of the hundreds I have known of do otherwise, (both in and out of the church,) who never denounced an unfortunate preacher who might have owed a few dollars he could not pay, because a church had repudiated or failed to pay perhaps hundreds due the preacher, but considered her debt canceled when he was sent to some other charge.
H. M. Youngblood was sui generis. A good man, true to the church, became a traveling preacher for several years in the Mississippi Conference, and when I last heard of him he was in Arkansas, I think, a local preacher. He was angular in his "make up." Considered dogmatic, and sometimes arbitrary. But he was my friend. He had strong convictions, and acted from them regardless of the opinions of others. Bro. Youngblood will, no doubt, bring some sheaves with him when all the redeemed shall sing the great "harvest home."
—MARTIN PARSONS, Mississippi.

told me how deeply interested she was for the salvation of the poor old negro; related the seasons of prayer and praise they had daily enjoyed together for some time past, and asked me to accompany her to the old woman's cabin, as she was going to carry her some of the choicest delicacies from the dinner table. I went with her and found the old woman in the "last stage" of consumption, but rejoicing "in hope of everlasting life." Never in my life did I realize more sensibly the presence of God in the sick room than while we read the precious promises of God to this poor, dying negro woman; sang and prayed and rejoiced with her. Never did I witness clearer manifestation of the all-conquering power of grace to subdue the human heart and melt into tenderness and love than on this occasion, as the accomplished, intelligent, well-dressed young mistress knelt at "mammy's" couch and wept as she wiped the clammy sweat from the cold brow with her own white kerchief while the dear old dying servant put her long arms about the neck of her "ministering angel," drew her near and kissed her cheek and said, "God bless you, child; meet me in heaven." My honorable friend, Thomas Reid, Esq., of Natchez, was fortunate enough in the "lottery of life," as some call it, to win the heart and home of this lovely woman as his bride, and while she lived she was all a wife could be to him. She has gone now to the upper sanctuary. "Lavinia" and old "mammy," with other loved ones, are safely housed, to "go no more out for ever."

Harris Hill, the class leader, at Fayette, was a man of different mold. Seemed at first sight to be made of "sterner stuff," as some express it; but one of that class of men who "improve upon acquaintance," and the preacher had no better friend. He and his good wife never forgot the preacher's family when they had anything good to divide. He was strictly a business man, an energetic and thrifty planter. His wife, who was "widow Mayberry" when he married her, had two or three interesting daughters, who grew to be valuable members of the church. One is the wife of Bro. W. G. Millsaps, of the Mississippi Conference, another was married to Bro. Benjamin Bullen, of Jefferson county. They are all of precious memory to me and mine.
Bro. James Clark was a local preacher, and as I have already stated, was the father of that distinguished man of which Mississippi will always be proud, Gen. Charles Clark. The latter, at the time of which I write, was practicing law at Fayette, and was just emerging upon his upward career in political life, and, if I am not mistaken, was then a whig, though afterward he became a leader in the ranks of democracy. Bro. James Clark was an old and intimate friend of Bishop Soule. One of his sons married a daughter of the Bishop. He seldom preached as a local preacher. At one time I think he became somewhat disaffected toward the church or disapproved of the administration in some cases and the impression seemed to linger with him. He was more than an ordinary man intellectually, and had his physical strength justified by no doubt, could have served the church with great usefulness. He had an interesting family; mostly daughters, all of whom at that time were members of the Methodist Church. One of them was married to the Hon. F. A. Montgomery, of Bollinger county, Miss. Gen. Clark, I think, became a member of the Campbellite Church, as it is commonly called.
Dr. Duncan was the "beloved physician," especially to the occupants of the parsonage; always attentive and obliging. J. B. Carpenter, who, I believe, still lives, was the Methodist merchant of the place. He was the nearest neighbor to the parsonage. Bro. Carpenter never failed to do a kindness for the preacher when it was in his power. He was one man of the hundreds I have known of do otherwise, (both in and out of the church,) who never denounced an unfortunate preacher who might have owed a few dollars he could not pay, because a church had repudiated or failed to pay perhaps hundreds due the preacher, but considered her debt canceled when he was sent to some other charge.
H. M. Youngblood was sui generis. A good man, true to the church, became a traveling preacher for several years in the Mississippi Conference, and when I last heard of him he was in Arkansas, I think, a local preacher. He was angular in his "make up." Considered dogmatic, and sometimes arbitrary. But he was my friend. He had strong convictions, and acted from them regardless of the opinions of others. Bro. Youngblood will, no doubt, bring some sheaves with him when all the redeemed shall sing the great "harvest home."
—MARTIN PARSONS, Mississippi.

At Fayette, where the parsonage was located, the church was not as strong, numerically, as at some other appointments, but it was constituted of as good material, social, moral, intellectual and financial, as perhaps any church of the same number to be found anywhere to the Conference. Harris Hill was the class leader; Judge J. M. Whitney and Charles West were stewards at that place. Dr. J. H. Duncan, J. B. Carpenter, Bro. James Clark (father of ex-Gov. Charles Clark), and H. M. Youngblood, with their families, constituted the body of the membership. These were all prominent, influential and true Methodist people. Most, if not all of them, have passed away; but some of their descendants live, I know, to honor their noble ancestry, and are "traveling home to God, in the way of their fathers' trod."

Judge Whitney, who was connected by marriage with the extensive and honorable Montgomery family, (who were Presbyterians) was one of the staunchest Methodists in all that region. He had great force of character; commanded universal respect; was a very successful planter; a popular probate judge of Jefferson county for years under the old regime, and the secret of all his greatness was his meek and gentle spirit, the unaffected simplicity of his manner. Urgency to all was a distinction characteristic of the man. He had one son who entered the ministry; a model young man, cultured, refined as a woman in his sensibilities, and truly devout. His career in the ministry was short, "God took him." Bro. Whitney has a daughter, the truly Christian wife of my much-loved brother, H. M. Booth, of the East Texas Conference, who has patiently endured the toll and sacrifice of itinerant life for now nearly forty years. She was married to Bro. Booth the year I traveled Cole's Creek circuit. The ceremony was performed by that great and good man, B. M. Drake. Judge Whitney (that was Sister Booth's maiden name), was, from childhood, a Christian, and though reared in allidance, perhaps never had a wish ungratified that parental affection could supply, chose the lot of a Methodist preacher's wife.

My dear Bro. Booth, beloved more than any other not akin to me, has, like many others, had his reverses of fortune, still he and the lovely helpmate God gave him are yet upon the "roll of honor." I thank God he and were ever colleagues, and that time with all its changes has not marred our friendship to this day.
Charles West was one of "nature's noblemen." He was modest and retiring in his manner, but true to the church and a man of probity in all the relations of life. He had lost an excellent wife, the mother of his children, and was a widower when I made his acquaintance, and never married afterward. With the assistance of a pious widowed sister-in-law, Mrs. Elam, and his oldest daughter, who was then a young lady, noted for her piety and intelligence, he reared his family of younger children, and, dying, left them the heritage of a good name.
Of this oldest daughter of Bro. West, "Lavinia," I have a sort of souvenir in the recollection of an incident illustrating her truly Christian spirit. Visiting the family one day, she mentioned to me that a faithful old servant woman who, perhaps, had been a nurse in the family, and cared for her when she was a child, was lying in the cabin at the "quarters," and create moral truth, as well as natural existence." This theory we can annihilate with but few words. No thing is ultimate where there is anything beyond. An ultimate, therefore, is not only the last point to which our finite minds can attain, but rather it is the last point upon which our minds can rest, after they have attained thereto seeing that there is nothing beyond. No fact or law is ultimate, for each of these is an effect, and beyond all effects must be the cause. An ultimate is not caused, hence the revealed of God can not be ultimate, since the willer must be beyond it and its cause.

Hence, gentle reader, with all due consideration to revelation we must go beyond this to find the ultimate rule of right.

Dr. Hickok says, "Nothing is thus ultimate; nothing is at the same time first and last, the same yesterday, today and forever, but reason." Reason is the sole test of all theories, all facts, all religions. It is the adjuster of all beliefs. No one doubts but that it is not only man's right, but also his duty, to exercise reason in all matters of right and wrong. Man is ever seeking for reason in all things; and when the self-sufficient reason is found, and not until he rests content, feeling that there is nothing beyond. Hence, we are constrained to take sides with the learned Dr. Hickok, that reason is the ultimate rule of right. We know that Des Cartes has many followers who are willing to submit indolently to his theory, and say that God does not command us because his commands are right, but that they are right because they seem reasonable to his unerring judgment. Perhaps, some will say, I am confounding God's reason with man's. In answer to this I would quote from Genesis: "Let us make man in our own image," not in form, for the God of nature has no form, but with like reason and like immortality; save that man's reason is finite while God's is infinite. God's reason directing this command; man's reason directing him how to obey. One being the offspring of the other, each being of the same quality, they must be ever in unison. But man, being in a fallen state, the light of reason is often unable to penetrate the clouds of passion, pride and prejudice; hence, though reason were the ultimate rule of right, tangible precept would be necessary.

Since scientists, generally, agree that the ultimate rule of right is either revelation or reason, we will confine ourselves to these two, defending the latter. To show that reason is ultimate we would ask, Why has every revelation from God been in unison with reason? Why has God never given us a command which is not reasonable? We would answer, simply because revelation is the effect of reason. We would ask furthermore, Are we under any moral obligation to obey a law which is revolting to our reason? Every thinking mind will answer in the negative. But this would not be so if God wills, not because it is right, but it is right simply because he wills it. Hence, we see the absurdity in saying that God himself is not governed by immutable right!—this right being reason. David, in one of the Psalms, exclaimed: "Will not the Judge of all the earth do right?" What! is God governed by a rule of right? Indeed he is, and the above quotation places his holy seal upon the fact. This being the case, says Des Cartes, God is not almighty, because he is governed by a rule of right. This is as silly as the little child's question, when he asked his Sunday-school teacher if God could make a stone so large that he could not lift it. But the way to answer a fool is according to his folly. Hence, we would say to the followers of Des Cartes, that, according to their theory of right, God can't do wrong, and so he must not be all powerful. We believe that if God desired he would do an act that would be wrong per se.

This being the case there necessarily is a rule of right, by which even the just God of nature acts. We call God "just" because he confines his actions to the immutable law of justice. This we deem quite sufficient to show that the ultimate rule of right is beyond revelation. And since we are under no moral obligation to obey a precept which is not reasonable, we can but say, as Dr. Hickok, that reason is ultimate. Reason is ultimate; it is self-satisfying. The human mind is ever seeking for reason, and is never satisfied without it; but when we have attained to the reason of an act we stand in holy awe and exclaim exultant. The omnipotent mind, in order to "couple any obligation upon the finite, must confine itself within the bounds of reason—as being the ultimate rule of right. For "a rule of right must be apprehended by the subject, and thus promulgated to the conscience, and must be so universal that it may come home in its convictions to the consciousness of the entire race, otherwise there can be no valid ground for a comprehensive science of morals. Where, then, is the source of a universal right which shall press upon the conscience of humanity?" We answer, reason; for she, and she alone —sits upon the golden throne of morality and wields "the two-edged sword of God" (the Scripture) ever in the cause of justice, virtue and religion.

Ora Pro Nobis.

BY MRS. L. CHARY SABLEY.

"Pray for me," said our old pastor as he gave my hand a farewell shake. As he turned away the thought that we would see his face no more till we meet and mingle beyond the stars, saddened me for a moment; but hope sings a sweet song of a meeting that knows no parting.

"Pray for me," said the new pastor on his first visit. Courage, faith, hope and charity are all needed by the itinerant minister. For him sometimes the road is rough, the hills high, the valleys of humiliation deep, the waters to be crossed turbid and the "pleasant places" few. But he came to fight and he came "to stay" at least a year, and "blessed is the man" that does not expect "flowery beds of ease" on "Post Oak circuits." Yet it is but natural for them to be concerned about their new homes. And snug parsonages, smiling faces and warm welcomes give the preacher new zeal for his new work.

"Pray for me," says "a heroine of a parsonage" as she goes forth into the unknown future "hoping all things."

"Pray for me," writes a friend who once groped in the abyss of skepticism, but now rejoices in the "light of the Gentiles."

"Pray for me," writes one away from the home-roof at school. Ah, me! Can a mother forget her absent child?

"Pray for me," writes a former pastor who had just laid his wife down to rest in "God's acre" until the glad "morning breaks and the shadows flee away."

"Pray for me" is written at the last page of three letters from three brothers. "When I cease to live I will cease to pray for them, and soon 'we will gather at the river that flows by the throne of God.'"

"Pray for me," writes a dear pastor who had just "married a wife" and felt the need of every help in the new order of things.

"Pray for me," writes dear patient "Invalid." How her poor, tired soul longs for the "sweet fields arrayed in living green!" And while she waits and watches for the white-winged messenger, reader mine, pray for dear "Invalid" and sweet suffering "Etta," and pray, too, for all God's poor afflicted children.

"Pray for me," writes another dear, good and great friend. I need it. God is merciful, but sometimes I am tempted to say with Rebecca, "If it be so with us, why am I thus?"

Ah! the trifles—goes on between—sin and righteousness alike in the hearts of all until they hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful!"

O, for a ladder of faith to "scale the mount of God" and bring the blessings down even "by violence" until all "God's peculiar people" might "pray without ceasing" and "rejoice ever more."

Religious Intelligence.

Nearly all the important journals of Vienna report the translation of great numbers to old Catholicism. It is regarded the movement is now gaining a large increase; at Tawnauld and in Molditz very many persons have announced their secession from the Roman Church, and their adherence to the old Catholic Church, and new congregations are forming. Also in Vienna over 100 members have recently declared their accession to the old Catholic congregation there.—The Moravian.

Through the effort of Mrs. Martha Tigges Morris, about $15,000 has been raised toward erecting a home for girls of the Dakota tribe of Indians, at Sisseton Agency, Dakota. The object of the home is to teach them the principles of Christianity, the ordinary branches of study and practical house-keeping. The sum raised is almost one-half the amount needed for the enterprise.

It appears from a recently published volume that there are in Great Britain from six to eight thousand converts of gospel or other non-romanist, most of whom are as hearty as the peoples to whom churches send missionaries. Mr. George Smith, a well-known English philanthropist, has for many years devoted a portion of his labors to these wretched and ignorant peoples.

A successful form of evangelization in France is the Bible Carriage movement. M. Pointet, in a vehicle suitably furnished with religious reading, has itinerated in not less than ten Departments of the Republic, selling Bibles and tracts and using his carriage as a pulpit from which to preach. The chief opposition is in the city of Paris.

Parlor Sunday-schools, which were introduced into England several years ago as a means of meeting the spiritual destitution of the wealthier classes; and some English workers are now contemplating their establishment, as an ordinary branch of Sunday-school work, over the whole country.

The first Sunday-school convention ever held in the territory of Montana, convened recently at Helena. The attendance was large. An approximate report was presented to the convention, showing 40 schools, 275 teachers, and about 2,000 scholars.

Twenty-five families, numbering 238 persons, recently emigrated from Adelsund, Norway, to Natal, Africa, with a capital of £27,000. They took a pastor with them, ten men subscribing £40 each for his support.

Ninety years ago, $35 50 was the amount on the only subscription list in England to carry the gospel to the heathen. To-day the Methodists alone of England raise one million of dollars a year for mission work.

Our Young People.

SOMETHING TO DO.

Think of something kind to do.
Never mind if it is small;
Little things are lost to view,
But God sees and blesses all.
Violets are wee, modest flowers,
Hiding in their beds of green,
But their perfume fills the bowers,
Though they scarcely can be seen.
Pretty bluebells of the grove,
Are than peonies more sweet;
Musk their graceful bloom we love,
As they lie round our feet.
So do little acts we do,
Which at first we can not see,
Leave the fragrance pure behind,
Of abiding charity.
—Sunday-School Times.

MR. EDITOR: Having read so many letters in our ADVOCATE written by little girls and boys, I thought I would write one also. My home is twelve miles from here, but I am living with my grandmother in Vermillion parish in order to attend school. Mr. Randle is our pastor, and Mr. Webb is our superintendent. My papa came over to attend quarterly meeting here yesterday, and after services Bro. Keener recommended that the ladies of the church should organize a missionary society, which was done by electing Mrs. Randle, president, Miss Allie Lee as vice-president, Mrs. B. Kennedy as secretary, and Mrs. E. L. Kennedy as treasurer. I see in several letters to the ADVOCATE the question asked: "What two chapters in the Bible are alike?" II Kings xix and Isaiah xxxvii. In conclusion I will ask, What were the names of the wife and two sons of Moses? With respect, I remain, Your little friend,
LEOLA H. SINGLETON, VERMILIONVILLE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not seen any letters from the little boys and girls in our neighborhood, I thought I would try and write. I like the ADVOCATE, and we always await its arrival. I have two sisters and three brothers. My youngest sister is twelve, and my youngest brother five years old. Bro. Gilmore is our preacher, and we like him very much. We have no Sabbath-school, but I hope we may have one soon. I will answer some of the little readers' questions: The number of golden and silver vessels brought by Sheshbazzar, with the captives, from Babylon unto Jerusalem were "five thousand and four hundred," and it is found in Ezra i, 2. The words "blue face" are found in Exodus xxxix, 21, 31. I will also ask a question: Who plucked the twelve stones out of Jordan into Gilgal, and where is it found in the Bible? As this is my first letter to your paper, I hope it will not find its way to the waste-basket.

Your little friend,
SALLIE E. HAWSEY,
CHISTON, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter published in the young people's corner from this part of the country, I thought that I would try to write a short one. I am a little girl eight years old, and love to read the young people's column very much. I am not going to school, but study at home and recite to my mamma. I am studying grammar, geography, reading and writing. I have commenced to read the New Testament through this year. I have got to Luke xiv. I will now answer Ernest O. Smith's question. The word "honeycomb" is found in Psalms xix, 10. I will also ask a question: Where is the word "oak" found in the Bible? Your little friend,
LEOLA CON., TUCKER, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: The answer to Charles Stapp's question is found in Genesis xli, iv: Abraham was seventy-five years old when he died. The answer to Bertha E. Sear's is found in Genesis viii, iv: The ark rested on Mt. Ararat. Excuse all mistakes, as this is my first letter to any editor. I will close by asking, How long did Noah live after the flood, and how old was he when he died? Your little friend,
E. MARSHALL,
ENOS, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old, and, as I see very few letters from this place, in the ADVOCATE, I thought I would write one. I live with my uncle. He has been taking your valuable paper for many years, and I like so much to read the letters in the young folks' corner. I go to school to Miss Mathilda Jones, and I love her very much. We have a fine Sunday-school. Mr. Crawford is our superintendent, and Mr. Howell is our pastor. We all like him so much. Hoping this will find its way in the waste-basket, I will close. Your little friend, LUCRETIA E. MASON,
HAZLEHURST, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I make my first attempt to write to your paper. Grandma takes the ADVOCATE, and I like to read the young folks' column. We have a new pastor here—Rev. Mr. Penn. He is teaching school in the country, and has not yet had time to call on many of his members. My mamma keeps the post-office. I always look for the ADVOCATE on Saturdays the first thing. I go to school, Sunday-school and church. When I am older, and can write better, I will write to you again.
Your friend,
DAISY WRIGHT,
HUNKEY, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Having read many letters written to you by little girls and boys—some whose names I recognize as belonging to schoolmates and cousins of mine—I have concluded to write you from this portion of Mississippi, which is Issaquena county, Mayersville being the county seat. We have no church, as ours was burnt down two years ago; but we expect to rebuild this month. I will now ask a question: What two books in the Bible have each twelve verses, and each line ending with the word "twelve"? Hoping this will not find its way to the waste-basket, I remain, Your little friend, MARY L. ANDERSON,

MAYERSVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. I will not ask any question about the Bible, but will ask the children, Who was the founder of the people called Methodists, and why did he call himself a child of Providence? Where was he converted? I am going to school to my mamma. I live in Yazoo county, and my mamma has Sunday-school every Sunday morning. This is the first letter I ever wrote to the dear old ADVOCATE.
Your little friend,
MISSIE DAVIS,
FREE HILL, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: My father takes your paper, and says he can't do without it. I love to read the letters from the little folks. We live within two miles of Topisaw Camp Ground. Bro. H. Walter Featherston is our preacher this year. Now I will answer Bro. Lewis' question: "Whose spear staff was like a weaver's loom?" It was the Egyptian's. It is found in I Chronicles xl, 23. Milton C. Holt's question about the word "shovels" is found in I Kings vii, 40, 45. Now, I will ask a question, When the lamp of God went out in the temple of the Lord, who was laid down to sleep? It is found in the Old Testament. Your little friend,
JAMES D. ALFORD.

MR. EDITOR: I have never written to your most worthy paper before. We live about five miles from the city of Baton Rouge. I am a member of the Methodist Church. Now, I will answer Maggie H. Gordon's question: "Where are there to be found two chapters exactly alike?" They are found in Psalms xiv, xlii. Some time ago there was a question asked: "Where was 'blue face' found in the Bible?" It is found in Exodus xxxvii, 37. I will close this, my first letter, by asking, Where the word "frying-pan," is found in the Bible?
FANNIE E. HAWSEY,
BATON ROUGE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow me to write a few lines for your valuable paper; if so, please publish this. Grandpa takes your paper, and we all like it very much. I am thirteen years old, and live on a farm. My principal work is feeding stock and helping papa with his mill and gin. Before closing I will answer a few questions: The word "God" is not found in the book of Esther; the word "penknife" is found in Jeremiah xxxvi, 23. "Is there any taste in the white of an egg?" The answer is found in Job vi, 6. Now, I will ask the little folks, where the word "brick kiln" is found in the Bible?
DENNIE J. MARSHALL,
CARROLLTON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: My papa takes the ADVOCATE. I have been very much interested in the children's column. I see my little friend wants to know who was Moses' grandfather. If you will go to Exodus vi, 18, it can be found. I will ask my little friend a question: Which are the four most inspired sermons in the Bible?
Your little friend,
NETTIE S. SELLENS,
HENRY COUNTY, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: As I see so many nice letters from the little folks, I thought I would write one too. The answer to Daisy Urquhart's question—"In what book in the Bible is the name of 'God' not mentioned?"—is the book of Esther. Before I close I want to ask a question: Where in the Bible is the word "carriage" found?
Your new friend,
FLETCHER ORMOND,
SUMTERVILLE, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not seen any thing from this part of the country, I thought I would write you a short letter in answer to Cousin Ernest Smith's question, "Honeycomb" is mentioned in Psalms xix, 10. Now I wish to ask of some of the cousins, Who was the father of the Prophet Elijah?
Your little friend,
W. H. HAVENS,
VANCEVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write a letter for the ADVOCATE. I have seen our new pastor for this year, and I like him very much; he is to preach for us next Sunday. Mr. Editor, my mother and myself reads the ADVOCATE. I like Mr. Jones' letters so much.
CAMELIA PROVOST,
PEARL RIVER, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy eight years old. My papa is a Methodist preacher. We live at Cooper Institute. I have been going to school, but am not now. We have all had the measles. I have one brother and one little sister. We take your valuable paper. Mamma reads the letters of the children's corner, and I love to hear them so much that I thought I would like to see my name in print. I will answer some of the questions in the number of March '83. "Greyhound" is found in Proverbs xxx, 31. The word "honeycomb" may be found in Psalms xix, 10. Now, can any one tell me, What king was it that slept on an iron bedstead? Your little friend,
WILLIE JONES,
DALEVILLE, Mississippi.

The Ultimate Rule of Right.

BY PROF. W. F. OVEREY, OF CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Des Cartes says the revealed will of God is the ultimate rule of right; for says he, "If the position be taken that there must be some principle for the direction of the divine will, it is absurdly wrong when it is said that God has no superior sovereign to his will; but this may make and unmake principles,

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY APRIL 17, 1884.

There are fourteen county towns—courthouse seats—in Kentucky in which there is not and never was a church building of any denomination. Certainly the Board of Church Extension is appropriately domiciled at Louisville. We suggest to Secretary Morton special and speedy attention to those towns. Let Methodism have a temple in each, and call the people from race-course and distillery to a knowledge of the living Christ.

Wonderful words were those of old Dr. Duff, Scotland's missionary hero: "The church that ceases to evangelize will soon cease to be evangelical." They deserve to be written in gold and repeated by every congregation in our Methodism. "To him that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not shall be taken even that which he hath." And all history bears testimony, million-voiced and uniform.

The owner of a little trading boat on the Mississippi river, who dealt mostly in fire-arms, came near losing his life at Vicksburg recently by one of his own pistols in the hands of an assassin. There is a moral in that occurrence: Men usually suffer in the line of their own offending. Jacob violated filial confidence, and bitter were his domestic sorrows. He deceived his old, blind father, and in turn was basely deceived by his own sons. If we encourage and patronize a wrong we may expect its recoil. A pistol vendor is wounded by one of his own weapons, and no wonder. He followed a business that encourages homicide, and dealt with a class who have no regard for human life. This is strikingly illustrative of a universal moral law. Sin is self-destructive. Men generally forge the chains for their own imprisonment, and weave the hemp for their death upon a hangman's scaffold.

The meeting of the Evangelical Alliance in Sweden has been postponed. An invitation for the next General Conference of the Alliance had been extended to meet in Stockholm next August, and the various branches had appointed delegates to attend the same. But the dignitaries of the National Lutheran Church—the State Church—violently opposed the meeting in Stockholm because of the presence of dissenters in the body. The Archbishop of Upsala, with nine Bishops and twelve minor clergy of the Establishment, issued a circular to the several branches of the Alliance stating their objections to the Conference. The result was that British, Swiss, German and French promptly declined to go to Stockholm. Last week the executive committee of the United States Alliance also rescinded their former action accepting the Swedish invitation. It is thought arrangements will be made for a meeting at Copenhagen or some other city in the north. Thus intollerant bigotry has again disturbed the peace of Zion. What narrow conceptions have some ecclesiastics of the spirit and mission of Christianity?

Joseph Cook has descended from the calm dignity of a philosopher and scientist to a typical ward politician. He employs the language of partisan prejudice and sectional vituperation. It is generally admitted that Mr. Cook's lecture platform this year has lost its breadth and power. Some account for it on the theory that his range of topics was much narrower than formerly. "But if his lectures have been narrow, what shall we say of his prejudices? The following excerpts are given as characteristic of the unimpaired, ill-tempered, pur-blind partisan. As Lord Beaconsfield once said of his great parliamentary antagonist, he seems to have been 'intoxicated with the exuberance of his own verbiage.'"

Is it right or wise to allow the shot gun aristocracy to ride rough shod over the civil rights of freedom in the South? Is it right or wise to allow laws to be made for the nation by the aid of members of Congress sent to their places by the use of terror, fraud or murder? All the past, all the future interests of the country answer No; and let all the people say Amen! (Applause.)

Is it right or wise to put the government of the country into the hands of any political party which will be led by those who led the rebellion? Is it right or wise to allow the South to sit in the saddle? The souls of our martyrs say No; and let all the people say Amen! (Applause.)

Christ in the Future Tense.

Not long before his death the late Keshub Chunder Sen, in speaking of what had been accomplished by Christian missions in India, uttered these remarkable words: "The success of Christian missions is no longer a problem. I fully believe Christ has come into India, and has taken possession of India's heart. Some say India will be Christ's, but is not yet. I hate the idea of conjugating Christ's success in India in the future tense. It is a thing already achieved." Those are significant statements from one who never himself enjoyed an orthodox view of the atonement. But his spiritual perceptions were vivid and his experiences at times thrilling and exalted. He saw and felt currents of truth and life transforming his national civilization, which were unappreciated because not perceived by ordinary observers. There is no estimating the indebtedness of certain countries to the gulf stream for the character of their civilization and the grandeur of their history. And yet its warm, life-giving currents flowed on for centuries without the slightest suspicion of the most experienced voyager or most learned geographer of the seas. It was reserved for recent years to furnish adequate and accurate knowledge of its course and effects upon the climate, products and institutions of the world. So as yet it is quite impossible to trace clearly and fully the influence of Christianity upon the life and civilization of India, China or Japan. Spiritual forces can not be measured by physical standards, nor their results tabulated in any national census. It takes a spiritual eye to discern these things. So Chunder Sen's seemingly extravagant tribute to the achievements of Christianity in India is not to be discounted because not applauded by ordinary travelers. His spiritual presence and appreciation may be unobscured and sensitive. His may be a Pisgah view unattained and unattainable only to a mystic and prophetic spirit.

But whatever may be the facts as to India, there is a practical lesson in that idea of "conjugating Christ's success in the future tense." It is a common infirmity, and often becomes a real evil. We are prone to relegate to the future our Lord's grandest triumphs. We endure and condone the present, in view of the certain and mighty victories of the future. The Pentecost vouchsafed to-day are but feeble expressions of Divine power in comparison with the achievements yet to crown the banners of Zion. This, we repeat, is a common experience and infirmity. Even the saintly Fletcher—"Wesley's designated successor"—amid the spiritual triumphs of his day, to which we look back as Methodism's mount of transfiguration, would frequently lament the indifference and inconstancy of the church in a strain as bitter and desperate as Elijah's prayer under the juniper tree. Isolate those passages and we wonder if there was any faith left on the earth. In the very flood-tide of glorious victory he, too, was "conjugating Christ's success in the future tense."

The evil of this spiritual habit is apparent to the slightest investigation. It eclipses faith and paralyzes spiritual energy. If we fail to discern the blessings granted in answer to prayer and effort—if our eyes only dwell upon the dark side of the picture, while the other is luminous and cheering—we lose the spring of activity and lapse into a dead level of indolent expectancy. The impulse of movement gives elasticity and vigor to the step. It is the shout of battle that keeps up courage to meet danger and heroic death. And so in our spiritual warfare. In the heat of struggle we have strongest faith and divinest courage. Amid the trophies of victory, we are most eager for another onset. But, on the other hand, a record of failure is an enemy to hope and heroism. Retreating armies are poor fighters. So chronic bemoaners of Zion's languishing state have but little energy and feeble courage for the strenuous issues of battle. We would not encourage a sentimental, rose-water Christianity—an extravagant optimism that sees no evil and feels no apprehension. It is perilous to underestimate the strength of an enemy. And it is equally disastrous not to know the measure of your own resources. This we can not appreciate if we have the habit of "conjugating Christ's success in the future tense."

Again, it arrests personal, spiritual growth. Thanksgiving is as potent a factor in individual Christian character as supplication. A joyful appreciation of blessings received is as necessary as prayer for what we need. Doxologies are as important as unceasing prayer. Supplication without thanksgiving begets a spiritual pauperism at once craven and indolent. God never bestows surplus and unused grace. He gives as we employ that already given. This is the Divine law of spiritual thrift. We remember some years ago to have engaged for days in a series of meetings. There was united and earnest prayer. Every heart seemed burdened with the need of revival. Each song was a prayer. Our only and constant cry was: "O Lord, revive us." After some days a brother said: "I believe God is with us. We already have a revival. It is time for us to acknowledge the grace already given. We can't expect richer outpourings so long as we are indifferent to what has been done for each of us." Then began a love-feast that became a Pentecost. When we ceased to "conjugate Christ's success in the future tense," and began to praise him for the achievements already wrought, the revival was assured. There is practical value in this suggestion, and we urge each of our readers to consider wherein he may have offended. We believe in a present Saviour, a present salvation, a present rich, personal experience—a godliness that has "promises of the life that now is." Christ's success is to be conjugated in the present tense. He everywhere emphasized the present. Like our Lord, let us rejoice in the glorious "nowness of the gospel."

Working Out Our Salvation.

Bad habits are hard to break, and hereditary errors are most difficult to eradicate. When an evil habit pertains to but few it may usually be successfully counteracted by the contrasting habits of others. But when errors, either of faith or conduct, have been transmitted to a community or a nation they can be corrected only by new ideas, purposes and resolutions, put first into the minds of a few, and by them laboriously communicated to the many. In every department of human experience this principle of the persistence of hereditary error holds away. In law-making, in medicine, in domestic economy, in political institutions and in methods of scholastic instruction the errors of the past enslave us. The honest misconceptions and the earnest though unsuccessful achievements of those who went before us are taken for the venerated guides and almost idolized models of present undertakings. One of the heaviest tasks of every age is found in the struggle to get rid of the errors of its predecessors. Truth would quickly take the world were error out of the way. Indeed, the absence of the one almost implies the presence of the other. While we meet with illustrations of the permanence of transmitted errors on every hand we find none more important or striking than those pertaining to man's relations and duties to God. Every notion about God and religion being sacred, any error upon the subject is liable to be made an idol. The creeds in which we were born become almost a part of our nature. Perhaps few theological errors have wrought so much practical evil in the world as that famous doctrine of Augustine, more recently called Calvinism, which consisted largely in a disproportionate, or at least an injudicious, emphasis of the work of God in the salvation of man. It is quite possible for men to give so much attention to the work of God as to neglect their own. The decrees of Calvinism, though not intended by their author or their advocates, make the sovereignty of God so absolute, universal and minute as actually to exclude the agency of man. If God is really the author of all things then man is the author of nothing. The result is the minds of men have been befogged, and thousands have partially or entirely suspended personal efforts to secure the salvation revealed in the Scriptures, thereby practically, though not professedly, laying their aim upon God. Though this doctrine, of what Calvin himself called "a horrible decree," has been losing its hold upon the world for a hundred years, it is not yet obliterated. Teachers in Israel are yet found who ridicule the idea of man's co-operation with God in the work of human salvation. The Scriptures seem to concur with experience in teaching that labor on man's part is the price or condition of every good, whether it be physical, intellectual or spiritual. The Bible is given not only to tell man what God has done, but to show him what he must do and be in order to salvation. Faith man must have, but must ever bear in mind that faith without works is dead. The faith that saves is the faith that works by love. All acceptability depends upon obedience. "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." But, says one, is not love the fulfilling of the law? Is not all the law summed up in the love of God and of our neighbor? Yes, verily. But how is a man to know that he loves God or his neighbor? Hear the word. "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments." How, then, are we to know that we love God? "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous." What said the Saviour to the young man who came running and inquiring what good thing he should do to inherit eternal life? Did he say you can not do anything? Only believe? The author and giver of life said to the anxious inquirer: "If thou wilt enter into life keep the commandments." Many seem, in this day, to hold a dangerous sort of faith, that God is so able and willing to save that he will save them in spiritual idleness. I fear that to such it may be said at the last: "Thou wicked and slothful servant."

Getting to heaven is as much a matter of works as making corn and cotton. God has provided the means and appointed the conditions. We must use the one and comply with the other, or suffer want in this world, and perish eternally in the next. We must "work out our own salvation, while God works in us both to will and to do." If God gives power both to will and to do, and we will neither will nor do, we defeat the plan of salvation, so far as we are concerned. In all good works faith is implied; but, alas! how many seem to have faith without works? Many in the church seem to believe more than God authorizes us to believe, viz: that God will save them, though they live in the habitual neglect of known duties. Surely we have not so learned Christ. We hear many complaints of each for their inconsistent lives and their ungodly conduct, but never did we hear of any one who kept the commandments daily being complained of for lack of faith. What the church expects and needs and what God requires is obedience.

W. L. C. H.

"The Dynamite of Civilization."

The debate in the lower house of Congress on the "whisky bill" occasioned some very fine efforts of forensic skill and power. Desperate efforts were made by friends of the measure to carry it—appealing to every possible passion, prejudice and consideration. We do not charge those who voted for the bill with being friends of whisky. Some of them we know to be staunch and true advocates of temperance. But in harmony with a general theory that internal revenue taxes should be abolished, they supported the measure that proposed relief for the oppressed holders of much whisky. Opposition to this bill, however, would not be inconsistent with that theory. Whisky is not a product that deserves to be classed with other articles of commerce. It is too great an evil to be turned loose upon the country without hit or bribe. Among the grand speeches made in course of the debate was one by ex-Gov. Long, of Massachusetts. He quite carried the House by storm, and closed a masterly argument amid prolonged applause and warm congratulations, alike, of both friends and opponents of the measure. We give below his concluding words:

I believe that sound, honest public policy requires the reduction and disposition of this huge cancer into the ordinary tissues of wholesome business vitality. I said that this interest has paid a thousand millions in the public treasury; that it has supported our armies; that it has paid our debts; that it has maintained our government; but, sir, it has not paid one cent. Whisky has never paid a dollar. The people it is who, not of the earnings of their toil, have paid millions for it and its curses. If a thousand million dollars have gone into the public treasury, whisky has been only the rotten bridge over which it has passed. Contributed to the public welfare? It is rather the dynamite of civilization, and when you reckon, as you do, the billions by which you measure its production and cost, you are reckoning not any addition to the public welfare, but you are reckoning the extent of the public and national ruin, waste and poverty. There you may look for loss and panic and bankruptcy, and not to that bagatelle of a few million dollars that is about to be transferred from the books of the government to the books of some private bank. The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Findlay) waxes eloquent, and no man can be more so, when he called this commodity a "heli-broth" of vice, and asked if we were prepared to pour it broadcast over the land, instead of confining it in the receptacle of the warehouse of the national rule. He knows better. He is not deluded with the notion that our warehouses are built and stored with whisky for the pleasure of its accumulation, or with the benevolent, big-brotherly-handkerchief purpose of keeping it from public use and public consumption. He knows that to pass this bill will pile it up in warehouses only to be poured out a few years later, and the longer delay the more abundantly, in a deluge of ruin and madness over the land. I, too, like him, find my guide not in any noisy clamor, not in any false outcry of the popular voice, but in my conscience and judgment, and these tell me, as a matter of sound public policy, of recent history and experience, of present justice, of the true interest even of the parties appealing and law, of state-manner-like prevention of impending evil, and of arresting, even at some possible cost to a few, a disease which, by delay, will only grow worse in its general calamity—these unite and tell me that it is my duty, even aside from all questions of domestic good morals, to vote against this bill.

"Muzzling God's Oxen."

My good brother, William B. Ralford, puts too much salt, pepper, vinegar, spice and mustard in his article in reply to "Gilderoy."

This kind of writing is not best for the reader. I do not write to defend myself, but to do good and to teach the truth. If I am wrong convince me, but do not call me hard names or charge me with mean things. All who know me know that with all my other faults I am not "avaricious." I could say some sharp and witty things in reply to my good brother, but I will not do it. They would wound him and do me no good, except to gratify my spleen. If I know my heart I seek truth and not vengeance. I had rather be right in any matter than gain a victory over any man.

I spoke of preachers as "God's oxen" because Paul put it in that way in I Corinthians ix, 9, and in I Timothy v, 18. I followed Paul. Bro. Ralford's fight is with him, not with "Gilderoy." The Corinthian, or the Jew in Corinth, had charged Paul with being avaricious—preaching for money. Paul would not be chargeable to any man while in Corinth. He worked for his living while there that he might prove to that people the purity of his purpose. Churches distant from Corinth helped to support him while he was in that city. It was absolutely a free gospel to that people so far as Paul was concerned. But Paul took care to tell them plainly that it was their duty to support the ministry. He argued this question in the ninth chapter of I Corinthians. He says he had a "right" to eat and drink, to lead about a wife or sister, to forbear working, as Cephas and other apostles did, and to a support from the churches. The Corinthians supported their school teachers and their heathen priests; they paid their soldiers and fed their oxen, and it was nothing but right for them to give temporal things for the temporal support of those who ministered to them in spiritual things. They paid their laborers, and on the same principle of common honesty they ought to support their preachers. Do it liberally, generously and cheerfully; not grudgingly. He gave them to understand that a sparse sowing of temporal things was the real cause of spiritual dearth in the church. Paul tells them that the great majority of men were striving after temporal things, and that they measured his corn in their own half bushel, and judged him by their own evil thoughts, but he was seeking them and their souls, and not their money. He had a right to pay, but he used not this right or power, lest he might abuse it. He tells the Corinthians that the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel. Not to support the preacher is to violate the ordinance of Christ; it is to sin against God. Paul could say this to the church at Corinth because he was under no financial obligations to that people. It was plain talk, but true. If a preacher opens his mouth now on this subject some are ready to say he is avaricious; he preaches for money. But it must be said by some one, plainly but kindly.

Bro. Ralford has doubtless done his duty in supporting the preacher; perhaps he has done more than he ought to have done. I am not after him or his class, but I am after that large class who do nothing toward the support of the preacher, but allow such men as Bro. Ralford to do more than they ought to do. Common honesty, to say nothing of Christianity, ought to lead them to do differently. They disobey Christ, act dishonestly with the preacher and unbrotherly toward other members of the church. There is no greater reason why Bro. Ralford should pay another man's quartermaster than that he should pay his State and county tax. It is as unjust and as unfair for the man to allow him to do so in the one case as in the other. A principle of common honesty runs through church business as well as all other business. The man who acts unfaithfully in church business will have to account for it when God's court comes on. God, who cares for oxen, also cares for those whom he has called to be separated from all worldly cares that they may minister in spiritual things to those who are the stewards of God's temporal things.

God bless my good brother, and fill him full of grace and truth.

—Dr. Harrison's Centenary Manual will be out in two weeks and ready for distribution.

—Rev. S. A. Steel, of Memphis, will preach the commencement sermon at Vanderbilt University.

—Rev. R. S. Woodward, of Vicksburg, will preach the commencement sermon at Whitworth College.

—The debt against the Methodist Book Concern property in New York is being reduced at the rate of $61,000 a year.

—The new editor-in-chief of the London Times, Mr. Buckle, is just thirty years of age. Quite a responsibility for so young a journalist.

—Rev. S. H. Werlein, of the Louisiana Conference, will preach the commencement sermon at Centenary College, Jackson, La., June 1, 1884.

—A "Pastor's Centenary Subscription Book" has been published and will be furnished every pastor in the church for diligent use during this year.

—A nephew of the King of Corea, a son of its prime minister, and the son of a military mandarin, have entered the Southern Methodist College at Shanghai, China.

—We are glad to report Dr. J. B. Walker nearly ready for duty. Though yet quite weak he is steadily improving. He has come up from the very margin of the river.

—Bishop Isaac Lane, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, will be in the city on the twenty-second instant, and preach that evening in the Seventh Street Church.

—We are greatly obliged to Bro. Palmer for a copy of the Minutes of the Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It is most valuable to every preacher. Price, fifty cents.

—A much-esteemed personal friend of the senior publisher says: "We have never said anything about the ADVOCATE. It is one of our best papers, (of ten) and we enjoy reading it very much."

—Rev. John Pipes, writing from Mansfield, La., closes a business letter with these cheering words: "Please say that Mansfield Female College is steadily improving under the supervision of Dr. Grace."

—Dr. W. R. Lambuth and W. H. Park have our thanks for the first annual report of the Siscoch Hospital under their care. They are doing a grand work in connection with our Chinese mission.

—Rev. Dr. D. Curry contributes to April number of the Northern Methodist Quarterly Review an article on the "Scriptural Doctrine of 'The Devil.'"

—We regret to learn of the sorrow that has visited the home of Mr. G. T. Lathrop, former publisher of the ADVOCATE. His little daughter, Birdie, died on Sunday last, after a painful illness of twelve days.

—We regret to record the death of Rev. S. G. Colburn, of Little Rock, editor of the Arkansas Methodist. His was one of our most valued exchanges, and through those columns we took sweet counsel together.

—The temperance reform is making rapid headway in Germany. Physicians, ministers, lawyers, judges, State attorneys and men of all statuses are giving it hearty support. Better for Germany if she had not a single brewery.

—Rev. Dr. A. D. Mayo, of Boston, is visiting a number of towns in Mississippi in the interest of public education. His lectures are the subject to which we ever listened on that subject, and will bear rich fruit in our great Southwest.

—Prof. J. E. Harrison has been compelled to resign his chair in Centenary College on account of feeble health. He has returned to Nashville, and is in charge of West End Church—a pastorate made vacant by the death of Rev. R. T. Nabors.

—Rev. Dr. Samuel Rodgers and T. J. Magruder, of Baltimore, have been appointed an executive committee on the part of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to complete the arrangements for the approaching Christmas Conference.

—The Queen of Madagascar is said to have organized a police force to prevent the manufacture, importation or sale of intoxicants in her dominions. Sensible young sovereign. Would that her spirit dominated every executive and judicial officer of our great republic!

—That was quite a facetious comment on Unitarianism by ex-Gov. Ben Butler. Just before the election a Unitarian minister in Boston urged from his pulpit the necessity of "redeeming the State." Referring to it, after the election, Gov. Butler said: "As to that particular clergyman who talked about redeeming the State of Massachusetts, he has no Redeemer himself."

CHICKERING, WEBER, MATHU-SHEK, HARDMAN, guaranteed to resist dampness and to last for a great number of years. Swedish keys, no breaking of strings, no squeaking notes. Mason and Hamlin, and other organs of noted makers, very low in price. Music and musical merchandise of all kinds. Send for our catalogue and price list. We will deal with you finding it your interest so to do.
P. WERLEIN.
Established over 30 years.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From a Prominent Minister Writes.
Dr. Mearns writes: After ten years of great suffering from rheumatism and sciatica, with great nervous prostration and debility, and a general condition of weakness, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.
REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South, No. 12 Tenth Street, Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies.
I have been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.
Mrs. R. H. BOWEN, Grinn, Ga.
Dr. H. Mearns: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with the usual female irregularities and derangements, accompanying such a condition of a woman's health, I have been permanently relieved by the use of your Lemon Elixir.
No. 46 Chapel St., Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Mearns' Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 124 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, liver disease, fever, chills, faintness of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Flanagan, wholesale druggists, New Orleans, La.

Household.

FOR MY SAKK.—These three little words are the touchstone of love. The application of this touchstone begins with infancy and ends only with the end of life. If that baby in the mother's arms could speak intelligently it would say: "It is for my sake that a mother's eye watches unsleeping through the midnight hours, and her arms hold me until they are ready to drop off for weariness." "For my sake" many a successful man acknowledges gratefully that his parents toiled and economized in order to buy books and pay college bills. "For my sake" provides the sheltering roof and the arm chair for dear old grandma at the fireside. Take these three words into your heart, and you will rob home of its sweetness and human life of some of its noblest inspirations.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

COMFORTABLE CHAIRS.—If you cut the back legs of your chair two inches shorter than the front ones, the fatigue of sitting will be greatly relieved, and the spine placed in a better position.

GROWING ASPARAGUS.—The Country Gentleman says two things are necessary for the growing of good asparagus, namely, plenty of room for the plants to grow and copious manuring. The latter is best applied to thick beds by covering the whole surface with manure two or three inches thick late in the autumn, and forking it very early in spring before the new roots start. Thick beds, however, should not be planted, but the plants allowed three or four feet each way to each. Three by five is a common and suitable distance, and large stalks may be obtained in this way.

HOW TO TREAT A COW.—Farmers seem to have the impression that in their herd they have a fountain which will supply them good, pure milk by simply drawing it, without much regard as to when or how. If a man kicks a cow in the udder the result is very apparent in a blood-tinged milk. He kicks her in the ribs or mauls her on the neck the consequences may not be immediately visible, but damage is nevertheless done and loss will certainly follow.—Midland Farmer.

ECONOMY IN COOKING.—Use suet in place of butter or lard. This will produce excellent results, and for many purposes it is better than either of these. Some people who object decidedly to cakes fried in lard, roll them when suet is used for frying. Beef balls are very nice fried in suet. Round steak can be used for these. Chop the meat fine, season well with pepper and salt, and any herb you may choose, shape them like flat balls with your hands, dip in egg and fine cracker or bread crumbs, and fry in the hot suet.

VEGETABLE BROTH.—This may be made of various combinations and proportions of the vegetables used in making soups, to suit different tastes or fancies. The following recipe will serve as a basis. Take four turnips, two carrots, one onion, and a spoonful of lentil flour. Cut the vegetables in pieces, and boil all the ingredients together until well cooked, in water sufficient to make a thin soup.

STEAMED PUDDING.—Mix three parts of bread or crackers cut in small pieces, one part of apples cut in small pieces, and one part of dried sweet fruit, raisins, dates, figs, or a mixture of them, chopped fine; add sufficient water to prevent the pudding drying while cooking; mix thoroughly and steam four or five hours, according to quantity.

BEAN SOUP.—Wash the beans; put them in cold water and raise the temperature slowly to the boiling point; add water enough to have the soup of the thickness desired; boil until the beans are softened, press them through a colander, and boil for a minute or two. Sage, soaked, may then be added if desired.

SNOW-BALL PUDDING.—Pare and core large mellow apples; fill the cavities with raisins or raisins; immerse them in cold water spread over with boiled rice; bake one hour. Before turning them out they should be dipped in cold water. Stewed currants or figs make a good sauce for this kind of pudding.

BROWN BREAD.—Scald two parts of corn-meal, let it stand one or two hours, add two parts of rye and one of wheat-meal; mix thoroughly, and as stiff as can be stirred with a strong iron spoon; add raisins or currants if desired, and steam five or six hours; then place it in a moderate oven two hours. It may be served warm or cold.

GRAPE AND APPLE SAUCE.—Equal parts of stewed grapes and sweet apples strained through a thin cloth, and thickened with a little rice or Graham flour, make a rich sauce for rice, hominy, samp, and other mushes. Sour apples and dates may be used instead of sweet apples.

DUSTY CARPETS.—A carpet, especially a dark one, often looks dirty when it does not need sweeping; wet a sponge in water (a few drops of ammonia helps to brighten the color) wring it quite dry, and wipe off the dust.

Eggs.—Scrape or wash boiled eggs very fine. Add a very little mustard, vinegar and sweet oil. You will think that you are eating something finer than lobster salad.

Said Mrs. Smith, who had come to spend the day, to little Edith: "Are you glad to see me again, Edith?" Edith: "Yes, m'm; and mamma's glad, too." Mrs. Smith: "Is she?" Edith: "Yes, m'm. She said she hoped you'd come to-day and have it over with."

FROZEN FRUIT CREAM.—One pound of fruit, one quart of cream, creamed, sweetened, and well mixed, put in a fine sieve, place in a freezer; as it freezes scrape down from the sides like ice cream; if moulded in fancy forms it must first be frozen, then packed well in the forms and repacked in ice and salt, like the beginning; place the forms in warm water for a moment so as to turn out nicely.

WHOLE PEARS PRESERVED.—To each pound and a half of pears allow one pound of loaf sugar, a gill of water, the juice and rind of a quarter lemon and a tiny bit of whole ginger. Make a syrup of this, boiling and skimming for half an hour. Then put in the pears (previously peeled) and boil twenty minutes, take them up carefully and boil the syrup by itself ten minutes longer. If coloring is liked put in a few drops of cochineal, put back the pears, just give them another boil; let them cool.

Impossible Escape.

ABSOLUTE TRUTH WITH COLLATERAL PROOF FROM WHICH THERE CAN BE NO APPEAL.
For the past three years we have had a standing offer of $5,000 for any statement of cure published by us which was not, so far as we know, bona fide. We did this in order that all readers might know the absolute truth of all our assertions and that they were based upon the value of our remedy and not upon idle words. Below we give a few extracts from recent letters, which speak for themselves. We will only add that we could furnish one hundred thousand more of a similar nature did occasion require, but we believe the entire American public is now convinced of the positive value of Warner's Safe Cure.
H. H. WARNER & Co., Rochester, N. Y.

"I suffered for years with calculus, but have been fully cured by Warner's Safe Cure."
"Monroe, N. C."

"I have used Warner's Safe Cure in my family with most satisfactory results."
"Mobile, Ala." R. E. WILMER, Bishop.

"The result of the use of Warner's Safe Cure in my case was simply amazing."
"Meridian, Miss." L. A. MORRIS, Southern Baptist.

"Warner's Safe Cure saved my life from death by Bright's disease and I can not say too much in its praise."
"O. J. REGISTER, M. D., Atlanta, Ga."

"I do most solemnly affirm that Warner's Safe Cure, with God's blessing, has cured me after I was given up to die of Bright's disease."
"Edge Hill, Pa." C. S. DUNTON.

"I have been saved from the greatest agony and premature death by means of Warner's Safe Cure and cordially commend it to all."
"Quilman, Ga." EDWARD R. HARDEN, District Judge.

"I had the best medical skill the country afforded, but it was given up to die. As a last resort I began using Warner's Safe Cure and was a well man in six months, and am perfectly well to-day."
"Turtle Bayou, Texas." L. D. STAMPS.

"Less than a dozen bottles of Warner's Safe Cure for kidneys and liver, cured me of the black jaundice (my skin being as black as a stove), hemorrhage of the kidneys and a general breaking down of the system. That was two years ago and the cure was permanent."
"Proprietor of Tooke Hotel," Columbus, Texas. DAVID TONKE.

"When a little girl I had measles, which culminated in a severe form of chronic rheumatism. For years I suffered intensely, oftentimes being unable to walk because of lumbago. I was treated by the best physicians without results whatever. Six years ago I was attacked with serious kidney affection, which rapidly increased in violence, resisting all medical skill. At length every organ in my body seemed implicated. I was indeed prostrated and not able to leave my bed. None of the many doctors seemed to understand my case. I took 8 bottles of Warner's Safe Cure, regained 35 pounds and am a perfect health."
"Mrs. A. L. SIMPSON, Pendleton, S. C., Fashionable Dressmaker, 2350 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo."

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW JOB OFFICE

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

LETTER, NOTE AND BILL HEADS,

VISITING CARDS,

BLANKS

Blanks for Clerks of Court, blanks for Masonic Lodges, blanks for Granges, &c., blanks for Co-Operative Stores.

AND—

All Kinds of Job Work.

Executed in the best style and prices as low as any city in the North or West.

Send your order to

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street.

603,292

SINGER SEWING MACHINES

Sold In The Year 1882.

BEWARE OF

WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

GREAT REDUCTION

in prices of NEEDLES for all

Machines, and parts for the Singer Machine. Singer Sewing Machine Needle, 10c per doz., two doz. 25c.

All other styles from 15c. to 25c. Oil, 6c. a bottle. Singer buttons, 25c. each.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue and Price List.

Also, ask for the book "Genius Rewarded" (History of the Sewing Machine).

McCall's Sewing Patterns, Catalogue Free.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

185 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

S. E. RUNDLE, Agent.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $250 per month, made selling our fine Sewing Machines.

Send to J. C. McCurdy & Co., St. Louis, Missouri.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Publishing House Column,
M. E. Church, South,
NASHVILLE, - - - Tenn.

SUNDAY - SCHOOL PERIODICALS,

PUBLISHED BY THE

Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Sunday-School Magazine, per annum, $1.00.

Five or more, to one address, per annum, 75c.

Five or more, to one address, per quarter, 25c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per annum, 50c.

The Intermediate Quarterly, per annum, 75c.

Five or more, to one address, per annum, 50c.

Five or more, to one address, per quarter, 25c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per annum, 50c.

Illustrated Lesson Paper, per annum, 75c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per annum, 50c.

Our Little People, per annum, 75c.

Five or more, to one address, per annum, 50c.

Sunday-School Visitor, per annum, 75c.

Weekly-Ten or more, to one address, per annum, 75c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per annum, 50c.

Best Monthly-Ten or more, to one address, per annum, 75c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per annum, 50c.

Monthly-Ten or more, to one address, per annum, 75c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per annum, 50c.

Southern Methodist Publishing House,

NASHVILLE, TENN.

1836. 1884.

Christian Advocate

GENERAL EDITOR OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

O. P. FITZGERALD, D. D., Editor.

Twenty pages every week. Only $2 a year; $1 to practitioners. The largest circulation of any paper in the South. Sound, lively, progressive, pure. No word which can be read without profit or in polite society admitted in any advertisement. A paper for the old, the young, the every body. ADDRESS

SOUTHERN METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE,

NASHVILLE, TENN.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS

OF

FORTY YEARS.

BY

HENRY HEARTWELL.

A New and Beautiful Book, filled with

SKETCHES FROM REAL LIFE.

Many of them THIRTLING—all of them interesting. 12mo. 211 pages. Price $1 by mail, to any address.

Send orders to Southern Methodist Publishing

House, Nashville, Tenn.

THE COLORED RACE

WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE.

BEING A REPLY BY C. K. MARSHALL, D. D., OF Vicksburg, Mississippi, to the Speech of J. L. Tucker,

D. D., made before the Protestant Episcopal Church

Congress, held in Richmond, Va.

Read for a specimen copy.

Send orders to the author at Vicksburg, Miss., or Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

Have Become a Leading Article in the PUBLISHING HOUSE.

THE Bible, and Reference, and Exposition are indispensable to the Preacher, Teacher, or Student of the Bible. They comprise the History and Genealogy of the People of Israel, and the Testaments; Index of Subjects and Proper Names,

Parallel Readings, Animals, Birds, Insects, Trees,

and the Bible as a Whole. A full and complete

Table of Weights, Measures, Coins, and Chronology.

Each of the Bibles is a very fine volume, and interest to the Bible-reader can be condensed in on this space. We have the largest and great variety of size and binding and cost, ranging from $1.50 to $12. When requested the name of the book will be printed on order and sent without additional charge. Very appropriate for Christmas or New Year's Presents. Send for a Circular and Catalogue showing size of type, price by mail, postpaid. Address Southern Methodist Publishing House,

Nashville, Tenn.

THE CHILD IN THE MIDST

OR

The Sunday - School of Today.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PILLLOW-INHALER!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!
CATARRH, BRONCHITIS AND CONSUMPTION CURED.

ONE THING IT DOES—IT CURES!

It is a Mechanical Pillow that is used the same as one's ordinary bed-pillow. It contains reservoirs for volatile medicines and molasses to control inflammation. The medicines and molasses used in these reservoirs are the most healing and disinfecting that science and experience have been able to formulate for the purpose required. They are entirely safe and do not inflame in perfectly comfortable; a child can use it. There are no pipes or tubes for the mouth or nose. Each night, (the dangerous period of the twenty-four hours, for about eight hours, health enters the body of the afflicted sufferer by every breath he draws. It conquers disease by a continuous application of curative air to the diseased membrane of the respiratory organs, and while spreading stimulating and soothing agents upon inflamed tissues and soothing the blood, soothes through every drop in the body for vestiges of disease and annihilates them.

CATARRH.
BRONCHITIS.
CONSUMPTION.

HERE IS ONE TESTIMONY OUT OF HUNDREDS.

A CURE OF THE WORST TYPE OF CATARRH.

I was afflicted with the worst kind, and then I was cured by the Pilllow-Inhaler. I suffered with this disease for years, and gave up all other medicine, and now I am in perfect health. I can now do all the work I wish to do, and I feel that I owe my recovery to the Pilllow-Inhaler. The doctor in my neighborhood, Dr. J. C. Hildreth, has cured many cases in Philadelphia and Baltimore.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 CANAL STREET,
15 Bourbon Street, 15 Dauphine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.
House Established in 1842.

Keep at all times a most complete assortment of European and Domestic

DRY GOODS

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will find Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

Samples sent throughout the country, and orders promptly executed.

The BONNET and DRESS-MAKING Departments are placed in most SKILLFUL HANDS.

ALF. T. BAKER, THOMAS SLOO, CHARLES M. WHITNEY

BAKER, SLOO & CO.,

George Horter and Hannell & Co.

SADDLERY, HARNESS AND COLLARS,

AGENTS FOR—

S. Y. Bell and Packing Co.'s Rubber Belting Packing and Hose; Leather Belting; Southwick Bros.

Oil and Dressing for Rubber and Leather Belts; Norris' Pulley Cover; Lace; Leather; Rivets and, etc., etc.

Nos. 6 Magazine and 54 Canal Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

121, 123, 125 Common St.

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS AND TRUNKS.

Watches.

We are selling the watches of the American Watch

Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold

anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $15 to $25.

Key-winding Gold Watches at $35 and upwards.

All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. G. GRISWOLD & Co.,

119 Canal Street, New Orleans.

YALE & BOWLING,

WHOLESALE

DRY GOODS

AND NOTIONS

45 Magazine Street,

New Orleans.

WM. H. BEAUD

JNO. I. ADAMS & CO.,

Wholesale Grocers

Commission Merchants

No. 4, 6 and 47 Peters Street,

(Formerly New Levee).

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE Grand New Book

"WOMAN AND TEMPERANCE,"

By FRANCES WILLARD, 75 Pr...

C. T. U.

The leading temperance manual in America. The author is the most successful and influential woman of the age. This book contains all the facts and arguments in support of the temperance cause. It is the most complete and authoritative work of the kind ever published. It is a must for every temperance worker. It is a must for every school. It is a must for every family. It is a must for every church. It is a must for every community. It is a must for every nation. It is a must for every human being. It is a must for everywhere. It is a must for everywhen. It is a must for everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

everywhere and everywhen. It is a must for

Christian Advocate.

In James Anthony Froude's sketches of South Africa, he tells of a woman he heard on ship board, of which he says: "It reminded me of the nation of a squirrel in a cage, the repetition of a single idea with scarcely a variation of without natural ending and capable if necessary, of going on forever."

Alas! how many such women are heard in these times, only that some of them lack the single idea, having no clear, distinct, definite and well formulated idea at all. We once heard a South Carolina preacher compare them to a load in a well going round and round but never ascending, descending or going forward. There are times when preachers must study and pray; and pray and study if they meet the demand of this hour, or discharge their duty.—St. Louis Advocate.

Why Suffer Pain?

When by using the Vitalizing Treatment of Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 Grand St., Philadelphia, the chances are all in favor of your getting prompt relief; especially if the pain has its origin in nervous derangement. In Neuralgia, sick headache, and the various affections of which these are among the most distressing, this new treatment acts with remarkable promptness. Write for pamphlet giving information about this Treatment, and it will be sent.

Every man needs help; no matter how self-reliant, vigorous, strong he may be, he needs both Divine and human aid. All Christians undoubtedly feel the need of the former, but some evidently do not fully realize their need of the latter. The weakling recognizes the strength that comes to him from contact and intercourse with those who are strong, but the stronger does not always recognize the help he gets from those who are weak; yet as the most learned will frequently get a valuable hint from the uneducated, so the spiritually strong will get aid from the faint and the feeble. Let us not forget that we need not only the help that comes from God, but that which comes from man also.—Domestic Journal.

PRUDENTLY BREAK UP YOUR COLD by the timely use of Dr. Jayne's Expecto-rant, an old remedy for Sore Throats and Lungs, and a certain curative for Coughs.

MISCELLANEOUS.

W. G. WHEELER,

Clothing and Furnishing

GOODS,

Successor in Wholesale to

WHEELER & PIERSON,

86 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS

BODLEY BROTHERS,

OFFICE OF

Wagon Repository, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100, 102, 104, 106, 108, 110, 112, 114, 116, 118, 120, 122, 124, 126, 128, 130, 132, 134, 136, 138, 140, 142, 144, 146, 148, 150, 152, 154, 156, 158, 160, 162, 164, 166, 168, 170, 172, 174, 176, 178, 180, 182, 184, 186, 188, 190, 192, 194, 196, 198, 200, 202, 204, 206, 208, 210, 212, 214, 216, 218, 220, 222, 224, 226, 228, 230, 232, 234, 236, 238, 240, 242, 244, 246, 248, 250, 252, 254, 256, 258, 260, 262, 264, 266, 268, 270, 272, 274, 276, 278, 280, 282, 284, 286, 288, 290, 292, 294, 296, 298, 300, 302, 304, 306, 308, 310, 312, 314, 316, 318, 320, 322, 324, 326, 328, 330, 332, 334, 336, 338, 340, 342, 344, 346, 348, 350, 352, 354, 356, 358, 360, 362, 364, 366, 368, 370, 372, 374, 376, 378, 380, 382, 384, 386, 388, 390, 392, 394, 396, 398, 400, 402, 404, 406, 408, 410, 412, 414, 416, 418, 420, 422, 424, 426, 428, 430, 432, 434, 436, 438, 440, 442, 444, 446, 448, 450, 452, 454, 456, 458, 460, 462, 464, 466, 468, 470, 472, 474, 476, 478, 480, 482, 484, 486, 488, 490, 492, 494, 496, 498, 500, 502, 504, 506, 508, 510, 512, 514, 516, 518, 520, 522, 524, 526, 528, 530, 532, 534, 536, 538, 540, 542, 544, 546, 548, 550, 552, 554, 556, 558, 560, 562, 564, 566, 568, 570, 572, 574, 576, 578, 580, 582, 584, 586, 588, 590, 592, 594, 596, 598, 600, 602, 604, 606, 608, 610, 612, 614, 616, 618, 620, 622, 624, 626, 628, 630, 632, 634, 636, 638, 640, 642, 644, 646, 648, 650, 652, 654, 656, 658, 660, 662, 664, 666, 668, 670, 672, 674, 676, 678, 680, 682, 684, 686, 688, 690, 692, 694, 696, 698, 700, 702, 704, 706, 708, 710, 712, 714, 716, 718, 720, 722, 724, 726, 728, 730, 732, 734, 736, 738, 740, 742, 744, 746, 748, 750, 752, 754, 756, 758, 760, 762, 764, 766, 768, 770, 772, 774, 776, 778, 780, 782, 784, 786, 788, 790, 792, 794, 796, 798, 800, 802, 804, 806, 808, 810, 812, 814, 816, 818, 820, 822, 824, 826, 828, 830, 832, 834, 836, 838, 840, 842, 844, 846, 848, 850, 852, 854, 856, 858, 860, 862, 864, 866, 868, 870, 872, 874, 876, 878, 880, 882, 884, 886, 888, 890, 892, 894, 896, 898, 900, 902, 904, 906, 908, 910, 912, 914, 916, 918, 920, 922, 924, 926, 928, 930, 932, 934, 936, 938, 940, 942, 944, 946, 948, 950, 952, 954, 956, 958, 960, 962, 964, 966, 968, 970, 972, 974, 976, 978, 980, 982, 984, 986, 988, 990, 992, 994, 996, 998, 1000.

Canter Wagons, small Cabs, and

Black Locust Hubs, Bodley's Steel Axle Wagons,

the best axles wagons sold. Wheel-barrow, Axle

Grass Spikes, Pellets, Curbs, Wheel-barrow,

Stable Shavers, Wagon and Carriage Material.

Can deliver goods along the river, direct from factory, and in car loads on railroads.

CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE.

One thousand acres, cypress

timber lands. Situated in townships 10 and 11, south range 10 east, south-western land District of Louisiana.

For information,

Apply to

N. O. Christian Advocate,

112 Canal Street,

New Orleans, La.

HEADQUARTERS

FOR

Sunday - School Supplies:

Consisting in part of

GOSPEL HYMNS, single and Combined,

With and without Music.

Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Teacher's

Bibles, Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bible

Dictionary, etc.

Union Primers, First and Second Reading Books;

Union Spelling Books; Union Question Books;

Catechisms; Reward Cards; Scripture Text Cards;

Tickets, etc. Also a large assortment of books suitable for Sunday School Libraries, or presents to children. Pulpit and Family Bibles, from $2.50 to $15. Liberal discount to ministers, churches and Sunday-schools. Catalogues sent on application.

W. D. SKILLMAN,

Bookseller and Manager,

84 Canal Street, New Orleans.

NEW CHINA

MATTING

AT LOW PRICES.

A. Brousseau's Son

22 and 24 Chartres Street 22 and 24

LACE CURTAINS

From $1.50 Pair up.

WINDOW SHADES.

OIL CLOTHS, CARPETS,

All the Latest Styles and Novelties.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY,

Relins of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches,

Belles, Fire Alarm Bells, etc. FULLY

WARRANTED. Catalogues sent Free.

VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY

Manufacturers of

Relins of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches,

Belles, Fire Alarm Bells, etc. FULLY

WARRANTED. Catalogues sent Free.

VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY

Manufacturers of

Relins of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches,

Belles, Fire Alarm Bells, etc. FULLY

WARRANTED. Catalogues sent Free.

VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY

Manufacturers of

Relins of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches,

Belles, Fire Alarm Bells, etc. FULLY

WARRANTED. Catalogues sent Free.

VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.—The following story of a reckless young man suggests a possible comfort in the case of other erring loved ones:—

A lady in Baltimore had a wayward son, whose reckless conduct cost her many tears. There were many things in his life to make her happy, but her anxiety for her headstrong boy saddened all her enjoyments and disturbed her peace.

He grew more indifferent to her love, and finally left his home for a life of adventure in the West. But happiness did not come to him in his wild career, nor riches from his eager search in the mines. For a time the new freedom gratified him; but his restless spirit could not be contented, even with that. By some means his mother kept track of his wanderings, and was able to send him messages of love, but they brought him no reply. At a meeting in Baltimore she heard the Rev. Robert Lowry's touching poem on "Home," that has been so often sung, and the words exactly uttered her own feelings:—

Where is my wandering boy to-night,
The boy of my tenderest care,
The boy that was once my joy and light,
The child of my love and prayer?

"Bring me my wandering boy to-night,
Go search for him where you will,
But bring him to me with all his blight,
And tell him I love him still."

"Oh, where is my

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending April 15, 1884.)

COTTON.

Low ordinary	10 1/2	10 1/2
Ordinary	10 1/2	10 1/2
Good ordinary	10 1/2	10 1/2
Low middling	10 1/2	10 1/2
Middling	10 1/2	10 1/2
Good middling	10 1/2	10 1/2
Middling fair	10 1/2	10 1/2
Fair	10 1/2	10 1/2
Salvatore middling	10 1/2	10 1/2
Mobile middling	10 1/2	10 1/2
St. Louis middling	10 1/2	10 1/2

SUGAR.

Inferior	34	42
Common	42	42
Good common	42	42
Fair	42	42
Good fair	42	42
Fully fair	42	42
Prime	42	42
Choice	42	42
Yellow clarified	42	42
Gray clarified	42	42
Choice whites	42	42
Granulated	42	42

MOLASSES.

Syrup	26	29
Fair	36	39
Choice	36	39
Pure	36	39

RICE.

Choice	6	64
Prime	54	54
Good	54	54
Fair	42	54
Ordinary	42	54
Common	42	54
No. 2	25	54

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	5 00	6 00
Minnesota patents	7 00	—
Extra fancy	6 12 1/2	—
Winter wheat patents	7 00	—
Choice	5 40	5 60
Pancake	5 65	5 90

CORN PRODUCTS.

Cream meal	3 40	3 50
Corn meal	3 05	—
Grits	3 50	3 60
Houliny	4 00	—

GRAIN, ETC.

Wheat	71	72
Yellow	—	—
Mixed	—	69
Oats	—	—
Western	41	—
Texas rust-proof	—	—
Barley	—	—
Choice	20 00	22 00
Prime	17 00	19 00

PROVISIONS.

Pork	—	—
Meat	18 25	16 00
Prime meat	—	16 00
Beef	—	—
Choice breakfast	12	—
Shoulders	84	—
Sides, clear	104	—
Sides, clear rib	104	—
Hams	—	—
Sugar-cured	134	14
Dry salt	—	—
Shoulders	74	—
Sides, clear	94	—
Sides, clear rib	94	—

FISH.

Maceral	—	—
No. 1, in bbls	14 25	—
Half bbls	7 75	—
No. 2, in bbls	13 75	—
Half bbls	6 25	—
No. 3, in bbls, large	13 25	—
Half bbls	7 00	—

GROCERIES.

Coffee	—	—
Rio, choice	101	121
Cordeva, choice	13	14
Java, choice	10	22
Butter	—	—
Western dairy	25	—
New York dairy	25	—
Country	17	20
Lard	—	—
Choice	94	—
Choice	50	1 00
Fair	25	50
Coal, cases	18	—
Coal, bbls	13	—
Cotton seed	40	43
Lard	80	—

VEGETABLES.

Cabbages	—	—
Western	—	—
Country	—	—
Potatoes	—	—
Eastern	1 50	1 65
Western	50	1 05
Seed, Eastern	1 50	1 05
Seed, Western	50	1 00
Onions	—	—
Onions	20 00	—
Onions	1 50	2 00

BALING STUFFS.

Baling	104	—
Twine	114	—
Twine	134	—
Twine	1 30	—

SUNDRIES.

Poultry	—	—
Chickens, Western	4 25	5 00
Young	3 00	3 50
Chickens, South'n	4 00	—
Young	2 50	3 00
Turkey, Southern	12 00	16 00
Eggs	—	—
Western	15	17
Southern	15	18
Wool	—	—
Lake	20	—
Louisiana	18	—
Burly	9	15
Hides	—	—
Green salted	8	—
Dry salted	11	11 1/2
Staves	—	—
Oak, kegs	50 00	55 00
Oak, barrels	75 00	—
Oak, claret	50 00	110 00
Oak, hoghead	75 00	140 00
Hoop poles	—	—
Hoghead	40 00	—
Barrels	20 00	—
Half barrels	12 50	—
Fertilizers	—	—
Cotton seed	12 00	14 00
Meal (country)	25 00	—
Meal (city)	27 00	—
Pure ground bone	42 00	—
Muriatic acid	3	—
Sulphuric acid	24	—
Bone black	34	—

Address all mail matter to New Orleans Christian Advocate, New Orleans.

WS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 9.—Maria House, an aged negro from Liberia, was arrested at the city prison last night. She left Alabama in 1878 with a party of seventy-six negroes for Liberia. Most of them died with fever after getting there; only two have ever been able to get back to America, and only one of the party survive in Liberia. For six years the old women had been trying to save money to get back to Alabama. She says they can hardly work for the bigger flea, an insect which bites down under the skin of the feet, and breeds there, and literally eats the feet up. She says they cannot have their feet cut off as the flea cannot be moved when once they burrow under the skin, making horrible sores. She had saved $56 in six years, which she had passed to New York, leaving a few dollars over. She left for Alabama this morning.

PENNSYLVANIA, April 10.—About midnight last night the fire alarm was sounded for ward No. 2, in which is located the freight depot and engine house of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. It was a massive structure, recently built to replace the depot building of that company that was destroyed by fire on the 10th of February, 1883. The fire last night originated on the inside of the building, the explosion of a lamp. The flames spread rapidly and soon spread to the adjoining buildings and those in the vicinity.

At the time the fire was in progress there was a high wind prevailing and it threatened at one time to sweep the entire city. The volunteer firemen and citizens worked manfully, and finally succeeded in checking the flames.

DAYTON, O., April 11.—The wreck on the Little Miami division of the Paulsboro road at Miami River bridge, eight miles east of this city, last night, was complete. The train consisted of an engine, baggage car, and tender, and a sleeper. The engine and tender crashed through the bridge into the river below and were completely wrecked, while the baggage car, coaches and sleeper rolled down a twenty-foot embankment on the opposite side. The baggage car is a complete wreck, and the remainder of the cars were badly crushed. At the time of the accident the train was running at the rate of thirty miles per hour, and fell into the river without an instant's warning. Engineer John Thomas and Fireman John O'Connell went down with the wreck of the engine. The former was killed outright, while the latter is reported to have been taken from the unconscious when taken from the wreck. Conductor Pierson and other employees escaped with slight injury, excepting the baggage-master, George Cooper, and Express-Messenger Smith. Both were fatally hurt. The accident was caused by a rail displaced on the west end of the bridge.

LYNNHURG, Va., April 11.—After everything was got in readiness at Pocahontas yesterday evening, the police force placed a guard at the entrance to the mines, in order to keep back the crowd which had been attracted by notices posted that the bodies would be reclaimed. Two bodies were reclaimed, and the bodies were recovered. The bodies were placed in boxes on the inside of the mine and several were brought out together on a pole car. A number of miners, well acquainted with the victims, were placed at the entrance for the purpose of identifying bodies, but of sixteen recovered so far only six have been identified. Many of the bodies were horribly mangled; some had their heads blown off, others arms and legs torn from their sockets, and still others were dismembered.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 11.—The Kingston Presbyterian Church, of the Northern Presbyterian Church, today passed resolutions advising the members of that church to join the Southern Presbyterian Church in their locality. This is regarded as the most decisive step taken toward healing the breach since the war.

COLUMBUS, O., April 12.—The Legislature passed a bill to-day repealing the McConnellville or local option feature of the Scott's law, and providing for a semi-annual payment of the tax. The Legislature will adjourn on Monday.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Ex-Gov. Thos. A. Hendricks spent half an hour with Samuel J. Tilden this morning. In the afternoon a delegation of Congressmen from the Pacific slope were received by Mr. Tilden. These gentlemen had been called by appointment to ask Mr. Tilden if he is willing under any circumstances to run as the Democratic candidate for President.

Mr. Tilden thanked them, but said he could not possibly accept the nomination, and that if he were to be made a candidate and elected he would refuse to qualify.

ELIZABETH, Pa., April 14.—Shortly after 5 o'clock this morning an explosion of fire-damp occurred in the coal mine of John A. Wood & Son, near here, killing two men instantly and injuring several others.

WEST POINT, Miss., April 14.—This city was visited by another terrific wind and rain storm at 4 o'clock this afternoon, damaging cabins and fences to an unknown extent. The roof of the oil-mill was completely demolished, and the building and machinery otherwise damaged.

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 14.—A heavy shower, accompanied by severe wind, struck the city this afternoon. Rain fell in torrents, and considerable damage was caused by the wind.

GRENADA, Miss., April 14.—One of the severest wind and rain storms ever known occurred this afternoon one mile south of here. Houses were demolished, trees torn up, fences blown away and some stock killed.

yesterday morning, notwithstanding the heavy gale from the southwest, forcing the water into the bayou. With few exceptions all plantation lands on the east side of the bayou are submerged. It is estimated that 3000 acres of cane will be destroyed, entailing a loss in St. Mary of more than $500,000.

FOREIGN.

CAIRO, April 9.—The British Government has sent positive orders to Gen. Gordon to withdraw from Khartoum, with the garrison, as soon as possible.

LONDON, April 11.—Charles Reade died this afternoon.

The latest advices from Shanghai report a serious political crisis at Peking. The Emperor has publicly degraded Prince Kuang and four members of the privy council. They were stripped of all their honors because of the dilatory manner in which they have dealt with Tongkin affairs.

CAIRO, April 11.—English officers have been offered ten weeks' furlough. This is believed to be a foreboding an autumn campaign.

The German and Austrian Governments have presented identical notes to Egypt requesting payment of indemnity claims.

PARIS, April 14.—A statue of Gambetta was unveiled at Cahoea to-day.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, colleges, managers of boarding departments, and others would do well to address Mrs. P. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 170 Grand St., N. O. for prices of Goodwyn's Eureka Yeast Powder, a superior home product of the Crescent City. Positively free from Alum or any other hurtful ingredient. It not only invites, but encourages challenge comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Great New Southern Route

TO SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO AND OTHER CALIFORNIA AND MEXICAN PORTS.

Through Sleeping Cars from New Orleans to San Francisco.

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from Jackson Railroad Depot as follows:

Alexandria, 11 A. M. Houston, 11 A. M. Alexandria, 4:30 P. M. Houston, 4:30 P. M.

For further information apply to W. J. O'BRIEN, Ticket Agent, Office corner Magazine and Natchez Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Texas and Pacific Railway.

NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

Is the direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN AND CENTRAL TEXAS, and all points in Arizona, Old and New Mexico and California.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from Jackson Depot at 11 A. M. through to San Francisco via Alexandria, Shreveport and Marshall.

Through Express leaves New Orleans at 4:30 P. M. via Houston and San Antonio.

For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot.

A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent, A. S. GRAHAM, Passenger Agent, Marshall, Texas. H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. R. M. HOXIE, Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

FREE Send to receive FREE BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Atlanta, Ga. For illustrated Circular, 5th year.

THE OTHER LONG STAPLE SILK COTTON.—The best known. Write for pamphlet, giving particulars of yield per acre, and how to grow. Premiums taken at Louisiana Exposition, St. Louis, Little Rock, Montgomery, Ark., etc. Four thousand dollars in premiums offered. By postpaid or field and staple for 1884. J. D. OZICK, Corinth, Miss. Name this paper. Seed for sale. Price $1.00 per bushel.

It Will Pay You

READ! READ! READ!

GOOD READING

GOOD READING

CHEAP

As most every family takes secular, as well as religious journals, we have made arrangements to club with the following newspapers, at the rates

The first column of figures give the price of the publication per year, the second the price of the two, including our Advocate.

New Orleans Picayune	$2 00	2 75
New Orleans Times-Democrat	1 50	2 75
Southern Cultivator	1 50	2 75
Courier and Enquirer	1 50	2 75
American Agriculturist	1 50	2 75

Cash to accompany all orders. No reduction allowed on these rates for remittances. Will receive the subscription for all the leading newspapers in the United States.

CARVER & JAMISON, Publishers, New Orleans Christian Advocate.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The Brookhaven District Conference is to be held in Magnolia, June 12-15.

The New Orleans District Conference will meet at the St. Charles Avenue Church, New Orleans, May 15, 1884. Pastors will please report the Bishops' collection at the District Conference.

The Pensacola District Conference will meet at Evergreen, Ala., May 25. Opening sermon, May 25, at 7 P. M.

The Mobile District Conference will be held at Suggsville, Clarke county, Ala., May 1-4, exclusive. Bishop Keener will preside.

The Opelousas District Conference will convene at Lake Charles, Thursday evening, May 15, 1884. The members of the district will bring up the Bishop's collection, apportionment to each charge the same as last year; also their Quarterly Conference record books. Let all the delegates make their arrangements to attend this Conference season. Bishop J. C. Keener will preside.

The Shreveport District Conference will be held at Natchitoches, La., beginning at nine o'clock A. M. on Thursday, June 20, 1884.

The Greenboro District Conference will meet at Livingston, June 25-29.

The Brandon District Conference will meet at Brandon, June 10-22.

The Merit District Conference will be held in Wayneboro, June 25-29.

The Greenville District Conference will be held at Greenville, Miss., beginning at 9 o'clock A. M. on Friday before the second Sabbath in May. Bishop McIntyre will preside.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

GREENBORO DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Greenboro station, at Mt. Carmel, Apr. 5, 6. Newberry circuit, at Suggsville, Apr. 12, 13. Havana circuit, at China Grove, May 3, 4. Cuba circuit, at Cedar Grove, May 10, 11. Mobile circuit, at Cedar Grove, May 17, 18. Livingston and Kottaw, at Baton Rouge, May 24, 25. Choctaw circuit, at Womack Hill, June 1, 2. Butler and Mt. Sterling, at Mt. Sterling, June 8, 9. Demopolis and Leflore, at Leflore, June 15, 16. Gaston circuit, at Charlotte's Chapel, June 22, 23. Portland circuit, at Portland, July 6, 7. Gretna circuit, at Gretna, July 13, 14.

MOBILE DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waller, Mar. 23, 24. St. Francis Street, at St. Francis, Mar. 30, 31. Grand Bay, at Grand Bay, Apr. 6, 7. Citronelle, at Citronelle, Apr. 13, 14. Franklin Street, at Franklin, Apr. 20, 21. Blanton and St. Stephens, at Blanton's Springs, Apr. 27, 28. Lumberton circuit, at Lumberton, May 4, 5. Toulumville, at Toulumville, May 11, 12. Washington circuit, at Andrews' Chapel, June 1, 2. Natchitoches circuit, at Natchitoches, June 8, 9. Grove Hill, at Grove Hill, June 15, 16. Suggsville, at Suggsville, June 22, 23.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Louisiana Avenue, Apr. 29, 30. New Orleans, at New Orleans, May 6, 7. Bienville and Dorel's, at Bienville, May 13, 14. Algiers, at Algiers, May 20, 21. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, May 27, 28. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 3, 4. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 10, 11. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 17, 18. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 24, 25. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 1, 2. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 8, 9. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 15, 16. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 22, 23. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 29, 30. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 5, 6. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 12, 13. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 19, 20. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 26, 27. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 2, 3. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 9, 10. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 16, 17. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 23, 24. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 30, Oct. 1. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Oct. 7, 8. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Oct. 14, 15. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Oct. 21, 22. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Oct. 28, 29. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 4, 5. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 11, 12. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 18, 19. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 25, 26. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 2, 3. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 9, 10. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 16, 17. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 23, 24. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 30, Jan. 1. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 6, 7. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 13, 14. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 20, 21. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 27, 28. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Feb. 3, 4. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Feb. 10, 11. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Feb. 17, 18. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Feb. 24, 25. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 2, 3. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 9, 10. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 16, 17. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 23, 24. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 30, Apr. 1. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 6, 7. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 13, 14. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 20, 21. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 27, 28. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, May 4, 5. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, May 11, 12. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, May 18, 19. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, May 25, 26. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 1, 2. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 8, 9. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 15, 16. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 22, 23. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, June 29, 30. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 6, 7. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 13, 14. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 20, 21. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, July 27, 28. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 3, 4. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 10, 11. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 17, 18. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 24, 25. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Aug. 31, Sept. 1. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 7, 8. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 14, 15. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 21, 22. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Sept. 28, 29. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Oct. 5, 6. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Oct. 12, 13. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Oct. 19, 20. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Oct. 26, 27. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 2, 3. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 9, 10. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 16, 17. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 23, 24. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Nov. 30, Dec. 1. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 6, 7. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 13, 14. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 20, 21. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Dec. 27, 28. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 3, 4. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 10, 11. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 17, 18. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 24, 25. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Jan. 31, Feb. 1. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Feb. 6, 7. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Feb. 13, 14. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Feb. 20, 21. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Feb. 27, 28. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 5, 6. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 12, 13. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 19, 20. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Mar. 26, 27. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 2, 3. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 9, 10. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 16, 17. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 23, 24. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, Apr. 30, May 1. Lake Charles, at Lake Charles, May 6,

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate,
JOHN AND BISS.

BY THE EDITOR.

John, you must know our dark-eyed boy
Will reach five years in May.
While less our blue-eyed daughter fair,
Is just ten months to-day.

So fondly loved by us as they
That in our partial eyes
They are the sweetest, sweetest two
Now dwelling 'neath the skies.

That God has given them to us
Just floods our hearts with joy;
Oh! may he give us wisdom, too,
To guide our girls and boys.

To make them such as they should be,
In thought and word and deed,
Demands from us most watchful care,
Their growing steps to lead.

The training of their precious souls
Into God's fruitful trees
Can not be done without God's help,
Obtained upon our knees.

Praying for help to train them right,
Doing our best that way,
It would not be strange if, when grown,
They walked with God each day.

Our darling boy and darling girl,
If spared to us till then,
We trust may be both great and good
Among the sons of men.

In God's dear hands we put our two—Glad of our Father's care—
Safe keep he will our dark-eyed John,
And Bess, our daughter fair.

APRIL 1, 1881.

Are Infants Sinners?

If the question can be settled as to what is sin, or what will constitute an individual a sinner, the moral status of infants can then be more definitely settled. What, then, is sin? Sin is a violation of the law of God, and consists in volition, and is manifested in acts, words and thoughts. Of these infants are incapable, and, therefore, can not be considered sinners. But, says the objector, and particularly the Calvinists, the infant comes into the world in a state of total depravity, and is, therefore, a sinner. Right here, then, is the starting point in the investigation of this subject. If the doctrine of total depravity be a birth sin then infants are sinners, not because they have committed sin, but because Adam sinned. A question arises here: Is depravity a sin that will require pardon before infants can be fit subjects for the kingdom of God? For a satisfactory answer to this question the opinion of men, or a single text of Scripture amounts to nothing unless they agree with the general teaching of the Scriptures. To the Scriptures, then, we must rely for a correct answer as to what constitutes sin. Sin, as before stated, is a violation of the law of God, and must have connected with it volition, an overt act, word or thought, but the depraved or vitiated nature of infants is not an overt act, or, on their part, a violation of the law of God; therefore they are not sinners, but are the inheritors of a nature the tendency of which is to sin, and in after days to be led astray by temptation. Adam, in his state of purity, could have looked at the forbidden fruit, and even concluded that it was "pleasant to the eyes," and even as Eve was tempted by the serpent to eat of it, and still maintained his purity. Temptation is no sin, unless on the part of the tempted there be a lusting and desire to act in accordance with the temptation. James says: "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away by his own lust, and enticed; then when lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin, and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Temptation is not a sin; if so, Christ was a sinner. It requires an overt act to constitute an infant a sinner. True, the infant is born with a depraved nature and a tendency to sin, but not born an actual sinner.

The prophet Jeremiah says (xxxi, 29-30): "In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge. But every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge." In Ezekiel xlviii, 20, we are told that "The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son." St. Paul, in writing to the Galatians, says: "Every man shall bear his own burden." Our federal head and representative "ate a sour grape," and probably found it so sour that he never ate another one, and it was sufficient to bring upon him a curse, the consequences of which have been entailed on all his posterity. By this sin of Adam he was deprived of access to the tree of life, and rendered dependent on Christ, the Living Tree of Life, for life in its broadest sense.

According to the teaching of the Scripture no sin can be forgiven without true and genuine repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. If, then, infants are born sinners, and the condemnatory curse of Adam's sin resting on them, how are they, or even adults, to repent for that sin? In this case Christ has done for us what we could not do. In Galatians iii, 13, we are informed that "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." In this passage St. Paul evidently had reference to the moral law or the curse Adam incurred by an overt act. Again the same apostle, in writing to the Colossians, speaks of Christ as "Blotting out the handwriting against us," which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross. If Christ, then, has taken upon himself the curse of the law, and redeemed us from the sin of Adam, surely no one can be considered a sinner on that score. Christ, however, has not redeemed us from the consequences of that sin, which still remains as a detailed inheritance, this inheritance not being a sin, but giving to each a tendency to sin, consequently no one, in a strict sense, can be denominated a sinner without volition and an overt act.

The following will illustrate the view of the writer as to the moral condition of infants, as to pardon and justification, viz.: Suppose that a man be brought into court and tried for some crime that he is supposed to be guilty of, and by that court acquitted, and the question then be asked, What relation does that man sustain to the government? the answer would be a justified relation. In the court-room there is another man, who has never violated any of the laws of the government, and the question asked, What is his relation to the government? the answer would be a justified one, yet no court had ever justified him. So the infant who has never violated any law of God, by the virtue of Christ becoming a curse for it, stands in a justified relation to the government of God. If God in his providence sees fit to remove the infant from the troubles of this world he can change that native depravity to that of purity, and thereby qualify it for heaven, without any act of pardon or justification.

W. SPILLMAN,
COLUMBUS, MISS., APRIL, 1884.

Reviving the Class Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: A good deal has been written lately about reviving the Methodist class meetings. I quote the following from the article signed "S." in the ADVOCATE of the thirteenth instant: "The Methodists did not originate the class meeting; they only revived it. It was born with the Christian church. It was born of the instincts, necessities and aspirations of human nature hungering for heavenly truth and holy human fellowship. The Methodists gave it a name; but the thing itself was the inevitable revival of an apostolic institution, where the mighty work of God had brought back again the essential doctrine, polity and usages of the uncorrupted church of our Lord Jesus Christ."

All of this I endorse, and agree that the class meeting was not an invention, but the result of a live Christian experience. The very fact that it has died out among us is cause for alarm. Now, if the revived state of the church produced the class meeting, would not the same spirit keep it alive? What conclusion does the very fact that it is a thing of the past force us to? A serious question! Let us not pass it over lightly.

If three or four Christians, with a living, glowing experience, are thrown together they will almost inevitably have an experience or class meeting, and their hearts will be strangely warmed as they talk of the Master. I have seen many such an informal meeting, call it what you please. On the other hand, when there is little or no Christian experience in a church, the class meeting will be a drag, no matter how determined the pastor or leader may be to keep it up. I have seen a meeting under such circumstances when it was nothing more than a mere farce (excuse me for plain language when I say.) If not careful under such circumstances there will be more lies told than there are members in the class.

What we want then is a genuine, practical Christian experience in the church, and the class meeting will follow. I assert that one's creed is not a sure criterion by which to judge of his character; so we can neither judge of the inner character and spiritual condition of a church by its formula of doctrine. For instance, dancing and other worldly-minded gaieties are condemned by the law of all the orthodox churches, and yet what is the character of a large proportion of their membership? What rebuke do they receive except the silent law of the church, and now and then an occasional sermon or article in the church paper. These would indicate that such sin is condemned to the extent that it is not allowed, when such is not the case.

A man may be as stiff-necked and rebellious as Pharaoh of old, as hard-hearted as "the bloody Mary," as wicked in life as "Herod Antipas," and yet be as wise as Solomon and as orthodox as St. Paul. What an alarming thought, and yet who will deny it? This thought has struck me with more force lately than ever. Why? Because I see daily illustrations of its truth. Without depreciating the value of education, let me say the false idea is prevalent that religion can and must be taught. In a measure, some make a Saviour of education, hence the stress they place upon it. Common schools, academies, colleges and Sunday-schools are all necessary for the education and edification of our country. But unless we instill into all mankind the truth that every one must look to the "bills from whence cometh our help," all these things go for naught so far as religion and a godly life are concerned. A clean heart can not be taught into a man; the work of the Holy Spirit alone accomplishes this change. From God alone is the power obtained by which we overcome the evil within, and which surrounds us on every hand. We must "get religion," if you please. There are a good many kinds in the world, but that which comes off conqueror in the hard-fought battles, and rides successfully the stormy sea of life, and at last will be crowned with victory, honor and eternal life, is the religion which we get from him who "giveth to all men liberally." No matter how strong one may be physically, morally, intellectually or doctrinally, the moment he ceases to look to God for strength he becomes weak. Indeed, I am not like Elijah when he thought that he alone had been left, for I know there are many faithful and true ones in Israel, but I do hold that it is a fact that the character of the membership of our church is not what it has been or should be. Our church holds to the same doctrine which she did in olden times, and in an organized way she is wide awake spreading her borders and doing a large work; but have we not lost in the spiritual life and boldness of our members? I pray that in this our Centenary God may make us to see and feel our need, and restore to us the life-giving spirituality that characterized us of old, and may the time speedily return when we will not only insist upon the belief in the doctrine of the "witness of the Spirit," but demand the practical "fruits of the Spirit" in the daily walk and conversation of our members.

T. P. BARR,
JACKSON, MISS., MARCH 15, 1884.

"Or Other Cause."

Under section 5, answer 3, of our Discipline we have these words: "The roll of members shall be called at every meeting, unless otherwise ordered, and the Conference may strike off the names of any who, on account of removal or other cause, have been lost sight of for twelve months, provided, however, that if such member appears and claims membership, he may be restored by a vote of the meeting." What cause other than protracted absence by removal beyond the limits of the charge by which a member is lost sight of would warrant a church in striking off his name is not clear to many. There are three ways by which a member may lose his membership, viz.: by expulsion, withdrawal and removal. But this is for cause other than removal that he has been lost sight of. Did our law-makers intend that the name of a member who habitually, persistently and willfully absents himself from church should be dropped? I can scarcely see in what other way a member could be lost sight of as a member. If such was intended would it not be better for the pastor, when apprised of the fact, to visit the delinquent, ascertain, if possible, the cause of his non-attendance, and advise with him before dropping his name. I would be glad that you, Mr. Editor, or some one else, would inform us how this clause in the Discipline is construed, or what the practice is under it.

S. S. MOORE,
FRANKLINTON, LA., MARCH 20, 1884.

From the Benton Parsonage.

MR. EDITOR: Having recently seen several letters in the ADVOCATE from the "mistresses or heroines of parsonage homes," like the little folks of your paper I am reminded that they must not have the fun all to themselves, neither allow them to think they have the best appointments, kindest people or the most pleasant time any way. We have such a nice, convenient work, so compact, very little travel for the pastor, or necessity for his being absent from home a great while at a time. When we came there were two appointments, one six miles from town. Since we came a very neat building has been erected, just six miles in another direction, at a cost of $400. Everything about it is complete, except painting, which will soon be done, as arrangements have been made for that purpose. The house was dedicated free of debt, with a nice stove thrown in. You know it is sometimes rather troublesome for churches in the country to get stoves, and without them in winter congregations are rather small. In point of elevation we have a very decided advantage of most other parsonages. Our parsonage is in the town of Benton, on what might be very properly called Point Lookout, as we can see all the place, and at this season of the year a mile beyond. We have the full benefit of this windy weather. The north wind here is strong enough to be very exhilarating, if it is found to be so disagreeable. The wind seems to have had a most wholesome effect upon this and surrounding communities, as the storms of gifts, kind words and acts of friends would suggest. Had any of the writers referred to been present a little earlier in the winter they would have indeed wondered at the generosity and kindness of our people. My pen and mind are very much inclined to mention several names whose kindness, I am sure, has not been equaled at others place, but for fear of injustice to others I desist. We have had everything sent us, from a mess of broiled birds to an entire hog, such a nice supply of sausage, spare ribs, back bones, hog-head cheese, etc. Christmas holidays we were invited to several dinners, he were two turkeys at home, one from a deer two turkeys in the country, the other sent in Christmas morning, just ready for the table, with different kinds of oske and jelly. We had a little nice staying with us who has quite a relief for good things. When she saw our bountiful supply of dainties she clasped her hands, saying: "Aunt Bettie, ain't you glad you are a preacher's wife, because you get so many nice things?" We are furnished cows for our use; have one or two all the time, which we find is quite a luxury. The market value of all these things would be considerable, but the Christian affection and generosity which prompted their bestowal hold a much higher estimate in our hearts. May our heavenly Father richly reward all the good people among whom we are now living. I find this work improves upon nearer acquaintance, or seems so to me; probably I think so from the fact that we did not have all those fearful mud holes, hills and swollen waters of last winter's move, but have instead been comfortably settled around our cheerful fireside.

Our new presiding elder, Rev. John A. Ellis, left this morning, after spending (to us) a most pleasant week. Our first quarterly meeting was held last Saturday and Sunday; all the assessments for the first quarter met in full. We are very much interested in raising chickens, not missionary chickens, but preachers' and presiding elders' chickens, as we keep open doors and a standing welcome for preachers. I find nothing takes the place of chicken, hence the necessity of having some always ready. Have been very fortunate thus far. Would be pleased, Mr. Editor, to have you try them, later in the spring, when they get a little larger.

Preparations are being made to repair the church in this place, and, as the usual amount of planning and talking is about over, work has begun in earnest. One hundred and twenty dollars have already been contributed, and all seem interested. Every interest of the work seems to be improving. We hope for much good to be accomplished this year.

D. W. COOPER,
BENTON, MARCH 12, 1884.

At the first Quarterly Conference of the St. Charles avenue charge, New Orleans district, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That in the removal of Dr. S. E. Hale from our midst our church has lost a faithful and spiritual member, and our community an excellent Christian gentleman.

Resolved, That we cordially commend him to the attention and love of the Methodists and people among whom he now resides, and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the pastor of his church in Macon, Ga.

S. K. RUSS,
See Quarterly Conf.

From the Work.

FROM THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF ROBBEY.

MR. EDITOR: As our little society is in its infancy it becomes our duty to do our best to make every effort to insure its success. And with the aid and prayers of such true and faithful ministers as Mr. Drake, Dr. Andrews and Mr. Penn we shall most certainly succeed, if we only begin and continue with the right spirit, although we know so little of its duties and requirements. But as the little child must some day grow into noble and useful man or womanhood, as the sweet bud must some time form the perfect flower, may our mission so prosper that the tender plant, now so frail and delicate, may ere long grow into the tall and stately tree, beneath whose loving and protecting shade the poor, ignorant heathen of foreign lands will find happiness and rest.

MAGGIE HARPER,
ROBBEY, MISS., MARCH 20, 1884.

Wonders.

MR. EDITOR: At the Mansfield Conference, in January, 1883, I heard Dr. Morton say, when he was appointed to the office of secretary of the Board of Church Extension, it gave him the wonders. He said that he wondered all day, and the night following, he wondered until at last he wondered why he could not go to sleep. I have been troubled with the wonders myself for the last four weeks, which, if you will allow, I will state in detail.

On coming to the Rayville circuit I found that there was not a church on the circuit belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I commenced to wonder why this state of things. I then commenced to wonder if, with proper exertion, we could not build one, if not two, houses for the Lord this year. On presenting the subject to some of our most influential citizens I found they were anxious and willing, but, alas! the money; where was it to come from? They were unwilling to pledge themselves for the amount necessary, in as much as they had been overdrawn the past two years, and the water was fast covering their fields the present year. Therefore I commenced to wonder if the water would again cover the lands. I was not permitted, however, to wonder long on this point. On going to Rayville, a beautiful little town of about three hundred inhabitants, to fill my appointment, I found it entirely submerged; the people were forced to make scaffolds to pass from one place to another, or use boats. I went to a good Baptist brother to take dinner, and found (his) the Baptist preacher there. I remarked they were having a jolly time of it there, and to my great surprise and wonder, he replied: Not so! too much water here, which give me the wonders, in another direction, until late at night. Then I commenced to wonder if I would write to you my thoughts if you would publish them, and in this day of princely giving, if the Lord would not open the hearts of some, to give us the means to build a good church at this place. If they will, and send the amount to you, Mr. Editor, or myself, at Girard, La., we will acknowledge the receipt of same, and I do believe will aid our cause as much here at Rayville as any place in the world. We have nothing but the basement of the Masonic Hall, and it is occupied by Baptists, Presbyterians and Methodists alternately. Brethren, help us.

G. T. MUNHOLLAND,
GIRARD, LA., MARCH 24, 1884.

Obituaries.

CATCHING—Dr. JOSEPH B. CATCHING was born in Pike county, Miss., May 13, 1822; was married to Martha Bridges, daughter of H. F. and Marga Bridges, near Georgetown, Decatur county, Ga., in 1849. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1849. Dr. Catching "lived a quiet, peaceable life in all godliness and honesty." He made many friends; but few, if any, enemies. He died on December 21, 1883, leaving a wife and eleven children to mourn his loss. As a physician he was very successful in his practice. He was with the writer in the storm at Georgetown, last April. He escaped unhurt, and was among the most faithful in ministering to the wants of the sufferers. He, assisted by Dr. Robert Bridges, and others, dressed the broken arms that were now pinning and resolute. The following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted by the first quarterly conference of Providence circuit, Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, February 16, 1884:

Whereas, The Head of the church has seen fit, in his wisdom, to call from labor and suffering to rest and reward our brother, Dr. J. B. Catching; And, whereas, Bro. Catching has been identified as steward and trustee for several years, we deem it proper that this body officially notice his death and give an expression of grief at our loss; therefore, be it Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Catching we have lost from our circle a good and true man and a warm supporter of the church.

Resolved, That we humbly submit to the Divine behest, and do most sincerely regret this dispensation, and will be heart, that our loss is his gain; and that the peaceful close of his consistent and exemplary life should afford abundant consolation to his sorrowing friends and relatives. He is now safely housed in the mansions of the Redeemer and freed from all earthly sorrow.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the bereaved family in their irreparable loss, and pray that their great affliction may be sanctified to their eternal welfare; that God's grace may comfort and sustain them while they linger on this side of the river, and finally they may join their loved ones in the "heavenly beyond."

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of our quarterly conference journal, of Providence circuit, and that a copy of the same be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed in behalf of the Quarterly Conference,

H. P. LEWIS, Pastor.

LEGGETT—GEORGE A. LEGGETT died of typhoid pneumonia, at his residence, near Liberty Church, Clarke county, Miss., November 17, 1883.

Bro. Leggett was a man of most estimable character, and he was highly esteemed in the community where he lived. He was a kind, well-balanced mind. He was married to Miss Ada Carr, in 1872, whom he made a kind, indulgent husband. He was a tender, considerate father to his children; a true friend, faithful to his friends, and a patriotic citizen who felt a deep interest in his country. No man in any community ever had stronger friends, and whose loss was felt more. So much was the community attached to him that, some months before his death, he disposed of his property to go elsewhere, they gathered about him with strong and urgent appeals not to leave, but to stay in their midst.

Bro. Leggett joined the Presbyterian Church in early life, and remained in that church until 1873, when he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Shubuta, and was a lively, useful member to the day of his death. He was fond of Sunday-school work, and had been the successful superintendent at Liberty for several years. For some years he had at times felt that it was his duty to preach, but he had not fully made up his mind to enter upon the work of the ministry till a few months before his death. Had he lived he would have entered the great work to which God had called him.

He was willing to depart and be with Christ; but felt, if it was the Lord's will, he would live for his family. He seemed somewhat troubled about the unsettled state of his business, and talked freely to his partner, Bro. W. C. Calauer, only a few hours before his death. He knew his end was near, and calmly and unexpectedly about his death, giving assurances to the last that he was ready, being conscious till a few moments before he died. His end was peace. Another good and useful man has gone to rest; but his influence still lives among us.

W. N. DOMINICK.

ROOKS—Bro. J. J. Rooks was born at Wilmington, N. C., August 25, 1836, and died January 11, 1884.

His father died when he was about two years old, leaving him and other children in the care of his mother, who, with the family, moved to Georgia, and from there to Washington county, Fla., where he lived until the messenger of death moved him from this to the world of spirits, leaving his mother, wife and children to mourn his loss. His death, giving assurance to the last that he was ready, being conscious till a few moments before he died. His end was peace. Another good and useful man has gone to rest; but his influence still lives among us.

been for years prior) in a room, leaning on the bench, with an expression of gratitude to God for the privilege of being there, asked the Conference to allow one to office that was able to do this work of the church. Tears of grief ran from his eyes that he no longer could be effective. His afflictions were very grievous to the physical man, but not a word of murmuring came from his lips. He was a consecrated man, a man that both knew and loved God. He was a kind and affectionate husband, a beloved father, esteemed brother and friend.

May the Spirit of our God console the widow and orphans till God shall call them hence to join him in the climes of endless joy! Truly our loss is his gain. His last were his brightest days. He was subservient to the will of the heavenly Father. He leaves a wife and seven children to follow him. His last words were these: "These afflictions seem severe, though off in mercy sent. Soon, ah! soon there'll all pass away. Only a short time longer!"

J. H. CRAWFORD.

MEAD—Died at her home, in Republic parish, La., on the night of January 20, Mrs. MARY JANE MEAD, widow of the late E. B. Mead (one of the best known and successful planters of the region), aged seventy-six years.

Mrs. Mead had been for more than fifty years an earnest and devoted member of the Methodist Church, and was universally beloved on account of her godliness, gentleness, unselfishness and sweet Christian character. The house of the Lord was her delight, and to do his will her chief joy. Mrs. Mead was well-known to the older members of the Louisiana Conference, and the door of her house was ever open to the minister of the gospel of Christ. Her religious life had been part of her life for so many years, was her comfort in death. She entered the chill water without fear and with an unwavering faith and trust in the saving power of her Redeemer. She was visited by her pastor, Rev. J. M. Beard, after it was supposed she was unconscious, and the evidence of her power of mind and trust in God which she had before frequently expressed in view of the near approach of death which she realized. She was buried from the Pineville Methodist Church. Services were conducted by the pastor in the presence of a large throng of mourning friends. Having lived and died a Christian, we feel that she is in the "Christian's home."

DAY—It is sad to think how fondest hopes are sometimes blighted by the hand of death, and our fond desires crushed almost as we reach our hands to grasp them. Such is the case in the death of Robert Day, who died in Yazoo county, Miss., December 30, 1883.

While the war was in progress his parents died, leaving him to the care of his uncle, Rev. W. P. H. Day, who reared him as his own son (having no children of his own). Upon him he bestowed the affection of a father, and he grew to manhood under his loving care, and, naturally enough, looked to him for support and comfort in his declining years. But, alas! hopes were blighted. Robert was a good boy; dutiful, kind and obliging. He won the esteem of his fellows, and he died regretted by all. He was a model young man, and a great respect for the church and its ministers. He was an attentive Sunday-school scholar, and would have been with the church had his life been spared. May the great God comfort his father and mother in their declining years and bless them with all spiritual blessings!

ADVERTISEMENTS.

When the pores of the skin are open perspiration, the condition is favorable absorbing into the system any impurities the soap used will have failed to have failed to thoroughly rinse out of garments. Prof. S. man, of Yale College, says "The Ivory Soap is of remarkable purity, and may be safely used for any purpose."

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will clean your face and get rid of all the dirt and impurities from your skin. You are cordially invited to visit our

PHOTOGRAPHS
The Finest Establishment in the South

WASHBURN'S
Photographic Parlors

109 CANAL STREET.
Are situated within a block of the principal business and almost directly opposite the City Hall.

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever. We make every kind of portrait known and unknown to the miniature for the latest size in Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon and all the latest and most improved methods of the art. Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged to the likeness faithfully preserved.

Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society.

—Thanks to the secretary, Rev. C. F. Evans, for a pamphlet of the Minutes of the Louisiana C

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending April 22, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	8 1/2-10
Ordinary	10 1/2-11
Good ordinary	11 1/2-12
Low middling	12 1/2-13
Middling	13 1/2-14
Good middling	14 1/2-15
Fair	15 1/2-16
Good fair	16 1/2-17
Prime	17 1/2-18
Strictly prime	18 1/2-19
Choice	19 1/2-20
Second	20 1/2-21
Yellow cleared	21 1/2-22
Gray cleared	22 1/2-23
Choice whites	23 1/2-24
Graded	24 1/2-25

SUGAR.
Superior	34
Common	42
Good common	44
Fair	46
Good fair	48
Fully fair	50
Prime	52
Strictly prime	54
Choice	56
Second	58
Yellow clarified	60
Gray clarified	62
Choice whites	64
Graded	66

MOLASSES.
Syrup	26
Fair	34
Choice	36
Fancy	38

RICE.
Choice	54
Prime	56
Good	58
Fair	60
Ordinary	62
Common	64
No. 2	66

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 00
Minnesota patents	6 12 1/2
Extra fancy	7 00
Winter wheat patents	7 00
Choice	5 40
Fancy	5 65

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 40
Corn meal	3 15
Orzo	3 50
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
CORN:
White	67
Yellow	66
Mixed	63
OATS:
Western	47
Texas runt-proof	48
BRAN:
3 cwt.	97 1/2
HAY:
Fancy	24 00
Choice	23 00
Prime	17 00

PROVISIONS.
PORK:
Mess.	17 75
Prime mess.	18 00
Rumps	18 00
BACON:
Choice breakfast	11 1/2
Shoulders	8
Sides, clear	9 1/2
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	13 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders	7 1/2
Sides, clear	9 1/2
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2

FISH.
MACEREL:
No. 1, in bbls.	14 25
Half bbls.	7 75
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75
Half bbls.	6 25
No. 3, in bbls.	13 25
Half bbls.	7 00

GROCERIES.
COFFEES:
Rio, choice	10 1/2
Cardova, choice	13
Java, choice	16
BUTTER:
Western dairy	25
New York dairy	25
Country	17
LARD:
Choice	9 9/10
TEAR:
Choice	50
Fair	25
ONIONS:
Coal, cases	18
Coal, bbls.	13
Cotton seed	38 1/2
Lard	78

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western	15 00
COUNTRY:
POTATOES:
Eastern	1 50
Western	50
Seed, Eastern	1 50
Seed, Western	50
3 bbls.	20 00
ONIONS:
3 bbls.	1 50

BALING STUFFS.
BAGGING:
1 1/2 b.	10 1/2
2 b.	11 1/2
BALING TWINE:
1 1/2 b.	13 1/2
2 b.	14 1/2
TIES:
3 bundle	1 30

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	4 25
Young	3 00
Chickens, South'n.	4 00
Young	2 00
Turkeys, Southern	12 00
Eggs:
Western	14
Southern	15
WOOL:
Lake	20
Louisiana	18
Burly	9
HIDES:
Green salted	11
Dry salted	11 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, casks	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hogshead	40 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	12 00
Meal (country)	25 75
Meal (city)	25 75
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3
Sulphuric acid	2 1/2
Bone black	3 1/2

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 15.—While Mr. Pierce Moore was absent from home and his family, a lady neighbor was at supper, a negro man in the employ of Moore, came in and seated himself at the table. Mrs. Moore ordered him up from the table, and on his refusing to go, struck him with a piece of wood. The negro immediately seized an ax and struck her, breaking her arm the first blow. The second he split her head open, and the third he struck the ax in her breast. Monday the negro was captured. He was carried back near a grove of Lyons, tied to a tree and burned to death.

Yakima, Miss., April 15.—A cyclone struck the town of Black Hawk, yesterday evening, and destroyed considerable property. The Methodist District High School, boarding house and school building were damaged considerably, as was also the Methodist church. Several persons were seriously injured in and near Black Hawk.

Hannibal, Mo., April 16.—The New Orleans Presbytery met here this evening. Rev. H. W. Flynn preached the introductory sermon, after which the Presbytery was convened by prayer by Rev. Dr. Palmer. The Presbytery then organized by electing Rev. A. N. Wyckoff, moderator, and H. Ginder, clerk.

Memphis, April 16.—A well-known traveler who returned to-day from Mississippi, reports fully 1500 mules in Yalobusha and Grenada counties, Miss., as having fallen victims to buffalo gnats within the past week. Over 600 mules have been killed by these pests within a radius of ten miles from Grenada, Miss.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., April 16.—The news of the passage by Congress of the bill donating 40,000 acres of the public lands in this State to the University of Alabama has been received with delight here. This donation will compensate, in a great measure, for the destruction of the magnificent library and building of the university that were burned by Federal troops in 1865.

The Warrior River marked fifty-seven feet in its channel to-day, but it is now falling slowly. Thousands of acres of the richest bottom lands in the Warrior bottoms are under water. It is impossible to estimate the damage done by this sudden and unexpected rise.

Monroe, La., April 17.—Last night, a little before one o'clock, a fire broke out in Trenton. Nearly the whole business portion of the town was burned. With the exception of three every business house was destroyed.

Gadsden, Ala., April 17.—Last night, at about eight o'clock, the house of Jere Green, a colored man, living about two miles from Gadsden, on the opposite side of the river, was burned. At the time Jere Green and his wife were absent from home in attendance upon a negro church. There were in the house five children, aged respectively thirteen, nine, eight, six and four years. The eldest, a girl, escaped by leaping from a window. The remaining four were burned to death.

Dallas, Tex., April 18.—The severest storm in many years visited this city this morning. The wind jacked but a single element of a cyclone—a circular motion. The only serious casualty was the destruction of the African Methodist Church in Stringtown, a suburb. It was used as a school-house. The building was prostrated, trapping thirty children; fifteen were injured and two fatally. A great crowd at once assembled and rescued the inmates in a few minutes from under the wreck.

Montgomery, Ala., April 20.—The services at the Presbyterian Church to-day were most interesting. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Petrie, celebrated his twentieth anniversary as minister, and preached the same sermon he delivered when he first entered the ministry. His text was First Corinthians, first chapter, twenty-first verse. The church was crowded. At the prayer and thanksgiving meeting this afternoon congratulatory and appropriate eulogies were tendered to the pastor by Rev. Dr. Woodin, of the Baptist Church; Supreme Court Judge George W. Stone, and Judge Clapton. Prayers were offered by the Methodist and Protestant Episcopal ministers. Dr. Petrie responded to the addresses. Dr. Petrie is seventy-two years old, retaining his full faculties.

St. Louis, Mo., April 21.—A water-spout and wind storm demolished the house of a farmer named Bond, near Luckwood, Dale county, Mo., Friday night, killed one of his children, and injured several other members of the family.

Crockett, Tex., April 21.—A sharp north wind has been blowing for two days, with no abatement in severity to-night. A freeze may be expected. Crops are from three to four weeks late already. A great deal of corn has been planted over. Farmers are discouraged.

Kansas City, Mo., April 21.—A light snow has been falling the greater part of the forenoon and melting upon the ground.

Atchison, Kansas, April 21.—Snow has been falling steadily nearly all day, but melted as it fell. Toward evening the snow turned to rain, which is still pouring down.

Washington, April 21.—Mr. Jonas, in the Senate, and Mr. Ellis, in the House, to-day introduced a bill, which was referred in both cases to the committee on appropriations, appropriating $1,000,000 for the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition at New Orleans.

Jersey City, April 21.—Dr. Harrington, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the American Legion of Honor, was sentenced to-day to two years' imprisonment in the State Prison.

FOREIGN.

Berlin, April 16.—Von Bulow has been deprived of the title of court pianist for insulting Huisen, director of the royal theatres.

Paris, April 16.—Mlle. Colombier has been committed for trial for outraging public morals in her book.

Cairo, April 16.—Gen. Gordon has received a message from the English Government, urging him to withdraw from Khartoum, but ignores the advice.

London, April 17.—The Times says Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, has resolved before leaving Africa to break up entirely with expedition and solve the problem which will excite the grade of geographers. He intends to reach from the Congo country one of the Egyptian stations in the Mombuttu country on the Nilemakua River. This is the task that Gen. Gordon was intending to attempt before he was directed to Khartoum.

Cairo, April 17.—An English lady has offered £20,000 for the rescue of Gen. Gordon.

Gen. Gordon telegraphed Sir Samuel

Baker, under date of April 8, as follows: We have provisions for five months, but are hemmed in by 500 determined and 2,000 rag-tag Arabs. Our position will be much better when the Nile rises. Souneir, Kassaia, Dongola and Berber are quite safe for the present. Do you think if an appeal was made to the millionaires of England and the United States for £200,000 it would be available? If the Sultan of Turkey will send two or three thousand Nizams to Berber to Zehar Pasha we could not only settle affairs at Khartoum, but do for El Merdi, in whose collapse the Sultan is necessarily interested. I am sure it was known how loyally the inhabitants and garrison of Khartoum held to me and how my lot is involved in theirs, my appeal would be considered fully justified.

Gen. Gordon has notified the British Government, owing to the difficulty and delay experienced in sending and receiving communications, that he will henceforth act on his own judgment and responsibility.

London, April 18.—A fire at Rangoon raged two days, and destroyed forty-one houses; loss, £1,200,000.

Vienna, April 21.—During the performance in Sidioli's circus, Bucharest, this evening, the roof of the structure fell in. The light was extinguished and a terrible panic ensued, which was increased by the outbreak of fire. Five dead bodies and 100 wounded have been carried from the ruins. A large number of persons are missing.

Bermuda, April 21.—The French steamer Marseille, from New Orleans, bound to Bordeaux, was discovered to be on fire three days after leaving New Orleans. A terrific gale was prevailing at the time. The hatch was opened, and fifty bales of cotton were jettisoned, but the fire was so intense that the crew and passengers, though working with the energy of men anxious to save their lives, had to abandon operations, not, however, before several cases of asphyxiation occurred. The hatches were then battered down and it was decided to sail for Bermuda, 250 miles distant. On arriving here, with the assistance of the naval authorities, the fire was finally extinguished. Had the deck of the vessel been entirely of wood, nothing could have saved the ship.

The Sunday-school work in the State of Minnesota shows signs of a healthy and vigorous vitality. The first Sunday-school in the State was organized at St. Paul thirty-seven years ago. Now there are 444 schools, with 75,000 scholars, and 11,000 teachers and officers. During the last year there has been a net gain of 118 schools, nearly 4,000 scholars and 100 teachers and officers. In 1859, one year after Minnesota was admitted as a State, a Sunday-school Association was organized, which ever since has held its annual convention without an intermission. There is, however, still room for missionary work in the State, there being at least three counties which have no school at all; and sixty per cent. of the children who attend the public school are absent from Sunday-school.—New York Advocate.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. It cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low cost, shoddy, adulterated or phony products. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

It Will Pay You

READ! READ! READ!

GOOD READING

GOOD READING

CHEAP

As most every family takes secular, as well as religious journals, we have made arrangements to club with the following newspapers, at the rates annexed.

The first column of figures give the price of the publication per year, the second the price of the two, including our Advocate.

New Orleans Picayune $2 00 3 75
New Orleans Times-Democrat 1 50 3 75
Southern O. J. 1 50 3 00
Century Gentleman 1 50 4 00
American Agriculturist 1 50 3 75

Cash to accompany all orders. No reduction allowed on these rates for remittances. Will receive subscriptions for all the leading newspapers in the United States.

GARRET & JAMISON, Publishers,
New Orleans Christian Advocate.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The Winona District Conference will meet at Lexington, June 25-29.

THOS. Y. RAMEY, P. M.

The Alexandria District Conference will convene at Colfax, August 27, 1884.

H. S. CORNELL, P. M.

The Brookhaven District Conference is to be held in Magnolia, June 12-14.

J. A. S. JONES, P. M.

The New Orleans District Conference will meet at the St. Charles Avenue Church, New Orleans, May 15, 1884. Pastors will please report the Bishops collections at the District Conference.

J. D. WALKER, P. M.

The Pensacola District Conference will meet at Evergreen, Ala., May 25. Opening session, May 28, at 7 P. M.

S. G. FRAEMER, P. M.

The Mobile District Conference will be held at Singerville, Clarke county, Ala., May 1-4, exclusive. Bishop Keener will preside.

J. O. KEENER, P. M.

The Opelousas District Conference will convene at Lake Charles, Thursday evening, May 16, 1884. The preachers of the district will bring up the Bishop's collection, apportionment to each charge the same as last year; also their Quarterly Conference record. Let all the delegates make their arrangements to attend this Centenary session. Bishop J. C. Keener will preside.

C. KEENER, P. M.

The Shreveport District Conference will be held at Natchitoches, La., beginning at nine o'clock A. M. on Thursday, June 26, 1884.

H. P. ALEXANDER, P. M.

The Greensboro District Conference will meet at Livingston, June 20-22.

J. H. HANCOCK, P. M.

The Brandon District Conference will meet at Brandon, June 19-22.

F. M. WILLIAMS, P. M.

The Meridian District Conference will be held in Waynesboro, June 23-25.

JAS. A. OGDEN, P. M.

The Greenville District Conference will be held at Greenville, Miss., beginning at 9 o'clock A. M. on Friday, June 28. Second Session on Saturday, May 29. Let all the delegates make their arrangements to attend this Centenary session. Bishop J. C. Keener will preside.

JOHN W. PRICE, P. M.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Providence Camp Meeting will begin on Wednesday, July 30, and continue six days. The camp ground is located near Rockport, Louisiana, east of Hattiesburg. Preachers generally are invited, and will be furnished free transportation from Hattiesburg to camp ground and return.

H. P. LAWIS, P. C.

Quarterly Conferences.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Hempshire, at Bay Springs, Apr. 20

Spring Creek, at Bay Springs, May 3, 4

St. Charles, at Bay Springs, May 10, 11

Columbia, at Bay Springs, May 17, 18

Albany, at Bay Springs, May 24, 25

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, June 1, 2

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, June 8, 9

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, June 15, 16

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, June 22, 23

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, June 29, 30

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, July 6, 7

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, July 13, 14

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, July 20, 21

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, July 27, 28

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, August 3, 4

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, August 10, 11

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, August 17, 18

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, August 24, 25

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, August 31, September 1

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, September 8, 9

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, September 15, 16

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, September 22, 23

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, September 29, 30

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, October 6, 7

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, October 13, 14

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, October 20, 21

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, October 27, 28

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, November 3, 4

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, November 10, 11

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, November 17, 18

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, November 24, 25

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, December 1, 2

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, December 8, 9

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, December 15, 16

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, December 22, 23

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, December 29, 30

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, January 5, 6

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, January 12, 13

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, January 19, 20

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, January 26, 27

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, February 2, 3

Bayou Lafourche, at Bay Springs, February 9, 10

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 18.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1448.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

THAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
BARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Advertisers and writers of deceased preachers ask price.

For sale of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GONFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. S. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE BIRTH OF SONG.

BY MRS. MILLARD.

Attesting from the eternal throne,
From chaos deep rose groves and dowers,
And from the dawn of time to now,
Round the golden car the golden hours.

There was by angel hand led down
A perfect bird with breast of snow,
Whose throat green and golden throat
Through purple waves of beauty glow.

His song was all of love and peace,
And his voice was all of love and peace,
And his voice was all of love and peace,
And his voice was all of love and peace.

When the day's glory purples down
And the night's stars are all around,
Through Eden's grove the song doth raise,
And in celestial rills along.

See, sleeping, lies in her dream;
And waking, charmed she follows him,
Two Adam's birds her song doth raise,
And both do sing one song of praise.

Paradise bird (though stranger there,
He called that bird that sweet note,
And human song through Eden's door,
And human song through Eden's door.

And from that hour he sings no more,
Nor will he back to Eden's door,
Content to live his song doth raise,
And his song doth raise his song doth raise.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught,
And which sweet lips on earth have caught.

Head in that year. At the same time a great many young men joined the conference, and my father was at once appointed as a missionary to the Creoles of Louisiana—and to the Indians. As soon as the conference closed he started in company with Bishop George and Bro. Drake, a young man who had just joined the Tennessee Conference, and was transferred to the Mississippi Conference, where he lived and died, beloved by all who knew him. My father was very young to undertake such a work, but his heart had been given to God, and tired with holy zeal he determined to give his life to God's service. Provided with a horse, bible, hymn-book, and discipline, he started with the Bishop for his work in the unknown country of Louisiana.

As they traveled, Bishop George each day gave them a text from which to preach, as they would stop by the roadside for an hour to rest. One day Bro. Drake was appointed to preach, and my father the next. For some four or five years, my father continued in this work, and was then sent into Mississippi and preached in Natchez before there was any Methodist church in that city. "Natchez under the hill" was then in 1820 almost the entire part of the city, and had the name of being a wicked place. Many flat-boats from the North would land there, and many vessels from the Gulf came there for trade. My father went often to preach to the boatmen and sailors, and more than once had his life been threatened if he did not desist from preaching. On one occasion preparation was being made for preaching, when a motley crowd gathered around, many of them drinking, and having just come from gambling saloons became very boisterous. Some of them using very profane language wished to know why he came there, and before he had time to answer, several rough looking men came forward, and one said, "Come boys and we'll pitch him overboard." In a moment a stout Kentuckyman, who had been quietly looking on, threw off his coat and stood between them and the preacher and said, "The first man who touches this preacher shall feel the weight of my arm. Now go on parson and I'll see they don't trouble you." All quieted down and the service went on. At the close many of them came forward, shook the preachers hands and told him he would always be welcome. He did return many times and preached to them, and they proved to be his warm friends as long as he remained in Natchez. While in Louisiana my father found it necessary to learn not only the French language, but also the language of the Indians, for he had frequent occasions to preach in both languages. He had many friends among the French, and he had many warm friends among the Indians.

A touching incident of the conversion of a young Indian occurred while he was laboring among them in Louisiana. On one occasion my father had an interesting meeting for some weeks among the Indians when many of them were converted to God. There was in the audience a young Indian who was deeply convicted of sin during the revival, and came to ask the preacher what he must do to obtain peace of mind. He was told to go to the grove and pray, giving his whole heart to God. The next day he came back in great distress of mind and said, "Me give me dog, me give me blanket, me give me gun and me no get peace. What shall me do?" My father said to him, "Go back, and when you have given all these to God, then give yourself." He went off at once to the grove to pray, and in a short time he returned and said, "Me so happy. Great Spirit bless me. Me so happy, so happy."

The first mention made of any movement to plant Methodism in Mobile was in 1822 when Alexander Paily was appointed to the Pensacola District as missionary, and Mobile was included in this District. In 1825 H. P. Cook was appointed Missionary to Pensacola and Mobile. The first society was formed by him this year. The number of members in both were whites 37 blacks 47. Ebenezer Hearn was presiding elder, and his District was called Alabama District and belonged to the Mississippi Conference. In the years 1826 and '27 my father was appointed missionary to Mobile. In 1827 the first Methodist church in Mobile was erected by him. He employed an Indian to assist him in clearing away the underbrush for the church on the spot where stands the present Franklin Street Church. He helped with his own hands to prepare the logs for the church.

In 1827 the first Sabbath-school was organized. Mr. McCoy was superintendent and teacher of a class of whites. John Laleretta had a class of Indians, and Sabrina Redwood (Miss Archer) had a class of blacks. When I visited Mobile in January 1831 Sister Redwood was still living, and the only one of those who composed the church membership of 1827. Previous to the organization of the Methodist Sabbath-school on this spot, a Union-school with the Presbyterians had been carried on. When the church was ready to be occupied, a separation was proposed by the Methodists, which the Presbyterians through Judge Hitchcock strongly opposed. The separation however, took place, the Methodists taking up their quarters in the new church. The church was not plastered and for seats common benches were used. In a few years this church became too small and a wing was added. After a time that became too small and another wing was added. Then a part of the congregation went off and built on the site of the St. Francis Street Church. The old building was ever after known as the "old bee-hive," and is known by that name to this day. The bee-hive did not swarm until 1841. In 1833 J. Hamilton was preacher in charge. In 1840 and '44 Thomas Capers was preacher there. In 1842 and '43 Dr. L. Pierce was preacher. In 1842 another swarm went out. In 1844 J. Keener was in charge of Franklin Street Church with Westward Church attached. Another swarm went off southward, and formed what is now St. Paul's Church.

In 1841 the Sunday-school of Franklin Street Church undertook the education and support of a young Indian named Dixon W. Lewis. I will write you of him in my next letter.

J. W. LANBETH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Feb. 12, 1884.

The Old Pierce and Paine College.

Mr. Editor: Having had a little leisure recently I have thought proper to investigate the extent and value of the property belonging to our school and church interests at this place; believing it would be of some interest and perhaps valuable to all concerned.

The Methodist Conference owns at this place in one body of land a fraction less than six hundred and forty acres; forty acres in another tract, and twenty-four acres in still another tract on which is located the one remaining unfinished wing of Pierce and Paine College.

These lands though not contiguous lie very near together and should be made to subservise some useful end.

It is a question whether Conference has a legal right to alienate or use this property for any other than the express or implied object contained in the deeds of donation, viz: to build a school.

Supposing it has a right to transfer this land and other property any disposition which did not secure this end would be an injustice to the original donors and their posterity.

Why not found a female college here? It could be done at a small outlay of time and money. I am deeply impressed with the idea. All things considered this is the most advantageous locality in north-west Louisiana, and this the most auspicious moment for such an enterprise. The property lies two miles from Sodus Station on N. O. & P. R. R., beautifully located, healthy, well-watered and good soil.

The children's mansion, now belonging to W. D. Tooch, stands on a ten acre lot, near the center of the largest body of land before mentioned. It is a two story house, large and commodious in every particular; it has ten large rooms, two halls, above and below, an extensive gallery in front and rear and two cellars.

The water is supplied by two underground cisterns, with a capacity of seven hundred barrels.

Two other buildings of liberal dimensions stand at a convenient distance toward the rear, etc.

A large beautiful lawn stretches out in front, shaded with native forest trees, and a very good orchard in the rear completes the description.

The Methodist church, a very neat building, is not more than two hundred paces from the above mansion.

Adjoining the above grounds is another very desirable lot of eight acres, and a neat dwelling not more than one hundred and fifty yards distant. All these buildings are in good repair and could be bought for less than one-third of their intrinsic value or rented at a very small figure. In 1864 a school of about sixty or seventy students were accommodated in this building, a majority of whom boarded in the school. As many could be collected again.

Removed as this place is from the village, many obstacles that impede the students' progress incident to towns would be avoided, at the same time it is accessible to all parts of the State. Local patronage which is an important factor in the inception of such an enterprise would be small, but its want would be supplied in a measure by the earnest co-operation of the people in the vicinity, some of whom are able and willing to assist in a pecuniary measure towards its accomplishment. The lands are already ours, the location convenient, advantageous, healthy and beautiful.

Is there not some enterprising educator of the Methodist Church who would undertake the enterprise?

R. PARVIN.

PLEASANT HILL, LA., April 1, 1884.

Shouting and Paying!

Ever and anon some infidel would-be-wise man makes a fling at the shouting of happy Christians. He ascribes it all to mental weakness and infatuated superstition. He says there is nothing real in it. All this sort of stuff we can throw off and scatter like chaff. But how shall we meet the infidel, and set aside his attack upon our holy religion, when Christian papers will publish to the world such as the following: "A suggestive incident is thus reported: 'At a recent meeting in which there was much religious interest, an old man gave expressions of joy by shouting, and continued it until it began to interrupt the services. Brother H—, said to Brother W—: 'Go and stop that old man's noise.' He went to him and spoke a few words, and the shouting man at once became quiet. Brother H—, asked Brother W—, 'What did you say to that old man that quieted him so promptly?' Brother W—, replied, 'I asked him for a dollar for foreign missions.' This is copied from the leading Advocate of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

The question arises, Why was it published in our paper? Is it believed? Is it true? Is it endorsed? If endorsed, at which end of the scene is it aimed? At shouting? or at giving to foreign missions?

Which is wrong, shouting or giving? The manifest intent of the publication is to show that some people, even old people, have enough Holy Ghost religion to get happy and shout, but not enough religion to give to foreign missions. Now the question arises, Did the "old man" really get shouting happy? Or was it simply an infatuation? If an "old man" can have the face to pretend a thing in the name of religion, what shall we Christians think of carrying the Gospel and its happyifying blessings to the heathen? If it can work deception and false professions among home Christians, what more can it do in foreign lands? But the act of Brother W—, in asking the shouting "old man" for a dollar for foreign missions in the manner in which he did, shows one of two things: either he intended to insult him, or he thought shouting and paying wholly incompatible in the same man.

Whatever might have been the feelings and judgment of Brothers H—, and W—, in regard to the shouting old man, the fact of its publication is a strike at Christian shouting. Of late years I have seen no little in the same direction and of the same sort. What is the consequence? Getting happy in the love of God and shouting his praise is growing less and less frequent. Conversions are becoming marked as silent or "still born." The after-life and death partake thereof. Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God. Christ says, Abraham rejoiced to see my day; and he saw it and was glad—happy!

Perhaps the "old man," in the above quotation, did not have a dollar in money for himself or anybody else. Did his poverty bar him from praising God? Cannot a very, very poor man get happy in the love of God? What did the compassionate Savior say in regard to the poor? The poor have the Gospel preached to them. God hath chosen the poor of this world rich in faith—if not in gifts. Then let him shout!

ANOUS DOWLING.

RAMER, ARK., April 17, 1884.

Letter from Texas.

Mr. Editor: The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE reaches my table regularly each week, and is read with great pleasure. It has been some time since you published any notes from Texas; so I venture to send you these lines. This is my first year in the State, and, as a matter of course, everything is new to me. I see so much to admire—so many things for which to praise God. This country is well supplied with churches. Here, in Rockdale, we have a good deal of competition of a godly sort—there being six different churches in a town of fifteen hundred inhabitants. The missionary Baptists are in the ascendancy here in town; but in the surrounding country the people as usual are mostly dependent on the Methodists for the gospel.

Your readers have no doubt read of the celebrated Maj. Penn, of the Baptist Church, who has so long operated in Texas and elsewhere as an independent evangelist. He has just closed a meeting here that lasted seventeen days, and added a goodly number to the church. A goodly number of the people seem to have no confidence in him or patience with him. I attended the meetings as often as I could conveniently. With all I hope to profit by the experience. Oh! how often do we get happy while we sing of facing a frowning world, and then when we are called upon to practice what we preach we so often form some sort of excuse and shamefully retreat in the face of the enemy! I really think I will do better. The work on the Rockdale circuit is progressing tolerably well. An unusual amount of interest is taken in the Sunday-school work, and I never had a better time raising money for the general collections in my life.

This is Centenary year, and I. G. T. Morris, our presiding elder, is alive to that interest. He has held several special meetings, and expects to hold them at all the important points on the district. It is said Heaven favors an earnest man. He certainly belongs to that class.

W. W. GRADAM.

ROCKDALE, TEXAS, April 29, 1884.

Infidels Desponding.

BY REV. DR. DEEMS.

The men who are laboring to destroy Christianity do not grow happy. There is a certain exhilaration while their bright but injurious books bring them copyright, and while crowds of men are found willing, for reasons which bring no credit to their minds or their hearts, to pay a dollar each and contribute also their applause to a preacher of blasphemy; but as life wears on, and as there comes to such men a revelation of the probable effects of their teachings on the future of their society, they grow very despondent.

M. Renan is reported to have said, "We are living on the perfume of an empty vase. Our children will have to live on the shadow of a shadow. Their children, I fear, will have to live on something less."

It would be almost cruelty to ask this brilliant writer who they are that emptied the vase, and who they are that have spent their strength in taking the substance out of all human life, so that nothing but shadows should be left. But should he be spared that keen question, unless he frankly repent and employ the remainder of his life in laboring to neutralize the poison he has so injudiciously injected into society, and which now infects him and produces a deadly despondency!

We have, however, comfort for him and all of his class. Their grandchildren will live in an age of increasing Christian activity, and in an age when Christianity will be more stripped of ecclesiasticalism than now, and the wind of the Spirit in the Word of God will be better known, and there shall be an increase of that faith which rounds out reason and complements the barrenness of this life to come. They will have something better than perfume and more substantial than shadows.

Now let all men pause and consider the idleness of this case. A few gifted men, have been employing their powers in accumulating an estate for posterity, and the best of them thus makes statement of the assets of the estate: in hand, "the perfume of an empty vase;" for the next generation, "the shadow of a shadow;" for the third generation, "something less." No wonder M. Renan is despondent. The more his descendants believe as he does the less they will have.

The late Professor Clifford, of England, on his dying bed, uttered some luxuriously mournful thoughts, which are strikingly similar to the testimony of M. Renan. Professor Clifford said:

"It cannot be doubted that the theistic belief is a comfort and solace to those who hold it, and that the loss of it is a very painful loss. It cannot be doubted, at least by many of us in this generation, who either profess it now or have received it in our childhood, and have parted from it since with such searching trouble as only cradle-faith can use. We have seen the spring sun shine out of an empty heaven to light up a soulless earth; we have felt with utter loneliness that the Great Companion is dead."

The laborers on the Christian side have no such gloom. We may die, but the Gospel will live. The more our descendants receive and believe and live this Gospel we preach, the happier they will be. We grow cheerful as time goes on, and as our departure is at hand. Men may live and men may die; but Christianity goes on forever.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

Programme for Centenary Day.

MORNING.

Love-feast from 9 to 10:30 A. M. (Should the Sunday-school usually meet at this hour, then the Centenary love-feast could be held at 3 P. M.)

Centenary service at 10:30 A. M., as follows: 1. Let the whole congregation stand while singing "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." 2. Scripture lesson from the Old Testament. Isaiah lv. 3. Hymn No. 887, "I love thy kingdom, Lord." 4. Prayer. 5. Scripture lesson from the New Testament. Romans viii, 1-18. 6. Hymn No. 904, "Try us, O God, and search the ground." 7. Centenary sermon. 8. Thank offering of the congregation for Education, Church Extension and Foreign Missions. 9. Hymn No. 1085, "Blest be the tie that binds." 10. Benediction.

AFTERNOON.

Centenary mass meeting, to be addressed by ministers and laymen of our own and other churches.

Sunday School Union Celebration.

The thirty-eighth anniversary of the New Orleans District Sunday-School Union, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will take place at Carondelet Street Church, at four o'clock P. M., May 18 (third Sunday), and not the eleventh as announced. Change made to suit the District Conference.

There will be a rehearsal, which will probably be final, Sunday, May 1, at Carondelet Street Church, at four o'clock P. M., to practice the songs. As each school will take part in the programme, by address, poem or recitation, they will report the same with name of the speaker at this meeting. Let there be a full attendance.

The hymn book used will be "Prayer and Praise," and can be bought at the Presbyterian Book Store, 94 Camp Street. W. H. FOSTER, President. S. L. HILL, Secretary.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1884.

Oh, dark, dark, dark!
 Locked in the cold, how long the day
 Hark! the angels' choir, how far away
 The land of peace and rest from toil and strife!

Earth's holy ground is graves,
 And here's the resurrection of the dead;
 The angels' choir, the angels' host,
 And the angels' host upon the silent waves.

Yes, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

Through the light and light
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

What have they lost? Alone
 And robbed of every honor, every joy;
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

Are friends they friends no more?
 Go to the fountain of eternal love,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

Love there still? The prayer
 Unanswered seems, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

In the light of the sun
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

Have you the light? Today
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

Into the light of the sun
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

Naught else? Go, pleading still
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

Wake up, wake up, wake up!
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host,
 The angels' host, the angels' host.

Sunday-School Lesson.
 PREPARED BY REV. CURRIER KEENE.
 Second Quarter—Lesson VI.

TEXT: "Death is swallowed up in victory."
 1 Corinthians xv, 54.

VICTORY OVER DEATH.
 Once death had not his cadaverous features and stealthy tread and cold hand and dreadful sting and monstrous form. Sin thus married him. Once death was as blessed as life—a conservator of peace and not the terror of the world. His voice was heard ever rolling as the harmonious "tense of life's sweet notes. The two made the music of heaven, in which poised the throne of God. Death's song was as far reaching in the thunder of its tones as that of life. They ever sang responsive oach to the other. Life posed before the throne sang, "They that remember to do the things written in this law, shall live," and ere the echoes of his voice died death caught up his tones, and sang in wondrous accord, "They that remember not to do the things written in this law shall die." There was no land where their voice was not heard. It sounded throughout the deserts and groves of Eden's furthest bowers. So that all in that land heard, and yet with those voices ever sounding man heeded not, and then life seized the sword and death put his robes of horror on, and poor gullible man in vain approached the one who could avoid the other, and death was the unknown penalty of unbroken law, and life the sweet blessing of easy obedience. But now all is changed, and this by sin. When and how shall this ruin be repaired and our lost estate regained. The lesson to-day answers. Death is swallowed up in victory. Our lesson begins with the conclusion of an argument based upon the federal representative character of Jesus, who represents the whole of humanity in the union of his two natures, and has exhausted the sentence of death passed upon all men, and given spiritual life to whom he will.
 This federal head of redeemed man died for us and arose again from the dead, and, therefore, life to come is no more a mere hope, but a fact proved.
 The death which we inherit by our connection with Adam, whose soul, though destined to live forever, fell under the curse of death, is swallowed up in the liberated life which we have by our connection with this Christ in whom man is impersonated in the original ideal as God designed him.
 We have two inheritances. Let us claim the best.

We must fall heir to one; but if we push our claim we may have the other, which is victory at last, for the life which we inherit through Christ overcomes death. Let us run through this first inheritance; let us keep under this body, and bring it into subjection; let the flesh die and hasten its death, for the consummation of this process are steps to the final change, for flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God, corruption doth not inherit incorruption. The flesh, as at present constituted, can not exist in heavenly places. This body will do for a present lodging for the soul, but when we rise, in the image of Jesus, this so-called body will not suit a glorified, redeemed soul, and yet this vile body, by the power of a risen Lord, shall be changed into that unknown but glorious organism. There is a mysterious, glorious connection between my body and that of my Lord, who himself bore my sins in his own body on the tree, and through virtue of this connection my soul and body shall be preserved unto everlasting life. My identity shall be preserved through the changes and confusion of that hour, whether it come when asleep in the grave or still living with those who remain till his coming.

 Paul ends with a psalm of victory.
 He sees the king of terrors robbed of his sting; pointed by the law, but this law, in all its demands, has been met, and the realm of death has been entered and conquered by our deliverer.
 And God is author of all, the God who knoweth our frame and remembereth that we are dust. Thanks, then, be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

"Muzzling God's Oxen."

MR. EDITOR: I have just read William Bailey's criticism on "Gilderoy" in his article on "Muzzling God's Oxen." Bro. Bailey says some good things. He alludes to instances the like of which we have often seen; but he overlooked one fact in regard to them, and it is a very remarkable fact looked at from a worldly standpoint, but not so if taken in the light of Scripture, viz.: that those persons whom he designates as needing relief were always blessed in proportion to the extent of the "burden" they thus bore, and that if they were taught to look at it properly they would desire the "burden" made heavier, for it proved the finest investment they ever made, even in a worldly view, for "their barns were filled with plenty," "by liberal things were they fed," "Give and it shall be given unto you, pressed down, running over," etc., and a multitude of such passages were literally fulfilled in them. Do you count it a "burden" to labor in a field which will yield seventy-five or a hundred bushels of corn per acre rather than where it only yields fifteen or twenty bushels simply because they have to pay more rent? Of course not, especially so when it only takes a low more bushels to pay the extra rent. Their object is to make all they can in the season for making, and they count themselves happy to have the opportunity to pay more rent and expend more labor if by so doing they can realize two or three times as much.
 And suppose to this extra yield you add the advantages of good homes, good water, good neighbors, good opportunities for church and school, yea, of all the pleasures of life, do you not see he is blessed by having the opportunity to pay more rent and expend more labor? So it is with the man who does much for the church, who bears these "burdens." He not only has God's blessings on all his temporal interests, but he has the satisfaction of seeing better schools, churches and all public enterprises, especially so if he show the people he does these things for the Lord's sake. I am as well and fully convinced that God's promises to bless us temporally, in proportion to our liberality in supporting his cause is yes and amen, as I am of the certainty of most any of our fundamental doctrines. It is very true that this temporal idea seems a very low motive to prompt us in these matters; but I do not see that it is any lower than the one that prompts to plant and cultivate, hoping that, by the blessings of God, we will be able to reap an abundant harvest, or that which causes us to move from one place to another, or change our avocation, hoping thereby to better our condition. If God promises—and I am sure he does—to enlarge our possessions in proportion as we "honor the Lord with thy substance, and the first fruits of all thy increase,"
 I am sure there is nothing wrong in taking at his word and acting upon it, for of course we would expect to continue it. We had the good fortune, a short time since, to attend the sitting of a Conference body of one of our sister churches. It was resolved by them that the least any Christian could give and perform their duty was one-tenth of his entire income. There was but little discussion as to the fact, and the fact, too, connected with the view we have just advanced, that God's blessings would attend this systematic giving, for they were sure it was God's plan, and he had not only said so in his word, but had verified it by multitudes of instances all over this land.
 They were at some loss to define what the income is. But it was decided that a man's individual or family expenses had nothing to do with it. God's part was "first fruits," and we live on and increase our capital with the nine-tenths left. I wish this question was discussed all over the land. I am sure light would come to many who have long sat in self-inflicted blindness. We found it came out in the above discussion that the churches that were practicing this rule were prospering.

There were some other points made in the brother's article we would like to have noticed, but we have dwelt too long on the above phase to enable us to do so properly. We assure him that "Gilderoy" is not such a morose and "morbid" man as he imagines, nor is he "avaricious." He is so full of life that the children and young people flock in crowds to hear him whenever it is announced he is to speak, and they do not forget him; and though he has served in our best appointments, yet he is so far from being "avaricious," that many chide him for almost boasting of his poverty. No, Bro. Baird, he stated a very unpleasant truth that many of us have witnessed with sorrow, viz.: that it is too often the case that many a church does not increase its good works when its ability is enlarged.

J. L. FURELL.
 West Point, Mo., March 21, 1884.

Woman's Work for Women.

The following is the annual report of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference for the year ending March 20, 1884:

Aberdeen—Members, 30; remitted, $36. (Forty dollars of this amount for education of Chinese girl, Annie Benson.) Macon—Members, 30; remitted, $33 50; Centenary offering, $32 50; Indian fund, $5; contingent fund, $5.
 Missionary Jews of Macon—Members, 20; remitted, $51 70; $10 for education of Dalay Pant, Greenville—Members, 30; remitted, $39 (including contingent fund, $3 50.) Swamp Lilies of Greenville—Members, 29; remitted,
 $18 75 (including Indian fund, $5.)
 Verona—Members, 13; remitted, $20 95 (including Indian fund, $5; Centenary offering, $2; contingent fund, $1 95.)
 Pearl Gatherers of Verona—Members, 50; remitted, $45; $10 for education of Hattie Simmons, Starkville—Members, 12; remitted, $22 10 (including contingent fund, $5 25.) Starkville Juvenile—Members, 60. Iuka—Members, 8; remitted, $8 25 (including Centenary offering, $1 50; contingent fund, 70 cents.) Ripley—Members, 16; remitted, $22 30 (including Indian fund, $5; contingent fund, $2.) Pearl Gatherers of Ripley—Members, 33; remitted, $9 20. Holly Springs—Members, 10; remitted, $8 85. Honston—Members, 20; remitted, $56 75. (Forty dollars of this amount for education of Ellis Whitfield Mathews; contingent fund, $1 50.) Tranquil—Members, 30; remitted, $70 80; $10 for Johnnie
 Thomas; $5 for Indian fund. Sardis—Members, 39; remitted, $13 75 (including Indian fund, $5; contingent fund,
 $1 75.) Coine—Members, 22; remitted, $18 (including Indian fund, $5; $37 25
 for education of Annie McGhee Dandrigo.) Senatobia—Members, 17; remitted, $32 85; Indian fund, $5; contingent fund, $1. Pleasant Grove, Aberdeen district—Members, 31. Mc-
 Condy—Members, 27; remitted, $41 15.
 Prospect—Members, 25. Pickens—
 Members, 18; remitted, $59 70 (including Centenary offering, $20; contingent fund, $3 25.) Coldwater—Members, 16; remitted, $53; Indian fund, $5. Love Station—Members, 96; remitted, $89.
 Batesville—Members, 10; remitted,
 $6 85. Happy Band of Batesville—Members, 23; remitted, $10; Indian fund, $5. Missionary Bees of Corinth—Members, 70; remitted, $10 35. Richland—Members, 15; remitted, $17.
 Providence Church—Members, 11; remitted, $1 25. Crawford—Members, 40; remitted, $15 80; contingent fund,
 $1. Pleasant Grove, Sardis district—Members, 19; remitted, $12. Number of auxiliaries, 25; members, 585. Juvenile Societies, 7; members, 209; total, 884. Amount received, $1,008 85; Conference expenses, $58 40; now in treasury, $30 80; total sent to Nashville, $910 65.

MRS. J. R. STONE,
 Corresponding Secretary.

Letter from Nashville.

Resting upon the balcony, waiting for the children and our evening stroll, taking in by every sense the beautiful scenery, balmy spring air and bright sunshine, fresh and delightful from Vanderbilt's Eden-like grounds, watching the untold splendors of the declining sun, lighting up the spires and numberless windows of the magnificent buildings into a perfect blaze of grandeur, until the whole vast world, even the "everlasting hills" which encircle Nashville like an emerald setting, shines forth renewed in the strength of their beauty, by this reflected light, typical, I hope, of the bright influence to be shed abroad by this great institution, and from such a scene as this I turn to the NEW OR-LEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and soon lose myself and "the world about me" in its columns.

Ah! Mr. Editor, it does not take long for a Mississippian to see that, although amid the sweetest scented groves and alluring fruits and flowers of the fair clime of Louisiana, the heart of its editor does not oft frequent the "dream-haunted valleys" of our proud, untamable Mississippi, and truly sweet are the glimpses of "home life" to one "still a stranger in a strange land," and oft feeling how completely lost one can be amid the denizens of a thronging city.

How like a "pearl of rare price" the little words, "Marvin," Miss, appeared with its golden setting of sweet memories. Not from its association with the grand, true Bishop of that name, although for a moment I dwell upon his trip round the world, "To the East by Way of the West," and all his brave life's breathing of "stormy bil-lows" rise before me—all honor to him be—but it is because stern and careworn thought attunes itself into harmony, and chords unsounded for too long home-sick years of my life (except by the "touch of a vanished hand" as occasional misadventures reach me), bring sweet sympathy into the soul again, and once more in blessed imagination I am in Marvin Chapel.
 Pondering life's strange vicissitudes in my heart, I turn and read again Bro.
 Harris' excellent article. I quite fancy that I hear that dear matron's voice of whom he speaks. I am very sure that I know some of those boys, if not all, and others, for whom he prays. Near the green valley, with the lengthening shadows from the tall pines, where "Marvin" stands, and in the adjacent neighborhoods I taught for months, and even years, I believe (at least several), and I think I learned more true Christianity, a clearer insight into the spiritual life, consisting of brotherly love, irrespective of denomination, than I should have known for all my life. Otherwise I found dear pupils and much-loved friends in almost every household, and, although a Methodist, I think I was true to "the trust" of children from all churches, endeavoring to instill only principles as set forth in Christ's life, notwithstanding the fact that I find them more distinctly embodied in Wesley's faith.

 Sweet, indeed, is a labor of love; and how I love those people with whom and for whom I toil. Oft do I turn over the leaves of the old "roll call."
 How like sweet flowers by the wayside does each face of my pupil smile upon me as I repeat and linger over the loved name, and breathe a prayer that not one may be missing in the great book of eternal life. Loving and bright and true, with their fresh young hearts, many grown into young men and women now can never know how deeply enshrined they are in my heart with the tenderest love that this life can know. And should those "stray reminiscences" reach the eye or fall upon the heart of any of those loved pupils, will they look into my face with clear consciences and earnest attention, as they did in the olden days, when we always had "our Bible lessons" in the mornings, and promise me to start anew for the "life eternal"
 in this centennial year of Methodism, bravely showing your "faith by your works?" And while working do not forget the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. If you have a friend, a sister or brother in some far distant State
 I can wish them no sweeter pleasure than a home glimpse through its columns.

Wishing Bro. Harris much success in his labors for Christ in a field that I shall ever love and pray for, I am, very sincerely,

From Bastrop, La.

Last night, in the Baptist Church, we organized a goodly number of our most prominent ladies and gentlemen into a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The officers of the Bastrop
 Union are as follows: President, Mrs.
 Frank Vaughn, Episcopalian; general
 vice-president, Mrs. John S. Handy, Methodist; first vice-president, Miss Florie Higman, Baptist; second vice-president, Mrs. M. A. Owens, Presbyterian; third vice-president, Mrs. W.
 A. Collins, Episcopalian; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Dr. J. J. Newton, Methodist; recording secretary, Mrs.
 Jane B. Fink, Methodist; treasurer,
 Miss Hattie Naff, Episcopalian; solicitors for the Union Signal, Miss Jessie Cason and Miss Maggie Owens; editorial committee, Mrs. A. L. Ross, Methodist; committee to get signatures to the petition to the Legislature, Bros.
 W. B. Kelley, W. R. Mayo and George
 W. Naff, and Sisters Jessie Cason,
 Mary Bussey and Maggie Owens.
 This union intends organizing others as soon as possible throughout our parish. We are expecting grand results from their efforts.

From the Work.

MONTGOMERY, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The first Quarterly Conference for the Colfax and Montgomery circuit, Alexandria district, Louisiana Conference, convened March 22-30, 1884. Bro. Cornell was present.
 Bro. John W. Hearn arrived at two o'clock P. M. Saturday. Our financial report was over $500 collected for the different interests of the church. It was gratifying to report our parsonage bought, furnished with nice new furniture, and paid for. On Saturday night a mass meeting was held. Bro. Cornell was called to the chair, and Maj. H. V.
 McCain elected secretary. The chair explained the object of the meeting to be the organization of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society for Montgomery. In connection with this explanation he gave us some very interesting items on this very important work of woman. He then called on Mrs. M. A. Thrasher, president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at Atlanta, who gave us a very impressive and soul-stirring essay, in which she called earnestly upon the ladies to aid their sisters in thus spreading the gospel, after which Bro. Hearn gave us an address on the subject, speaking of the importance of this grand movement in the missionary work. He then called for members, and several enrolled their names. The following was the result of the election of officers, viz.: Mrs. H. G. Ragan, president; Miss Lucy Ragan, first vice-president;
 Miss Eva McCain, second vice-president; Miss Nona McCain, recording secretary; Mrs. Lizzie A. Davis, corresponding secretary; Miss Lula Davis, treasurer; Miss Carrie M. McCain, Miss Lula Shinnate, Miss Beatrice Hardy and Miss Olie Cullam, collectors. Quite an interest was manifested. On Sabbath the presiding elder preached us an able and heart-searching sermon, administered the sacrament, and two were received into the church. Bro. Hearn preached at night. On last Sabbath the thirtieth instant, at four P. M., the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was called together, and their report was over six dollars collected. At night, after preaching, another applied for membership, making four up to date that have applied on this work for membership. We feel encouraged to report progress. Pray for us that the good work may go on and increase.

Yours in Christ, R. A. DAVIS,
 April 15, 1884.

Marriages.

PARKS—BOYKIN. At the residence of Mrs. Boykin, Dr. Boykin, April 13, 1884, by Rev. James A.
 Coffey, Mr. W. A. Parks and Miss Fannie Boykin.
 GREEN—LEE. At Mechanicsburg, Miss, March 27, 1884, by Rev. P. Howard, Dr. J. R. Green, son of Bishop Green, and Miss M. L. Lee.

Obituaries.

RUTLAND—JOSEPH B. RUTLAND was born in Graves county, Ky., March 10, 1831, and died in Columbia, Child-well parish, La., December 31, 1883.

His father died in his boyhood, and at the age of fifteen he moved with his step-father and mother to Louisiana.
 He was twice married: first to Miss Mary B. Ballance, of Bienville parish, August 10, 1857. He was bereft of her by death, October 11, 1858. December 23, 1860, he married Miss Mary Madden, of Ouachita parish. For twenty-three years he lived with her in the fullest enjoyment of wedded bliss. So gentle, kind and faithful was he as a husband that the smiling wife says, "He never spoke an unkind word to me." In early manhood he gave his heart to God and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Fanks Chapel, Ouachita parish, and in 1873, having removed to Columbia, he united with the church there, of which he remained a true, faithful member till called from labor to reward. He was of a modest, retiring nature, and such was his humility that he seemed to feel himself unfitted for duties for which his brothers thought him well fitted. But he was a sincere lover of the church, read its literature, kept up with its progress, was in hearty sympathy with its plans for good and rejoiced at its success.
 He had been a regular subscriber to the ADVOCATE from its first publication to his death. For years he had been a leading member of the official Board of the church. As a business man he was highly respected, honorable and upright.
 A good, true man, he had a large circle of friends who both loved and trusted him.
 Once his death approached he expressed fears that he was not ready;
 but the cloud soon vanished, and was succeeded by the assurance of "faith and hope and the calm, unshaking confidence of the 'trusting soul that knows his God.'" His physician asked him if he was happy and ready for the change. He said, "Oh, yes."
 He expressed to his pastor his peace and willingness to depart. One of his last expressions in his will was, "I am happy." A good, loving husband, he leaves a devoted wife to mourn her munity loss.

SMITH—Dear little CLAUDE SMITH left his pleasant earthly home, where his every wish was gratified by idolizing parents, exchanged it for a better, and went home to God, on February 23, 1884, aged six years, two months and twenty-five days.

Again he has been plucked the only bud of promise, and the parent stalk lies torn and bleeding! The writer is aware that it is not expected that much space be devoted to the obituaries of children, and yet volumes could not express the darkness occasioned and the light quenched when the lamp of this young life went out. "Oh, little one, I fear the lightest heart makes sometimes heaviest mourning!" Even his pet cats seemed suffocated by the gloom, and on the day down in death
 alas or skulked off of the premises.
 He was the only one; so old God give him only son for us. The subject of this little sketch was simply a little child, and a young child. Not had he ever done anything remarkable, save as his own bud and on its peculiar fragrance to all parental hearts; but still we reasonably hope that his life shall not be fruitless of results, he it only following on his death. We trust that more than one traveler, including his loving parents, shall be found on the road to heaven that leads alongside his grave. Not only was this an only child, and the one point in which focused all the attention and love of the parents;
 but he was a bright, active little fellow, possessed of a bright, sunny, and uncommon toward the parents peculiarly winning. There is no ordinary grief in which a consultation of physicians exhausted their knowledge, in which friends were kind and attentive and helpful, and these things were calculated to solace, and they did solace, the good Lord was called on too; and yet the work of death became complete in the end.

May the Lord comfort the hearts of the mourners with a better love and a better comfort than could be con-supplied by the life of their child during the whole of their pilgrimage through the "valley of the shadow of death," until the peace of God in their hearts shall be perfected in the day when the graves shall give up their dead!

A FRIEND.

COOK—Died, in Cantonville parish, La., little SAMUEL H. Cook, aged six years.

Samuel was a sprightly, intelligent child loved and caressed by all who knew him. But God—who has said,
 "Suffer little children to come unto me,
 and forbid them not"—has, in his wise providence, transplanted this lovely little flower to bloom in his kingdom above. Only a few summers have passed since little Walter, who was then about the age of Samuel, died.
 Thus we see that these little brothers were not long separated. Both are side in the arms of Jesus. Man may not question this will, heavenly Father.
 For what purpose then hast thou transplanted these little ones thou knowest who hath assured us that of such is the kingdom of Heaven. Then, perhaps, like the good Shepherd, hast taken these little ones that the parents may follow after. Grieve not, dear stricken parents, that your little ones have gone before. Live ye for that blessed region when life's feverish dream is o'er, when smiles of your little darlings can never greet you again at nightfall; yet the clock will tick and strike as of old.
 Their little voices were sweet music when you counted the hours with them. Now it seems only hours through which you watched their departure of death gather upon their dear faces. But many a tale it tells of joy past. You feel that the grave can not keep your little darlings. You know they are in a bright and beautiful world, and yet you can but feel that they are often by your side—an angel's presence. Cherish those fond memories, my friends; they will make you happier, and so live that when you die your spirits may mingle with those of Samuel and Walter. Another certain has been covered. Let the body be earth, while one more is attached to the anchor but steadfast and sure with the vale of the heaven of eternal rest.
 Our most heartfelt sympathy and condolence are extended to the bereaved parents and relatives of these little darlings. Farewell, little ones!

AUNT MATT.

JONES—MRS. KATE L. JONES, daughter of D. A. and A. J. Jones, of Franklin county, Miss., and wife of John P. Jones, Jr., was born November 20, 1830. She received her education at Whitworth College, and while there was received into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and probably found the Saviour in pardoning mercy at the time of her union with John Jones, Jr., on December 22, 1856, and departed this life on December 31, 1883.
 Here we have the data of a brief, but charming life—the only daughter of fond and devoted parents, only sister of loving brothers, the central object of her husband's affections and the mother of two little humanists. But the most important factor in the formation of a pure and beautiful life is real Christianity enthroned upon the heart. This takes away the fear of death, allows the life with the beauty of holiness and harmonizes the life with all that is greatest and best here and in the interminable future, and in departing leaves behind the sunshine and the fragrance which cheer and refresh the loved ones in pursuit of the same precious goal. In Sister Jones' departure "death was robbed of its sting and the grave of its victory," by her own testimony. She said: "I am not afraid to die; am ready to go."
 After she had given up all, and seemed waiting for the bidding of the Master to come, she suddenly and sweetly sang, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," as her triumphant note of victory. After about twenty-four hours she passed into the glorious realization of these things, and is now with the Lord.

WM. B. HICKS.

McKISSACK—MRS. E. J. McKissack was born in Barbours county, Ala., July 31, 1831, and died of typhoid fever,
 in Clarke county, Miss., January 26, 1884, aged fifty-two years, five

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1884.

IS IT SO?

Is it so, O Christ in heaven, that the highest sufferer is the one who is the most wretched and most hopelessly lost? That the mark of rank in nature is capacity for pain? And the anguish of the sufferer makes the sweetest of strains? Is it so, O Christ in heaven, that whichever way we go, walls of darkness must surround us, things we would not know, but that the infinite must bound us as a temple veil around? Will the little ever wear, so that none attain content? Is it so, O Christ in heaven, that the fullness yet to come is glorious and so perfect that to know would strike us dumb? That if only for a moment we could pierce beyond the sky? With these poor dim eyes of mortals, we should juster God and die?

Enableness.

BY JOSEPH H. COTTELL.

At the last session of the Alabama conference, in Mobile, one of the preachers, who is a close reader of the discussions that appear in our church papers, remarked to me with the open frankness that has ever characterized him: "Cottrell, your opponents have never met your argument satisfactorily on the 'original sin' question. The point you made in one of your articles in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE regarding the sin of Adam, which can't be accounted for on the score of depravity in the nature of the transgressor, as also that of holy angels, must be a fallacy, and, inasmuch as the devil is a fallen angel, and that other angels 'kept not their first estate,' has a force in the argument they've deduced." I replied to my friend that I had not one proponent in his conference who seemed quite pleased with the thought that the brother who met my illustration of the "rotten egg" by saying that "chickens feed on worms and bugs when first hatched" had successfully answered me. My friend seemed incredulous that any one should see in that reply any aptness or force whatever. Of course I did not offer it as an argument, but simply illustrative, that when one will show me a hen that lays rotten eggs, I would show a woman who bears babies answering the evil, variolous orthodox description. Similarities and analogies serve to make palpable and vivid to our apprehension things which are to be seen the plainer by resemblances and contrasts. It is by the faculty of comparison, and by the intuition which enables us to trace analogies; that light is so focused as to bring out definitely a point to be studied.

What we perceive, intuitively, to be out of analogy with fact and truth as these are known from observation and experience, we recoil from as inevitably as does the mind accept that which is supported by cumulative evidence or by demonstration. Simulations of beauty in contraries and contradictions have wrought fatal stratagems, and a dwarfage of intellectual manhood has been the consequence of an arbitrary authoritative drive, as by prerogative of infallibility. Such as have assumed to drive where only leadership through power of logical and philosophical ascertainment and discoveries of truth are at all legitimate, have been as effectually outbanded in their nicer powers of discernment as have those who have yielded to their domination. Just at this point, where integrity of mind fails to be maintained, is there the rank growth of pietism. Whenever the mind takes the pietistic road the most fatal calamity has befallen it known to human experience. Devotion to truth and profound respectfulness to each and every mind, subjective from our own that comes into conference, with regard to the vital principles of our faith, will preserve themselves in the beauty and fragrance of a flower whose unfolding is an unconscious naturalness.

Being a right apprehension of our individual conditioning at the genesis of our being under God's perfect, benevolent, catholic scheme of government, of prime importances to a true Christian cultus, I am prompted to ask: Why is it that our religious teachers have had so little to say regarding God's covenant pledge to the first woman as security and assurance in the vital, not to say frightful, office of maternity? "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed." It is in this language addressed to the serpent, but it is declarative of such interpretation of divine power as affects a conditioning of the woman and her seed hostile and not friendly to God. To suppose that the power—personal and intelligent, authoritative and with infinite resources of wisdom whose very instinct is love—to omit or refuse such a foundation work is simply in violation of all that can be conceived as characteristic of a moral government. Let it be emphasized that the conditioning (or, if it be preferred, the conditioning) indicated by promised implantation of enmity against evil does abate of the progeny—"the seed"—of the woman and put her upon the "King's highway of holiness." The "enmity" is planted in the heart of the woman. Enmity to evil is by implication, love of virtue. "God's ways are equal." At the genesis of the being of each responsible agent there is by operation of the Divine power, a conditioning favorable to truth and holiness. There is an inspiration from God in each, inclusive of aspiration, and this is qualification for compliance with all to which we are obliged through the gradations of authority and in the varieties of relationship. Is it objected that this implies a denial of the necessity of that new birth whereof Christ spake to Nicodemus? My reply is that this is that very thing, a birth from above, a creation in Christ Jesus unto good works, a regeneration, a sanctification, an almost persuaded to sin a glorification. Theologically, scientifically, these terms bear distinct, specific import; but when we would come to a commerce of mind with that whereof the theologians (they are many, and conflicting), are predicated, the mind, to make headway at all, must loosen and disengage itself and assert its mastery of words rather than come under domination of them. The truth is we saddle words with the meaning of our own minds as we use them or misuse them. They have no power to use us; but are potent in misleading or abusing us. Verbal lullabyment of mind seems to be the rule; especially along the religious line. Such as have enfranchisement in enthusiasm of truth realizations inevitably cause fermentation by causing language to yield itself to exigencies of thought in new adaptations. Upon the penpoint or tongue-tips of a writer or speaker, the cords of whose intellectual and moral being vibrate under smithings of the true genius of life, fresh and immediate from God, words grow elastic and flexible to such a degree as to seem lawless, saying to those who have such chastening of soul in love of essential truth as gives discernment of a "higher law" than that of "the letter." Prof. Moses Stewart, whilst championing orthodoxy on behalf of the three-fold personality of Deity, persisted in declining attempt at a definition of the term, person.

With this criticism I come again to that initial point of our individual, personal being, incident to which we have a human percentage not of our election; a temperament not of our choosing; hair of a texture and color determined for us, with eyes blue, grey, black or hazel ordered for us, and masculinity or femininity as the decree is for us to be boy or girl. I suppose that all this and the like of it come by no mere chance precedent, and that nature, sin and the devil have not, nor has any two or one of them, operated either partially, despite him in whose book "all our members are writ," him in whom "we live and move and have our being." Whilst we may not comprehend the mystery of our being, either at the genesis or at any stage along our individual unfolding, we may certainly apprehend that sin, nature and the devil have not so wrenched from the hands of an omnipotent, infinitely wise and benevolent God, this vital function or office of initially conditioning our being, so that at a time subsequent he must come in and substitute another foundation for our life and character. The kingdom of Christ is catholic, in that it is comprehensive of, and qualification at, every stage of our being. When Bishop Keener uttered that condensed epistle, that "the church would yet march through the beautiful gates of childhood to the conquest of the world," he made prophecy according to the genius and economy of a life imparted to every soul immediately from him who alone can quicken and vitalize. Obligation has never in a single instance of moral government been beyond enablement. Enablement is obligation.

Reverting to that covenant of life wherein God pledged himself to the first woman in this behalf of salvation, namely: that he would operate coordinately and co-competently with her in each reproduction of herself it is very evident that this a rose covenant and that in passing to the hands of woman, after so formal and solemn a manner, that cup—fearful in the extreme—it was just according to a divinely tender and loving Fatherhood that an element of sweetening should be made by him, and from him, to mingle with his every drop. It is incidentally and accidentally that we spring from our parents: It is primarily and vitally that we are from God. The root of our being is in him. God himself—the Wisdom, the Word, the Life—in us, is the omnia to the seed of the serpent.

I am well aware that theology has passed the emphasis that belongs to this initial, covenant incorporation of humanity into God, toward so as to have it appear that it related specifically and wholly to that event whence dates the Christian dispensation; but it is more in accordance with the genius of a paternal government to conceive the whole dispensation of life, from the garden through all the developments and disciplinings of the race, as the Christian dispensation, varying itself through phenomenal expressions, and so articulating catholicity and benevolence of Providence as to extort from Paul who was drawn up out of the narrowness of local and national prejudice to a point whence he perceived that God was "the same God over all," the exclamation, "Oh, the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God!" Paul's enthusiasm and transport were—the acclamation thereof was—an echo of that which rang out from the lips of the mother of the race on occasion of the birth of the first child, "I have gotten a man from the Lord!" The critics do not make this at all weaker by having it to read: "I have gotten a man—the Lord!"

Avoiding prolixity, and essaying rather a statement of my thesis than an exhaustive discussion of the subject, I reaffirm what in other articles for the ADVOCATE I have written. The "New Birth" is not dissimulated by a rottenness of moral being in the initial, provisional birth, denominated the "natural birth," but it is according to a law analogous to or identical with this, unless an egg be laid and then hatched we can not, or do not, have a bird. No intimation that there is any unborn, but a being born again. "First, that which is natural, then that which is spiritual;" the former in order to the latter. Am I asked, is there inherent in each soul a power to pass alone, independently of objective providence and grace, into the Christ-life, through the experiences and manifestations of what are termed the graces? I answer, no more than that an egg has a power to hatch itself into a bird. Objective providence and grace are the counterpart or correlative of that subjective conditioning of each soul wrought by him who pronounced the implantment of the "omnity." We bear and read no little in regard to what we may not do without the grace of God. The phrase "grace of God" has been habitually used in religious parlance as synonymous with special favor to elect persons; synonymous with partiality. The truth is, our power to sin is as much because of the grace of God to us as is our power to be obedient, dutiful and worshipful. We can't sin against hate. To hear one vociferously declaring that but for the attraction of gravitation we could not retain footing on the earth is not unlike much that we meet with, phrased off powerlessly, on behalf of a theory of grace.

One other question which we must meet and deal with in a fair discussion of this subject is this: Does not Paul declare a somewhat to be sin that lurks in us, and which is aroused and made to work death, when conviction is wrought by discovery to us of the authority of God's law? The answer to this is that the exigencies of thought in evolution of the subject through all slappings and shadings that transpired in Paul's disquisition discolored just such liberty with language as I've noted heretofore, and that many terms are used by him with significations variant. Among them is that of sin. He uses the term as denotative of an intelligence, volitional, in us. "Sin," taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in one all manner of conceit— Now, no one supposes that there was literally in Paul a dormant, something which revelation of the authority, purity and benevolence of God wrought into conscious, intelligent activity, and which had to be concealed. Take another passage: "I was free once without the law; the law came, sin revived and I died." Was Paul free anterior to his experience of the peace and blessedness of the faith and of God's witnessing spirit? He makes use of the word freedom in designation of somewhat quite other than that freedom whereby and wherein is our climatic enfranchisement. Take another passage: "I would I were accursed from Christ for my brethren," etc. Certainly here we have a large liberty taken with language. A vulgar literalism can make sad havoc, especially where high-wrought, tropical, hyperbolic language is strained under stress of endeavor to utter the ineffable. There are passages in Paul, rich in their hardness, even as are the resinous knots in pine. Such give out intensest flame and blackest smoke. The Augustinian theology is black from smoke of Paul's metaphysical pine knots; or, to change the figure it is horribly gummied up with resin therefrom. We'll avoid the smoke and the resin, and have the fervor of the flame, and the illumination by interpretation according to the analogies of observation and experience. Evidently Paul's whole meaning in his multi-form involved discourse; his fusion of philosophy, logic, didactic teaching and tropical delineation, was this: We have will; we are free in the very nature of moral government. Obedience is a matter of choice from promptings of motive that does not operate necessitatingly. Submission of an agent to sovereignty occasions a struggle—a conflict. All virtue in the universe of God, in agents, is consequent upon the passage of that ordeal. Adam, as created by the Almighty, could have written as did Paul when he reached the point that tested his obedience. The yielding of obedience, voluntarily, does not come spontaneously because of any conditioning of the nature.

It ensues after just such a manner as is so graphically portrayed by Paul in rehearsal of his experience. By a figure of speech each one "dies" as Paul declared he did. Let any one who supposes himself clear, complete and final in his concept of that whereof the term "death" and its cognates are used as declarative, essay to himself a definition. Paul uses them with many shadings and many differences of meaning. That there is a somewhat characterized by, Paul, sin in himself and in every one, which theologues have termed "original sin," "birth sin," "total depravity" and the like, is evident. But that somewhat can hardly be considered as a penalty inflicted upon the progeny of Adam, having in itself—essentially or generally—emulative, reproductive sin generative energy, in any sense that implies guilt or condemnation. A wonderful economy of moral government that in which a penalty appointed is implication of cause of the very thing reprehended. Let the reader soberly and closely consider the teaching: A creature endowed originally with all that was requisite to obedience—one with a nature void of "depravity" or "sin" or ought else that was hindrance. He, however, does disobey. He sins. That sin corrupts—depraves—his nature, and thus the nature becomes fountain or spring of disobedience and sin. I plant myself confidently on this mere statement of the fact that, according to the orthodox, accepted teaching a human being created "in righteousness and true holiness" did, notwithstanding such holiness of nature, sin. Not only so, but creatures with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask of nature, or its conditioning, as a cause or as occasion of sin? Those who hold that Adam was "created in righteousness and true holiness" of nature, and that such nature was given as security to obedience and virtue, agree that notwithstanding such righteousness and holiness, he did fall. He was not a creature with angelic natures "kept not their first estate." What then, I ask

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1884.

The World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition will probably receive a loan of $1,000,000 from the United States government. If so, its success will eclipse even the great Centennial of 1876. The buildings are going up rapidly, and arrangements are being perfected with all possible dispatch for the opening.

"Arbor day" is getting to be one of the royal days in all the year in some States North and West. Nebraska led off in this matter, and now Minnesota, Kansas, Michigan, Indiana, West Virginia, Ohio, and New Jersey have followed the good example. We commend this annual tree-planting in towns, colleges and States as at once profitable, beautiful and patriotic.

By the small majority of eleven in the House of Commons a resolution was defeated removing Bishops from seats in the House of Lords. Two of the most eloquent speeches made in support of the resolution were by Wesleyans, one of whom, Mr. S. D. Waddy, will be remembered as a leading member of the Ecumenical Conference. That vote is significant. The "lords spiritual" will have to leave the courts of Caesar and attend to their appropriate business. It is only a matter of time.

The following, from Frances Ridley Havergal, is affectionately commended to each member of every Methodist choir: "Singing for God is to me the most personal and direct communion I hold from my Master." We have long thought that special grace was necessary to sing for the Lord in the average choir. The spirit of the above would forever banish from the sanctuary the amateur conceit and porcupine sensitiveness that so often dismember choirs and disturb the peace of Zion.

A distinguished layman of the Church of England, residing in Cornwall, in a recent "Church Congress" paid this striking tribute to Methodism: "In the county of Cornwall, were it not for the ministrations of the followers of Wesley, the people must have almost forgotten Christianity itself. They, the Wesleyans, have gone on the principle of employing everybody who can be employed, and finding work for everybody who can work; and this is the principle we shall ourselves have to adopt if the church is to do her work as it should be done."

A good Wesleyan Methodist in England, a few weeks ago, in forwarding a thank-offering for the Home-Mission Fund, added these words: "I believe the resurrection is very near, and I would not like Christ to find me with much earthly coin." How much unemployed earthly coin our Lord finds when he comes and calls for his children! Large amounts are hoarded and withheld from the Master for a legacy to children, which almost invariably makes of them idlers and spendthrifts. It surely will affect our reward, if not endanger our salvation, for Christ to come and find us, with much earthly coin. We ought to make it, in order to wisely use it.

The Roman Catholics of Vicksburg have recently conducted a successful "fair" in that city. Among other articles disposed of was an "elegant silver sugar-bowl" voted to the most popular bar-room. We read that item with profound sorrow, though not surprise, in a Vicksburg paper last week. The idea of church people, who profess to believe and practice the teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ, dignifying and sanctifying the whisky business in such way, is shocking to the most obtuse moral sense. An article of furniture for a bar-room—a den of death, where crime and criminals congregate, where Christianity's deadliest foe is enthroned—is displayed and voted off to raise funds for Christ's kingdom. "The most popular bar-room" "Popular" with church people—Christ's disciples, who claim that they only have the covenant mercies of God. Alas! for the purity and peace of Zion when she enjoys and covets such popularity. So the Romanists of Vicksburg have a "popular bar-room"—a place where "liquid damnation" is dispensed in the name of the Lord Jesus, and under the patronage of his church.

After Lent—What?

